Albert L. Hannah was reared on his father's farm, receiving his education in the public schools. At the age of seventeen years he began to learn the undertaking business, and on May 19, 1899, was graduated from the Champion College of Embalming at Springfield, Ohio. He also graduated from the Cincinnati College of Embalming in 1912, and is now a member of the educational board of the Cincinnati College of Embalming. He is also a member of the Ohio State Embalmers' Association, with which organization he has been connected for the past thirteen years. Mr. Hannah has a beautiful, modern equipped establishment. He is regarded as the leading undertaker in this vicinity.

In February, 1902, Mr. Hannah was married to Blanche Urton, of Clinton county, who died on August 27, 1906. On May 6, 1908, Mr. Hannah was again married to Arena

ALBERT L. HANNAH.

M. Jay, of Clinton county, and to this union one child has been born, D. Ben, who was born on January 21, 1914.

Fraternally, Mr. Hannah is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Junior Order of American Mechanics. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, while his wife belongs to the Friends church. Although Albert L. Hannah votes the Republican ticket, he has never been an aspirant for office.

EDWIN R. SHANK.

Clinton county may not only be proud of its farming districts and of the men who manage and control them, but also in its towns are found men who have risen to prominence in the business of buying and selling merchandise, and to these, too, is due a measure of praise. Among this type of citizens is the man whose career the biographer is now to consider briefly, Edwin R. Shank having chosen to cast his lot with those engaged in mercantile business.

Edwin R. Shank, son of Samuel A. and Mary A. (Stump) Shank, was born in Marion township, this county, on November 5, 1885, his father being a native of the same county. After serving his apprenticeship as a worker on the farm, at the same time attending the public schools, the Clarksville high school, and Wilmington College, in which latter excellent institution he spent a year. For a time after completing his school work, Mr. Shank was engaged in various occupations, and on February 15, 1915, became a merchant in the dry goods, shoes and notions line in Clarksville, where he enjoys a liberal and growing patronage.

On December 26, 1912, Edwin R. Shank was united in marriage to Alice Florence Whitacre, daughter of George Whitacre, of Vernon township, this county, who was born in Warren county, Ohio, on October 21, 1885. To this union was born one child, a daughter, Mary Alma, who died in infancy.

Mr. and Mrs. Shank are stanch supporters of the Friends church. Mr. Shank has always adhered to the principles of the Republican party, and is a believer in the benefits to be derived from membership in secret orders, for he belongs to the Clarksville lodge of Odd Fellows and to the Modern Woodmen.

Mr. Shank, since his removal to Clarksville, has been a distinct asset to that community, for he has always stood for fair and square dealing, honor and integrity in his personal and social relationships, and represents a high type of citizenship.

ALPHEUS GADDIS.

It is, indeed, a distinguished mark of honor for those living in the present generation to be able to trace clearly their ancestry back to the Revolutionary War, and even a greater distinction when it is known that such ancestry fought with honor in that war. Such is the case with Alpheus Gaddis, the subject of this sketch.

Alpheus Gaddis was born on November 21, 1868, in a log house on the old Gaddis homestead in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of Andrew R. Gaddis. He attended the Dover district school and later the Shadyside district school No. 1. He was the only son of a family of ten children, so he remained on his father's farm and assisted in the work until his marriage, in 1895. He then moved into the brick house built by his grandfather, Rice Gaddis, on the same farm, and has run that farm ever since for his father, though practically on his own initiative.

Andrew R. Gaddis was the son of Rice Gaddis, who was the son of Col. Thomas Gaddis, the latter of whom was born on December 28, 1744, and died on June 10, 1834. He married Hannah Rice, who was born on February 4, 1835, and who died in her eighty-eighth year. They came to Clinton county to reside in September of 1814. Starting from Fayette county, Pennsylvania, where they formerly lived, they descended the Ohio river on boats, on which they transported their teams and wagons and household goods, and landed at Manchester, Ohio, proceeding thence to Wilmington, where they remained over night in Warren Satur's tavern. The next day Henry Batt, between whom and Colonel Gaddis some acquaintance and relationship existed, invited Colonel Gaddis to take possession of a house belonging to him, where the newcomers remained for that winter. On April 21, 1810, Colonel Gaddis purchased three hundred and twenty-five acres of land in Union township, this county, on which he located in 1815, and there made his permanent home, subsequently increasing his holdings to about eight hundred acres, all of which he purchased at the price of one dollar and twenty-five cents the acre. He built a log cabin, cleared a portion of the land and spent the rest of his life there. He was a small man in stature but a big man in affairs. He was the father of a large family, most of whom died when quite small. Colonel Gaddis commanded a regiment under Washington throughout the Revolutionary War and in later years took great pride in showing his commission and discharge, both of which bore the signature of his great commander, the "father of his country."

Rice Gaddis, the son of Col. Thomas Gaddis, was born in 1784 and died on February 11, 1853. He grew up on his father's farm in Pennsylvania and had a fair education for one of that day. He was a private in his father's regiment in the War of 1812, and came to Clinton county with his parents when they came from Pennsylvania. He had learned the printer's trade in Uniontown, Pennsylvania, and when he came to Clinton county located in Wilmington, where he opened the first printing establishment in Clinton county and got out the first newspaper ever published here. This paper was published in partnership with Israel Abrams and was called the True American. The paper was issued weekly and in 1816 Rice Gaddis became sole publisher and editor. The paper was issued every Thursday at an annual advance price of two dollars. In 1821 Rice Gaddis discontinued the publication of his paper and removed the press to his father's home, where he continued to do job work and to print original essays, while caring for his parents. His father willed him two hundred acres of the old home place and in 1839 he built on that tract a brick house which is still standing. He was not married until the age of fifty-four and his only child was Andrew R. Gaddis, the father of the subject of this sketch. His wife was Sarah (Andrews) Pendry, who was born in Virginia, near Sweet Briar, in September of 1804, and who died on November 22, 1901. Her first marriage was to William Pendry and there were born to that marriage six children, four sons and two daughters, only one of whom is now living, Mrs. Mary Ellen Gullet, of Lima, Ohio.

Andrew Rice Gaddis was the only child of Rice and Sarah (Andrews) Gaddis and was born on the place in which he now lives in Union township, Clinton county, on May 23, 1841. He attended the Dover district school as a boy, and after his father's death, which occurred when he was only twelve years of age, he took charge of the home place. He inherited this place at the age of maturity, and, in 1874, built the home where he now lives. On October 9, 1861, he married Amanda Smith, who was born in Union township, this county, on the Port William pike, the daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Babb) Smith. Joseph Smith was born in Virginia in 1812 and died in September of 1865. He was the son of Levi and Abigail Smith, and came to this county with his parents, when a mere boy, from Virginia and settled in Union township. Hannah (Babb) Smith was the daughter of Henry and Elizabeth Babb, and was born in Clinton county in 1815 and died on February 11, 1904.

The following children have been born to Andrew Rice and Amanda (Smith) Gaddis: Ella, who was born on January 8, 1863, and who married William S. Lisle, a mechanical foreman, of Springfield, Ohio; Mary, October 19, 1864, who died on November 23, 1882; Emma, August 29, 1866, who married George E. Barlow, and lives on a farm in Liberty township; Alpheus, the subject of this sketch; Laura, December 7, 1870, who married William Toole and lives on a farm in Richland township; Elsie, November 29, 1872, who married George Slicker, and lives on a farm near Wilmington; Ida, January 7, 1875, who married Oscar Chrisenberg, and lives at Knox, Indiana; Hattie, December 25, 1876, who died on June 27, 1905; Annie, December 9, 1879, who married Homer Ray, and lives on a farm in Richland township, and Daisy, July 24, 1882, who married George Johnson, and lives on a farm in Richland township.

Alpheus Gaddis, the fourth child of Andrew Rice and Amanda (Smith) Gaddis, and the subject of this sketch, was married on January 17, 1895, to Rebecca Huff, who was a native of Clinton county, and who died on May 10, 1913. She was a daughter of John and Sarah Huff.

Alpheus Gaddis had no children by his first wife, but on January 1, 1914, he contracted his second marriage with Anna Durtsche, and to this union has been born one child, Alpheus Alonzo, who was born on January 15, 1915. Anna Durtsche was born in Gallion, Ohio, the daughter of Jacob and Catherine Durtsche, the former of whom is now dead, but whose widow is still living.

Alpheus Gaddis comes of a family illustrious for its industry and honesty. He is a young man of humble claims but sterling worth. He is a Republican in politics and is found always ready to serve his party. He can point with pride to the work of his ancestors in the cause of American freedom, and to their helpfulness in all of the humanitarian and progressive movements which have helped maintain that freedom.

WILLIAM M. BRIGHT.

How dependent a community is upon its internal commerce. How helpless we should be without the wonderful medium of exchange which has been evolved by man out of the experience of the ages for the convenient merging of the interdependent relations of supply and demand. A local community is well judged by the conditions of its commercial establishments and it may properly be taken for granted that all is well with that town whose business houses are well ordered, well equipped and well managed; conducted with a view to the best and most helpful accommodation of the patrons of the same. The merchants of a city well may be considered its ablest conservators, for upon them depends so much in the way of keeping the "tone" of the city up to its highest pitch. The city of Wilmington, the county seat of Clinton county, is fortunate, indeed, in the possession of an unusually high grade of local merchants, all of whom ever have the best interests of the city at heart. Among these typically representative citizens, few are better known or more deservedly popular than is the amiable gentleman with whom this biographical sketch is to treat more directly in the succeeding paragraphs, a sketch so well meriting a place in this historical work that the biographer takes much pleasure in here presenting it for the consideration of the readers of this volume.

William M. Bright was born near the town of Wittelsford, in Cambridgeshire, England, on October 24, 1862, son of John and Amy (Wilshire) Bright, both natives of the same place, the former of whom was born in the year 1824 and the latter in the year 1826. Both the Brights and Wilshires in Cambridgeshire were farming people and adherents of the church of England.

John Bright was reared on the home farm in Cambridgeshire and was married there. Fired by the impulse which prompted so many of his fellow countrymen in that day to come to America, he made several trips to this side—as many as five trips within a period of four years. Deciding to make his home in this country, on the last trip he brought his family with him, the journey being made on the sailing vessel, "Colorado," the same on which he had made his previous trips. On the return trip the "Colorado" went down, carrying practically all hands to a watery grave. Upon arriving in this country, John Bright and his family proceeded to this state, locating near the village of Goshen, in Clermont county. That was in the year 1868. Not being satisfied with their location there, the Brights soon thereafter came to Clinton county, locating on a farm near Martinsville, on which they lived, however, but a short time, a little later buying a farm near Westboro, on which Mr. and Mrs. Bright spent the rest of their lives, his death occurring in 1888 and hers in 1892. John Bright was a man of large usefulness in his adopted country. He was a systematic master of drainage and during his residence in this county laid hundreds of miles of tile drains throughout the country hereabout. He was kept busy at this kind of work for years and gained a reputation throughout the county second to none in that line. Though reared in the church of England, Mr. and Mrs. Bright became attached to the Methodist church upon their arrival in this country and were among the most devoted adherents of that church in their home community in this county. Mrs. Bright was a woman of wonderful personality and was widely noted throughout the Westboro neighborhood for her cheery smile, her sunny disposition and her devotion to all good works. She wielded a strong influence in her community and the memory of her kindly ways long will be cherished in that part of the county. She possessed a wonderfully sweet and sympathetic voice and was more than locally celebrated as an oral reader. It is related that a great evangelist, a man of nation-wide note, once said, after hearing one of her readings, that he would rather hear Mrs. Bright's readings from the Bible than those of any other person he ever heard read from the Word. This bright and sunny charm was characteristic of Mrs. Bright, even in childhood, and in her girlhood, in the old home in England, she always was welcome among the great ladies of Queen Victoria's court, because of her sweet voice and charming manner.

To John and Amy (Wilshire) Bright were born seven children, namely: Sallie, who married Emanuel Gaskell and lives on a farm in Clinton county, this state; Martha, married Andrew Frieberger and died a widow in 1893; Jennie, married Hon. William Harry Parks, a merchant of Dallas county, Iowa, and one of the most prominent Masons in that state; Edward, a retired farmer, of Westboro, this county; Charlotte, who died unmarried; Ernest, a merchant, who was killed by being struck by a street car in Denver, Colorado, and William M., the immediate subject of this biographical sketch.

William M. Bright was six years of age when his parents emigrated to America, and he has a distinct recollection of the long journey over on the ill-fated "Colorado." He was reared on the home farm, acquiring an excellent education in the public schools of this county, remaining on the farm with his father until he was twenty-one years of age, when he entered the service of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company as station agent and telegraph operator, a position he retained for three years, at the end of which time he engaged in the dairy business at Westboro and Madisonville, marketing his product at Madisonville. This business he continued for nine years, building up a splendid trade. He then suffered a severe attack of typhoid fever and was confined to his bed for several months, at the end of which time he found his business practically wrecked and he was compelled to start all over again. Pursuing the resolution to engage in a new business in a new field, he went over the line into Clermont county and bought a butcher shop in Edenton. Starting in business there "on paper," Mr. Bright made a decided success of his venture, gradually adding to his modest meat market other forms of merchandise until he had a quite extensive general store. He continued in business in Edenton for ten years, at the end of which time, in the year 1910, he sold out and returned to this county, locating in Wilmington, where he opened a fine grocery store, which business he has since continued with a large measure of success. Mr. Bright has a well-appointed, sanitary, bright-looking, up-to-date and well-stocked store and his well-pleased customers are his best advertisers.

On December 25, 1889, William M. Bright was united in marriage to Sylvia Prickett, who was born in Edenton, Clermont county, this state, daughter of Hiram and Narcissa Prickett, both of whom are still living, making their home in Wilmington, Mr. Prickett being a retired farmer. To the union of William M. and Sylvia (Prickett) Bright four children have been born, namely: Miriam Vesper, who married Allen C. Conger, of Lansing, Michigan, an instructor in the University of Michigan; Floyd P., who assists his father in the management of the latter's store; Martha, a student in the Wilmington high school, and Catherine.

Mr. and Mrs. Bright are members of the Methodist church, in the faith of which their children have been reared, and they are active in all the good works of the community, enjoying the highest esteem of all who know them. Mr. Bright has held several official positions in the Methodist church, and is a fine, jovial Christian gentleman. He is a devoted home lover, regarding family ties superior to all other considerations in life. Being progressive in his methods and enterprising in business, he has made a success during his residence in Wilmington and has the respect and confidence of business circles generally throughout this part of the state, being regarded as one of the leading merchants of the county seat of Clinton county.

SIMON GOODMAN.

Close and constant application and conscientious attention to the matter in hand spells success, in the common language of American commercial life. There are many practical examples in Clinton county of the truth of this oft-repeated rule, one of the most notable of which, perhaps, is noted in the life and career of the well-known business man of Wilmington, whose name the reader notes above. Simon Goodman came to America a poor immigrant lad with nothing to back him save those most valuable factors, a fine courage and a high will. Adding to these thrift and perseverance, he served his day of small things with profit, learned the language and customs of his adopted country, and has forged ahead until now he is the possessor of a fine business and occupies a substantial and secure position in the commercial life of this county.

Simon Goodman was born near the town of Flatow, in West Prussia, Germany, the son of Herman and Eva (Drucker) Goodman, both natives of West Prussia, whose whole lives were spent in the neighborhood of the place of their birth, the former having been born in 1834 and died in June, 1913, and the latter having been born in 1842 and died on January 24, 1876. Herman Goodman was the owner of a general store in Flatow and he and his wife were devout members of the orthodox Jewish church, in the faith of which their children were reared. Three sons of this family are now living in the United States, the subject of this sketch having a brother, Isador, living in New York City, where he is connected with the offices of Armour & Company, and another brother, Ben, who is engaged in the retail millinery business in Buffalo, New York.

Simon Goodman received his youthful education in the schools of his home town in Germany and served three years' apprenticeship at the tailoring trade. In 1890, while yet a lad, he emigrated to America, landing in New York City, where he remained for two months, at the end of which time he went to Niagara Falls, where for eight months he was engaged in work in a paper mill. He then came to Ohio and for three years worked at the tailor trade in Columbus, all of which time he was carefully attentive to the manners and customs of this country, spending much time in perfecting himself in the written and spoken language of his adopted country and familiarizing himself with the institutions and traditions of the land to which he was preparing to give his entire devotion; also thoroughly acquainting himself with American business methods. At the end of his three years' service in Columbus, Mr. Goodman determined to enter business for himself and with this end in view opened a tailoring store in Grove City, this state. He operated this store for one year, at the end of which time he sold the business and, in August, 1895, came to Clinton county, locating in Wilmington, where he bought the Harrison tailoring establishment, which he ever since has conducted in a very successful and profitable manner. Mr. Goodman has built up a fine trade in and around Wilmington and enjoys, in a high degree, the respect and confidence of his business associates throughout this part of the state.

In July, 1898, Simon Goodman was united in marriage to Bessie Isaacs, who was born in the city of New York, daughter of Charles Isaacs, who is a prominent cigar manufacturer in the city of Buffalo. Both of Mrs. Goodman's parents are still living. To the union of Simon and Bessie (Isaacs) Goodman one child has been born, a son, Kennard E., a student in the Wilmington high school, who is preparing to enter business with his father, in due time.

Mr. Goodman has done well in business, having carefully laid the foundation of his present success by close application and diligent study of American business methods since coming to this country and is well entitled to the rewards which have come to him in his commercial career, a substantial position in business circles and the regard of many friends.

THOMAS MENROY BALES.

Each generation necessarily builds upon the foundation laid by the preceding generations. According to the firmness of the foundation, the superstructure will be substantial or not. The future, of course, must be the judge of what character of foundation has been laid for the social, educational, moral and commercial edifice being erected by the citizens of Clinton county. However, from what the present historian notes of the high character, the determination of purpose and the exalted standards of conduct maintained by the leaders of thought and action in this favored section of the state, in their work of carrying on the labors of those who wrought so wisely and securely in the past, it hardly shall be doubted that the superstructure of the civilization of this region will be all that the present generation may hope for those who shall come after. It is partly the purpose of this volume to preserve for the future some account of the lives and the labors of those who now are doing so well their respective parts in bearing aloft the torch of civilization in this region, and it, therefore, is fitting and proper that brief biographies be here presented of those who are leaders in this noble work. As such a purpose would be but incompletely carried out without the introduction of the names of the scholarly young gentleman who is made the subject of this modest sketch, it is a pleasure on the part of the biographer here to present for the consideration of the future historian a brief resume of the life's history of Thomas Menroy Bales, one of the most popular members of the faculty of Wilmington College.

Thomas Menroy Bales was born on a farm in Chester township, Clinton county, Ohio, on March 28, 1884, son of William H. and Cordelia Jane (Faulkner) Bales, the former of whom was born in Greene county, this state, on August 25, 1854, and the latter of whom was born near the village of Paintersville, same county, on January 15, 1862.

William H. Bales was the son of Elisha and Margaret (Kiter) Bales, farming people, both natives of Greene county, the former of whom died some years ago, but the latter of whom still is living on the old home farm. The Bales family emigrated from Pennsylvania to Ohio about the year 1800, three brothers, one of whom was Elisha Bales' father, having come through on horseback, carrying such possessions as they boasted of in saddlebags. They settled in Greene county and the family became one of the most substantial and influential in that section of the state. It was there that William H. Bales was reared, being well grounded in the practical elements of agriculture and acquiring such limited education as the schools of that place and period afforded. He married Cordelia Jane Faulkner, daughter of Allen and Elizabeth (Hartsock) Faulkner, both members of pioneer families of Greene county, and both of whom are still living on the farm on which the former was born, Allen Faulkner now being ninety-one years of age and his wife eighty-eight years of age, both retaining an active interest in current affairs and maintaining their life-long devotion to the Methodist Protestant church. They have been married more than sixty-eight years, their marriage having been celebrated in July, 1847. Allen Faulkner is a son of Thomas Faulkner, a Virginian, of English descent, who was one of the very earliest settlers of Greene county, where he became a man of large influence in the formative period of that now well-established section. He married a McGuire and he and his wife reared a large family, the numerous descendants of whom today are doing well their respective parts in whatever places their lines have fallen. The Hartsocks also are of Virginia origin and became a numerous and influential family in Greene county, as well as in neighboring counties, there being a large connection of this name in this section of the state.

Following his marriage, William H. Bales moved to this county and bought a small farm in Chester township, which he gradually enlarged as he prospered, until he eventually became the owner of one hundred and eighty-five acres, all under excellent cultivation. He and his wife were members of the Methodist church and were active in all good works in their community, being held in the highest esteem by all thereabout. Mr. Bales was a Democrat and gave a good citizen's attention to the political affairs of the county, state and nation, though he never sought public office, being content to confine his energies to those matters of individual concern immediately at hand. In 1905 he and his wife retired from the farm and moved to the county seat, where he died on January 10, 1906, his widow's death following four years later, on March 23, 1910. Mr. and Mrs. Bales had lived lives of fine Christian devotion to the common good and had a wide circle of admiring and devoted friends, among whom they were deeply mourned.

To William H. and Cordelia Jane (Faulkner) Bales were born five children, namely: Emery R., a well-known and enterprising real-estate dealer, of Wilmington, this county, a biographical sketch of whom is presented elsewhere in this volume; Thomas Menroy, the immediate subject of this biographical sketch; Allen, who died at the age of eleven years; Lorena F., who keeps house for her brother, Emery R.; and Ioh, who is an invalid.

Thomas Menroy Bales was reared on the home farm in Chester township, receiving his primary education in district school No. 9, which he supplemented by a course in the preparatory school at Wilmington, following which he entered Wilmington College, from which excellent institution he was graduated with high honors in 1904, receiving, in recognition of his high scholastic attainments, an honorary scholarship in Haverford College, Pennsylvania, in which admirable old institution he later spent one year. Following this course, Professor Bales was engaged for one year as an instructor in the academy at Vassalboro, Maine, at the end of which time, in the fall of 1906, he was called by the faculty of Wilmington College to the chair of mathematics in that well-known institution and has since been serving his alma mater in that capacity, his service having proved not only eminently satisfactory to the faculty, but to the pupils who are under his instruction. In addition to his college duties, Professor Bales takes an active interest in public affairs, none being more deeply concerned in movements designed to elevate general standards in this community than he, and is now serving as a member of the Wilmington city council, to which office he was elected on the Republican ticket, and is doing well his part as one of the "city fathers," being accounted one of the leaders of that municipal body.

On June 23, 1909, Thomas Menroy Bales was united in marriage to Ada Probasco, who was born on a farm near Wilmington, this county, daughter of Charles and Anna (Hadley) Probasco, the former of whom is still living on the home farm and the latter of whom died in 1914. To this happy union two children have been born, Mary Elizabeth, born on May 29, 1914, and William Charles, June 13, 1915.

Mr. and Mrs. Bales are members of the Friends church at Wilmington and are regarded as among the leaders in the congregation of that flourishing religious connection.

giving unsparingly of their time and talents to the church. They also take their proper place in the social affairs of the county seat and are held in the warmest esteem by a large circle of friends, who admire them for their many high qualities of heart and head. Professor Bales gives due regard to the fraternal associations of his fellowmen and is the present master of the Masonic lodge at Wilmington, his active interest in Masonic affairs having made him one of the most prominent members of that ancient order in this part of the state. He has attained to the chapter degree and is a member of the council of the order at Xenia, this state. As an educator, as a citizen of fine public spirit; in fact, in all the relations of life, Professor Bales has carried himself well, and none hereabout possesses in a higher degree the confidence and respect of the community than he.

ASHER CURLES.

Asher Curles, a native of Brown county, Ohio, a first lieutenant in the Civil War and, for many years, a teacher in this section of Ohio, was born near Fayetteville, Ohio, June 21, 1837, and was the son of Samuel and Hannah (Brown) Curles, who were pioneers in Brown county, Ohio. Both died near Fayetteville after having reared a family of thirteen children, of whom six, Mahala, Fannie, Hannah, Marion, Mayme and John, are living.

Asher Curles was reared on a farm in Brown county, Ohio, educated in the public schools and at the normal school at Lebanon, Ohio. He taught school for many years and, during the Civil War, served as first lieutenant in Company I., Sixtieth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, having enlisted at Hillsboro, Ohio. After serving one year, he returned to his home in Brown county. Later in life, he became a member of the Grand Army of the Republic post at Blanchester, Ohio. He was a Republican and served as justice of the peace for many years. Not only was he active in politics, but he was a local minister in the Methodist Episcopal church.

In 1863 Asher Curles was married to Amanda Haines, a native of Marion township, Clinton county, born on May 14, 1840, and the daughter of Mordecai R. and Susannah (Rowan) Haines.

Mordecai R. Haines was the son of Isaac and Keziah (Woolman) Haines and was born in Burlington county, New Jersey, May 25, 1809. In 1811 his parents came to Clinton county and settled six miles north of Wilmington, where they purchased two hundred and fifty-six acres of land. In the fall of 1828 they lost their farm after having it nearly paid for. The following year they moved to Marion township and purchased four hundred and ninety-seven acres, giving in part payment one hundred and sixty acres which they owned in Greene county. Of this estate Mordecai R. Haines received one hundred and twenty-nine acres and was married on May 24, 1834, to Susanna Rowan, the daughter of Jeremiah and Hannah (Greer) Rowan, who was born in Hamilton county, Ohio. They were the parents of twelve children, Abigail, Zimri, Hannah, Amanda, Jeremiah, Salathiel, Granville, Robert, Merrill, Martha Ann, Keziah and Sylvester. After his marriage, Mordecai R. Haines settled on the land given him by his father. Until the time of his marriage, he had attended school only three days in his life. He learned to read and write after his marriage and was a farmer during his entire life. At one time he owned three hundred and sixty-five acres. Mrs. Susannah (Rowan) Haines died in 1875. Mordecai Haines was a Republican in politics and a member of the Friends church, although his wife was a Presbyterian. He died on April 15, 1901, and had he lived until May 25, 1901, would have been ninety-two years old.

In 1864 Mr. and Mrs. Asher Curles settled on a farm in Jefferson township. During the preceding years, Mr. Curles taught school in various places, especially in Blanchester, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Curles have been the parents of six children, Rev. Homer Grant, who is a minister in the Methodist Episcopal church, at Mechanicsburg, Ohio, where he has been for six years; Luella May; Osee D., the wife of Edward Brande-burg, of Arkansas; Elmer J., who is a farmer, and manager of a creamery at Blanchester, lives in Blanchester; Carey Lee, who died in 1910; and one who died in infancy. The father of these children died on January 9, 1907. He was a man highly respected in the community where he lived, honored by his fellow townsmen and respected by all with whom he had come into contact during his long life.

He was a member of the Odd Fellows lodge at Blanchester and passed all the chairs.

GEORGE E. CARROLL.

The late George E. Carroll, who, before his death on March 5, 1906, was a prosperous farmer of Clark township, this county, and a well-known dairyman, was born near Springfield meeting house in this county, on March 9, 1865, a son of Joseph and Mary (Bailey) Carroll, the former of whom was a native of Columbiana county, Ohio, and the latter of whom was born near Dover, in this county.

The paternal grandfather of Mr. Carroll died when Joseph Carroll was a small boy. His widow later married William Burdsall and lived near Oakland, Ohio. Joseph Carroll is still living at Harveysburg, and is a carpenter and farmer, still actively engaged in these vocations, although now more than eighty years old. For many years he has been an active member of the Prohibition party, and also active in the Friends church, of which he is one of the overseers. To Joseph and Mary (Bailey) Carroll were born five children. Mary (Bailey) Carroll was a daughter of George and Lydia Bailey, the former of whom was reared near Dover, in this county, and who, before the Civil War, was active among the Abolitionists and in the "underground railway" movement. He also was an active and earnest member of the Friends church.

George E. Carroll received his education in the public schools of Warren county, and in Wilmington College, having been a student in the latter excellent institution for three years. After leaving college he taught school for seven years in Clinton and Warren counties, after which he engaged in farming near Harveysburg. After living there for three years, he moved to Clark township, in this county, and three years later purchased the farm of one hundred and sixty-one acres, where his widow now lives, living on this farm from 1896 until the time of his death, in 1906. In addition to farming he was also interested in the dairy business and kept a fine herd of Jersey cattle. He had forty head of cows and used two silos during the period of his active career as a dairyman.

On October 21, 1886, George E. Carroll was married to Cammie M. Townsend, who was born in Clark township, this county, a daughter of Josiah and Esther (West) Townsend. Mrs. Carroll's maternal grandparents were Peyton and Sarah (Hadley) West, natives, respectively, of Virginia and North Carolina, who were married in Clark township, this county. Sarah Hadley was a daughter of James Hadley, a native of North Carolina, and an early settler of Highland county, Ohio. Late in life he removed to a farm near Farmer's Station. All the members of the family were identified with the Society of Friends. Mrs. Carroll's father, Josiah Townsend, who was born on February 16, 1831, was a farmer by occupation and lived in Clark township. He and his wife reared a family of nine children. He died on November 18, 1892, and his wife on December 22, 1891. She was born on March 25, 1839.

To George E. and Cammie M. (Townsend) Carroll were born seven children, namely: Inez, who was educated in Martinsville high school and in Wilmington College, is the wife of C. H. Hunter, a farmer of Clark township; Esther, a teacher, who lives at home with her mother, also was educated at Martinsville high school and at Wilmington College, while Willard, Glen, Cleve, Mary and Lucile also live at home.

George E. Carroll was an active Republican and was a strong temperance man, courageously opposed to the liquor traffic and the licensed saloon. He was a member of the Friends church, and fraternally, a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America.

DAVID LIEURANCE.

David Lieurance, a retired farmer of Martinsville, Ohio, was born two and one-half miles west of New Antioch in 1852, the son of William and Mary (Hall) Lieurance, both of whom are natives of Clinton county. Mr. Lieurance's maternal grandfather, Tilman Hall, was an early settler near New Antioch, but later removed to the Hoosier state and died. William Lieurance was educated in the pioneer schools of Clinton county, and was a farmer all his life. He died when his son, David, was only five years old. There were three sons and one daughter in the family. The mother lived until David was about twenty-five years old.

David Lieurance was educated in the old Gregory school, and began work early in life, helping to support the family. He and his brother, A. Pierce Lieurance, purchased eighty-one acres together and for some time farmed that tract of land together. After David married, the land was divided. He added to his portion a little by purchase, and started life for himself with forty-seven acres. For about five years before he purchased the land, he worked by the month for eight and one-half dollars a month, the first year, and a little more each year afterward. From the time of his marriage until the time of his retirement to Martinsville in the fall of 1911, David Lieurance was engaged in farming. He still owns a farm of one hundred and one and ninety-two one-hundredths acres in Clark township. He also has an excellent house and lot in Martinsville where he and his wife and daughter live.

In 1877 David Lieurance was married to Sydney E. Hunt, daughter of Jacob Hunt, an early settler of Clark township and a farmer by occupation, to which union one child has been born, a daughter, Laurena Maude, who lives at home with her parents. The Lieurances are members of the Friends church. Various members of the family have been prominent in the society of Friends for many years in the religious history of this county. Mr. and Mrs. Lieurance are highly-respected residents of Martinsville, and are well known in that vicinity.

FRED G. WILLIAMS, D. D. S.

Among the professional men of Wilmington, this county, few occupy a higher position in society, or in the ranks of the professions with which they are connected than the gentleman whose name the reader notes above. Born in this county, Doctor Williams has spent the greater part of his life here and has attained high rank in the difficult profession to which he has applied himself with such conscientious devotion. Of recent years there has been a wonderful advancement in the science of dental surgery, modern research having revealed many things to emphasize the importance of the proper preservation of the teeth, in consequence of which the public has been giving a degree of attention to dentistry that a generation ago hardly would have been thought of. This has meant the most studious attention on the part of the dental surgeons to keep pace with the rapid progress of modern science, and those who thus have kept pace have become the leaders of their profession in their several communities. Without any violation of the strict code of ethics binding the men connected with the healing and restorative professions, it very properly may be said in this connection that Doctor Williams is included among those who have kept fully abreast of the wonderful advances recently made in his chosen calling and is thus counted among the leaders in his profession in this part of the state, his extensive practice being regarded as conclusive of this.

Fred G. Williams was born in Blanchester, in Marion township, Clinton county, Ohio, on August 9, 1870, the only child and son of Judge Ambrose N. and Martha E. (Ball) Williams, the former of whom was born in Perry township, Brown county, Ohio, on October 13, 1842, and died at his home in Wilmington, this county, on July 7, 1896, and the latter of whom was born at Pomeroy, this state, on August 13, 1844, and is still living in Wilmington.

Ambrose N. Williams was the son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Robinson) Williams, both natives of Harper, Pennsylvania. Samuel Williams was a noted school teacher in his day. In 1837 he came to Ohio, locating in Brown county, where, for seven years, he taught school with much success, his useful career being cut short by death in 1844. His widow married, secondly, John Frazee, who located in Blanchester, this county, where for many years he served as justice of the peace. Both John Frazee and his wife were Baptists and were influential citizens of the Blanchester neighborhood. It was there that Ambrose Williams was reared and received his early education, learning the painting trade in his youth. In 1861, when nineteen years of age, he enlisted in the Union army for service in the Civil War, serving as first sergeant of Company C, Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was with the army until mustered out at the close of the war, seeing much active service. Sergeant Williams was with Sherman's army on the celebrated march to the sea and participated in many desperate engagements, his regiment having been in the very thick of some of the hardest-fought battles of the war.

At the close of the war, Sergt. Ambrose N. Williams returned to Blanchester, resuming the peaceful occupation of painting for a time, and in 1867 began the study of law in the office of Judge Doan. Under this admirable old preceptor he made such excellent progress that he presently was admitted to the bar and soon began to attract the attention of other and older lawyers. He rapidly acquired favor with the public and in 1884 was elected to the office of probate judge of Clinton county, a position which he held through successive re-elections to the time of his death, in 1896, and in which he performed a most admirable service to the people of this county.

It was some little time after returning from the war that Ambrose N. Williams was united in marriage with Martha E. Ball, who was the daughter of Thomas and Lydia (Morris) Ball, natives of Pennsylvania, who, in 1839, came to Ohio, locating in the town of Pomeroy, whence, after a few years, they moved to Warren county, this state, later coming to Clinton county, locating in Blanchester, where the rest of their lives were spent. Thomas Ball was a school teacher in his younger years, but later became a painter and was thus engaged during his long residence in Blanchester, where he became one of the best-known men in that neighborhood. He and his wife were devout members of the Friends church and exerted a wide influence for good in their community. They were the parents of five children, two sons and three daughters. Thomas Ball died at the age of sixty, his widow surviving him many years, she living to the ripe old age of eighty-three. Judge Williams was a member of the Baptist church and took much interest in the affairs of the congregation to which he was attached, having been for many years a trustee of the church. Upon his election to the office of probate judge, he moved to the county seat and the rest of his life was spent in Wilmington, he becoming a man of large influence there. His death, in 1896, was widely mourned, for he was a good man and had done well his part in life.

Fred G. Williams received his elementary education in the public schools of Blanchester, completing his common school education in the Wilmington schools, after which he took a course in Wilmington College. Following this he entered upon the study of dental surgery in the office of Dr. W. R. Hale, at Wilmington, and after two years of close application there attended the Ohio Dental College for one year, at the end of which time he entered the Cincinnati Dental College, from which he was graduated in 1892. Upon receiving his diploma, Doctor Williams returned to Wilmington and in 1893 opened an office there for the practice of his chosen profession, remaining there until 1904, in which year he went to Jamestown, this state, where he practiced until the year 1910, returning in that year to Wilmington, where he ever since has been very successfully engaged in practice.

On October 6, 1897, Dr. Fred G. Williams was united in marriage to Genia Walker, who was born in Highland, Highland county, Ohio, daughter of Bruce M. and Catherine (Hickson) Walker, both of whom are still living, Bruce M. Walker being the agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Lancaster, Ohio. To the union of Fred G. and Genia (Walker) Williams two children have been born, Kathryn, born on August 23, 1898, and Winifred, January 30, 1901.

Doctor and Mrs. Williams are members of the Baptist church and their children have been reared in that faith. Doctor Williams gives much and intelligent attention to Sunday school affairs and is secretary of the Baptist Sunday school. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and takes a prominent part in the local affairs of that popular organization. Doctor and Mrs. Williams are deeply concerned in the welfare of the community and are to be found among the foremost promoters of all movements designed to further the common good hereabout. A leader in his profession, public spirited and enterprising, Doctor Williams occupies a position of importance in the community to which he has for years given his best endeavors and is held in the highest regard by all who know him.

CHARLES T. PAVEY.

The name heading this sketch belongs to a gentleman who sprang from good old pioneer stock, and who has always displayed the same degree of energy that has ever been a prominent characteristic of his ancestors. He takes a great interest in the study of agriculture, and is also especially interested in stock-raising. At one time he made a specialty of saddle horses, but this branch of his vocation has been discontinued, no doubt due to the advent of the automobile. It is a wise man who knows when to cease following a trail when it begins to lead him from the main road to success, and it behooves each and every one of us to be on the lookout for for these false trails, which can only end in failure.

Charles T. Pavey, general farmer and stockman, Richland township, Clinton county, Ohio, was born on November 21, 1853, in Fayette county, Ohio. He is a son of William Pavey and Jirdena (Johnson) Kirby-Pavey. His early education was received at the public schools, and as a young man, he purchased, on March 10, 1873, his present farm of eighty-eight acres in Richland township, and started on his career as a farmer, dividing his time and attention between general farming and stock-raising. His investment in saddle horses proved a losing business, and he abandoned it for something more to his profit and benefit. He has lived on his present place ever since he bought it, except three years, which he spent at Sabina.

William Pavey, father of our subject, was born in Highland county, Ohio. He was married twice, first to Ann Johnson, and the second time to Jirdena (Johnson) Kirby, widow of William Kirby. His early life was spent in a log cabin in Highland county, and from this place he went to Fayette, where he was married. He was a man of great energy and preserverance, kind-hearted and accommodating to his neighbors, even to his own disadvantage, as he met reverses twice because of going security for a friend. Still, by his great strength of willpower and determination, he was again well established in this world's goods at the time of his death. He was a member of the Methodist church. To Mr. Pavey and his first wife, Ann Johnson, were born the following children: Isaac, William, Mary, George, John, Sophia, Henry, James E., and Eliza. After the death of his first wife, he was again married, to Mrs. Jirdena Kirby, by whom he had the following children: Charles T., our subject, Thomas A., Kitturah, Gilbert A. Mr. Pavey died in June, 1862. Mrs. Jirdena Kirby had three children by her first husband, who was a Civil War soldier, and died in the army. Their children were: Mary Ann, Eliza Jane and Milton.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES T. PAVEY.

The paternal grandfather was Isaac Pavey, a native of the state of Delaware, moving at an early date to Kentucky, thence he made an effort to locate in Ohio, but the Indians proved so troublesome that he returned to Kentucky, remaining there three years longer, when he brought his family and settled in Highland county, where he spent the last years of his life. His death was caused by being thrown from a horse. He was one of the true old pioneers, and fought the hardships bravely.

Charles T. Pavey was united in marriage to Catherine Lappe, in December, 1872. She was born in Germany, in June, 1854, and was a daughter of Louis and Catherine (Cook) Lappe. They have had one child, Leonard M., who died at the age of twenty-one. The wife and mother died on January 22, 1911.

CHARLES ALLEN RANNELLS.

Among the men who have played a large part in the development of the varied interests of the city of Wilmington, this county, few are better known than the gentleman whose name heads this interesting biographical review. Born in this county, Mr. Rannells has been a witness of all the marvelous advances which have been made along the way during the past half century and has been a no small contributing factor in the various movements which have promoted such advances. Laying the groundwork of his successful career by acquiring a liberal education in his youth, Mr. Rannells for a time served most acceptably as a teacher in the Wilmington public schools and in 1882 entered upon his business career, serving for a time as a clerk in the clothing store of his brother, in Wilmington, later buying a half interest in this store, the firm being continued as a partnership for some years, after which he purchased his brother's interest and until 1911 conducted the business alone. Upon selling his store in that year, Mr. Rannells retired from business and since that time has been living very comfortably and happily in his fine home in Wilmington, enjoying fully the ample rewards of his active life of useful and painstaking endeavor.

Charles Allen Rannells was born on a farm in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, on August 17, 1859, son of Thomas G. and Massie (Wiley) Rannells, the former of whom was born in Washington county, Pennsylvania, in 1810, and died at his home in this county in 1884, and the latter of whom was born near Barnesville, Ohio, in 1820, and died in 1892.

Thomas G. Rannells, who was the son of William and Leah Rannells, Pennsylvanians, of Scottish descent, was four years of age when his parents emigrated to Ohio in 1814. They settled in this county, entering a tract of land from the government, covering about one hundred and twenty-five acres, two and one-half miles northeast of the present city of Wilmington, the present county seat town at that time consisting of but one dwelling house and a blacksmith shop. William Rannells became one of the leaders in the pioneer community and exerted a wholesome influence during the formative period of that now rich and prosperous section. He and his wife were members of the Christian church and were among the most active workers in that communion, the power of their influence ever being thrown on the side of all good works thereabout. Both lived to good old ages and their memories are cherished among all persons of pioneer descent in that community.

Thomas G. Rannells was reared on the paternal farm, growing up amid pioneer conditions that would seem harshly beset by hardships to young people of the present generation, and upon reaching his majority bought a small farm of his own, this original purchase consisting of sixty acres near the old homestead at "Deserted Camp" corners.

To this purchase he gradually added, as prosperity attended his efforts, until presently he was the owner of two hundred and forty-eight acres and was accounted one of the substantial citizens of the county. Mr. Rannells was a Republican and took an active part in local politics, constantly exerting his strong personal influence in behalf of public improvements and the general uplift of the community, his efforts in connection with the elevation of educational standards thereabouts being especially well remembered. Good roads was one of the phases of early public improvement that he worked for most sedulously, and it is recalled that it was he who was mainly instrumental in securing the first "pike" roads through that part of the county. His wife, who was Massie Wiley, whose parents, natives of eastern Ohio, earnest Quaker folk, came to Clinton county at an early day in the settlement of the same, was an ever-present helpmeet, aiding his efforts in every good way and was a woman of large and beneficent influence in her day. Both were active workers in the Christian church and their children were reared conscientiously in the faith of that communion. Thomas G. Rannells was one of the best farmers in his neighborhood and did very much to bring about improved conditions in farming in his section of the county. He made a specialty of raising a fine grade of hogs, and found this phase of farming quite profitable, his example in this respect being followed with profit by many of his neighbors.

To Thomas G. and Massie (Wiley) Rannells were born seven children, namely: William Harvey, a well-known retired merchant, of Wilmington, this county; Mrs. Sarah Hildebrant, now deceased; Mary E., residing in Wilmington; Leah L., also of Wilmington; John L., who now owns and makes his home on the old homestead in Union township; Charles A., the immediate subject of this sketch; and Etta, who lives in Wilmington.

Charles A. Rannells was reared on the home farm, attending in his boyhood what was known as the "Dutch" district school in that neighborhood. He then attended the Wilmington high school and was graduated from the same in 1880, following which he took a course at Butler University at Indianapolis. Upon completing this course he was offered and accepted a position as teacher in the Wilmington grammar school. He retained this position for but one year, the promise of a commercial career appealing to him with force, and he entered the clothing store of Rannells & Dunham, the senior member of this firm being his brother, William H., who presently purchased his partner's interest in the store and was the sole owner, his brother retaining his position as clerk until 1889, in which year he bought a half interest in the store. Rannells Brothers continued this arrangement until 1894, Charles A., in that year, buying his brother's interest, the latter retiring from business. From that time until in September, 1911, Charles A. Rannells conducted the popular clothing store alone and was very successful in his business operations. In the year last named he sold the store to the present owners, Champlain & Mitchell, and retired from the cares of an active business life. He oversees his fine farm of one hundred and thirty-eight acres on the outskirts of Wilmington.

On September 6, 1882, Charles A. Rannells was united in marriage to Clora Kirk, who was born in Wilmington, this county, daughter of the late John M. Kirk, a former prominent attorney of Wilmington, and his wife, Emily Kirk, and to this union three children have been born, Edith, Sarah Wiley and Mary Emilie. Edith Rannells married Robert L. Lewis, a brick manufacturer, of Athens, Ohio, and has two children, Allen Rannells and Robert Ellis. Sarah Wiley Rannells married Rendal H. Terrell, a well-known young farmer of this county, and has two children, Charles David and Rendal Rannells. Mary Emilie Rannells is a student in the Wilmington high school.

Mr. and Mrs. Rannells are members of the Walnut Street Christian church at Wilmington, Mr. Rannells serving the congregation of that church in the capacity of a deacon. He is a Republican and for years has taken a prominent part in the deliberations of the party managers in this county. For some time he served on the city school board and has also given the public excellent service as a member of the city council.

Mr. Rannells is a prominent Mason, his blue lodge being No. 52, chapter No. 63, council at Xenia, and commandery No. 37; and he is a past master, past high priest and past commander.

Though retired from business life, Mr. Rannells continues to take a warm interest in public affairs and no man in the county is more deeply concerned in civic advancement than he. His long connection with the commercial circles at the county seat gives force to his judgments on local matters and his associates hold him in the highest confidence and regard.

CALEB B. CLELAND.

Caleb B. Cleland, who is descended from distinguished American families on both the paternal and maternal sides of his family and who himself is a prosperous farmer of Clark township, this county, where he owns a fine farm of one hundred and eighty acres, was born on January 5, 1849, near Blanchester, this county, the son of James and Phoebe (Brown) Cleland, the former of whom was born near Weston, in Harrison county, West Virginia, on December 2, 1802, and the latter of whom was born at Plattsburg, New York, on July 5, 1869. They were married on September 16, 1827, and lived together for fifty-six years before death broke their union.

James Cleland was the son of Larkin and Sarah (Philips) Cleland, the former born on August 23, 1778, and the latter on June 6, 1778. Larkin Cleland was a native probably of Harrison county, West Virginia. He purchased a military claim in West Virginia, but an older claimant appeared and Larkin was compelled to pay off the claim. Subsequently, another claimant appeared, and still another, after which he abandoned the claim and emigrated to the Hoosier state, settling near Sulphur Springs, in Henry county, where for many years he was engaged in farming, and where he and his wife died. They were the parents of ten children, of whom James, father of Caleb B., was the eldest. Eunice was born on June 11, 1804; Susanah, August 15, 1806; Ann, February 14, 1808; Sarah, January 27, 1810; Mary, July 22, 1812; John, the twin brother of Mary, July 22, 1812; Barbara, November 15, 1815; Maria Ann, September 20, 1818, and Larkin P., September 11, 1820.

The paternal grandparents of Caleb B. Cleland were Caleb and Mary (Adams) Brown, the former of whom was born on October 23, 1784, very probably near Plattsburg, New York. He was a manufacturer of nails in New York state when nails were still headed by hand. He remained in New York state until about 1821, when he removed to Warren county, Ohio, and there engaged in farming, near Goshen, until his death. He was a soldier in the War of 1812. His wife was born near Plattsburg, New York, on April 17, 1788. They were married March 26, 1807, and had ten children, all now deceased, of whom Phoebe, the mother of Caleb B. Cleland, was the eldest. Elizabeth was born on April 28, 1811; Katherine, March 30, 1813; Melissa, April 8, 1815; Caroline, February 16, 1816; Sarah Ann, October 4, 1818; Jane, September 22, 1820; Mordecai, April 27, 1822; Henry, November 13, 1824, and Martin, December 7, 1826.

The late James Cleland received a limited education in the crude pioneer schools of the Old Dominion state, attending school in a log school house, which had a fire place at one end. He did not accompany his parents to Indiana, but emigrated to Warren county, Ohio, before his parents removed to Indiana. He was married in Warren county and purchased a farm three miles east of Blanchester, in Clinton county, about 1835. He first purchased one hundred acres of land, and gradually added to his original holdings until he owned one hundred and fifty acres, which he cleared and improved and on which he lived for nearly fifty years. He made a considerable deposit of money which he applied on the purchase of his land by working in the neighboring grist-mill. In 1878 he retired to Martinsville, where he and his wife died. They were the parents of eight children, of whom Caleb B., the subject of this sketch, was the youngest. The others were Sarah, born on August 24, 1828; Mary, May 31, 1830; Larkin, December 19, 1832; Eliza Jane, October 2, 1834; Martha E., April 30, 1840; John H., January 23, 1844, and Susan, February 13, 1847. Of this family Caleb B. Cleland is the only living member. Mr. Cleland's mother was the daughter of Samuel and Catherine (Green) Brown, the former born on June 3, 1759, and the latter on August 7, 1761. They were married on August 28, 1781, and were the parents of ten children.

Caleb B. Cleland was educated in the public schools of Marion township and taught school for six months. He then took up farming on the old home farm, where he lived for two years, at the end of which time he moved to a farm near Martinsville, this county, and has lived in that vicinity ever since. Mr. Cleland first purchased eighty acres of land north of Martinsville, and lived on that farm for twenty-two years. Afterwards he purchased one hundred and eighty acres, one mile southeast of Martinsville, where he now lives.

Caleb B. Cleland was married on March 8, 1870, to Nancy E. Urton, a native of Clinton county, daughter of Ephraim and Sarah (Smith) Urton, to which union one child has been born, a son, Armasa, who married Chloe Moon, who was born near Martinsville, the daughter of Columbus and Susanah (Rhonemus) Moon. Armasa Cleland and wife live with the former's parents and are the parents of two children, Lee M. and Ren S.

The Cleland family are all members of the Friends church. Fraternally, Caleb B. Cleland is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

WILLIAM HENRY.

Among the farmers of the last generation, who, by virtue of their strong individual qualities, won their way to a high standing in the estimation of their fellow citizens, was the late William Henry, who, by sheer force of character and persistency, arose from an humble station to a place of influence and prominence in Union township. He is, therefore, entitled to special mention in this volume.

The late William Henry was born near Harveysburg in Warren county, Ohio, January 31, 1838, and died on September 10, 1906. He was a son of John and Catherine (Stump) Henry, the former of whom was born in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia in 1798 and who died in 1870, and the latter born in Frederick county, Virginia, in 1805 and who died in 1887.

John Henry when a young man came from Virginia to Ohio. His father was killed when John was a baby and he was reared by his aunt. After coming to Ohio, he settled in Warren county, where he finally owned a good farm near Harveysburg. In 1854 he sold the farm and purchased land in Union township, living there until his death. He and his wife were devout members of the Christian church. They had ten children, of whom seven are deceased. The names of the children in the order of their births are as follow: Daniel, who lives in Wilmington; William, the subject of this sketch; Jonas and John, who lived with their mother and both now deceased; Tilby, who married William Fisher and lives near Port William, Ohio; Retta, deceased, who married Quince Harris; Liddy Jones, who died unmarried; Frances, who married James Fisher and lives in Wilmington; Reese, who lived with his mother and who died unmarried, and Joshua, who was twice married and is deceased.

The late William Henry was educated in the public schools of Warren county and was sixteen years old when his parents moved to Clinton county. Here he attended the Dutch district school. Owning fifty acres of land in Greene county, he lived there for two years and then purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land in Union township, selling the Greene county farm. He lived on the Union township farm until 1893, when he retired and moved to New Vienna. There he remained for eighteen months, but was unable to withstand the complete remission of toil and purchased one hundred and eighteen acres of the Bruce Sprague farm on the east edge of Union township, where he died. Mrs. William Henry had a birthright in the Friends church and fifteen years after their marriage, Mr. Henry joined the Friends church. He was a Democrat in politics but voted the Prohibition ticket during the later years of his life. He was pre-eminent as a stock breeder in this county and was well known for the excellent breed of his horses.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM HENRY.

On April 1, 1869, the late William Henry was married to Julia A. Pidgeon, who was born on May 27, 1838, in Guilford county, North Carolina, near Highpoint and fifteen miles from Greensboro, the county seat. Mrs. Henry is the daughter of Charles and Catherine (Horney) Pidgeon, the former of whom was born on March 1, 1806, and who died on July 26, 1898, and the latter born on September 23, 1810, and who died on December 27, 1886. Both were natives of Stokes county, North Carolina.

Isaac Pidgeon, who was the paternal great-grandfather of Mrs. Henry, was a very strict Quaker. About 1740 he immigrated to Chowan county, North Carolina, from Ireland, because of religious persecution. He was a millwright by trade and owned three different mills during his life, the last one on "Rich Fork." Although he lived in America during the Revolutionary War, he was not called upon to serve, since he was a member of the Quaker church. His son, Charles Pidgeon, Sr., the grandfather of Mrs. Henry, was a farmer, blacksmith, mechanic, carpenter and home physician; in fact, he was an all-around genius. He was a strict Quaker, and died in 1854. His wife was Elizabeth Crews, to whom he was married on November 11, 1789. She was a native of Virginia and died in the early forties. They were the parents of twelve children.

Mrs. Henry's father, Charles Pidgeon, Jr., grew up in Stokes county, North Carolina, and early in life located in Guilford county, where, at the breaking out of the Civil War, he owned five hundred acres of land on Deep river. He was an industrious man and a successful financier with the able assistance of his good wife. There were many tenant houses on his farm but he kept no slaves and was opposed to slavery. Charles Pidgeon, Jr., and Catherine Horney were married on October 8, 1829. They made a great deal of money before railroads were built, hauling merchandise from the region where they lived to distant markets, such as Fayetteville, North Carolina, and Camden, South Carolina. They had a six-horse wagon and hauled dry goods and groceries on return trips.

At the beginning of the Civil War, Charles Pidgeon, Jr., was a northern sympathizer. He was strongly opposed to slavery and was anxious to get his sons away so they could avoid service in the Confederate army. In the spring of 1861 he sold off all of his stock and farm implements with the intention of moving to Ohio. The southerners objected to his leaving and sent a troop of soldiers to attend the sale but the soldiers were treated to a splendid chicken dinner and did not interfere with the sale. However, the trip to Ohio was delayed until the fall of 1861, when after the rebels' success at the first battle of Bull Run, it was thought the war would soon end victoriously for the South and the departure of the Pidgeons would make little difference.

They started with three wagons, a carriage and a buggy and some live stock. With his family were two other families. A son, John Pidgeon, and his family, his sister, Emily and her family, made the trip north by the steam road, the remainder of the family coming by wagon. Charles Pidgeon, Jr., had sold his whole five hundred acres in North Carolina for less than would be required today to buy a small farm in Ohio. On the way north, the family encountered a horse trader, who engaged in buying horses in Ohio for the Southern army. He told Mr. Pidgeon it would be impossible to get out through the Cumberland Gap, as it was guarded and the armies would let no one past. However, it was pointed out that the trip might be effected by the way of the Big Sandy river. Eventually, the family escaped to Ohio by this perilous route and settled in Clinton county. The first year they rented a farm where Henry Pidgeon now lives in Union township and which later Charles Pidgeon purchased. The next year they rented a farm in the Dover neighborhood and then rented a farm for the next five years near New Vienna. At the end of this time, Charles Pidgeon purchased the farm in Union township which he had first rented on coming to Ohio. He lived on this two-hundred-acre farm until his death, his sons working hard in the meantime to pay for it. During all of this period he and his wife were regular attendants of the meetings of the Friends church; they were rather strict in their views. He was a pronounced Abolitionist and was not afraid to speak his mind, even when living in the south. At this time in his life he was a Republican but he later became a member of the Prohibition party.

Mrs. Henry was one of twelve children born to her parents, as follow: Emily, who married John Briggs and died at the age of thirty-nine; Mary, who married Walter Cammack and lives in Virginia; John, who married Caroline Thompson, and who is a Quaker minister at Orchard Grove, Ohio; Hannah, who married William Charles and both now deceased; Julia A., the widow of Mr. Henry; Samuel, who is a school teacher and farmer of Jamestown, Ohio; David, who lives in California; Jeffrey, who died in infancy; Charles Addison, who was a school teacher and died unmarried at the age of twenty-six; Henry, who is a farmer in Union township; Cornelia, who married Bruce Sprague, of Union township, and Louisa, who married Aden Starbuck.

To Mr. and Mrs. William Henry were born three children: Charles A., January 22, 1870, who is a farmer of Union township and who married Margaret Vandervort; Junius Avery, December 29, 1871, who is a farmer of Union township and who married Augusta Fisher; and William A., November 9, 1876, who lived with his mother and died on September 20, 1909.

Mrs. Henry lives on the farm in Union township near Haus Chapel. She is an ardent member of the Friends church at Wilmington, Ohio, and a highly respected and well-known woman of Clinton county, refined, educated and capable.

EVERETT J. CAST.

Member of a family that has been well known in this county since pioneer days, both his father and his mother having been born in this county, their parents having been among the early settlers here, the subject of this brief and modest biographical sketch has a wide acquaintance throughout the county and is held in the highest regard by all who know him.

Everett J. Cast was born in Vernon township, Clinton county, Ohio, on September 17, 1876, son of James A. and Amanda D. (McKibben) Cast, both natives of this county, the former of whom was born in Vernon township and the latter of whom was born in Washington township. James Cast was the son of James and Susan (Villars) Cast, both natives of Vernon township, the latter of whom recently died at the ripe old age of eighty-eight years. James Cast, Sr., was a farmer of Vernon township, and died at the age of thirty-six, leaving a widow with five children. One of their sons, John Wesley Cast, served his country valiantly during the Civil War as a soldier attached to one of the Ohio regiments.

James Cast, Jr., received his education in the district school near the paternal farm and was reared as a farmer, a vocation which he followed all his life. He married Amanda D. McKibben, daughter of Josiah and Eleanor McKibben, members of well-known families in this county, to which union three children were born, Everett J., the immediate subject of this sketch, Bertha and Herman. James Cast's farming operations, with the exception of about fifteen years that he lived in Illinois, were carried on both in Washington and Clark township. Both Mr. and Mrs. Clark died in Clark township. He and his wife were members of the Methodist church and their children were reared in that faith.

Everett J. Cast was reared in Washington township, his education being received in the district schools of that township, and he began his farming operations early in his young manhood and ever since has been a practical farmer. In 1907 he bought the farm of fifty-two acres on which he is now living, in Washington township, and has improved the same greatly, having completely remodeled the house and made other extensive improvements. He gives careful attention to the details of his work and is doing well.

In 1902 Everett J. Cast was united in marriage to Chlora Turner, who was born in Clark township, this county, daughter of W. E. and Emma (Ford) Turner, the former of whom is the son of Andrew Jackson Turner, the son of Daniel Turner, a prominent pioneer of Clinton county, who is mentioned elsewhere in this volume. Andrew Jackson Turner was a well-known farmer of Clark township, who came with his father from Clermont county, his wife, who was Serephina Potter, also having been a native of this latter county.

Mr. and Mrs. Cast have many friends in the neighborhood in which they live and take an active part in the life of that community. Mr. Cast is a member of the lodge of Odd Fellows and is popular with the members of that fraternity. He is a good citizen and loyal neighbor, who is doing well his part in the world's work.

ERNEST R. HAZARD.

Ernest R. Hazard, a well-known young citizen of Martinsville, this county, who is the proprietor of a lumber, feed and coal yard at that place, was formerly an officer in the Philippine constabulary and saw extensive service in the Philippine Islands and elsewhere. Ernest R. Hazard was born in Wilmington, this county, on May 24, 1880, the son of Jonas Seth and Mary (Buntain) Hazard, the former of whom was born near Sligo, this county, and the latter of whom was the daughter of William and Susanna (Jenkins) Buntain. Jonas S. Hazard is the son of Henry and Elizabeth (Wells) Hazard, natives of Union township, this county, and Douglas county, Illinois, respectively. Henry Hazard was educated in the common schools of Union township and became a carpenter and miller by trade. He was also a bridge builder and constructed the bridge across the Scioto river. He owned a grist-mill and saw-mill in Adams township and died at Ogden. To Henry and Elizabeth Hazard were born nine children, Robert F., John W., Allen S., Jonas Seth, Calvin H., Sarah S., James R., Bijah T. and Caleb H. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Jonas Seth Hazard, the father of Ernest R., who was born on January 9, 1850, near Sligo, in Adams township, this county, was educated in the common schools of Adams township and has been a farmer and carpenter all of his life. For forty-five years, he worked at the carpenter's trade but retired from contract carpentering in 1911. During his active career he did much of the building in Wilmington, having moved to that place about 1880. In 1912 he purchased sixty-two acres of land in Adams township, but rents the farm. He married Mary Buntain, the daughter of William and Susanna (Jenkins) Buntain, to which union were born two children, Belle Boyd, who married Launtie Hadley, and Ernest R., the subject of this sketch. The Hazard family are members of the Friends church and Jonas S. Hazard votes the Republican ticket.

Educated in the public schools of Wilmington, Ernest R. Hazard worked for a short time at the tinner's trade. When he was seventeen years old, he went to Palestine, Illinois, and after being there for six months, enlisted in Battery E, Sixth United States Artillery on March 21, 1898. After serving for three years he was discharged in the Philippine Islands. Afterward he served about three months on the Metropolitan police force of Manila, resigning to accept the position as overseer of the yard watchmen of the Manila & Dagupan railway at Caloocan, Philippine Islands. After holding this position for about three months, he became a member of the Philippines constabulary, accepting a commission as second lieutenant and inspector of the constabulary. He held this position for about one year and later became first lieutenant. In 1906 he returned to the United States and engaged in the restaurant business at Wilmington for four years. In 1910 he sold out, moved to Martinsville, where he bought an established lumber, feed and coal yard, which he now owns and manages.

On June 30, 1907, Ernest R. Hazard was married to Pearl Certain, of Wilmington, the daughter of D. M. and Luellen (Gallaher) Certain, of that city, and to this union one child has been born, a daughter, Mary Ellen.

Fraternally, Ernest R. Hazard is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, the Knights of Pythias, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. Mr. and Mrs. Hazard are members of the Friends church. Mr. Hazard recently has built a fine modern home on College Heights at Martinsville, and he and his family are very comfortably and pleasantly situated there. They are held in high regard throughout that section of the county, and enjoy the respect and esteem of all who know them.

ALFRED SPRAGUE.

Among the most extensive farmers of Richland township, this county, is Alfred Sprague, a pleasant, cordial and genial-natured man who is entirely unassuming and modest withal. He and his daughter, Eva, own nine hundred acres of land in Richland township and is one of the most successful farmers in this section of Ohio. This success, in a large measure, is due to his tireless energy, his careful mastery of details and exceptional executive ability. He knows the farm, its varied and diverse aspects and he applies his intelligence to the details of management.

Alfred Sprague was born on June 8, 1858, in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of William H. and Caroline (Drake) Sprague, both natives of New York state, the former of whom was born on February 22, 1823, and died on May 9, 1884, the latter born on September 22, 1829, the daughter of Randolph and Elizabeth Drake, also now deceased. William H. Sprague was the son of John Sprague, a native of New York state, who was a farmer and oyster fisherman, living in the eastern part of the state, the father of eight children, Joseph, James, Alfred, John, Jane, Mary Jane, Susannah and William H.

The late William H. Sprague, the youngest child in this family and the father of Alfred, was educated in the public schools of New York state and came to Ohio in 1854, locating on a farm in Clinton county. Before coming to Ohio, he had been engaged in water transportation, but after coming to this state engaged in farming and followed this occupation the remainder of his life, owning a small, but well-kept farm of seventy-five acres. Alfred Sprague, the son of William H. and Caroline Sprague, was one of eight children born to his parents, the others being as follow: James A., born on November 3, 1847, who married Mary E. Bogue; George B., September 22, 1849, who married Catherine Pidgeon; Theodocia, December 15, 1852, who became the wife of Isaac Wood; John R., June 17, 1855, who married Emma Hall; Mary E., April 17, 1861, who is the wife of Orval Moore; Henry C., February 14, 1867; and Drucilla, August 19, 1870, who died on April 18, 1888. William H. Sprague was a Republican in politics. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Protestant church and their children were reared in that faith.

Alfred Sprague was educated in the common schools of Clinton Station and began farming with his father when a very young man. In 1881 he moved to Richland township and has lived on a farm in that township ever since, engaging in general farming and stock raising, being an extensive breeder of large type Poland China hogs. During late years, he has erected a number of buildings on the various farms which he owns and is continually engaged in improving his land. The excellent stone quarry on his land is known as the Sprague quarry.

On March 23, 1881, Alfred Sprague was married to Rosa V. Vaniman, who was born on July 3, 1854, and who died on February 6, 1900. She was the daughter of Elias and Eva (Early) Vaniman, the former of whom was born on June 20, 1823, and the latter on November 3, 1826. To Mr. and Mrs. Sprague one child was born, a daughter, Eva, born on June 13, 1885, who married Philip Ellis, and has one child, Alfred Wheeler, born in January, 1912.

Mr. Sprague has a beautiful country home on the Wilmington and Washington pike. He is a member of the Methodist Protestant church and has been a steward in the church and trustee. Politically, he is a Republican.

WILLIAM CAREY.

The late William Carey, who was a prosperous farmer of Clark township, was born in Penn township, Highland county, Ohio, January 5, 1830, and died on March 6, 1908. He was a son of Elias and Margaret (Hussey) Carey, the latter of whom was a native of Highland county. The paternal grandfather of Mr. Carey was Samuel Carey.

The late William Carey received a limited education in the common schools of Highland county, and took up farming as a vocation in life. In the spring of 1900 he moved to Clinton county, Ohio, and settled in Clark township, where his widow now lives. He purchased seventy acres of land and here he lived until his death in 1908.

William Carey was married on November 23, 1854, to Almira Conard, a sister of Doctor Conard, whose sketch is presented elsewhere in this volume. To this union were born ten children, as follow: Spencer, the first born; Alonzo W., who lives in Oklahoma; Eliza R., who lives in Dayton, Ohio; Mary A., of Highland county, Ohio; Margaret H., of Muncie, Indiana; Lena C., of Dayton, Ohio; B. C., of Careytown, Ohio; Martha E., deceased; Almira C. and W. Ernest.

For generations back the Carey family have been prominent members of the Society of Friends, and in the various communities where they have lived they have been leaders in the religious life of this church.

William Carey was a successful man, a good farmer, a kind and devoted father and loving husband. His loss was keenly felt, not only by the various members of his family and his beloved wife, with whom he lived so long and happily, but by his neighbors and friends and all those with whom he came in contact.

WALTER I. MOON.

Among the well-known farmers of Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, is Walter I. Moon, a native of this township, born on July 24, 1860, and a son of John W. and Jemima F. (Moore) Moon, the former of whom was born on the old home farm northwest of where Walter I. now lives, the latter of whom was born near Cuba. The paternal grandparents were Isaac and Edna (Smithson) Moon, and the paternal great-grandparents were Samuel and Martha (Ruth) Moon. The former were early settlers in Clinton county. The maternal grandparents were Micajah and Rebecca (McGee) Moore, the former of whom was an early settler near Cuba, and the latter of whom came with her parents, early in the history of Clinton county, to Clarksville. They were pioneer farmers.

John W. Moon was educated in the public schools of Clinton county, and was a grain and stock buyer in Farmers Station and at Lynchburg and Martinsville for many years. He is now retired and living at Burtonville. He had one hundred and forty acres of land in this county, but has now sold out and is living retired. Of the seven children born to John W. and Jemima F. (Moore) Moon, two are deceased.

Walter I. Moon was educated in the public schools of Clark township, and engaged in farming upon attaining maturity. He owns sixty-six acres of land and is engaged in general farming near Martinsville. Mr. Moon's farm has been greatly improved since he purchased it.

Walter I. Moon was married on September 17, 1881, to Rebecca Garner, who was born on December 28, 1864, a native of Clark township and a daughter of Silas Garner. Silas Garner was a son of Joseph Garner. Joseph was the son of James and Mary (Moon) Garner. James Garner was the son of John Fusha Garner. Mary Moon was the daughter of Joseph Moon.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter I. Moon have had two children, Ralph H. and Blanche. Ralph H. married Susie Grindel of Greene county, and they have three children, Morris Melvin, Alice Bell and Helen Ester. Blanche married L. O. Preston, of Farmers Station, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter I. Moon are members of the Universalist church. Mr. Moon is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons.

WILLIAM K. RUBLE, M. D.

Dr. William K. Ruble, who for many years has been engaged in the practice of medicine at Martinsville, Ohio, is truly a self-made man. An early school teacher in Highland county, he is practically self-educated, although for some time a student at the Valparaiso Normal School and later a graduate of the Eclectic Medical College at Cincinnati. Dr. Ruble, in the earlier years of his practice, was a voluminous writer and today is remembered throughout the country for an article written in 1894 on tuberculosis, an article which attracted nation-wide comment. Like most country boys, while not in school, he worked earnestly and long on the farm. Having studied patiently while working on the farm, he received a certificate to teach school and taught his first term of school before he was sixteen years old, in the old subscription school for which he received sixty dollars for three months' school.

William K. Ruble, of Martinsville, Clinton county, Ohio, was born at Taylorsville, in Highland county, June 11, 1862, the son of George A. and Deborah Ann (Davidson) Ruble, both of whom were natives of Highland county and both of whom lived and died in that county. The father was a soldier in the Eighty-eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, during the Civil War and came out of the service very much afflicted with rheumatism. Doctor Ruble's paternal grandfather was John Ruble, of Virginia. He was a pioneer in Highland county and it is an interesting fact that the first church in White Oak township, Highland county, was erected on John Ruble's farm. He was a pioneer physician and preacher of the Christian church. He entered one hundred acres of land, became a successful farmer and had the first check lines used in Highland county. Doctor Ruble's maternal grandparents were John and Amelia (Kibler) Davidson, of German descent and natives of either Pennsylvania or Virginia. They were pioneer farmers in White Oak township, Highland county.

William K. Ruble was educated in the public schools of Highland county, at Valparaiso Normal School and at the Eclectic Medical College at Cincinnati. He taught two spring terms and three winter terms of school. He was graduated from the medical college on June 3, 1890. After graduating from college, he came immediately to Martinsville and has been practicing his profession here for a period now of a quarter of a century. Before entering medical college, he had studied medicine under Dr. M. F. Funk, of Mowrystown, Ohio, also Doctor Guertin, of Mowrystown, Ohio. Doctor Ruble took a six months' special course in eye, ear, nose and throat under Dr. Melvin McPheron, of Cincinnati.

Dr. William K. Ruble was married on December 27, 1888, to Louise Roberts, of Highland county, and to them was born one daughter, Bessie G. Louie (Roberts) Ruble died on July 30, 1910. Doctor Ruble was married, secondly, on December 24, 1912, to Stella West, of Wilmington, Ohio.

Few men are more prominent in fraternal circles in Clinton county than Dr. William K. Ruble. He is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. He is also a member of the Clinton County Medical Society, the Ohio State Eclectic Society and the National Medical Association. For many years, he was a member of the Clinton county pension examining board. In 1912 Doctor Ruble was elected a permanent member of National Eclectic Medical Society, conferred at Washington, D. C.

JOSEPH HIXSON.

Among the venerable citizens and enterprising farmers of Clark township, is Joseph Hixson, who was born a little north of Leesburg in Highland county, Ohio, December 17, 1837, the son of John and Nancy (Hull) Hixson. The former was born in 1812 in Ross county, Ohio, and the latter in Rockbridge county, Virginia, in 1813. They moved to Jefferson township, Clinton county, Ohio, in 1852.

The paternal grandparents of Joseph Hixson were Joseph and Charlotte Hixson, who emigrated from the Old Dominion state to Ross county, Ohio, and later to Highland county, where the paternal grandfather died. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Hixson were William and Sarah (Weiniger) Hull, natives of Rockbridge county, Virginia, who located at Greenfield, Highland county, Ohio, in 1816. After the death of the maternal grandfather his wife came to Jefferson township, Clinton county. They were farmers by occupation.

John Hixson was a farmer by occupation, who moved from Ross to Highland county, Ohio, some time before 1851 and in that year moved to Iowa. In the spring of 1852 he returned to this state and located in Jefferson township, Clinton county, where, for forty years, he was engaged in the live stock business and owned five hundred acres of land in Jefferson township. His wife died in Jefferson township. John Hixson could scarcely read and write but, nevertheless, he was a man of remarkable business ability and made a tremendous success as a farmer. To John and Nancy Hixson were born nine children: Albert L., Joseph, Catherine, C. E., Isaac, Sarah E., John A., C. C. and Mary Jane. Another child, a twin brother of Isaac, died in infancy. Of these children, Albert L., C. E. and Isaac were soldiers in the Civil War. C. E. Hixson was the first volunteer from Jefferson township. John Hixson and his son, Joseph, the subject of this sketch, were identified with the "squirrel hunters" during the Civil War, the father being a second lieutenant in this organization. Joseph Hixson is the only member of his father's family now living. All except two members of the family are buried in the Odd Fellows cemetery, at Westboro, Clinton county, Ohio.

Joseph Hixson was reared to maturity on his father's farm. In the spring of 1870 he moved to a farm on the Martinsville and Westboro pike, two miles south of Martinsville. Formerly, he was an extensive stock breeder and made a specialty of raising Poland China hogs and Cotswold sheep. At the present time, he owns three hundred acres of land, all of which is in Clark township, with the exception of eighty acres, which is in Jefferson township.

On December 24, 1862, Joseph Hixson was married to Emily J. Johnson, a native of Jefferson township, born on September 29, 1842, and the daughter of Thomas B. and Elizabeth Johnson. Mr. and Mrs. Hixson have been the parents of five children, one of whom, Frederick N., who was born in September, 1866, died on April 15, 1877. The living children are: Thomas W., born on December 16, 1863; Frank H., August 13, 1866;

Caleb L., September 14, 1873; and Carl, May 25, 1879. Mrs. Emily (Johnson) Hixson died on May 24, 1912.

Mr. and Mrs. Hixson are members of the Society of Friends and Mr. Hixson has been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows since some time before the Civil War. In the old days he served several years as trustee of Clark township. He was a commissioner of the Martinsville and Westboro free pike. Mr. Hixson is identified with the Republican party.

JOHN GRIM.

John Grim is a well-known farmer of Marion township, this county. He was born in Highland county, Ohio, November 22, 1849, the son of Joshua and Matilda (Worthington) Grim, both natives of Highland county, the former born on August 3, 1821, and the latter, June 15, 1821.

Mr. Grim's paternal grandparents were John and Rebecca Grim, who came from Virginia to Ohio in pioneer times, locating in Highland county, though both died in the state of Iowa. The maternal grandfather was Ephraim Worthington, an early settler in Highland county, where he and his wife died.

Mr. Grim's father, Joshua Grim, was a soldier in the Civil War, a farmer by occupation, and a prominent Republican. His death occurred in Kansas on September 16, 1867. His wife had passed away several years previously, December 17, 1860. They were the parents of eight children, Nancy, Ephraim, Mary, John, Edward, Hugh, Thomas and Margaret.

John Grim was reared on the farm and was educated in the public schools of Highland county. Since the time he first began to plan his own career, he has made his own fortunes unaided. At one time he owned a farm in Highland county, and lived in that county for some time, when he bought and sold land until September, 1906, when he came to Clinton county and purchased two farms in Marion township, one of seventy-two acres and one of eighteen acres, which adjoin each other. Mr. Grim's land is located one mile south of Blanchester, and there he carries on a general farming and stock raising, and is an extensive feeder of live stock.

On July 22, 1875, John Grim was married to Martha J. Cowman, who was born in Highland county, Ohio, April 30, 1855, daughter of Alexander and Mary W. (Johnson) Cowman. Mrs. Grim's father died in 1873, and her mother is still living at the age of seventy-nine, having been born on August 4, 1836. John Grim and wife are the parents of five children, Harry, Elsie, Pearl, Ethel and Damon, all of whom are living.

Mrs. John Grim is the second born in a family of nine children, the others being John Watkins, Silas R., Lowery Alexander, Elmer, James O., Ina Lelia, Jessie K. and Mary V., all of whom are living, with the exception of John Watkins, Lelia and Jessie K. Her paternal grandparents were John and Jane (McCorkle) Cowman, both natives of Virginia and early settlers in Highland county, where both died. Mrs. Grim's maternal grandparents were Watkins and Jane (McCoy) Johnson, also early settlers of Highland county.

Politically, Mr. Grim is a Republican, but has never taken a very active part in political life, owing to the fact that his extensive agricultural interests have demanded all his time and attention. He is, however, deeply interested in all worthy public movements. Mr. and Mrs. Grim are members of the Friends church and take an active interest in the affairs of that denomination.

W. R. Brown

HON. MATTHEW ROMBACH DENVER.

On the shortest day in the year, December 21, 1870, Matthew Rombach Denver opened his eyes on this world in the old homestead in Wilmington, Ohio, the fourth child and second son of Gen. James W. and Louise C. (Rombach) Denver. Here he lived, surrounded by a family composed of parents, grandparents, brother and sisters, and attended the public schools of the town.

From the maternal grandfather, Matthew Rombach, organizer and president of the Clinton County National Bank, farmer, and prominent in promoting the various activities of his town and county, the grandson inherited his business acumen and sound judgment. His father, Gen. James W. Denver, whose history is inseparable from the development of our western plains and Pacific slope, and whose name must always endure in the city which bears it as the gateway to the Golden West, came from a long line of ancestors who traced their origin to Roland D'Anvers, one of William the Conqueror's knights, and one who always played an important part in patriotism, politics and achievement. These were the characteristics which lay dormant in the young man who received his Bachelor of Arts degree in June, 1891, from Georgetown University, Washington, D. C.

His father had planned for the subject of this sketch a legal career, but fate ordered otherwise, and upon his graduation he accepted a position in the Clinton County National Bank, of which his grandfather was then president, and to which office he himself succeeded in 1903, at the same time managing the Rombach-Denver landed estates.

Politics had been part of his early education in the family circle, where a keen interest was always manifest in all happenings at home or abroad, and it is not surprising that Mr. Denver took to it most naturally and early made his influence felt in the local activities of the Democratic party, serving for many years as the efficient chairman of the county executive committee.

As in other affairs, his rise was rapid. In 1896 he served as a delegate to the national convention at Chicago; in 1898 was a delegate-at-large from Ohio to the Democratic convention at Denver, and was also a delegate to the Baltimore convention in 1912, which nominated Woodrow Wilson for President. He served two terms each as member of both state and central executive committees. In 1906 he was elected to Congress from the sixth Ohio district and served three successive terms. His popularity was attested to by the fact that he was able to overcome the Republican majority, which no preceding Democratic candidate had been able to accomplish, and to serve more terms than any Republican congressman had had accorded him in this district during the three terms of his service. Mr. Denver's desire at all times was the greatest good he could accomplish for his constituents. The important committees on which he served and his good fellowship with his brother representatives speak well for his popularity, good judgment and mental balance.

In addition to his duties as president of the Clinton County National Bank are the duties which devolve upon him as president of the Commercial Club, vice-president of the Irwin Auger Bit Company, vice-president of the Farquhar Furnace Company, director of the National Safety Snap Company, and several other industries. On the beautiful lands lying just beyond Wilmington grain and stock are raised.

On October 24, 1900, Hon. Matthew R. Denver was married to Veda Slack, and to this union two daughters, Virginia and Kathryn, have been born.

In whatever environment Mr. Denver is found he is always the considerate, genial, capable, forceful man, whose personality endears him to a host of friends and admirers.

JARRET HUFFMAN.

Jarret Huffman is a prosperous farmer of Jefferson township, and owns one hundred and eight acres of land, where he now lives. He was born in Highland county, Ohio, in 1861, the son of John and Nancy (Johnson) Huffman, natives of Adams county, Ohio, and Highland county, respectively. The paternal grandfather of Jarret Huffman was Humphry Huffman, a native of the Old Dominion state and an early settler in Ohio. He was a farmer in Highland county and died on his farm. Late in life he moved to Illinois and his wife died while they were making the journey to that state. Later he returned to Ohio. Mr. Huffman's maternal grandparents were early settlers in Highland county, Ohio. His maternal great-grandfather, Jerod Hopkins, was a native of Maine and an early settler in Highland county.

John Huffman, the father of Jarret, was educated in the pioneer schools of the Buckeye state, when greased paper was used in log cabins for windows. He became a farmer and followed this occupation in Highland county and later in Clinton county. In 1888 he located near Sabina and later moved to a farm near Westboro. Still later he returned to Sabina and died near that town. His widow is still living. He was a soldier in the Civil War and he and his wife had a family of eleven children.

Jarret Huffman, who was educated in Highland county, Ohio, worked by the month before his marriage and three years after his marriage. In 1907 he purchased twenty-one acres of land near Sabina, but later sold that tract and purchased fifty acres near Westboro. He then purchased one hundred and eight acres in Jefferson township, where he now lives. After buying the last tract, he disposed of the fifty acres near Westboro. Mr. Huffman is engaged in general farming.

In April, 1886, Jarret Huffman was married to Esther Carter, who was born near Sabina, the daughter of John Millican Carter, a farmer of Wilson township, and to this union five children have been born, Leotis, Ethel Maude, Verna Clinton, Cora Esther and Stella Florence. The Huffman family are members of the Friends church and take an active interest in church work. They are a highly respected family in the neighborhood where they live.

L. H. TRIBBET.

L. H. Tribbet, now a well-known and successful farmer of Jefferson township, this county, was born on August 8, 1849, in Fayette county, Ohio, the son of James and Elizabeth Ann (Dick) Tribbet, the former a native of Ross county, Ohio, and the latter, of West Virginia.

The paternal grandfather of Mr. Tribbet was Joseph Tribbet, who emigrated to Ohio in pioneer times, and from Ohio to Iowa, where he died. His removal to Iowa followed the death of his wife, when he went to the Hawkeye state to bring back with him his sister, who was to return as his housekeeper. The maternal grandfather of Mr. Tribbet was John Dick, a native of West Virginia, who emigrated from West Virginia to Wabash, Indiana, where he engaged in farming and where he died.

Of Mr. Tribbet's father, James Tribbet, it may be said that he was left an orphan at a tender age and was reared by friends of the family in Ross county, Ohio, and later in Fayette and still later in Highland county. Subsequently, he came to Clinton county, and, in 1880, located within one and one-half miles of Westboro, where he followed farming. James and Elizabeth Ann Tribbet were the parents of eight children, Mary Jane, John O., Lemuel, Glendora, Dr. Clayton A., James M., Elsworth, and Elmer.

L. H. Tribbet was educated in the public schools of Highland county, and remained there until twenty-four years old, being engaged in farming. At the age of twenty-four, he removed to Iowa, where for two years he worked as a teamster. From Iowa he returned to Highland county and began farming, remaining there until 1881, when he purchased sixty acres of land in Jefferson township, this county, and there he has since lived.

Mr. Tribbet was married first, November 9, 1876, to Lizzie Murray of Ross county, Ohio, who bore him two children, Harriet and Mary. Mr. Tribbet married, secondly, Mrs. Mabel (Graham) Ramsey, who has borne him one child, Myrtle Jean.

Mr. and Mrs. Tribbet are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Fraternally, Mr. Tribbet is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and has passed through all the chairs of that lodge.

BURGESS J. MOON.

Among the successful teachers of Clinton county, Ohio, is Burgess J. Moon, who was born on the farm where he now lives in Clark township, August 21, 1878, the son of David S. and Ruth (Rhonemus) Moon. The father was born at Farmers Station but was brought to the farm, where his son Burgess J. now lives, in infancy. Mr. Moon's mother was born near Westboro in Jefferson township.

The paternal grandparents of Burgess J. Moon were Simeon and Priscilla (Sewell) Moon, the former of whom was born on the farm where his grandson now lives and who lived and died on this farm. Simeon Moon was born on February 23, 1820, and was married on March 24, 1842, to Priscilla Sewell. Five children were born to this marriage: Samuel M., who was born on February 3, 1843; David S., May 28, 1845; Jefferson, November 3, 1848; and Franklin, May 1, 1851.

The parents of Simeon Moon were Samuel and Martha (Routh) Moon, the former of whom was born on April 17, 1781, and the latter born on March 5, 1781. They were married in Tennessee, November 5, 1801, and in 1808 came to Clark township. Samuel Moon died on March 25, 1846, at the age of sixty-five and his wife on February 19, 1852, in her seventy-first year.

Ruth Rhonemus, the mother of Burgess J. Moon, who was married to David S. Moon, September 2, 1877, was born in Jefferson township, March 21, 1850. She was the daughter of Jacob and Mary (Thornhill) Rhonemus, the former of whom was born about one mile southwest of Cuba, on a farm now owned by the widow of William Riley Brown, and the latter of whom was born about two miles west of Martinsville on the farm where Roy Hunter now lives. Mary Thornhill was the daughter of Barnett and Ruth (Jones) Thornhill, natives of Knox county, Tennessee, who settled near Martinsville. They were among the pioneer farmers of Clinton county. Jacob Rhonemus and his wife spent most of their married life on one hundred and forty acres of land, three and one-half miles east of Westboro. He was a soldier in the Civil War and served in the Eighty-second Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Jacob Rhonemus was the son of Jacob, Sr., and Hannah Sophia (Cluster) Rhonemus, natives of Virginia and Adams county, Ohio, respectively. They settled near Centerville in Clinton county. Jacob Rhonemus, Sr., was a soldier in the War of 1812 and a farmer by occupation. He died at the age of forty-five years, after immigrating to Clinton county.

David S. Moon was educated in the public schools, familiarly known as "Greasy Creek." He lived and died on the farm which his son and sister now own. Six years, however, were spent in Westboro. Burgess J. is one of two children born to his parents, the other being Delilah, who was born near Westboro, December 31, 1886.

Burgess J. Moon was educated in the New Vienna high school and at Miami University. From 1902 until 1908, he taught in Clark township and in 1913-1914, he taught in the Washington township schools at Morrisville. Aside from his experience in the schoolroom, he is a farmer and specializes in breeding hogs.

Mr. Moon is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons and the Eastern Star. Formerly, he was a member of the Knights of Pythias. At the present time he is a clerk of the Farmers Station special school board.

ALBERT I. BAILEY.

Commerce and banking in this county have a trustworthy representative in Albert I. Bailey, vice-president of the Clinton County National Bank, and president of two of its largest manufacturing concerns. Gifted with initiative, energy and will-power, Mr. Bailey has made a distinct success of his numerous undertakings and is regarded as one of the most substantial factors in the general development of the community.

On a farm near Dover, four miles from Wilmington, Albert I. Bailey began life on June 15, 1846, his birthplace being the same as that of his father, Josiah Bailey. His mother, Mary (Jenkins) Bailey, was a Virginian by birth, coming, when a young woman, from Frederick county, a locality which has supplied this state with many of its pioneers.

Josiah Bailey was born in the early days of 1818, and to the end of his uneventful, but useful life, he remained true to the principles of character and conduct laid down in the home of its his pious, God-fearing parents. One of these principles is the right to human freedom, and it was because of his deep convictions on this subject, that he joined the Abolitionist party at a time in its history when such action meant cruel criticism, and in many cases, social ostracism. In strange contrast to this organization, which was always ready to fight for its principles when necessary, was this man's loyal support of the doctrine of peace as promulgated by the Friends church, of which both he and his good, devoted wife were members. He thus combined two characteristics usually considered antagonistic. This old patriarch, whose sturdy qualities undoubtedly descended to his son, who is the theme of this biography, passed to his reward in 1895, his faithful wife following him six years later.

The two sisters of Albert I. were Hannah, born in Clinton county, who married David A. Pigeon, and is now deceased, and her sister, Marianna, now Mrs. William A. Starbuck, living on the old farm homestead.

There was nothing particularly eventful in the early days of Albert I. Bailey, for he lived the life of the farmer's boy, working, swimming, fishing and going to school. But he was fortunate in that his parents were both willing and able to send him to college, and it was possible for him to enjoy two years at Earlham College, a Friends school in Richmond, a quaint Quaker town of Indiana. On returning home Mr. Bailey remained until his twenty-eighth year, then said farewell to the old home and went to live at Wilmington, he having already formed a partnership with Zimri and Jonathan Wall, started the first iron working factory, the Champion Bridge Works. As president of this industry, Mr. Bailey's influence is extensive. He is the only one of its original founders still connected with the company. The other manufacturing concern with which Mr. Bailey has been associated since its origin, is the Auger Bit Company. Besides these business interests, he is also vice-president of the National Safety Snap Company, another important Wilmington enterprise. Another indication of his business standing in the community is the fact that he is vice-president of the Clinton County National Bank. Mr. Bailey has retired from active participation in the affairs of the Champion Bridge and Manufacturing Company after a service of thirty years. Added to these business enterprises, is the care and management of his old home farm which he owns.

The ceremony uniting Mr. Bailey in marriage to Mary E. Hussey, took place in September, 1871. His bride was the daughter of Stephen and Susana (Johnson) Hussey, who lived on a farm near Port William, Clinton county. No children have been born to this union.

It seems that a man is never quite classified until we have his politics and religion, for, as a noted lawyer has said, "Politics and religion were and are favorite topics, and have been since the world began. One of them has to do with transitory earth life, and the other, with hopes and doubts, desires and fears for another life when this is done." Mr. Bailey has not only been a member of the Friends church, in which he was brought up from earliest childhood, but has been of constant service in its councils, and is at present a trustee. Although a Republican, he has never sought nor held office in the party, but his influence is, nevertheless, extensive. Something of Albert I. Bailey's standing and attainments as an individual may be gleaned from the fact that he is a thirty-second degree Mason. One of the interesting and inspiring experiences of which Mr. Bailey often refers to, is his travels in Europe, the Orient, Mexico, and Panama. During these travels he saw many famous and historic places and people.

As might be supposed, from his religious training, Mr. Bailey has a very strong dislike for sham, hypocrisy and insincerity. Fair and candid, he expects to find these qualities in others, and is disappointed when they are missing. Truth and honor and justice are to him essential in all of the relations of life, and he believes these to be entirely in keeping with the public spirit which every citizen should possess. Although quiet and unpretentious in his own manner and mode of life, he is greatly interested in questions of public importance, and is lavish with both time and means in helping those movements which advance the betterment of local conditions and of the common cause of humanity.

OTHO JOHNSON.

Otho Johnson, a farmer of Clark township, and the owner of a farm of sixty acres, was born on East Fork, in Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, in 1852, a son of Anderson and Judith Ann (Vance) Johnson, the former of whom was born in September, 1816, on the site where his son, Otho, was later born. Judith Ann (Vance) Johnson, was a native of Lynchburg, Virginia, born in 1828. She came to Clinton county at the age of six years with her parents, Jacob and Lucy Vance, the former of whom was a natives of Wurttemberg, Germany, but who settled in Lynchburg, Virginia, when a mere lad with his parents. Jacob Vance's son was a slave overseer before the Civil War. By trade Jacob Vance was a blacksmith, and after removing to Clinton county, Ohio, followed his trade until his death. His wife also died in this county.

The paternal grandparents of Otho Johnson were Ashley and Sarah (Walker) Johnson, the latter of whom lived to the advanced age of one hundred and seven years. Both she and her husband were natives of North Carolina, and early settlers in Clark township, where he built a very fine home, and where he kept the very finest horses obtainable. During his day and generation there was little money in the country, and business was done largely on credit. On one occasion he was given credit for one dollar and seventy-five cents worth of nails because he rode a splendid horse. After he had purchased nails another man wanted credit for seventy-five cents' worth of nails, but he had no horse. The proprietor of the store asked him this question: "If you had a cleared field and a fence grown up in bushes, which way would you move the fence, out or in?" The man replied that he would move the fence out, whereupon he was given credit for the nails.

Ashley Johnson located on the site where his grandson, Otho, was born. At that time, however, the land was covered with the virgin forests. He and his wife hewed logs and erected their rude cabin in the wilderness. Deer and other wild game were plentiful in those days, and on one occasion he killed a panther, which was the last of these beasts killed in Clinton county. Ashley Johnson died at the age of eighty-five years. His son, Jeptha, referred to elsewhere in this volume, was a soldier in the Civil War, who saw very hard service in that great conflict.

Anderson Johnson received a limited education in the early schools of Clinton county, and during his school days he lived entirely on cornbread for the noon lunch. He became a celebrated apiarist and lived on the old home farm until his death. He owned one hundred and twenty acres of land. Of the nine children born to Anderson and Judith Ann (Vance) Johnson, three are still living. Jeptha, who was a soldier in the Civil War, was captured at Harper's Ferry and was paroled later and sent home.

Otho Johnson was educated in the public schools of Clark township, and has always farmed on the place east of the old home farm, a place consisting of sixty acres. He has erected all the buildings on his farm with the exception of the barn and has made many other improvements since acquiring the place.

In 1876 Otho Johnson was married to Matilda Stroup, of Dotson township, Highland county, Ohio, and to this union has been born one child, Carl Henry, who was born on June 2, 1878, and is a farmer in Clark township in this county. Carl H. Johnson was married in 1899 to Rosa Fox, and they have three children, Lillian, Mildred and Delmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Otho Johnson and their family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which they take a deep and active interest.

GEORGE S. KING.

George S. King, now a retired farmer of Clark township, this county, was born on April 27, 1848, in Clark township, the son of John R. and Catherine B. (West) King, the former of whom was born in 1816 in Virginia and the latter a native of this county. John R. King was the son of William and Nancy King, natives of Virginia, who located in Clark township at an early date in the history of Clinton county, having come here about 1816. They bought timber and swamp land at low prices and farmed until their deaths. Catherine B. West was the daughter of Henry and Nancy (Terrell) West, who were pioneers in Clark township and descendants of old Virginia families. Henry West having been a well-known pioneer farmer.

John R. King received a limited education in the schools of Clinton county and eventually acquired a part of the old home farm. He owned one hundred and thirty acres, but before his death divided the farm among his children and lived with them, both he and his wife spending their last days in the home of their son, George S., the subject of this sketch. They were the parents of six children, Nancy A., William H., Wyatt C., George S., E. Sanford and Sarah. William A. and Wyatt C. King served in the Civil War. They were both wounded on the same day, July 20, 1863, at the battle of Peachtree creek, during the siege of Atlanta. Wyatt C. died in a few days, but William A. survived his wounds. They were soldiers in Company C, Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Of the other children, Nancy A. married John Shepherd, who served in the Thirty-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and who was wounded by a sharpshooter. The parents of these children were members of the Universalist church.

George S. King was educated in the schools of Clinton county and engaged in farming upon reaching maturity. He remained on the home farm until January, 1880, when he became assistant manager, under C. B. Kester, of the Farmers Station Joint Stock Company, which operated a general mercantile store. Mr. King held that position for three years, at the end of which time he returned to the farm, a tract of sixty-two acres, which he still owns, and which is a part of the old home place. He farmed actively until 1906, when he moved to Farmers Station and purchased Fred Clark's mercantile store at that place, operating the same until 1910, when he sold it to William Uible and has since lived retired.

On December 25, 1871, George S. King was married to Annette West, a native of Knox county, Illinois, daughter of George and Samantha (McMain) West, the former of whom was born in Clinton county on April 10, 1815, and the latter of whom was a native of Highland county, this state. Mrs. King's paternal grandparents, Henry and Nancy (Terrell) West, were both natives of Virginia. Her maternal grandparents, Enoch and Sarah McMain, were born near Hillsboro, but later moved to Knox county, Illinois, where they engaged in farming and where they spent the rest of their lives. Mrs. King's father was educated in Clinton county and farmed here until his removal to Knox county, Illinois, where his wife died, after which he returned to Clinton county and spent his last days here. He and his wife were the parents of two children, Hortense A. and Mrs. King, both of whom were born in Illinois. Upon his return to Clinton county, George West purchased one hundred and twenty acres of land in Green and Clark townships. He later married Matilda A. Radcliff, to which union were born five children, E. B., Jennie, Elizabeth, Florence and Stella. George West was a member of the Universalist church.

To George S. and Annette (West) King have been born two children, Leo F., who is engaged in the livery business at Blanchester, and Raymond, a farmer of Clark township. Mr. and Mrs. King are members of the Universalist church. Fraternally, Mr. King is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He has served as school director and road supervisor and is regarded as one of the leading citizens of the Martinsville neighborhood, he and his family being held in high regard thereabout.

ELIEL C. GREENE.

Eliel C. Greene, who for more than half a century has been a farmer in Clinton county, but who before that was engaged in the confectionery and milk business in Cincinnati, was born in Martinsville, this county, on February 3, 1849, the son of John and Rhoda (Carey) Greene, the former a native of Clark township, this county, and the latter of Careytown, Highland county, Ohio.

John Greene was the son of Robert and Mary (Jackson) Greene, natives of Grayson county, Virginia, who, about the year 1820, located in the vicinity of Martinsville, this county, where they purchased land and where they spent the rest of their lives. They were lifelong members of the Friends church and prominent in all good works thereabout. Rhoda Carey was the daughter of Samuel and Anna (McPherson) Carey, natives of North Carolina, who emigrated from North Carolina to Virginia and from Virginia to Highland county, Ohio, about 1820. Samuel Carey was a farmer and blacksmith until late in life, after which he lived with his children until his death at the age of ninety-two years. John Greene was educated in the county schools of Clinton county and in the Friends Academy at Martinsville. He became a farmer in Clark township, on a tract of seventy-five acres, to which he later added five acres, and there he and his wife spent the rest of their lives. They were the parents of nine children.

Eliel C. Greene was educated in the Martinsville high school and from the time he was eighteen years old until he was twenty-eight, was engaged in the confectionery and milk business in Cincinnati. Upon his marriage at the age of twenty-eight, he returned to the farm, and since that time has been farming. Mr. Greene owns one hundred and twenty-one acres and enjoys all the modern conveniences of country life.

On March 29, 1879, Eliel C. Greene was married to Caroline Smith, who was born on a part of the farm where she now lives, the daughter of John R. and Mary Ann (Hunt) Smith, the latter of whom also was born on the same farm, and the former of whom was a native of Highland county, Ohio. John R. Smith was born on June 13, 1826, son of John and Sarah Smith. He was married, February 24, 1848, to Mary A. Hunt, and located on his father's farm, where he lived until the fall of 1865, at which time he moved to another farm. He was engaged in farming, stock raising and threshing, and brought the first steam thresher to this section of Ohio. His death occurred on September 20, 1878. He and his wife were the parents of four children: Sarah E., deceased; Arthur, born on January 1, 1852, who married Phebe Baker; Carrie, August 19, 1854, who married Mr. Greene, and Emma, March 18, 1861. Mr. Smith was a member of the Society of Friends, a member of the board of trustees of Clark township for seven years and superintendent of the Wilmington and Martinsville pike during the time of its construction.

Mrs. Greene's paternal grandparents were John and Sarah (Ratcliff) Smith, natives of Highland county, Ohio, who located in Clark township, this county, one mile south of Martinsville, when their son John R. was five years old. Her maternal grandparents were Thomas and Susanah (Greene) Hunt, natives of Grayson county, Virginia, who located in Clark township, this county, about 1820. Thomas Hunt had been a tavern keeper in the Old Dominion state, but, after coming to Clinton county, he became a farmer and fruit-grower.

To Eliel C. and Caroline (Smith) Greene one son has been born, Harry J., who married Mary E. Leonard of Union township, who was born in the Center neighborhood, the daughter of Calvin B. and Mary (Hazard) Leonard, natives of Union and Chester townships respectively. Harry J. Greene and wife have one daughter, Edith M.

The Greenes are all members of the Friends church and for several generations the family has been active in that denomination. Although Mr. Greene has never aspired to office, he was on one occasion chosen as township assessor and served very acceptably in that capacity. Since 1870 he has been a member of the Knights of Pythias, having joined a lodge of that order in Cincinnati. Later he became a charter member of the lodge of the same order at Martinsville.

SWIFT CONOVER.

Swift Conover is a genial natured, progressive and thrifty farmer of Washington township, who was born on November 11, 1852, in Brown county, Ohio, the son of James and Mary (Conner) Conover, both of whom were natives of Brown county. The latter was the daughter of Swift and Hester Ann Conner.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Conover were Ephraim and Easter Conover, the former of whom was a farmer in Brown county.

James Conover was educated in the common schools of Brown county, Ohio, and just attained the prime of life when the Civil War broke out. He enlisted in one of the first regiments recruited in his part of the state and served during the greater part of the war, or until he was taken prisoner and died in the Andersonville prison. His wife died the same year. They left a family of nine orphan children, of whom Henry, Hester Ann, George and Oliver are deceased. The living children are: Ira, Elmira, Swift, John and Adeline. The mother of these children was a devout member of the United Brethren church.

Swift Conover was educated in the common schools of his native county and started in life as a farm hand. But he was not always satisfied to remain a farm hand and in 1878 began farming for himself in Brown county. Five years later he moved to Illinois, where he remained for six years. He was compelled to leave that state on account of ague and chills, and from Illinois he returned to Ohio and settled in Cincinnati, where for four years, he was engaged in the grain and produce business. After one year, however, he moved to Warren county, Ohio, and then returned to Brown county, where he lived on a farm for six years. In 1901 Mr. Conover moved to Washington township, Clinton county, and rented a farm. Here he remained for twelve years, but in September, 1914, out of the savings which he had accumulated during a little more than one decade, he was able to buy a farm of one hundred and twenty-five acres in Washington township, which he now owns. Not only is he a skillful farmer but he is an enterprising citizen and is a welcome addition to any community where he might choose to live.

In 1878 Mr. Conover was married to Nettie M. Myers, the daughter of Martin V. and Martha (Patton) Myers. Mr. and Mrs. Conover have had six children, all of whom are living: Martin V., who married Maud Green and has three children, Forest Wayne, Clarence R., and Herbert B.; Jesse, who married Ethel Davis; H. Lee, who married Gertrude West and has one child, James Wendell; Clarence, who married Ashbey Green and has one child, Doris V.; Rena, who is the wife of John Leniger; and Elsie, who married Otho Hesler and has one son, Roscoe.

Mr. and Mrs. Conover are active and earnest members of the Christian church and are what might be called seven-day-a-week Christians. Mr. Conover is a Republican. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

WILLIAM TECUMSEH SCOTT, M. D.

Dr. William Tecumseh Scott, who for years has been a well-known and prosperous physician at Martinsville, this county, was born on May 10, 1866, at Mt. Oreb, in Brown county, Ohio, the son of Absalom and Molly (Shannon) Scott, natives of Marathon, Ohio, and Indiana, respectively.

The paternal grandparents of Doctor Scott were William and Adeline (Crail) Scott, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania. They were early settlers near Marathon, Ohio, where William Scott engaged in teaming. He hauled salt across the Alleghany mountains and at his death lacked only three days of being one hundred years old. In addition to teaming, he was also a farmer, having entered land from the government. Doctor Scott's maternal grandparents, Samuel and Sarah (Washburn) Shannon, were natives of Pennsylvania, who located in the central part of Indiana, where they engaged in farming. Samuel Shannon was well educated for his time and was a well-known pioneer minister in the Newlight church. Both he and his wife died at their home in the Hoosier state.

Both the father and mother of Doctor Scott came intimately into contact with the troublesome conditions prevailing at the time of the Civil War. Doctor Scott's mother was a teacher for ten years and on one occasion Morgan's raiders passed her school while it was in session. Doctor Scott's father, Absalom Scott, was educated in an old log school house, which is still standing near Marathon. He was a farmer by occupation and, at the breaking out of the Civil War, enlisted in Company G, Forty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He was captured by the Confederates and was confined in prison for six months at Camp Ford, Texas. His brother, Isaac, who was with him, and who was the color bearer of the regiment, carried with him in prison the regimental colors, concealing the same in the lining of his coat. This flag, which is now carefully preserved in the capitol at Columbus, bears the distinction of having been the only Union flag that safely went through a Confederate prison without having been discovered by the enemy. Absalom Scott served nearly four years in the Union army and participated in the march of Sherman's army to the sea.

William Tecumseh Scott received his elementary education in the public schools of Martinsville and Milford, Ohio. He prepared himself for teaching but never engaged in that vocation. After spending four years in the Medical College of Ohio, a part of the University of Cincinnati, he was graduated in 1889 and immediately afterward took up the practice of his profession at Martinsville. Doctor Scott owns a farm in Clinton county and one in Brown county, both of which he oversees.

On March 28, 1889, Dr. William T. Scott was married to Agnes Rowe, of Mt. Oreb, who was born at Washington, Ohio.

Fraternally, Doctor Scott is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. Doctor Scott and wife are members of the Order of the Eastern Star, the Pythian Sisters and the Daughters of Rebekah, and Mrs. Scott is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. For many years Doctor Scott has been a member of the Clinton County Medical Society, the Ohio State Medical Association and the American Medical Association and served as pension examiner for Clinton county for one term. During the past twenty-six years he has been the medical examiner for a number of old-line fire insurance companies. Doctor Scott makes a specialty of the study of the eye and also specializes in scientific anaesthesia.

IEMCIL B. MORRIS.

Few citizens of Clark township, this county, are better known or more highly respected than the venerable Iemcil B. Morris, who was born near New Antioch, Ohio, on November 9, 1831, a son of William C. and Defcy (Bales) Morris, the former of whom was born on November 13, 1789, in Fairfax county, Virginia, and who died on September 7, 1887. Mr. Morris' paternal grandfather was Nehemiah Morris, who lived and died in the Old Dominion state. His maternal grandfather was Eldridge Bales, for many years a resident of Virginia, whose death occurred in Alabama.

Iemcil B. Morris was educated in the Martinsville high school, principally under the tutelage of Prof. Charles Oren, a pioneer educator of considerable note. After completing his education, he taught school near Centerville, Ohio, for four years, at the end of which time he married, since which time he has been engaged in farming. He owns eighty-two acres of land where he lives in Clark township and one hundred acres of land near New Antioch. His home farm is an excellent tract of land.

Mr. Morris' father, William C. Morris, emigrated to Adams county, Ohio, where he lived until his marriage, after which he came to Clinton county, settling later near Huntsville, Alabama. After a sometime residence there he returned to Clinton county, where he and his wife spent the rest of their lives. They were the parents of eleven children and were devout members of the Christian church.

On December 21, 1865, Iemcil B. Morris was married to Mary Jane Canney, who bore him one child, Tasman P., who was born on December 24, 1869, and who was educated in the district schools near Macedonia and in Wilmington College, where he spent three years. After leaving college he was employed for seven years in a wholesale candy firm at Columbus, Ohio, being promoted from shipping clerk to manager, with the offices also of secretary and treasurer of the corporation. Finally, however, he returned to the farm. He is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

ARTHUR T. SMITH.

Arthur T. Smith, who is now a well-known farmer and salesman, of Martinsville, Ohio, was born on the farm of his maternal grandfather, adjoining the farm where he is now living, on January 1, 1851, a son of John R. and Mary A. (Hunt) Smith.

John R. Smith was born near New Vienna, in Highland county, Ohio, on June 13, 1826, a son of John and Sarah Smith, who came to Clinton county and settled on a farm in Clark township, one mile south of Martinsville, when John R. Smith was five years old. He was educated in the common schools of his home neighborhood and in 1848 was married to Mary A. Hunt, after which he located on his father's farm, where he lived until 1865, when he moved to another farm. He was a farmer, stockman and threshing-machine operator, having brought the first steam thresher into this section of Ohio. He died on September 20, 1878, leaving a widow and three children: Arthur T., the immediate subject of this review; Caroline, born on August 19, 1854, the wife of Eliel Greene, and Emma, born on March 18, 1861. Sarah E., the eldest child, had died previously. John R. Smith was a member of the Friends church, and during the last ten years of his life was an elder and overseer in his church. He served as a member of the board of trustes of Clark township for seven years, and as superintendent of the Wilmington and Martinsville pike during its construction.

Arthur T. Smith received his early education in the public schools of Martinsville. He learned stenography under Ben Pitman, the son of Isaac Pitman, and although he has done considerable court reporting, has never followed stenography as a profession, having preferred the free life of the farm. He owns seventy-seven acres of land where he lives, and has himself made all the improvements on the farm except the barn, which was erected by his maternal grandfather. During the past fifteen years Mr. Smith has been on the road as a fertilizer salesman, having turned the active management of the farm over to his son, Charles J.

On August 18, 1877, Arthur T. Smith was married to Phoebe Melinda Baker, who was born in this county, a daughter of Benjamin J. and Susan Baker, the latter of whom is still living. To this union have been born five children: Effie N., Lenna M., Anna G., Charles J. and Clara E., all of whom are still at home. Mr. and and Mrs. Smith are members of the Friends church, while fraternally, Mr Smith is a prominent Mason, having attained to the chapter in that ancient order He served eleven years as trustee of Clark township, filling the office to the satisfaction of all concerned.

JOHN J. OWSLEY.

The Owsley family trace their ancestry back to an old English family of distinction, which became identified with the history of Virginia in early colonial times. Several years ago a grandson of former Governor William Owsley, of Kentucky, undertook to trace the history of the family back to the time when they first came to America. He found that the family were of English origin and were prominently connected with the church and army.

The American branch of the family sprang from Capt. Thomas Owsley, a son of Rev. John Owsley, of Gloucester, England. Captain Owsley was sent by his country to Jamaica with his command and was later transferred to Virginia, where he became a permanent resident, after the completion of his service in the army. He was either granted or else purchased a large tract of land in that colony and became a man of influence in the community where he settled. It is from this Captain Owsley, of colonial fame, that all the Owsleys of America have descended. Some of the family spell their name Ousley, but the most of them spell it Owsley.

John J. Owsley, a farmer of Clark township, this county, is a son of Samuel R. and Lucy Owsley, and was born in the township in which he still lives on January 14, 1843. Samuel R. Owsley was born in Halifax county, Virginia, in 1807 and came to Clinton county, Ohio, in 1827 or 1828. He added to his meager income as a school teacher by farming and was thereby enabled to make a comfortable living. The wife of the young teacher-farmer was Lucy Betterton, born in Pittsylvania county, Virginia, the daughter of Joshua and Mary (West) Betterton, and a sister of Payton West, who was well known in the early history of Clinton county. Samuel R. Owsley had two brothers, who also came to Ohio, William, who died in November, 1860, and Richard, who died in 1862. Richard was the father of John D. Owsley, now living at Martinsville, Ohio.

Samuel R. Owsley and his good wife reared to manhood and womanhood twelve children, of whom John J., with whom this narrative directly deals, was the seventh. Samuel R. Owsley was a man of ardent political convictions and while his southern origin inclined him to uphold slavery as an institution, yet he was for the maintenance of the Union at all costs. This seeming contradiction caused him to be misunderstood, for the reason that in the troublesome times of the Civil War the public mind was impatient with fine distinctions and demanded blind acceptance of popular ideas and opinions. He was first a Whig and on the dissolution of that party became a Democrat. With his sympathetic and humanitarian ideals, it is difficult to reconcile his pro-slavery convictions; but such is the force of environment and early teaching that one is often driven into antagonistic positions, especially where the emotions and sentiments are permitted to prevail against reason and judgment.

John J. Owsley was educated in the district schools of Clinton county and spent his boyhood on his father's farm in Clark township. On August 18, 1862, he enlisted in Company B, Eighty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served until the close of the war. From 1869 to 1872 he was associated with George F. Bailey, the circus man. In 1873 he returned to the farm in Clark township, about a mile and one-half southeast of Farmers Station. In the following years he married and began farming for himself on the old home farm. In 1881 he moved to a farm near Farmers Station, where he is still living on his farm of ninety acres.

On September 24, 1874, John J. Owsley was married to Almada Moon, the daughter of Asa Moon, of Clark township, this county. To this union have been born two children, George S., born on September 1, 1875, and Estella C., August 31, 1876. The family are members of the Universalist church.

MARION R. STARBUCK.

The history of every man is an account of what he does, of the people from whom he has sprung and of what he expects or is attempting to accomplish. Marion R. Starbuck, a splendid young farmer of Union township, this county, belongs to the famous Starbuck family who have had so much to do with the early history and development of this county. This family has been noted for its strong interest in education, its high standard of morals and for its culture and refinement.

Marion R. Starbuck, who represents one of the latest generations of the family in this county, was born on March 8, 1879, the son of Asa and Elmira (Custis) Starbuck, the former of whom is a representative of the eighth generation of the family in America and who was born in Union township, on the old Starbuck homestead on March 3, 1846, the son of Jesse G. and Amy (Cox) Starbuck. The latter is the daughter of John W. and Louisa (Smith) Custis, the former of whom was born in Virginia and the latter in Ohio. They lived in the eastern part of Union township and are both deceased.

The complete history of the Starbuck family in America is contained in the sketch of Asa Starbuck, presented elsewhere in this volume. Here it may be said, however, that Marion Starbuck's grandfather was born on October 8, 1819, and died on January 4, 1913, and his grandmother was born on February 1, 1823, and died on April 13, 1892. They had been married in Hendricks county, Indiana, on October 20, 1842. Jesse G. Starbuck was the son of Gayer and Susannah (Dillon) Starbuck, the former of whom was born on August 10, 1777, and the latter of whom was the daughter of Jesse and Anna Dillon. Gayer Starbuck was the son of Hezekiah and Mary (Thurston) Starbuck, who were married on November 19, 1771. Hezekiah was the son of Thomas and Rachel (Allen) Starbuck, the former of whom was born in 1710 and who died on May 31, 1789. Thomas was the son of Jethro and Dorcas (Gayer) Starbuck. Jethro was the son of Nathaniel and Mary (Coffin) Starbuck. Nathaniel was the son of Edward and Catherine (Reynolds) Starbuck. Edward Starbuck was born in Derbyshire, England, in 1604, and his wife, Catherine Reynolds, was a native of Wales. They settled first in Dover, New Hampshire, in 1643. He was a representative in the Massachusetts Legislature from 1643 to 1646, and was one of nine persons who, in 1659, purchased Nantucket island. He died on December 4, 1690.

Marion R. Starbuck attended the district school in Union township, known as the "Dutch" school, and later was a student at Wilmington College. In the meantime, he worked for his father on the farm and after finishing college, returned to the farm, where he worked until his marriage. After his marriage, Mr. Starbuck rented land in Union township for four years and in 1908 purchased one hundred acres out of the old Jesse G. Starbuck farm in Union township. The same year he built a pretty, modern house and four years later erected a large and commodious barn. Mr. Starbuck is engaged in general farming and has been quite successful.

On March 1, 1905, Marion R. Starbuck was married to Goldie M. Sharp, who was born on the edge of Liberty township, in Clinton county, the daughter of Elmer W. and Hannah Sharp, both of whom are still living. The father of Mrs. Starbuck is a farmer in Liberty township, who came to Clinton county from Indiana. To Mr. and Mrs. Starbuck one child has been born, a son, Maynard, born on September 20, 1909.

Mr. and Mrs. Starbuck belong to the Dover meeting of the Friends church. On national issues Mr. Starbuck is a Republican, but locally he votes for the man he considers best fitted for office, regardless of the ticket upon which he is running. Mr. Starbuck himself has never taken an active interest in politics. He is a popular young farmer and very well known in Clinton county.

WILLIAM A. STARBUCK.

No man living in Clinton county, Ohio, has taken a more sincere and conscientious interest in the work of the Society of Friends than William A. Starbuck, of Union township, who has made church work a chief object of his life. He is an elder in the Dover meeting of the Friends church and trustee of the yearly meeting, also president of the yearly meeting Bible school, and interested in the public work of the church, of whatever nature. The Society of Friends has had a tremendous influence upon the moral and civic life of Clinton county, and during his day and generation Mr. Starbuck has contributed largely to the influence of this church and to the increase of its influence and sphere of activity. Like so many members of this great religious organization, he is a well-informed and intelligent farmer. In fact, the Friends church from the time of its foundation in America has stood for higher education, and members of this church have not only been influential in public life in the Middle West, but they have been influential in the larger affairs of the country as a whole.

William A. Starbuck, the proprietor of a farm of one hundred and forty acres in Union township, was born in the township where he resides, three miles east of Wilmington, March 4, 1856, and is the son of John T. and Margaret (Shields) Starbuck, the former of whom was born in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, October 6, 1822, and died in the fall of 1900, and the latter of whom was a native of Union township, born in 1824, and died in the fall of 1913.

John T. Starbuck, who was the son of Latham and Sarah (Milton) Starbuck, natives of North Carolina, who immigrated to Ohio, and settled in Clinton county in 1811, was a farmer and carpenter by occupation. He was one of a family of twelve children, seven sons and five daughters, and the fourth of the family. He owned at one time two hundred and twenty-two acres of land. In 1852 he was married to Margaret Shields, the daughter of William and Hannah (Frazier) Shields, natives of Tennessee, who came to Clinton county, Ohio, about 1806 and settled in Liberty township, five miles north of Wilmington, on a farm of about one hundred acres, where they lived until their death. They were members of the Dover meeting of Friends and had a family of two sons and eight daughters. All of the eight daughters lived to advanced ages. Many years ago the family inaugurated the custom of holding reunions, a custom which is still continued.

John T. and Margaret (Shields) Starbuck had five children, namely: Josephine, married Samuel Compton, a native of New Burlington, Ohio; William A., the subject of this sketch; Thomas, died at the age of twenty-two years; Clara, married Jonas Pagett, and since his death she has lived at Wilmington; Albert, who lives at Bradentown, Florida, has been engaged in the saw-mill business, but is contracting at present.

Latham and Sarah (Milton) Starbuck settled in the extreme northern portion of Union township in 1811. They had spent a season in Tennessee on the way north, where they raised a crop, and lost a child by death. They came through from Tennessee in a "Carolina wagon," drawn by one horse, bringing with them their personal effects. Subsequently, Latham Starbuck revisited his birthplace in North Carolina, and upon his return to Clinton county purchased fifty acres of land in Wilson township. Four years later he traded it for a farm of one hundred acres in Union township, upon which he spent the remainder of his life, dying about 1871. Latham Starbuck had a brother, Gayer, who was born on the island of Nantucket in 1777, and who, in 1785, removed with his parents to Guilford county, North Carolina. In 1799 he married Susanna Dillon, a daughter of Jesse Dillon, with whom he lived nearly sixty-two years, until her death. They immigrated to Ohio in 1807, and first located in Greene county. In 1810 they settled on a farm, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Susanna died in 1861, and her husband in 1866. Later his farm was owned by his son, Jesse G. Gayer Starbuck was a blacksmith by trade. His father and the father of Latham Starbuck, Hezekiah, was a native of Nantucket island, born on April 10, 1749. Hezekiah Starbuck was a sea-faring man and the captain of a whaling vessel for a number of years. He was married on November 19, 1771. He was on a cruise when the Revolutionary War broke out and on his return had difficulty in entering the harbor, which was blockaded by the enemy. His wife, Mary Starbuck, died on June 9, 1806, and he passed away on June 10, 1830. Hezekiah Starbuck's parents were Thomas and Rachel Starbuck, the former of whom was born on May 12, 1707, on Nantucket Island, and died on February 2, 1777. Rachel Starbuck was born in 1710, and died on May 31, 1789.

William A. Starbuck, the subject of this sketch, attended the public schools of Union township, and after finishing the public schools became a student at Wilmington College, and there received a liberal education. After his marriage he became a land owner and lived on the old Daniel Bailey place, on the Port William pike in Union township, which his wife had acquired. Mr. Starbuck eventually purchased more land adjoining and they now have a hundred and forty acres. He has the patent which was originally issued by the government to the Bailey family for the farm which they now own. He is interested in improving stock and in general agriculture.

Mr. Starbuck helped to organize the Clinton County Mutual Insurance Company and after its organization was elected a director. He has served as such ever since. Mr. Starbuck is also very active in the Clinton County Farmers Institute, and is the present president of that organization, having served in the office several times before.

On September 8, 1880, William A. Starbuck was married to Marianna Bailey, who is the daughter of Josiah and Mary (Jenkins) Bailey, the former of whom was born in the early days of 1818, and the latter of whom, a Virginian by birth, came when a young woman from Frederick county, Virginia, to Clinton county. Josiah Bailey was a prominent Abolitionist before the Civil War, who lived a long and useful life and who passed away in 1895. To Josiah and Mary Hadley were born three children: Hannah, who married David A. Pigeon; Marianna, the wife of William A. Starbuck; and Albert I., vice-president of the Clinton County National Bank and prominently identified with the Champion Iron Bridge Company and the Irwin Auger Bit Company, who married Mary E. Hussey in September, 1871. Mr. and Mrs. Starbuck have had four children, as follow: Maurice B., born on July 25, 1883, married Clara Terrell, and is at present in Kirksville, Missouri, completing a course in osteopathy; Everett J., 1886, and who lives on a farm near his father's home, married Bertha Shupert; Edith M., November, 1890, married Howard McKay, who is principal of the high school at Mt. Pleasant, Ohio; and Albert Franklin, September, 1904.

Mr. Starbuck is an ardent Republican. He is a good man and a good citizen, and eminently qualified by training and disposition to carry on the work of his pioneer ancestors.

HON. AZARIAH W. DOAN.

The brilliant career of the late Hon. Azariah W. Doan, who was a distinguished soldier and officer in the Civil War and who later arose to an eminent position in the legal profession and political life of this state, is one which may be referred to with pride by his descendants. Eulogy and encomium cannot overdo the worthy deeds of the Doan family in Clinton county, for at least two generations of the family have been prominent in the public life of this county and of the state of Ohio.

Azariah W. Doan was born on December 17, 1824, at Wilmington, and died on August 22, 1911, at that place. He was the son of Jonathan and Phoebe (Wall) Doan, the former of whom was born in North Carolina and the latter in Pennsylvania. Jonathan Doan was a blacksmith by trade and came to Ohio in 1804 with his parents, Joseph and Jemima Doan. Joseph Doan located in what is now Union township, Clinton county. He gave to the county thirteen acres in the center of Wilmington for a county seat. Phoebe Wall, the mother of Azariah W. Doan, was brought from Pennsylvania to Ohio by her parents in 1808. She died in November, 1869, and her husband in July, 1874.

Reared in Wilmington, Ohio, Azariah W. Doan, before reaching his maturity, worked on farms in the vicinity of Wilmington and attended the public schools of the village. Later he attended the Wilmington Seminary, taught by David S. Burson, of New York City, and noted for his attainments in the mastery of the language of ancient Greece. He taught school for a short time and then read law in the spring-house now on the Fife farm. He studied law in Frank Corwin's office and was admitted to the bar in 1846, at Wilmington. Previously, he had been appointed deputy clerk of the common pleas court, and while serving in that capacity devoted his spare time to the study of law. At different times he was in partnership with different lawyers, first with L. C. Walker, later with R. E. Doan, then with Madison Betz, and finally with D. T. White. He was deputy clerk under C. N. Osborne and served as prosecuting attorney subsequent to that time.

In April, 1861, he assisted Judge R. B. Harlan in raising Company B, Twelfth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, which was the first company offered to the state in reply to President Lincoln's call for seventy-five thousand volunteers. He was made first lieutenant and served during the three months' service. When the company was reorganized for a three-year campaign. Lieutenant Doan was made captain of the company and in 1862 was appointed lieutenant-colonel of the Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, serving in the latter position until the close of the war. Subsequently, he was commissioned colonel and was breveted brigadier-general for meritorious service on the battlefield of Averysborough, North Carolina. During that battle Colonel Doan took charge of two regiments and made a vigirous assault on the enemy's right wing, capturing in a short time the batteries of artillery on that wing of the Confederate forces. He was a gallant soldier during this war and participated, in all, in twenty-three battles and skirmishes. He first served in West Virginia under General Rosecrans and was afterward attached to the Army of the Cumberland and subsequently, to the Twentieth Army Corps when Sherman marched from Atlanta to the sea. He participated in the Grand Review at the close of the war and was honorably discharged in July, 1865, after which he returned to Wilmington and resumed the practice of law.

On October 21, 1847, Azariah W. Doan was married to Amanda M. Stratton, a native of Wilmington. Five children were born to this union, of whom only one, Corwin F. W., a merchant at Doans, Texas, is living. Mrs. Amanda Doan died of cholera on August 6, 1854. This fatal disease also carried off a greater number of the children. Judge Doan was married, secondly, on June 5, 1856, to Martha G. Taylor, of Pennsylvania, who had been previously married to Samuel Hale, who died about 1851, leaving one child, Fred. By his second marriage, Judge Doan was the father of six children, namely: Will, the first born, who died in April, 1914, was a farmer in Texas; Joe T., a lawyer in Wilmington; Mrs. Alice Green, who is assistant matron of the Clinton county infirmary; Walker J., who is a reporter and printer in Wilmington; Fannie, who married Frank L. McDonald, superintendent of the Clinton county infirmary, and Charles, who died in infancy.

Mrs. Martha Doan, the wife of Judge Doan and the mother of Joe T., was the daughter of Jacob and Margery (Gwinn) Taylor, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania, and lived in Washington county. About 1835 they came to Wilmington, Ohio, where he was a builder and contractor. He died at the age of thirty-five and she lived to be seventy years old. They were members of the Christian church.

In the fall of 1865, Judge Doan was nominated in the primary convention of the Republican party and subsequently elected to represent the people of his district in the state Senate for a period of two years. In April, 1875, he was elected judge of the court of common pleas by a special act of the Legislature and was triumphantly re-elected in 1879 for a term of five years, commencing on May 3, 1880. Altogether he served as judge of the common pleas court of Clinton county for fifteen years. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of Ohio in 1873 and served as a delegate to the Republican National Convention which nominated President Harrison. He was an ardent Republican and mixed in politics all of his life. He was a great campaign speaker and orator. In 1890 he formed a partnership with his son, Joe T., which continued until his death, in 1911. He was a generous-hearted man and a public-spirited citizen. For many years he was a member of the Friends church and a trustee of this church. He was a member of Wilmington Lodge No. 52, Free and Accepted Masons, and also a member of the chapter. He was a member of Morris McMillan Post No. 38, Grand Army of the Republic, at Wilmington, and served as its commander for many years.

As a lawyer, no one ever prosecuted a case more vigorously than Judge Doan when he considered himself in the right. He always discouraged litigation, however, if a fair settlement could be made. On the bench, Judge Doan observed the strictest impartiality in his rulings and his strongest desire was to satisfy contesting parties of the fairness of his decisions.

ULYSSES M. MORGAN.

Ulysses M. Morgan, of Sabina, Ohio, is one of the most prominent citizens of Clinton county. He is descended from a distinguished line of forbears, his great-grandfather, Charles Morgan, having been an early settler in Pennsylvania, and the land agent for Gen. George Washington. From the earliest times when anything was known about the Morgan family, they have been extensive landowners in the East and in the Middle West. The great-grandfather owned a great tract of land in Clinton county, Ohio, for which he received a patent as early as 1796. He also owned a large estate in Kentucky and another in West Virginia. He made his home in Pennsylvania.

Here in Richland township, U. M. Morgan is rated as one of the wealthiest citizens in this section of Clinton county. He was born in Brown county, Ohio, in December, 1841, and is the son of Simon Morgan, who was born near Clinton, Pennsylvania. The grandfather of Mr. Morgan was John Morgan, who was also a native of Pennsylvania. John Morgan, who was a farmer by occupation, inherited his father's large estate. He had nine children, Charles, Daniel, Jeremiah, Simon, James, William, Frances, Mary and Elizabeth.

Simon Morgan, the father of U. M., was educated at Washington, Pennsylvania, and during his father's life, managed his business for him. He studied law in eastern Ohio and, after his admission to the bar, lived in Clinton, Pennsylvania. He was an extensive landowner in Virginia and Ohio and had, in all, about eight hundred acres in Illiniois; five hundred acres in Virginia, and six hundred in Clinton county, Ohio. Simon Morgan had but one child, U. M., who is the subject of this sketch.

Mr. Morgan divides his time between Sabina, Ohio, and Clinton, Pennsylvania, living a part of the time in one place and a part of the time in the other. He owns one hundred and twenty-two acres of land in Pennsylvania and about one thousand acres in Clinton county. Besides this he owns one hundred and eighty acres near Ashley, Illinois.

Mr. Morgan is a man of retiring disposition, modest and unassuming in all of his ways and unpretentious in his living. He has made farming his life occupation.

HENRY C. PRICE.

What a wonderful heritage a man leaves his children in passing from this life, when he leaves behind him the knowledge of an active life well spent, and evidences of the good he accomplished for his age, community and generation. To be considered among the foremost men of a county, a leader in all things having to do with the county's welfare, does not fall to the lot of many men, and only those who are truly great in heart and mind and possessed of indomitable energy and unfailing optimism are capable of winning the trust and confidence which advances them to positions of leadership. This cheering knowledge is possessed by the son of the late Henry C. Price and by his beloved widow. He was a valiant soldier in the Civil War and one of the leading farmers of Clinton county.

Henry C. Price was born in Franklin county, Indiana, on April 15, 1841, and died on July 10, 1910, survived by his widow and one son, Moody H. Another son had died in 1908. The father of the late Henry C. Price was Thomas Price, who married Mary Hutchinson, he a native of Wales and she of England. They emigrated to America on the same ship at the time he was thirty years old, and their acquaintance was first made on the voyage to America. After their marriage in this country, they located in the eastern part of Franklin county, Indiana, where he owned and operated a farm. Mary (Hutchinson) Price died in 1856. Four years later Thomas Price sold the Franklin county farm and with his children emigrated to Clinton county, where he purchased a farm in Vernon township, near Villar's chapel. He and his wife were members of the Presbyterian church and were the parents of two children, Henry C., the subject of this sketch, and Jane, who married William Lowes, of Connersville, Indiana, where her death occurred in January, 1910. Thomas Price lived to be seventy-one years old.

The late Henry C. Price was nineteen years old when, in 1860, he accompanied his father and sister to this county. About two years later in the month of August, 1862, he enlisted in Company I, Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served until the end of the war. He had a splendid record for efficiency and bravery as a soldier, and at the time he was mustered out received an honorable discharge from the Union army.

On October 14, 1866, Henry C. Price was married to Martha J. Humphreys, who was born on January 25, 1843, in Warren county, Ohio, the daughter of John L. and Julia Ann (Sidels) Humphreys. Her father, who was the son of James and Elizabeth (Long) Humphreys, was born near Clarksville, in Warren county, on October 1, 1815. He grew to manhood and was married in Warren county and then moved to Vernon township, Clinton county, where he purchased a farm. He was married in 1837 to Julia A. Sidels, the daughter of Israel and Nancy (Morrison) Sidels, to which union were born twelve children: Hannah A., James W., Martha J., Israel S., Mary E., A. Fillimore, Nancy E., John, David, Joseph, Sarah L. and Julia H. James and Elizabeth (Long) Humphreys had come from New Jersey to Warren county, Ohio, in 1814. Israel Sidels was a native of Pennsylvania and his wife, Nancy Morrison, was a native of Clinton county. John L. Humphreys owned about four hundred acres of land in Vernon township, Clinton county, and died at the age of seventy-seven years. His wife died at the age of seventy-one on the farm. They were ardent members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

To Henry C. and Martha (Humphreys) Price were born two children Charles T., who died on May 9, 1909, and Moody H., born on March 25, 1875, who lives on the home farm in Union township.

Three years after the marriage of Henry C. Price his father, Thomas Price, passed away, and at his death Henry C. received the home farm, where he lived until 1872, when he traded the farm for one hundred and twenty-five acres of land on the Clarksville pike in Union township. To this farm he added land from year to year until he was the owner of two hundred and forty acres in that farm and two hundred and fifty acres near Beech Grove. In 1904 he retired and removed to Wilmington, where he lived until his death, in 1910. His beloved widow, Martha J. Price, still lives in Wilmington.

During the active years of his life the late Henry C. Price was extensively engaged in buying and shipping live stock, and most of his farming land was set in blue grass for pasture. For many years he raised large numbers of sheep, ordinarily keeping from seven hundred to eight hundred head on the farm.

Although Henry C. Price was identified with the Republican party and voted its ticket, he never aspired to office, but devoted his time and ability to his private business. He was a strict member of the Society of Friends, as is also Mrs. Price, who survives him. In the history of Clinton county he will go down as one of its foremost farmers and business men, as a man who lived an honorable, upright life and who maintained friendly relations with the people of his day and generation.

JOHN RANDOLPH CLEVENGER.

John Randolph Clevenger was born on a farm near the village of Cuba, in Washington township, Clinton county, on June 19, 1858, the son of Peter and Mary E. (Mitchel) Clevenger, members of pioneer families of this county, the former of whom was the son of Enos Clevenger, a native of Frederick county, Virginia, and one of the earliest settlers of Washington township; a man of large and beneficent influence in that community in his day and generation.

Enos Clevenger grew to manhood in Frederick county, Virginia, and there married Christina Crouse. He and his bride emigrated to Clinton county, Ohio, in 1824, coming on horseback and carrying their meager possessions in saddle-bags. They established their home in the wilderness and reared their family, inculcating in the minds of their children a regard for the Christian virtues which is bearing noble fruit today in the third and fourth generations of their descendants. Enos Clevenger was easily one of the foremost men in his community. His dominant character early gave him a commanding position among his pioneer neighbors and he exerted a wholesome influence in the formative period of that now well-established farming region. His neighbors made him a justice of the peace not long after his arrival in Washington township and retained him in that important position for many years, ever conceding the justice and equity of his decisions in such matters of dispute as arose in the community. He became a large land owner and a citizen of substance, his life of diligence being amply rewarded in a material way, so that he left a substantial estate, as well as the more valuable legacy of a good name, to his children at his death, in 1867. His widow did not long survive him, her death occurring in 1870. She was a true helpmeet, a woman whose life was devoted to good works, and both she and her husband were sincerely mourned in the community to whose best interests their lives had been so long and unselfishly devoted.

Enos and Christina (Crouse) Clevenger were the parents of eight children, namely: Sarah, John, Catherine, Peter, Emma, Mary, William and David.

Peter Clevenger, the fourth of these children, in the order of birth, was reared on the paternal farm in Washington township, receiving such educational advantages as the place and times afforded. Trained in the ways of the farm from childhood, upon reaching man's estate he entered seriously upon the life of a farmer and became one of the most substantial and influential men of his community. He was united in marriage to Mary E. Mitchel, daughter of John Mitchel, and to this union was born one son, John R. Clevenger.

Peter Clevenger surveyed perhaps more of the land and roads of Clinton county than any other man. His notes and maps are on file and still used in the county records.

John Randolph Clevenger was reared on the home farm in Washington township, receiving his elementary education in the Ireland district and the Brown district schools of that township and in the public schools of Cuba, supplementing the same by a course of one year and six months in the normal school at Buchtel, following this by a course of one year in the normal school at Lebanon. Following his marriage, in 1880, Mr. Clevenger began farming and was successful from the beginning. For twenty years after his marriage he and his father pooled their interests, working together in the most perfect accord and to their mutual advantage. His enterprising spirit gave to his farming efforts an impetus which soon made him one of the most substantial men in the county and his father presently was the possessor of several hundred acres of land in this county.

John R. Clevenger and his father began, early in the history of manufacturing in Wilmington, to acquire considerable interests in that direction, and, largely through the advice of the father, acquired large interests in several prominent manufacturing concerns in Wilmington. The latter interests gradually absorbed so much of Mr. Clevenger's attention that, in 1911, he retired from the farm and moved to the county seat, buying a very comfortable house on West Main street, in which he and his family have since made their home. Mr. Clevenger is president of the Farquhar Furnace Company, of Wilmington, and treasurer of the Irwin Auger Bit Company, of the same city; also being a member of the directorate of these several important manufacturing concerns, positions of trust and responsibility, which keep him pretty well occupied, but which afford a fine scope for the proper exercise of his energy and business enterprise. Despite the close attention which Mr. Clevenger is compelled to give to his large interests, he is never too busy to take a hand in the promotion of all movements designed to promote the best interests of his home town and he is generally recognized as one of the most public-spirited citizens of Wilmington, his influence extending far beyond the confines of his home county.

On September 8, 1880, John Randolph Clevenger was united in marriage to Belle Moon, who was born in Clark township, the daughter of J. W. and Jemima Moon. To this happy union three children have been born, namely: Bessie Hortense, who married Dr. A. D. Blackburn, of Cuba, this county, and has two children, Dorothy and Eve Belle; Earl E., who died at the age of fourteen years; and Herbert P., who lives on the old home farm in Washington township, married Capitola West, and has one child, Barbara.

Mr. and Mrs. Clevenger are members of the Universalist church at Cuba. They are devoted to the best interests of the community and are held in the highest esteem by their large circle of friends and acquaintances. Mr. Clevenger holds an important position in the industrial development of his home city and he possesses in an unusual degree the confidence and respect of his business associates. He is a Democrat and takes a proper interest in the political affairs of the county, having been elected one of the Presidential electors from Ohio in 1912, and was one of the men who actually elected Woodrow Wilson President. He is a member of the Masonic order and is prominent in the affairs of Wilmington Commandery No. 92, Knights Templar. He is also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and in both of these popular fraternal societies he takes a warm interest.

WILLIAM M. BUCKLEY.

Few men were more prominent in the religious life of Clinton county than the late William M. Buckley, who as a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, was a teacher of the young men's class in Wilmington in the Sunday school for many years, and also county superintendent of the Sunday schools of Clinton county for a considerable period; but his prominence was not confined to religious activities. He was prominent in the politics of his county, and was an enterprising and successful farmer practicallly all his life. Although he spent the last year of his life on the farm, the period of ten years before that was spent in Wilmington, where he lived more or less retired. History is largely a record of commercial activity and personal annals and in this respect it is fitting that the life work of this good man be accorded a place in this volume.

The late William M. Buckley was born on October 8, 1855, in Chester township, Clinton county, Ohio, and died on May 29, 1913. He was the son of John and Jane (Dix) Buckley, the former of whom was born in 1807 in Dutchess county, New York, and died in 1891, and the latter of whom was born in 1825 near Winchester, Virginia, and who died in 1888. The parents of John Buckley were George and Ruth (Barnes) Buckley, both of whom were natives of Dutchess county, New York, where he was a farmer. After their marriage in 1816 they came to Chester township, Clinton county, where he purchased a hundred and sixty-eight acres of land for eight hundred dollars. He was an active man in the local militia of his day and reared a family of six daughters and four sons, passing away at the age of eighty-four years. The father of Jane (Dix) Buckley was Peter Dix, a native of Virginia, who after his marriage in that state about 1833 settled in Clinton county, where he was a farmer.

The late John Buckley remained at home and worked on his father's farm until the family was able to pay off the indebtedness on the farm. He then purchased fifty acres of his own and later added more land, making a specialty of raising Poland China hogs. He was a Republican in politics and as such was elected to the office of township trustee of Chester township. Mrs. John Buckley was a member of the Methodist church. Although he was a lad when the family came to Clinton county, at the time of his death his remains were buried on the identical spot where the family first unloaded their goods for a temporary habitation in Clinton county. He and his wife had six children: Arthur, a farmer, died at the age of fifty-one; George D., who married Alda S. Mann, is a grain dealer in Wilmington; William is the subject of this sketch; Clara is unmarried and lives with her brother, Stephen Park Buckley, who is the partner of George D. in the grain business in Wilmington; Charles is a farmer in Arizona.

The late William M. Buckley attended the Sharon district school in Chester township and there received rudiments of an education. He remained at home on his mother's farm until his marriage, after which he purchased a small farm. Two years later he bought sixty-five acres adjoining his mother's farm in Chester township and became a stock buyer, managing his farm principally for pastime. As the years went by he became a large shipper of live stock, hogs, sheep and cattle, but in 1901 Mr. Buckley sold his farm and moved to Wilmington, where he lived until 1912. In the latter year he purchased the Woods farm on the Washington pike in Union township, consisting of a hundred and thirteen acres, and died unexpectedly on May 29, 1913.

Mr. Buckley was married on January 5, 1888, to Mary Anna Van Tress, who was born on September 13, 1857, in Randolph county, Indiana, and who is the daughter of Henry and Louisa (Howell) Van Tress. Mrs. Buckley's father was born in Chester township, Clinton county, Ohio, January 20, 1832, and is still living and makes his home with Mrs. Buckley. Her mother was born on April 7, 1838, in Randolph county, Indiana, and died on August 3, 1870. She was the daughter of William and Anna Howell, both of whom were natives of Wayne county, Indiana. William Howell was a well-known farmer of Randolph county, Indiana. The parents of Henry Van Tress were Archibald and Mary (Rockhill) Van Tress. The former was a native of New York state and the latter of New Jersey. Mary (Rockhill) Van Tress' parents were John and Elizabeth Rockhill, who were born in New Jersey and when Mary was two years old came by wagon to Clinton county, Ohio, settling on Todds Forks on a place now owned by Walter McMillan. Archibald Van Trees grew up in New York state and came to Clinton county, Ohio, with his brother, Richard, who had already settled on Dutch creek. He worked in Wilmington and on nearby farms by the month, subsequently purchasing a hundred and eighteen acres in Chester township, where he died.

Mrs. Buckley's father, Henry Van Tress, began learning the carpenter's trade at the age of nineteen years. He lived nine years in Randolph county, Indiana, working at the trade, and later nine years in Springfield, Ohio. After eighteen years therefore he returned to live on his father's farm. He married the second time in 1886 to Emma Kline, a native of Warren county. Henry and Louisa (Howell) Van Tress had four children, of whom Mrs. Buckley was the eldest; Emma married Joseph D. Haven; Allie married Levi Brannon, of Frederick county, Virginia; Charles is a carpenter and cabinet-maker of Muncie, Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Buckley had three children. Clara, who was born on December 29, 1888, attended Wilmington College, graduating in 1912; Millard, September 7, 1890, is a stock buyer; Cecil, August 8, 1894, is in partnership with his brother Millard. They are among the largest live stock shippers in Clinton county.

The late William M. Buckley was elected as a Republican to the office of township trustee and also held the office of school director for some time. For many years he was a member of the Republican county central committee of Clinton county and a man whose advice and counsel were freely sought, especially in matters of organization. He had the good will of everybody and was deservedly popular, and his death was deeply deplored.

JOE T. DOAN.

Among the distinguished lawyers of Wilmington, Clinton county, Ohio, is Joe T. Doan, who has long occupied a position of eminence before the bar of this county and who, besides other positions of trust and responsibility, has filled the office of prosecuting attorney for more than a decade. Moreover, he has been prominent for a number of years in the councils of the Republican party in this section of the state.

Joe T. Doan was born on April 10, 1862, in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of Hon. Azariah W. and Martha G. (Taylor) Doan, whose biographies are presented elsewhere in this work.

Joe T. Doan attended the public schools of Wilmington and also Wilmington College and subsequently entered the Cincinnati Law School, from which he was graduated with the class of May 28, 1884. After his graduation, he formed a partnership with L. J. Walker, and in 1890 formed a partnership with his father, which continued until 1911. After his father's death, Mr. Doan formed a partnership with H. G. Cartwright, which still continues. Mr. Cartwright had been identified with the law firm of Doan & Doan previous to Judge Doan's death.

Since 1904 Joe T. Doan has been prosecuting attorney of Clinton county, and as a Republican has served as secretary of the Republican central committee of Clinton county for several years. He is associated with several fraternal orders. He is a director and solicitor for the Savings and Loan Association.

On October 13, 1886, Joe T. Doan was married to Bertha Hill, daughter of Dr. G. S. and Louise S. Hill, both of whom are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Doan are the parents of three children, as follows: Louise, who born on December 19, 1888, and married J. Albert Thomas, a Methodist minister at Eden, Ohio; Charles S., June 30, 1890, is a graduate of Wilmington College and Swarthmore, and at present is employed as a teacher of mathematics in the Friends select school; and Esther E., October 31, 1892, who is still at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Doan are members of the Friends church. They are popular in the social life of Wilmington and have a hospitable home.

CHARLES L. HAWORTH.

The Haworth family have held an honorable place in the history of the state of Ohio for over one hundred years, since one branch of the family came to Clinton county, Ohio, as early as 1810. Charles L. Haworth, the son of James Haworth, Jr., was born in Highland county, Ohio, on September 2, 1860. His parents, James, J., and Harriet Haworth, were born near Martinsville, in this county.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Haworth were James and Amelia (West) Haworth, the former of whom was born in Tennessee and came to Clinton county when ten years of age with his parents, who were Absalom and Phoebe (Wright) Haworth. The paternal great-grandparents were born in Guilford county, North Carolina, marrying there and moving to Tennessee. When James Haworth was two weeks old his mother died and his Grandmother Wright reared him. Absalom Haworth was a first cousin of Mahlon Haworth, who was an early settler of this section of the state, and the founder of this branch of the Haworth family in Clinton county. He was a descendant of George Haworth of Pennsylvania, who was a Quaker.

In 1810 James Haworth, then only ten years old, came with his Grandmother Wright and his uncle, Isaac Wright, to this county. Some of the Wrights first settled near Martinsville, but Isaac Wright and wife located in the Dover neighborhood, in Union township, where James lived with his Grandmother Wright until he was of age, when he married and went to the farm of his father, Absalom Haworth, south of Wilmington. Their religious belief was that of the orthodox Quakers.

The parents of James Haworth's wife, Amelia West, were Owen and Elizabeth West, the former of whom was born in Virginia and the latter in Georgia. Amelia's father was a wealthy plantation owner in Virginia, who had fine ideals of human rights and determined to realize his ideals by freeing all slaves who belonged to him. Then he left his native state, loyal to his high principles, and came to Ohio, settling in this county, where he purchased one hundred acres of land for each of his children, including his son-in-law, James Haworth, who settled on his share, one mile north of Martinsville, in Clark township. There James Haworth became a prosperous farmer, finally owning eight hundred acres in the township, where he reared his children without moving until 1851, when he went to New London, Indiana. There he planned large interests, having bought a hotel and farm lands and started in the dry-goods business, but death stepped in and closed his active, honorable career in 1852, his wife also dying in the same year.

The children of James and Amelia (West) Haworth, eleven in all, are as follow: Morris, a farmer, who died in Howard county, Indiana; Phoebe, of Howard county, also deceased; May, who married William S. Easter, of Howard county; Louisa, who married a second time after the death of her first husband, lives in Red Oak, Iowa, and is a Quaker preacher; John, who did not marry, died in this county; James, who was the father of Charles L., now living in Wilmington, this county; Gilbert, who died aged twenty, in Howard county, Indiana; Clarkson, who is dead, was a farmer in Howard county, Indiana; Amelia, who was eighty-four years old on December 22, 1914, lives in Wilmington, Ohio, the widow of Asa H. Jenkins; Sarah, who married Jesse Hiatt, who is now retired from business and lives in Washington, D. C., and Harriet, the widow of Marcus Pickering, who lives in Elwood, Indiana.

Charles L. Haworth's father, James Haworth, Jr., spent his early years on a farm in this county until his father moved to Indiana, where he spent four years, after which he returned to Ohio, locating in Highland county. During the Civil War he was engaged in the dairy business in Cincinnati, but moved from there to Highland county and became a farmer. Later he farmed in Clinton county, where he remained for several years. After Charles L. Haworth's mother died, his father married a Mrs. Hawkins and resided in Richmond, Idiana, until his death at the age of sixty-nine. The brothers and sisters of Charles L. Haworth were: Thomas Clarkson, deceased, who was a farmer in Howard county, Indiana; Z. G. A., who is an attorney residing in Cincinnati; Jennie, who married John Bodkins, lives in Jeffersonville, Indiana; Harriet, who died in infancy, and Harry Clinton, who works in the American car shops at Jeffersonville, Indiana.

Charles L. Haworth received his education in the schools of Highland county, Burtonville, this county, and in Wilmington, and began his business career as a clerk in the dry-goods and clothing store owned by F. S. Broomhalls, in Wilmington, where he worked for eighteen years, after which he clerked in C. A. Rannells' clothing store for a short time. In 1905 Mr. Haworth formed a partnership with Mr. Cast under the firm name of Haworth & Cast and conducted a men's clothing and furnishing store in Wilmington. In 1912 Mr. Haworth bought his partner's interest in the store, and has since been successfully conducting the store himself.

On August 24, 1888, Charles L. Haworth was married to Lona E. Barrett, who was born in Martinsville, this county, the daughter of Peter D. and Lydia Barrett.

Peter D. Barrett was born in Waynesboro, Ohio, on April 15, 1845, the son of Dr. William S. and Nancy (Walker) Barrett, the former of whom was born in Virginia in 1800 and died in 1857, and the latter of whom was born in Lexington, Kentucky, in 1820 and died in 1895. Peter D. Barrett's father, who was a noted physician, stayed in Cincinnati, at his post of duty, during the scourge of cholera. Afterward he moved to Rainsboro, Highland county, Ohio, where he had an extensive practice until he died from exposure of severe weather.

In August, 1862, Peter D. Barrett and his brother, John, enlisted in Company H, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served two years and ten months in the Civil War, participating in twenty-three battles. At the close of the Civil War, Peter D. Barrett, who played the snare drum, took part in the Grand Review at Washington, D. C., in General Fuller's First Brigade, First Division, Seventeenth Army Corps. On November 27, 1867, Peter D. Barrett married and went to Martinsville, this county, where he lived until 1883, when he moved to Wilmington, where he is still living, being engaged in the shoe business. Mr. Barrett is a stanch Republican and a member of the city council, also secretary of the soldiers' relief commission of Clinton county. He is a charter member of the Morris McMillan post of the Grand Army of the Republic and also belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the encampment and the Daughters of Rebekah, and is a loyal member of the Christian church at Wilmington.

Charles L. Haworth is an active worker in the Republican party and has served as treasurer of Union township for many years. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, including the encampment; the Royal Arcanum; the Knights of Pythias, in which he is a past chancellor commander; the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, of which he is a past exalted ruler, and the Fraternal Order of Eagles, of which he is a past president.

He is a member of the Friends church at Wilmington and his wife is a member of the Christian church.

EBERLE D. TRICKEY.

Very few county officials of Clinton county have performed their official duties with a more conscientious regard for the needs of the public, or have proved themselves more popular with those whom they have thus served, than the present efficient county civil engineer, Eberle D. Trickey, who for nearly ten years has been connected with the county surveyor's office, eight years of which time he has been the duly elected incumbent. He first entered the surveyor's office as a deputy in 1907, shortly thereafter being appointed to fill an unexpired term. During the succeeding campaign the Republicans made him their candidate for the office he was then holding and he was elected by a most flattering majority. He has since been elected for four successive terms, certainly a notable compliment to his eminent fitness for the difficult and trying position.

Eberle D. Trickey was born on a farm near the village of Blanchester, Marion township, Clinton county, Ohio, on September 20, 1875, son of Thomas R. and Sarah A. Trickey, the former of whom was born on June 25, 1852, in Warren county, this state, and the latter of whom was born on February 11, 1857, in Marion township, Clinton county, Ohio, both of whom are still living and making their home with their son in Wilmington, this county.

Thomas R. Trickey's parents, John K. and Theodocia Trickey, were natives of Warren county, Ohio, the former of whom was the son of William Trickey, a Virginian, born about the year 1810, who emigrated to this state in his young manhood, becoming one of the earliest settlers of Warren county. He entered an extensive tract of land from the government and there he reared his family, the Trickeys becoming one of the most influential families thereabout. From the beginning of his residence in Warren county, William Trickey took a prominent part in pioneer affairs and at the time of his death was reckoned as among the substantial men of the county. It was amid such home influences that John K. Trickey was reared, and it was but natural that he, too, should take a leading part in affairs during his day and generation. During the period of the Civil War, John K. Trickey performed a most valuable and distinct service to his community as provost marshal of the district in which he lived, being one of the most prominent figures in that part of the state during war times. In addition to farming, he devoted much of his time to surveying and work along the general lines of civil engineering, his services in that connection being called for throughout that section. He was an ardent member of the Universalist church, having been reared in that faith, and he brought up his family in the ways of dutiful observance of the tenets of the same faith. He lived to be seventy-three years of age and at the time of his passing was deeply and widely mourned throughout the section of the state in which he had for so long been a dominant factor in general affairs.

Under such conditions of family life and rearing, it is not to be regarded as remarkable that Thomas R. Trickey grew up to be a citizen of sterling worth and admirable traits of character. It was during his early childhood that his parents moved from Warren county to this county, and it was thus that Thomas R. Trickey received his rearing in Clinton county. Upon nearing the period of manhood, he learned the carpenter trade and for many years was engaged in the business of general building and contracting, many houses in and about the town of Blanchester testifying very visibly to the substantial character of his work, even to this day. In 1908, Mr. Trickey retired from further active labors and moved to the county seat, where he and his wife since have made their home with their son, the county surveyor, who is their only child.

Mrs. Trickey, mother of the subject of this sketch, is the daughter of Joseph and Lucetta Laymon, who were residents of Marion township, this county, the former of whom died shortly after the close of the Civil War from diseases contracted in the army. Thomas R. Trickey is a Republican and for years has been an active worker in the ranks of that party. He and his wife are members of the Universalist church, as is their son and his wife and all are interested participants in the activities of the congregation of that church.

Eberle D. Trickey has been interested in the abstruse problems of civil engineering since childhood. Even during the days of his boyhood schooling, he began to pick up the rudiments of the surveyor's profession and gradually enlarged his knowledge until he became one of the best-equipped surveyors in this part of the state. His first practical work in this connection was done with the engineering department of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, during which period of service he received much excellent and valuable instruction and experience. Following this engagement with the railroad service, he was for several years engaged as foreman for a firm of general contractors at Lima, Ohio, and in the spring of 1907 returned to Clinton county and accepted the position of deputy surveyor in the office of Mr. Brown. Shortly thereafter he was appointed to fill the unexpired term and at the end of this appointive term of service, was elected on the Republican ticket to fill the office of surveyor, and has since been elected four successive terms, certainly a most flattering commendation of the ability he has displayed in disposing of the intricate affairs of his office. Mr. Trickey occasionally finds time from his official duties to handle difficult engineering problems outside the public service and many are the calls made upon him throughout this section.

On June 29, 1904, Eberle D. Trickey was united in marriage to Mary L. Lauer, daughter of Charles A. and Molinda (Reynolds) Lauer, of Wapakoneta, Ohio, the former of whom is now deceased. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Trickey and they have adopted two little girls, Opal, born in 1908, and Hazel, born in 1910.

Mr. Trickey is not only popular in the official circles of Clinton county, but has the entire confidence of the community, the utmost reliance being placed in the accuracy of his surveys, and he holds the highest regard of all who know him. In fraternal circles he also is quite popular, being an active and influential member of the Masonic lodge, the Elks lodge, the Odd Fellows lodge and the Eagles at Wilmington, doing cheerfully his part in promoting the interests of these popular fraternal associations.

HORATIO B. HAYNES.

Horatio B. Haynes, a prominent citizen of Clinton county and a retired farmer living in Wilmington, was born on July 8, 1859, in Sabina, Cinton county, and is the son of Joshua R. and Nancy (Geffs) Haynes, the former of whom was born on May 26, 1827, in Wayne township, Clinton county, Ohio, and the latter was born in Virginia. Nancy Geffs was the daughter of John and Tamar (Faucet) Geffs, natives of Ireland and Pennsylvania, respectively. John Geffs, with his parents, James and Elizabeth Geffs, immigrated to America, when John was but a child and located in Virginia, where the father died and where John grew to manhood and married. He learned the tanner's trade in Hagerstown, Maryland, which business he followed until the fall of 1830, when, with his family, he immigrated to Ohio and passed the winter near Chillicothe. In the spring of 1831 he came to Clinton county and purchased and located upon the farm later owned by his son, Thomas Geffs. There he lived until his death, in 1840, when he was fifty-one years old. His mother also became a resident of Clinton county and died while living with her grandson, at the age of eighty-six years. On one occasion she walked ten miles to hear John Wesley preach. Mrs. Geffs remained upon the home place with her children until her death, on March 25, 1881, when she was ninety-two years old. They were the parents of thirteen children, of whom five,

Jacob, Thomas, James, Margaret (Grove) and Nancy, lived to advanced ages. Jacob and James moved to Illinois. Nancy married Joshua R. Haynes. Robert, the eleventh child, was a soldier in the Mexican War and died in the service near Jalapa, Mexico, at the age of twenty years. Thomas became a prominent man in the political life of Clinton county. He served as township trustee, county commissioner and member of the Ohio Legislature. He was married to Mary West on February 9, 1843.

The paternal grandparents of Horatio B. Haynes were Pleasant and Millie Haynes, both of whom were natives of Virginia. The paternal great-grandfather was William Haynes, a native and resident of Virginia and a large slaveholder. Pleasant Haynes, after coming to Ohio, married and settled in Fayette county. Later he moved to Clinton county and engaged in farming. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal church. They had nine children, among whom were: Joshua R., Isaac, Alfred, Mahala, Sarah and Elizabeth. Joshua R. Haynes was educated in the common schools and for seven years was engaged in teaching and business in Sabina, Ohio. He and his wife were prominent members of the Methodist Episcopal church. He died near Sabina on March 22, 1871, and his wife on July 31, 1883. They were the parents of eight children.

Horatio B. Haynes was educated in the common schools of this state and reared on a farm. On November 11, 1885, he was married to Jane Morris, a native of Fayette county, and the daughter of Jonathan and Sarepta Morris, who were farmers and members of the Friends church. Two children were born to this marriage, Herbert and Frank, both of whom are unmarried.

Mr. and Mrs. Haynes are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. They have a comfortable home on Walnut street in the city of Wilmington. Mr. Haynes has been a progressive and very prosperous farmer, but has always held character above wealth.

FRANK MURPHY.

Many years ago a child was born in County Cork, Ireland, and as he grew up his ambitions to get on in the world led him to seek a home in America. Even though he did not find fame or fortune in the new country, he was able to rear a family of children and earn an honorable living. Among his sons was one who has become known throughout the sporting world in this country and who has become in addition to this one of the wealthiest citizens of our great metropolis of the Middle West. The Irish lad who many years ago sought a home and fortune in this favored land, was the late Patrick Murphy, and his son, who is a brother of the subject of this sketch and who has become famous in the sporting world, is Charles Murphy, the former president of the Chicago Cubs.

Frank Murphy, the subject of this sketch, who is well known to the citizens of Clinton county, has in his veins the blood of this ambitious Irish lad, who left his home in County Cork, Ireland. Frank Murphy was born in Wilmington, Ohio, January 24, 1870, the son of Patrick and Bridget (O'Donnell) Murphy, the former of whom was born in County Cork in 1841, and who died in 1896, and the latter of whom was born in County Tipperary, Ireland in 1850, and who is still living. Mr. Murphy's paternal grandparents lived and died in Ireland. They were devout members of the Catholic church. His maternal grandparents also lived in Ireland, his grandfather having died when a young man and his widow, after his death, married Daniel Credan. They followed Mrs. Credan's daughter, Bridget, to America.

Patrick Murphy grew up on the farm in Ireland and when a lad still in his teens came to the United States and located at Madisonville Ohio, where he learned the plastering trade, at which he worked for many years. Subsequently, he came to Wilmington and was married and here worked as a plasterer on all of the main buildings of the city, including the churches, college buildings, schools and the business houses. He was a "rock-ribbed" Democrat and a devout member of the Catholic church, as were all of the members of his family. Mrs. Patrick Murphy is still living in the house on South Mulberry street, in Wilmington, to which she and her husband moved after they were married in 1866. Frank Murphy is one of four children born to his parents: Charles, the eldest, who has heretofore been referred to as the former president of the Chicago Cubs; Frank, who is the subject of this sketch; James, who is employed as a scout for the Chicago Cubs; and Katie, who died at the age of thirty-three.

Frank Murphy attended the public schools of Wilmington and learned the plasterer's trade from his father, which he followed more or less until 1907, when he started a moving picture show in Wilmington, called the West House Show. Previously, he and his brother, Charles, had operated a restaurant in Wilmington for four years. In 1909 Mr. Murphy started the Cub theatre and in the same year moved the West House Show into another building and called it the Gem theatre. These two shows were operated until 1914, when he sold out.

On January 12, 1893, Frank Murphy was married to Anna Fahey, the daughter of Thomas Fahey and who was born in Texas, Ohio. To Mr. and Mrs. Murphy have been born four children: Thomas, who was born in 1894, is a bookkeeper; Joseph, April 4, 1899; Charles, April 6, 1903; and Frank, February 2, 1908.

Mr. Murphy is a Democrat. He is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Fraternal Order of Eagles. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy and all of the members of their family are stanch supporters of the Catholic church

JOHN WILLIAM VANDERVORT.

In the early days the Middle West was often a tempting field to energetic, ambitious, strong-minded men, and Ohio was filled with them during the time she was struggling to a respectable position in the sisterhood of states. Many of the families whose progeny has since become prominent in the life of this state were founded in Ohio shortly after the state was admitted to the Union. There was a fascination in the broad fields and great promise which this newer region presented to activity and which attracted many men, inducing them to brave the discomforts of the early life here for the pleasure and gratification of constructing their fortunes in their own ways and after their own methods. It is this class of men more than any other which has given shape, direction and character to the great state of Ohio. J. W. Vandervort, formerly a well-known farmer of Clinton county and a member of the board of county commissioners for two terms, is a member of one of the families which had to do with the early history of this county.

John William Vandervort, who is now living retired in Wilmington, was born near New Antioch, in Green township, this county, on July 21, 1850, the son of Paul H. and Matilda (McKenzie) Vandervort, the former of whom was born near Starbuck, in Clinton county, on January 1, 1815, the son of Jonah and Jane (Tibbs) Vandervort, and the latter of whom was the daughter of John and Isabelle McKenzie.

The ancestry of the Vandervort family goes back to Michael Paulus Van Der Voort, who came from East Flanders, region of Dendermonde, prior to the year 1640 and located in New Amsterdam, now New York. The records show that Michael Paulus Van Der Voort was married to Marie Rapalye on November 18, 1640, their marriage being the fifth recorded in New Amsterdam. Among their children was Paul Van Der Voort, baptised on January 3, 1649, who married Lysbeth Paulus Dincksen, to which union was born a son, called Paul, who was born at Bedford, Long Island, and was baptised in 1681. He married Nultze Staats, and they had a son, Nicholas, born at Bedford, Long Island. Subsequently, the family moved to Orange county, New York, where Nicholas married Abigail Halstead, to which union six children were born, John, Martha, Paul, Peter, William and Jonah, the latter of whom was the grandfather of J. W. Vandervort, the subject of this sketch. Jonah Vandervort settled in Clinton county, Ohio, in 1810, the year in which the county was organized. He was born in Shepherdstown, Virginia, on May 30, 1765, and was married to Jane Tibbs on March 29, 1796. They moved to the Northwest Territory in 1800, and located at Columbia, which is now within the city limits of Cincinnati, Ohio. Later, in 1810, they came to Clinton county.

Nicholas and Abigail (Halstead) Vandervort, both of whom were natives of New York state, became residents of Virginia after their marriage and emigrated from Virginia about 1800, the objective point being Green river in Kentucky. On their way down the Ohio river, upon arriving at Columbia, near Cincinnati, they anchored their boat for the night. A large limb from a tree overhanging the boat broke and fell, damaging the boat so much that it was unfit for further travel with safety. After some investigation of the surrounding country they became so well pleased with it that they concluded to settle there and it is believed that Nicholas and Abigail (Halstead) Vandervort spent the rest of their lives there. Jonah Vandervort's wife, who before her marriage was Jane Tibbs, was the daughter of John and Mary Tibbs, natives of Ireland. The latter, when a girl, was kidnapped and taken on board a vessel and brought to America, where she grew to womanhood and was married, subsequently becoming a resident of Virginia, whence she emigrated to Columbia, Ohio, where she died. Jonah and Jane (Tibbs) Vandervort resided at Columbia until 1809, when they came to this county, locating on Todd's fork, where they lived for six years, at the end of which time they removed to near New Antioch, where they spent the remainder of their lives. They were among the earliest settlers in that region and assisted in the organization and establishment of the first Christian church at Antioch, in which they were leading members and in the good works of which they assisted with their purses and with their influence. Jonah Vandervort became of great strength to the church and was a very upright Christian man. He was a man of good judgment and one of the first jurymen of Clinton county. Jonah Vandervort and his wife were the parents of six sons and five daughters. He died in January, 1842, and his widow died three years later, in 1845.

Paul H. Vandervort, who was one of the six sons and one of the eleven children born to his parents, was two months old when his parents moved to the farm near New Antioch. It was there he was reared and grew to manhood and spent his entire life until August, 1879, when he retired from the farm and located in New Antioch. He was one of the most prominent and useful citizens of that community and served as commissioner of Clinton county for twelve years. He was also one of the managers of the Clinton County Agricultural Society for thirteen years and served as president of the same for many years. He also held other minor offices and was a leading member and supporter of the Christian church. At the death of his father he was elected to fill the latter's place as deacon in the church, which office he held for a quarter of a century and was then made elder.

On October 19, 1896, Paul H. Vandervort was married to Matilda McKenzie, the daughter of John and Isabelle McKenzie, natives of Kentucky, who became residents of Ohio, and who died in Clinton county and were interred in the old burying ground at New Antioch. To this union four children were born, namely: Mary Emily, the wife of E. W. Marble; Alpheus, who served three years and three months in the Civil War, enlisting in Company B, Fortieth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, in December,, 1861, and was engaged in the battles of Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain and others, and served under General Garfield in his celebrated conquest of the Big Sandy and through eastern Kentucky; Samantha, who married Dr. W. W. Canny and with him removed to Camden, Preble county, Ohio, where he died, and J. W., the subject of this sketch. Mrs. Matilda (McKenzie) Vandervort died on June 20, 1876, and three years later, on August 26, 1879, Paul H. Vandervort married, secondly, Mary Ann Mitchell, daughter of James and Mary (Fleming) Mitchell, natives of Pennsylvania, but who, in 1828, settled near Wilmington, in Clinton county, where he died in 1836, his widow living to be eighty years old.

J. W. Vandervort attended the public schools at New Antioch and subsequently was a student for one year at the Normal school at Lebanon, Warren county. In the meantime he was engaged in assisting his father on the farm and after his marriage lived on the home place until he retired in 1905, he having purchased the interest of the other heirs when his father died. He still owns this farm, the farm which his grandfather reclaimed from the wilderness. It now consists of one hundred and fifty-one acres. Upon his removal to Wilmington, Mr. Vandervort purchased a home at the corner of Mulberry and Vine streets, where the family now lives.

On September 24, 1874, J. W. Vandervort was married to Maria E. Walker, who was born in Green township, this county, the daughter of Nathan and Jane (Phillips) Walker, the former of whom was born near Lexington, Kentucky, on February 26, 1806, and died on September 1, 1876, and the latter of whom was born in Bourbon county, Kentucky, July 21, 1816, and died on February 8, 1866. Nathan Walker's parents were Robert and Nancy Walker, early settlers in Kentucky, who reared a large family. Jane (Phillips) Walker's parents were Joshua and Lucinda (Irvin) Phillips, who were farmers by occupation and early settlers in Bourbon county, Kentucky. Nathan Walker married in Kentucky and came to this county, locating in Green township, where he owned a farm. He belonged to the Christian church, and was a Republican in politics. He had a family of three daughters and two sons.

To J. W. and Maria E. (Walker) Vandervort four children have been born, as follow: Paul H., Jr., who was born on September 10, 1876, teller in the First National Bank of Wilmington, married Mary A. Robbins, and has three children, Mary, Anna and Eleanor; Ada E., April 25, 1881, who died on May 5, 1904; Arthur W., June 20, 1883, a minister in the Christian church at Minneapolis, Minnesota, on June 23, 1915, married Anna R. Robinette, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, and Robert D., December 27, 1895, who died in August, 1896.

J. W. Vandervort is a Republican and served two terms as a member of the Clinton county board of commissioners, having been elected on the Republican ticket. All of the members of the Vandervort family are actively identified with the Christian church. Mr. Vandervort was identified officially with the church at New Antioch and later with the Central church at Wilmington. No one can deny that Mr. Vandervort has worthily upheld the traditions of his family, or that, in both public and private life, he has discharged every duty which may reasonably be expected by the public at large. He is highly respected in Clinton county, where he is well known, having a host of friends in this section of the state.

ISIDOR KAUFMAN.

It is a pleasure to investigate the career of a successful, self-made man. Peculiar honor attaches to that individual, who, beginning the great struggle of life alone and unaided, gradually overcomes unfavorable environment, removes one by one the obstacles from the pathway of success and, by the master stroke of his own force and vitality, succeeds in forging his way to the front and winning for himself a competency and a position of esteem and influence among his fellowmen. Such is the record of the popular citizen of Wilmington, to a brief synopsis of whose life and character, the following paragraphs are devoted.

Isidor Kaufman is a native of Russia, having been born on the very edge of the German frontier on October 1, 1883. He is the son of Samuel and Rachel (Supowitz) Kaufman, both of whom were also natives of Russia and both of whom are deceased. Samuel Kaufman was a merchant in his native land and a very strict Jew in his religious belief, being held in high esteem in the community where he lived. To him and his wife were born six children, four sons and two daughters, all of whom immigrated to the United States.

Isidor Kaufman received some education in the schools of his native land and when old enough entered his father's store, where he received some business experience. When fifteen years old, he immigrated to the United States, coming at once to Bellefontaine, Ohio, where his elder brother, Max, was engaged in business, conducting a large dry-goods and house-furnishing store. Here Isidor Kaufman was employed for five years, during which time he applied himself indefatigably to the mastering of the English language and also to the acquiring of a practical knowledge of American business methods. In 1905 Mr. Kaufman came to Wilmington and opened a store in which he has met with splendid success. Starting with a limited stock of goods, he so conducted his business and so won the good will of the community that his patronage rapidly increased and his stock of goods was increased accordingly, so that now he has one of the best stores of the kind in Wilmington. The store, which is called the Syndicate Store, contains a complete line of dry-goods, hardware, shoes, furniture and house furnishings and occupies two regular-size store rooms, which are joined by wide-open arches. Mr. Kaufman shows a deep interest in the business affairs of his community, in the advancement of which he has borne his share. He is a member of the Commercial Club and is held in high esteem by his fellow business men, who recognize his splendid personal qualities and his business ability. Honest and liberal, he stands for all that is best in every line of large activities and is an aggressive worker for the public sentiment in civic, school and governmental affairs. Mr. Kaufman belongs to the orthodox Jewish church in Cincinnati.

On March 10, 1907, Isidor Kaufman was united in marriage to Ida Supowitz, a native of New York City. To them have been born two children: Bernard, who was born in 1908, and Samuel, in 1910.

ABSALOM BORING.

Among the many excellent farmers of Clinton county who are now living retired in the county seat, Wilmington, Absalom Boring, who is a native of Green township, and who owns a farm of one hundred and sixty-one acres in that township, should be mentioned. He comes of a family who settled in Clinton county in pioneer days, emigrating to this state from Virginia.

Absalom Boring was born in Green township, Clinton county, Ohio, on February 10, 1848, a son of Lafayette and Elsie (Collett) Boring, the former of whom was born in Virginia in 1812, and died in 1883, and the latter of whom was born in Kentucky, and died in 1852. Mr. Boring's paternal grandparents were Thomas and Ruth Boring, both of whom were born and married in Virginia, and who, in 1824, settled in Green township, this county, where they purchased a farm. They were members of the Baptist church and prominent and influential in the affairs of that church in pioneer times. The grandfather died in 1864 after living to rear a family of seven children, four sons and three daughters. Mr. Boring's maternal grandparents died in Kentucky.

Lafayette Boring was only twelve years of age when he was brought to Ohio from Virginia by his father and mother. Some time after attaining his majority and after his marriage, he purchased the home place and paid for it by his savings and profits from year to year. Subsequently he added fifty-two acres to the home farm. He was a Republican in politics, and was identified with the Baptist church. Mr. Boring's mother died when he was but four years old, and after her death his father married, secondly, in 1864, Mrs. Mary (Hall) Lieurance, widow of William Lieurance, and she also is now deceased. To the first marriage of Lafayette Boring six children were born, three of whom are now deceased. Harriett died when a small child; Mary died in 1864 at the age of twenty, and Elizabeth, the second born, died in 1910. The living children are Ruth, who is unmarried and makes her home with her brother, Absalom; John, who lives in Green township, this county, and is a farmer, and Absalom, the immediate subject of this review. To the second marriage of Mr. Boring's father four children were born, all of whom are living: William, a farmer living in Liberty township, this county; Alice, who is the wife of George Skinner, is a resident of Wilmington; Lydia, the wife of Squire Beaty, lives in Green township, and Susan, the wife of Darius Morton, lives in Wilmington.

Absalom Boring attended the public schools of Green township, but his educational advantages were limited, as he was compelled to assist his father with the work on the farm during the period when he might have attended school. After living at home until he had reached his majority, he purchased, with the aid of his father, forty-eight acres of land in Green township, adding to this tract until he was the owner of one hundred and sixty-one acres. He lived on this farm in Green township until 1904, when he retired from active farming, purchased a home on High street in Wilmington, and moved to that city. He still owns his farm and gives to it his personal supervision.

On February 20, 1896, Absalom Boring was married to Catherine Mitchell, who was born in New Antioch, this county, a daughter of William and Ann Mitchell, both of whom are deceased. William Mitchell was a well-known cabinetmaker of this county. Mrs. Boring died on August 3, 1912, leaving her husband and one son, Carl M., who was born on March 25, 1897.

Absalom Boring is a Republican, but has never taken any special part in political affairs. He has always been rated as a good citizen, a man of strictly moral habits, honorable and upright in all of the relations of life and enjoys the full confidence and esteem of his neighbors.

STEPHEN PARKER BUCKLEY.

As a man who enjoys pre-eminent prestige among the successful business men of Wilmington Stephen Parker Buckley deserves honorable mention. As a grain dealer he has been distinctively representative in this field of endeavor and has established for himself and for the firm of which he is a member a reputation for integrity and honor. He is a member of the firm of Buckley Brothers and they buy grain and handle flour and feed in large quantities. He is one of the worthy citizens of Clinton county and none more than he deserves representation in a work of this character.

Stephen Parker Buckley was born on November 17, 1861, in Chester township, Clinton county, Ohio. He is the son of John and Jane (Dicks) Buckley, the former of whom was born in 1807 in Dutchess county, New York, and who died in 1891, and the latter of whom was born in 1825, near Winchester, Virginia, and who died in 1888.

The paternal grandparents of Stephen Parker Buckley were George and Ruth (Barnes) Buckley, both of whom were natives of Dutchess county, New York, where he was a farmer. After his marriage in 1816 he came to Chester township, Clinton county, and purchased one hundred and sixty-eight acres of land for eight hundred dollars. He went in debt for practically the entire amount. He died at the age of eighty-four, having been an active man in public affairs during his day and generation. He was especially active in the local militia. He and his wife had six daughters and four sons. In those days they were homespun clothes and the six daughters were all able to use spinning wheels and worked in rhythm, singing at the same time.

Mr. Buckley's maternal grandparents were Peter Dicks and wife who were born and married in Virginia and who about 1833 settled in Clinton county, Ohio, where the former was a farmer.

John Buckley, father of Stephen Parker, remained at home and worked on his father's farm until the family had paid off the indebtedness. He then purchased fifty acres of his own and later added more land. He made a specialty of raising Poland China hogs.

This proved very profitable. He was a stanch Republican and a township trustee of Chester township. His wife was a Methodist. He was a mere lad when the family came to Ohio. It is a coincidence that his remains were buried on the spot where the family first unloaded their goods in Clinton county.

John and Jane (Dicks) Buckley had six children, as follow: Arthur, who died at the age of fifty-one, was a farmer; George D., who is Stephen Parker's partner, married Alda F. Mann and they live in Wilmington; William, who is a stock dealer of Wilmington, Ohio, died in 1913; Clara is unmarried and lives with her brother, Stephen P., who was the fifth in the family; Charles is a former resident of Arizona.

Stephen Parker Buckley attended the public schools of Chester township when a young man and worked by the day on the farm. In 1904, he removed to Wilmington, Ohio, and with his brother, George D., purchased the Mitchell & Hague grain elevator, which they have successfully operated now for a period of fifteen years under the name of Buckley Brothers. They buy grain and handle flour and feed.

In 1804 Stephen Parker Buckley was married to Martha Eubanks, who was born near Danville, Kentucky, and who is the daughter of John W. Eubanks, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Buckley have had two children: Karl, who was born in 1894, is a student at Wilmington College; John Wesley, 1898, is a student in the Wilmington high school.

Mr. Buckley is a Republican, a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mrs. Buckley is also a member of this church. He served as clerk of Chester township at one time and filled the office with credit.

HERBERT P. CLEVENGER.

Herbert P. Clevenger, a well-to-do farmer and business man, of Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio, owns one hundred and twelve acres of land in Washington township and is the scion of an honorable and distinguished family of this county. The Clevenger family came originally from the Old Dominion state and was established in Clinton county by Enos Clevenger, a native of Frederick county, Virginia, who was one of the earliest settlers in Washington township. He was the great-grandfather of Herbert P. Clevenger, the subject of this sketch.

Herbert P. Clevenger was born on the farm where he now lives on June 3, 1887, the son of John Randolph and Belle (Moon) Clevenger, the former of whom was born on a farm near the village of Cuba, June 19, 1858, the son of Peter Clevenger, who, in turn, was the son of Enos Clevenger. Enos Clevenger grew to manhood in Virginia and married Christina Crouse. He and his bride came to Clinton county in 1824 on horseback. He was a dominant character among the pioneer citizens of his neighborhood and exerted a wholesome influence during the formative period of his neighborhood. At the time of his death, he left considerable property. He died in 1867 and his wife three years later. Peter Clevenger, the second generation of the family in Clinton county, was also a well-known farmer.

John Randolph Clevenger received a liberal education in the public schools of Cuba, the normal schools at Buchtel and Lebanon. He married in 1880 and immediately devoted himself to farming. From year to year he added to his farm holdings but gradually became interested in industrial enterprises at Wilmington. He is president of the Farquahar Furnace Company, of Wilmington, and vice-president of the Champion Bridge Company, also treasurer of the Irwin Auger Bit Company, of the same city. His wife, the mother of Herbert P., before her marriage was Belle Moon, the daughter of J. W. and Jemima Moon. She is a native of Clark township, Clinton county. They were married on September 8, 1880, and are the parents of four children: Bessie Hortense, who married Dr. A. D. Blackburn, of Cuba; Earl E., who died at the age of thirteen years; and Herbert P., the subject of this sketch; John Randolph, Jr., who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. John R. Clevenger are members of the Universalist church at Wilmington. He is a Democrat in politics and a member of the Masonic fraternity, being prominent in Wilmington Commandery No. 92. He is also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Herbert P. Clevenger obtained the rudiments of an education in the common schools of Cuba, but later spent three years at Buchtel College, at Akron. After finishing his college education, he began farming with his father and in 1912 became the owner of a farm of one hundred and twelve acres. He engages in general farming and stock raising, but specializes in breeding Duroc-Jersey hogs.

In 1908 Mr. Clevenger was married to Capitola West, the daughter of William and May West. To this union there has been born one child, Barbara May, who was born in 1910.

Mr. Clevenger is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. Like his father, he votes the Democratic ticket. Mr. Clevenger owns an attractive home in attractive surroundings.

H. B. PATTERSON.

While the professional man of high ideals makes his contribution to his time and age, it must not be forgotten that the business man, by reason of his organizing ability, also is a true benefactor when honorable in motive and practice. Especially is that merchant to be respected who is honest in his purpose, fair in his dealings, and willing to use his ability for the building up of the commercial and industrial life of his town or city, as well as his own more personal prosperity. The commercial standing of a community may be said to depend upon the number and quality of its business men—men who have initiative, energy, enthusiasm, and business integrity. According to the above standard, the man whose name heads this biography is of such a type. Born on a farm and a member of a large family, early inured to those realities which make life to many a struggle, he acquired those habits of industry and endurance which had much to do with his present place in the commercial and social world.

H. B. Patterson was born in Jackson county, Ohio, November 5, 1868, a son of Robert and Mary (Cunningham) Patterson, both natives of Ireland, who came with their parents to America in 1835, locating in Philadelphia, where they were married and lived for fifteen years. About 1850 they immigrated to Ohio, traveling on horseback, in true primitive style. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson located in Jackson county, on a tract of land which they bought and cultivated, and this farm became their home for the remainder of their lives. The father died there in 1885, his faithful wife passing away five years later.

Four of the eight children born in this humble home are still living. These are, R. C. Patterson, of Wilmington, Sarah A. Castle and Jane F. Fields, both of Willston, Ohio, and our subject, who is the youngest.

H. B. Patterson received a meager education in the country schools and while yet a lad helped with the work on the farm. At sixteen years of age he went to clerk in a store at Hamden, Ohio, his first employer being John Dill. After two years he bought the business for himself, and for the following three years was owner and manager of this general store in the village. In 1890, he sold out and removed to Wilmington, where for seven years he and his brother, R. C. Patterson, were prominent clothing merchants, located in the Odd Fellow building. Selling out, Mr. Patterson became a traveling salesman for Bischof, Stem & Stein, a Cincinnati firm of cloak manufacturers. For them he traveled three years.

In 1900 Mr. Patterson founded the present partnership with G. E. Watts under the firm name of Watts & Patterson. Since that time, these men have been leading dry-goods merchants of Wilmington. For some years they were located on the corner opposite the Clinton County Bank, and on September 5, 1912, they removed to their present location in the Masonic temple. Their store room has a floor space of twenty-two thousand feet, and thirty-one employees are engaged there.

On August 8, 1895, H. B. Patterson was married to Flo Granthan, of Wilmington. Mrs. Patterson died five years later on August 8, 1900. There were no children.

Besides his commercial holdings, Mr. Patterson owns considerable quantities of coal lands located in Jackson county, Ohio.

Mr. Patterson is an Elk, and a member of the Knights of Pythias. He is a Republican. Mr. Patterson is a member of the Presbyterian church. In all of these organizations, he does not merely hold membership, but uses his time and his talent and means to further the purpose of their existence.

H. B. Patterson has a wide circle of friends in Clinton county, and his successful business attests the esteem in which he is held in this locality.

H. N. HENDERSON.

It is as one of Clinton county's most alert and progressive business men that the name of H. N. Henderson appears among those citizens whose achievements are recorded in this collection of biographies. Though born and reared on a farm, his ambitions early led him to seek other pursuits and he carried into these enterprises the traits of character that would have made him conspicuous in almost any walk of life. Mr. Henderson has displayed great self-reliance and from the very beginning of his independent career after he left the parental roof, he aimed high and considered himself capable of great things. H. N. Henderson, one of Wilmington's most prominent real estate dealers, was born near Hillsboro, Highland county, Ohio, August 31, 1873.

Christopher Henderson, father of the subject of this sketch, came from Virginia to Highland county, Ohio, and located on a farm where he remained the balance of his life, dying in 1876. As wealth was estimated in those days, Mr. Henderson was considered a wealthy man, being owner of eleven hundred acres of farm land. By his first wife, who was a Miss Hetherington, he was the father of five children. Several years after her death he married again, his second wife being Amanda Turner, who was a widow. H. N. Henderson was the only child born of this marriage. Christopher Henderson died in 1875.

H. N. Henderson grew to manhood on the home farm, attending the public schools, and becoming versed in both the principles and practice of agricultural pursuits. In 1898 he removed to Wilmington and started in the green-house business, continuing successfully for four years. For a similar period of time he engaged in the general merchandise business, later opening up a real estate and investment office. One of the important features of this business is the sale of farm lands. Mr. Henderson is representative of Geiger-Jones Company, investment bankers, of Canton, Ohio, his territory being Clinton and Fayette counties. He owns a farm in Hocking county, Ohio, to which he gives careful attention.

On December 31, 1895, H. N. Henderson was married to Mattie A. Booth, daughter of Ira and Elizabeth Booth, of Hillsboro. Mrs. Henderson is a native of Green county, Ohio. To this marriage four children were born, Elizabeth Lucile, Katherine Mermet, William Turner and Henry Theodore. The home life of Mr. and Mrs. Henderson has been a happy one, and both they and their children have taken an important place in the social life of the city. The family are active members of the Methodist Episcopal church. While Mr. Henderson's life is one of more than the average activity, he has never neglected his home, and has been both a devoted husband and a kind, thoughtful father.

Mr. Henderson is a believer in social and civic organizations, and as a business man of ability, has done much to advance the commercial interests of his city. The extent to which these endeavors are appreciated by his business associates is shown by the fact that he is now the assistant secretary of the Commercial Club, and in this capacity gives much of his thought and time to the club. Mr. Henderson is a Republican. He is an Odd Fellow and a member of the Royal Arcanum.

By his untiring zeal for the commercial welfare of his city, Mr. Henderson has given distinctive impetus to its economic advancement, and the success and prestige he has achieved is splendid evidence of the scope and importance of the enterprise which he is directing. His work as an officer of the Commercial Club is worthy of especial commendation, as is also his steady adherence to the principles of honor and integrity as applied to business.

JOHN LEONARD SEITZ.

One of the most substantial citizens of the Lynchburg neighborhood in Clinton county is the gentleman whose name the reader notes above. He has lived all his life in that neighborhood and is regarded as one of the most important factors in the community interest thereabout. Controlling more than five hundred acres of valuable land in this county, beside much valuable property in the village of Lynchburg, he is a man of substance who is giving good account of his trust, doing well his part in life.

John L. Seitz was born in Jefferson township, Clinton county, Ohio, on September 10, 1860, son of John and Elizabeth B. (Sigling) Seitz, both natives of Berne, Germany, who came to America in 1854, later making their home in this county.

John Seitz was the son of a shoemaker and grew up as a farmer, becoming the owner of a small place of twenty-six acres in his native land. Deciding to take advantage of the more promising outlook offered in this country, he disposed of his holdings in 1854 and came to America. On the same vessel, also seeking a new home and wider opportunities in this land of the free, was the girl who presently became his wife, Elizabeth Sigling, daughter of Frederick and Margaret (Fitzdum) Sigling, also natives of Berne. Frederick Sigling followed his children to this country, after the death of his wife, when in his eighty-fourth year, and his last days were spent with his children in this county. Shortly after their arrival in Cincinnati John Seitz and Elizabeth Sigling were united in marriage and for a year made their home in that city, at the end of which time they came to Clinton county, making their home in Jefferson township, where John Seitz eventually became a farmer in a large way. In association with his brother-in-law, Michael Sigling, he bought three hundred acres in Jefferson township, the two of them operating the farm until about the time of the Civil War, when Michael Sigling sold his interest. John Seitz continued his farming operations and prospered, adding to his holdings until he became the owner of more than five hundred acres of fine land lying on the line of division between Clinton and Highland counties, one hundred and sixty-one acres of which was situated in the latter county, the home, however, being situated in Jefferson township, this county. Both John Seitz and his wife were earnest members of the Lutheran church and were prominent factors in the development of the neighborhood in which they lived. They were the parents of but two children, both sons, John, who died at the age of twenty-seven years, and John L., the immediate subject of this sketch. The father of these children died in the year 1901, and his widow since then has made her home with her only surviving son.

John L. Seitz received his education in the common schools of his home neighborhood and was carefully trained in the ways of farming by his industrious and energetic father, upon whose death he assumed full control, on behalf of his widowed mother, of the large land holdings of his father and has since operated the same quite successfully. He and his mother remained on the home place until 1905, in which year they moved to their present home on the outskirts of Lynchburg, in Clark township.

Various changes have been made in the original Seitz holdings, and John L. Seitz and his mother now own five hundred and ninety-one acres, all of which, save sixty-five acres lying in Highland county, is located in this county. Mr. Seitz is a very successful farmer, giving much attention, in connection with his general farming operations, to stock raising, and has prospered, being regarded as one of the most substantial citizens of the Lynchburg neighborhood. In addition to his large farm, he is the owner of seven houses and a cooper shop in Lynchburg and is deeply concerned in the development of the best interests of that community.

Mr. Seitz and his mother are faithful members of the Lutheran church and are held in the highest esteem by all in their large circle of acquaintances in that part of the county.

FRANK M. BALDWIN, M. D.

It is not often given to men to do a multiplicity of things and yet be so richly endowed that they may do each of them well. But here and there, rare though it be, are to be found a shining few, whose native ability coupled with quiet, but grim and purposeful determination spells success in any attempt or endeavor to achieve. Of such a number is the subject of this sketch, Dr. Frank M. Baldwin, of Blanchester, Ohio.

Frank M. Baldwin was born in Blanchester, Ohio, on September 6, 1842. He was the son of Joseph Baldwin, whose father, Jonathan Baldwin, a native of Virginia, having been born and reared in Morgantown, Virginia, married a Miss Blancett, of Virginia, whose brother Joseph, filled with the vision of new land and new enterprises, came "West" as Ohio was termed in that early day, and with true pioneer zeal, helped to lay out the town of Blanchester, Ohio.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Baldwin came West, and were among the earliest settlers of Clinton county. Their son, Benjamin, was the first white child to be born in Marion township. They were the parents of the following nine children: Judge William H. Baldwin, who is now deceased; Benjamin, who is now deceased; Josina, who is now deceased; Joseph, who is now deceased; Samuel, who is now deceased; John, a resident of Blanchester; Harriet, who is still living at the age of ninety-one; Louisa, who is now deceased, and Celissa, deceased. Several years after the death of Mrs. Baldwin, Jonathan Baldwin contracted a second marriage with Mary Villars. To this union were born three children: Rebecca; Mary, and Thomas. Thomas Benton is the only survivor of this union.

Jonathan Baldwin, true to his country and for the humanitarian principles for which she has always stood, heard the call of his native land in her grievance against England, and was one of the valiant defenders of the young republic in the War of 1812.

Joseph Baldwin, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born on March 7, 1817, in Clinton county, Ohio. He was reared in this county, attending the public schools, but learning even more from the pioneer efforts on all sides of him to make Clinton county the pleasing and habitable place that it is today. He was married in early manhood to Valeria Shank, who was born in Fauquier county, Virginia, in 1824. She was the daughter of Henry and Mary (Mann) Shank, who were both among the earlier settlers of Clinton county. Henry Shank served his country in the War of 1812; a pioneer in the principles of justice as well as of the frontier, and so when England persisted in seizing American seamen, and in searching American vessels, he was one of the very first to enlist. He lived many years to enjoy the freedom for which he had fought. He died in 1864, at the age of eighty-seven years, which years had been of constant devotion to his fellow men. His wife, Mary (Mann) Shank, died in 1882, and was buried on her ninety-first birthday. Joseph Baldwin was a prosperous merchant in Blanchester, always broad in his ideas. He was a stanch Democrat, politically, although he was liberal enough to see the good in other parties. He was a Universalist in religion, interpreting the Universe and God in the broadest terms; kind and sympathetic to all about him. Dr. Frank Baldwin, the subject of this sketch, was the only child born to Joseph and Valeria (Shank) Baldwin.

Doctor Baldwin was educated in the public schools of Blanchester. True to the ideals of his ancestors, both paternal and maternal, he assiduously followed the Emersonian maxim: "Hitch your wagon to a star", and let no opportunity go by to make himself more useful to the community. He taught school in Blanchester for a year and a half. The teaching profession, always a noble one within itself, in this instance led to wider fields of endeavor. His analytical mind led him to the study of medicine, and in the years 1863-64 he attended a medical school, taking the greatest interest and advantage in the many fine lectures connected with the course. Dr. Baldwin later embarked in the drug business, buying out an established drug firm in Blanchester where he conscientiously served the people for twenty-seven years. During this time, he met, and later married, Elmira Ferguson, of Warren county. They were married in 1864, and were the parents of the following children: Sherman and Sheridan, twins, who were born in 1866; Gladis May, who was born in 1872, and who died in infancy; Carrie, who was born in 1874, and Stanley, who was born in 1878 and who died in infancy. This union proved a most helpful and happy one until the death of Mrs. Baldwin in February, 1879. In June of 1880, Doctor Baldwin was united in marriage to Anna E. Van Duzen, of Newport, Kentucky. To this union were born three children, two of them dying in infancy, and the third being Frank Van Duzen, who was born in 1891.

During all of the years that Doctor Baldwin meted out drugs and sundry other necessaries to the people of Blanchester, he held constantly in mind the early intention of becoming a doctor, and during these busy years he attended two more sessions of a series of lectures, and finally, in 1888, graduated from the Eclectic Medical College of Cincinnati. Since that date he has ably filled the medical needs of his community with the same constancy and zeal which marked his efforts to fit himself for the service. He is now a member of the Southwestern Electic Medical Association.

But in his many business activities Doctor Baldwin has not neglected his social duties. For half a century he has been a Master Mason in Blanchester, and past master of this lodge; a Royal Arch Mason, and past high priest since 1882. Since 1882, he has also been a Knight Templar and since 1887, a thirty-second degree Mason. In 1888 he became a member of the Shriners. His wife is a member of the Eastern Star, and he is a past worthy patron of that organization. Mrs. Baldwin shares with her husband the many fine fraternal duties involved in these finely-organized and helpful lodge affiliations.

In religion, Doctor Baldwin is a Universalist, although his activities in church work are decidedly non-sectarian and not confined altogether to his own church. He became a member of the Universalist church in 1867, and has been a faithful attendant and participant in its affairs ever since. Doctor Baldwin's father died in 1894, but his mother is still living, having reached the advanced age of ninety-one years.

Always interested in education, Doctor Baldwin has served that worthy cause in many ways, offering and putting into effect many constructive ideas. The people of the community have shown their good judgment and their trust in Doctor Baldwin's ability and his progressive ideas, by electing him to the office of school director for twenty-seven years. On the expiration of his present term in 1917 in that office, he will have served continuously for twenty-seven years. During that time Doctor Baldwin has seen the old methods of the "little red school house," give place to the more modern methods and ideals demanded by the complexity which surrounds us on all sides in our American life. Doctor Baldwin has shown himself to have kept steady pace with the onward march, and in nothing so much as by his able work as a director of schools.

Dr. Frank M. Baldwin typifies the new meaning of life—spelled in terms of service. His life, with its multiple demands, has ever been devoted not only to his own, but to

WILL B. WOOD.

Union township, in Clinton county, is rich in history. Its now valuable lands were opened for settlement by earnest pioneers who wrought well, and the descendants of these pioneer families are now ably carrying on the good work inaugurated by their forefathers. In all the history of this township the families of the Woods, the Colletts and the McKays are very definitely associated. The gentleman whose name is noted above, a scion of a union of the three families above named, is a native of this county, born on the farm which his grandfather wrested from the forest wilderness, and has lived there all his life; having faithfully carried on the noble tasks of diligent husbandry set him by his grandfather and bequeathed to him by his father. The Wood family had its origin in America with the coming to this new land of freedom of the famous colony of William Penn, the first of the line from which Will B. Wood sprang having been a member of the Penn colony and a devoted adherent of the faith of the Friends; a faith maintained by the family up to the last generation, when their religious affiliations were transferred to the Baptists. Diligent in business, serving the Lord, the members of the Wood family have performed well their parts in the development of Clinton county, bringing to all their relations in life a faithful exemplification of those fine qualities of integrity of purpose and singleness of mind so sturdily handed down by the founders of the family in this country, and it is a pleasure on the part of the biographer here to set out a few of the salient points in the history of the Wood family in this county.

Will B. Wood was born on the old Wood homestead, on the Washington pike, in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, on December 13, 1863, son of Jesse H. and Tamson (Collett) Wood, the former of whom was born on the same farm on July 14, 1835, and died on April 27, 1902, and the latter of whom was born on a farm near the village of New Burlington, in Chester township, this county, on November 30, 1863, and died on September 1, 1911.

Jesse H. Wood was the son of Robert P. Wood, who was born in Frederick county, Virginia, on January 14, 1812, the youngest of the five children of Isaac and Lydia (Grubb) Wood, the former of whom was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, the eldest of five children born to his parents, the others being John, Nathan, Lydia and Mary, and the latter of whom was born in Jefferson county, Virginia. The other children of this family were: Susan, who married Benjamin Glass; William, who married Mary Campbell; Hannah, who married Christopher Probosco, and John, who married Elizabeth Edmondson. All these children were married in Virginia except Robert, the youngest, who was not married until after the family had settled in this county. John Wood emigrated from Virginia to Ohio in 1831, locating in Springfield, whence he sent back such glowing reports to his father that the latter decided to put in his lot with the settlers in this then promising region, and, with his entire family, came here the next year, arriving at Wilmington on the evening of November 12, the day before the presidential election of that year. There were seventy members of the party which made the toilsome journey by wagon train across the mountains and rivers. The party was nineteen days on the way, having crossed the Alleghany mountains on the National pike and the Ohio river at Wheeling. On arriving in Clinton county the Wood family all settled within a radius of two miles east of Wilmington, the two sons-in-law of Isaac Wood, Benjamin Glass and Christopher Probosco, settling in the same colony, much of this land still being retained in the family, in the third and fourth generation, the numerous progeny of the parent stock now forming a no inconsiderable element of the population thereabout.

Amid these pioneer conditions, Robert P. Wood secured a new start in life. Taking a farm nearby the central farm located by his father, he entered upon the task of clearing the forest wilderness and quickly prospered. His original holdings amounted to one hundred and thirteen acres, but, as he prospered, he gradually added to this until he became the owner of about five hundred acres of fine land in Union township and was accounted one of the most substantial farmers in that section of the county. Reared in the Quaker faith, he adhered to the Friends church during his early manhood, but, as a matter of convenience in securing a nearby house of worship, allied himself with the Baptists and was one of the thirteen charter members of the first Baptist church organized in Wilmington and served the congregation of that church as a deacon the rest of his life, being as faithful in his relations to the church as he was in all his relations in life.

Robert P. Wood was united in marriage to Mary D. Hughes, who was born in Union township, this county, daughter of Judge Jesse Hughes, and to this union were born six children, namely: Jessie, father of the immediate subject of this sketch; Nathan, now deceased, a former well-known farmer of Union township, this county; Lydia, who died in her young girlhood; William, a prosperous Union township farmer, now living retired in the city of Wilmington; Isaac, deceased; and Lavenia, now deceased, who married J. F. Woods, a well-known farmer of this county, who survives her. The mother of these children died on March 3, 1881, and in 1882 Robert P. Wood married, secondly, Phebe Hildreth.

Jesse Wood was reared on the home farm in Union township, his brothers and his father all working together on the home place, even after the former were grown and married, their father having promised to each a fine farm if they would stick to the home farm. This arrangement continued until 1875, in which year Jesse H. retired from the home farm and moved to one of the Custis farms of one hundred and twenty-five acres, which he had received as his share of the estate of his pioneer father, Robert Wood. Jesse Wood was a quiet, reserved man; a man of the strictest integrity and known far and wide for his careful attention to his own business. During the Civil War he was enrolled with the famous band of "squirrel hunters" and with this company of zealous volunteers was encamped at Camp Denison. He was a Republican and gave a good citizen's attention to the political affairs of his home county, but never was an office seeker, his duty to the public being performed in the quiet walks of private life. He was an earnest member of the Baptist church, as was his father before him, and for many years served the congregation of the Baptist church at Wilmington as a deacon, also performing the duties of treasurer of the church.

In March, 1862, Jesse Wood was united in marriage to Tamson Collett, daughter of Daniel H. and Maria (McKay) Collett, the former of whom was born in Warren county, this state, and the latter of whom was born in Chester township, this county, a daughter of one of the prominent pioneers of Clinton county. Daniel H. Collett came to Clinton county in his young manhood, married here and became one of the most substantial farmers of Chester township. He was the owner of more than four hundred acres of land and was a leader in the affairs of his community. He and his wife were members of the Jonas Run Baptist church and were prominent in all good works thereabout. Daniel H. Collett and his wife were the parents of seven children who grew to manhood and womanhood and became useful factors in their respective communities. Daniel H. Collett died at the age of sixty-three, his widow surviving him some years.

To Jesse and Tamson (Collett) Wood were born three children, namely: Will B., the immediate subject of this sketch; Daniel C., who lives at Tarkio, Missouri; and Mary, who married W. Corey and lives in Greenfield, Ohio.

Will B. Wood was reared on the paternal farm, receiving his elementary education in the district school in that neighborhood, supplementing the same by a course of one year in Wilmington College, after which he entered Dennison University with the purpose of completing the course in that institution. At the end of two years of study at Dennison, however, his father became ill and the dutiful son returned home to manage the farm and never returned to the university to receive his diploma. Upon his father's death, Will B. Wood purchased the interests of the other heirs in the home farm and ever since has made his home there. He has a fine home, having completely remodeled the old house along the lines of modern requirements; the house being equipped with an acetylene gas lighting system and hot and cold water, bathrooms and all modern conveniences. Mr. Wood keeps a fine herd of pure bred Jersey cattle, shipping his cream to Cincinnati. One of his chief sources of revenue is found in his hogs, he having for years made a specialty of Chester Whites, annually marketing large numbers of these profitable animals.

On February 27, 1895, Will B. Wood was united in marriage to Edna McMillan, who was born in Chester township, this county, daughter of Shipley and Sarah (Lacy) McMillan, members of pioneer families of this county, a complete history of the McMillan family in this county being presented elsewhere in this volume. To this union two children have been born: Myra, born on April 2, 1897, who is a student in Dennison University; and Howard, January 23, 1902.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood are members of the Baptist church in Wilmingtotn, Mr. Wood having been a deacon of that congregation for years and both are active in the various beneficences of that communion. Mr. Wood is a Republican and for years has taken an active part in local politics, his sound judgment and thorough acquaintance with conditions in his neighborhood giving much weight to his counsels in the deliberations of the party managers in this county. For fifteen years hs was school director in his district, his ardent interest in educational affairs having given great value to his services in this connection. He also has served as trustee of Union township, his thorough and public-spirited administration of the affairs of that office having proved very acceptable to the people of the township. Mr. Wood and his wife take a deep interest in all measures designed to promote the cause of the common good in their community and no couple thereabout is held in higher regard than they.

ELIJAH P. STOTLER.

The plodding German character which has been so dominant in the making of America had much to do with the earlier history of Clinton county. And whenever the history of a German ancestry is written, the biographer is always compelled to note a large measure of success along this line. Elijah P. Stotler is of German descent and the outstanding features of his life will bear out this statement.

Elijah P. Stotler was born in Morgan county, West Virginia, three and one-half miles from Berkeley Springs, on the Winchester grade road, on August 17, 1852. He was the son of Elijah and Evann (Spillman) Stotler. Elijah Stotler, the father of Elijah P., was born at Oakland, in Morgan county, West Virginia, in 1817, and died on December 24, 1856. His wife, Evann (Spillman) was born in Morgan county, West Virginia, in 1816, and died on May 3, 1894. Elijah Stotler was the son of Peter and Susannah (Shockey) Stotler, or S-t-a-t-l-e-r, as the name was spelled in Germany where they were born. Peter and Susannah Spillman were married in Germany and emigrated to Pennsylvania where after farming for awhile they moved to a farm in Morgan county, West Virginia, where they died.

Evann (Spillman) Stotler was the daughter of Peter and Susannah (Redman) Spillman, both of whom were born in Germany and later came to America with their parents and settled in Pennsylvania, where they were married. After their marriage they purchased a large tract of land in Morgan county, West Virginia, and made their future home on this. This land eventually became very valuable coal land.

Elijah Stotler was a blacksmith by trade and had a very large blacksmith-shop on his farm in West Virginia. He employed a number of men in this shop and acted as overseer while his sons cultivated the farm. He was a fine smith and was noted for his careful workmanship. At the time of his death, Elijah P., the subject of this sketch, was only four years old. He left, at his death, a family of nine children, the eldest of whom was but nine years old, and very little means to sustain them; but his widow was of that brave type that has no fear and she kept the family together and reared all of the children to excellent citizenship. She was a life-long member of the Methodist church and instilled her Christian character into her children. The following children were born to Elijah and Evann (Spillman) Stotler; Julia Anne, who is the widow of Isaac Whistner and who lives at Cumberland, Maryland; Amanda, who died in 1898 and who was the wife of Peter Whistner; Margaret A., who is the widow of C. W. Cross and who lives at Franklin, Ohio; George W., who lived in West Virginia and who died in 1906; Jacob and Esau, twins, who lived on their father's home place in West Virginia, until the death of Jacob, who was killed in a saw-mill in 1872; Peter D., a farmer who lives at Roundhead, Highland county, Ohio; Elnora, who died in 1856 at the age of nine; Elijah P., the subject of this sketch, and N. M., a farmer who lives in Greene county, near Bowersville.

Elijah P. Stotler had very little opportunity for securing an education. There were no free schools in West Virginia before the Civil War and whatever education he had was picked up along the way. His mother was very strict but at the same time very kind, and helped her children in every way she possibly could. They struggled along, as best they could, in West Virginia until in 1863, Jacob decided to locate in Clinton county, and here he was so successful, that the remainder of the family came, at different times, and located. Elijah P. and his mother came in 1869 and settled on a farm where he worked for nine years for James Wilson in Union township and three years for Asa Starbuck and others. He attributes his present successful financial condition and his unusual general education to both the training of his mother and to the high ideals and Christian associations which he found in the Wilson and Starbuck families.

Elijah P. Stotler was first married to Sarah Elizabeth Brann on February 20, 1881. She was born on May 10, 1851, on the farm where Mr. Stotler now lives, and died here on April 26, 1911. She was the daughter of Tillman and Rebecca Brann, who were early settlers in Union township, Clinton county, having emigrated there from North Carolina. Mrs. Stotler inherited sixty-two acres of the Brann homestead and she and her husband settled on this at the time of their marriage; later Mr. Stotler purchased the remainder of the Brann estate, including the Brann dwelling and other buildings, and in 1900 he built a beautiful country home where he still lives. In 1896 his present large barn was built. He also owns ninety-eight acres at the corner of Richland, Wayne and Union townships. He is recognized as one of the most thorough and up-to-date farmers in the county, and his fine flock of Delaine sheep are unequalled anywhere.

After the death of his first wife in 1911, he remained a widower until on December 26, 1914, when he was married to Mrs. Rebecca (Atley) Reed. She was the daughter of John and Evaline Atley and was born near Starbuck, in Union township.

Mr. Stotler has but one child, a daughter by his first wife, whose name is Elvenia Prudence. She was born on February 19, 1893, and is the wife of Clifford Pond. They live on the farm with Mr. Stotler and help him farm. They have three children: William Denver, who was born on October 9, 1910; Mary Elizabeth, June 12, 1912, and Cleo Rebecca, April 22, 1914.

Elijah P. Stotler is one of Clinton county's most highly-respected citizens. He is a deacon in the New Antioch Christian church and has held the position of school director in his district for the last fifteen years. His life is an example to those who have to struggle and many times he has related the incidents of his career, which seemed almost unsurmountable obstacles. His vivid recollections of the incidents of the horrors of the Civil War are extremely realistic, although a lad of only twelve years. His mother's house was on the main pike which leads to Washington, D. C., and Stonewall Jackson's army marched down this road to take the Baltimore & Ohio train which ran from Winchester to Washington, D. C. His mother's house was used as a hospital and all her stock was shot for food, and he witnessed all of this.

ANDREW JACKSON PATE.

Andrew Jackson Pate, a prosperous farmer of Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, who was born in Stony township, Clermont county, Ohio, February 8, 1848, and is the son of Christopher and Matilda Jane (South) Pate, the former of whom was a native of North Carolina, born near New-Berne, and the latter a native of Stony township, Clermont county. His paternal grandparents died in North Carolina. His maternal grandparents, John and Elizabeth (Hill) South, were natives of Clermont county, Ohio. The latter was a daughter of Samuel Hill, a pioneer of Clermont county.

Christopher Pate received a limited education in the schools of North Carolina and came to Ohio at the age of nineteen years, in 1837. He located in Clermont county, where he was engaged in farming until his death. He and his wife reared a large family of children, consisting of nine sons and one daughter. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Andrew Jackson Pate received his education in Clermont county and took up farming in that county. He owned twenty-five acres in Clermont county until 1894, when he moved to a farm one mile west of Martinsville, where he lived for nine years. In 1903 he purchased ninety-seven acres of land in Clark township, where he now lives. Some time ago, Mr. Pate erected a substantial barn. He is engaged in general farming and has been successful.

On November 13, 1873, Andrew Jackson Pate was married to Amanda E. Ross, of Clermont county, the daughter of William Ross, a native of Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Pate have been the parents of two children, Blanche and Georgia, the latter of whom is deceased. Blanche is the wife of Rev. Russell C. Moon, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church at Lewisburg, Ohio.

While still living in Clermont county, Mr. Pate served as township trustee of Jackson township. He was formerly a member of the Free and Accepted Masons.

JOHN F. TRUITT.

John F. Truitt, a successful farmer of Clark township, was born on December 8, 1858, at New Vienna, Clinton county, Ohio, a son of Benjamin and Rebecca (Applegate) Truitt, both of whom were natives of this county.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Truitt were William Truitt and wife, natives of Maryland, who located near New Vienna, where they followed farming. The maternal grandparents were William and Hester (Moore) Applegate, the former of whom was a native of Pennsylvania. He located near Wilmington, about four miles east of that city and there engaged in farming. He died in Wilmington.

Benjamin Truitt received the rudiments of an education in the schools of Clinton county, and after leaving school engaged in farming in Green township. Later he removed to Union township, where he owned seventy acres of land. This farm was situated near Sligo, and it was here that he lived at the time of his death. Benjamin Truitt and his family were all earnest members of the Christian church. He reared a family of twelve children.

John F. Truitt received his education in the public schools of Clinton county, and has always been a farmer. He purchased the farm where he now lives in 1911, which consists of one hundred and forty-seven acres of fertile land, and here, besides carrying on general farming, Mr. Truitt has also engaged extensively in raising Poland China hogs, in which line he has been very successful.

On November 26, 1885, John F. Truitt was married to Susan Glass, a native of Clinton county, and a daughter of John and Catherine Glass; and to this union have been born six children, Ora Catherine, Louise Rebecca, Frank Wilson, Ada Glass, Robert William and Donald Eugene.

Mr. and Mrs. Truitt and family are all members of the Christian church. Mr. Truitt is a member of the Knights of the Maccabees.

CHARLES ADDISON HENRY.

Good farming means many things. Fundamentally, perhaps, it means that the largest possible revenue is being obtained from a given number of acres. But "the largest possible revenue" has a very broad meaning. In the first place it means the farmer must raise the greatest number of hogs, cattle, sheep and perhaps horses for which the soil will produce forage. There is distinctive advantage in raising purebred stock, as many farmers have completely demonstrated, and, furthermore, the care given to live stock will determine in a very great degree the volume of revenue to be obtained. Good farming of course means that crops will be rotated, that seed beds will be carefully prepared and corn, especially, frequently and well cultivated. In fact the aspects of good farming are almost innumerable. The fortunate thing is that a few young farmers, as for instance, Charles Addison Henry, of Union township, thoroughly appreciate what good farming involves. Not only does Mr. Henry appreciate what it involves, but he is one man who acts upon his information and knowledge. He is thoroughly up-to-date in his methods of farming and is far above the average in intelligence and skill.

Charles Addison Henry was born on January 22, 1870, near Gunnerville, in Greene county, Ohio, and is the son of the late William and Julia A. (Pidgeon) Henry, the former of whom was born near Harveysburg, in Warren county, Ohio, January 31, 1838, and died on September 10, 1906, and the latter of whom was born on May 27, 1838, in Guilford county, North Carolina, near High Point and fifteen miles from Greensboro, the daughter of Charles and Catherine (Horney) Pidgeon.

William Henry was the son of John and Catherine (Stump) Henry, the former of whom was born in the Shenandoah valley of Virginia, in 1798, and died in 1870, and the latter of whom was born in Frederick county, Virginia, in 1805, and died in 1887. John Henry came from Virginia to Ohio when a young man. His father was killed when John was a baby and John was reared by his aunt. He settled in Warren county, and owned a good farm near Harveysburg. In 1854 he purchased land in Union township, where he lived until his death. He and his wife were members of the Christian church and had a family of ten children, as follows: Daniel, of Wilmington; William, the father of Charles A.; Jonas and John, deceased; Tilby, the wife of William Fisher, of near Port William; Retta, deceased, who was the wife of Quince Harris; Libby, who died unmarried; Frances, who married James Fisher, of Wilmington; Reese, who died unmarried; Joshua, who was twice married and is deceased. William and Julia A. (Pidgeon) Henry were devout members of the Friends church. She is still living and active in church affairs. He was a well-known stock breeder. He was prominent in Democratic politics early in life, although he voted the Prohibition ticket in later years.

Mrs. Julia A. (Pidgeon) Henry, the mother of Charles Addison, is a native of Guilford county, North Carolina. Her father, Charles Pidgeon, Jr., was born on March 1, 1806, and died on July 26, 1898. Her mother, Catherine (Horney) Pidgeon, was born on September 23, 1810, and died on December 27, 1886. They were both natives of Stokes county, North Carolina. Isaac Pidgeon, the maternal great-great-grandfather of Charles Addison Henry, was a strict Quaker who came to America from Ireland in 1740 on account of religious persecution, and settled in Chowan county, North Carolina. His son, Charles Pidgeon, Sr., married Elizabeth Crews, November 11, 1789. She was a native of Virginia and died in the early forties. Her husband died in 1854. They had twelve children. Charles Pidgeon, Jr., and Catherine Horney were married on October 8, 1829, in North Carolina. Being northern sympathizers, at the outbreak of the Civil War, they immigrated to Ohio, arriving in Clinton county in the fall of 1861. They had twelve children: Emily, deceased, married John Briggs; Mary, married Wallace Mack, of Virginia; John, a Quaker minister of Orchard Grove, married Caroline Thompson; Hannah, married William Charles and both are deceased; Julia A., is Mr. Henry's mother; Samuel, is a school teacher and farmer at Jamestown, Ohio; David, is a resident of California; Jeffrey, died in infancy; Charles Addison, for whom the subject of this sketch was named, was a school teacher who died unmarried at the age of twenty-six; Henry, is a farmer of Union township; Cornelia, married Bruce Sprague, of Union township; Louisa, married Aden Starbuck.

Charles Addison Henry is one of three children born to his parents. The others were Junius Avery, born on December 29, 1871, who is a farmer in Union township and who married Augusta Fisher; and William A., born on November 9, 1876, who died on September 20, 1909.

Charles Addison Henry attended the district schools of Clinton county in Union township and later became a student at Wilmington College. He assisted his father on the farm until his marriage and was then engaged in farming his father's farm in Wilson township for two years. After that he removed to another of his father's farms near Haws Chapel in Union township and at his death he inherited that farm of one hundred and ten acres. Later he purchased one hundred and five acres out of the John T. Henry farm near the "Dutch" district school house in Union township. It is upon this farm that he now lives. Mr. Henry has a splendid new house and convenient outbuildings and makes a specialty of raising purebred Shorthorn cattle and sells them for breeding purposes. He also feeds a large number of cattle and hogs for the market.

On December 25, 1892, Charles Addison Henry was married to Marguerite Vandervort, who was born in Greene township, Clinton county, Ohio, the daughter of John M. and Mary Vandervort.

John M. Vandervort for many years was one of the leading nurserymen of Clinton county and owned a large farm and nursery at New Antioch, Green township. He died in 1914. His widow survives.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Addison Henry are the parents of three children: Guy Vandervort, born on December 2, 1893; Robert, April 26, 1896, and Pauline, August 26, 1898.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry belong to the Central Church of Christ of Wilmington. Mr. Henry is identified with the Democratic party.

JAMES G. WORRELL.

James G. Worrell is a successful farmer of Clark township, who was born in Gallia county, Ohio, in 1866, the son of Granville and Louisa (Hubbard) Worrell, both natives of the eastern part of West Virginia. His paternal grandparents lived and died in Virginia, his paternal grandfather being James Worrell. His maternal grandfather, Samuel Hubbard, was a native of Mercer county, West Virginia, where he lived and died.

Granville Worrell was educated in the pioneer subscription schools of Carroll county, West Virginia, and was married in that county. After his marriage, he moved to Gallia county, Ohio, during the Civil War, living there until about 1870, when he returned to West Virginia and settled on the Kanawha river. He lived along the river for several years and died in Nicholas county, West Virginia, as did also his wife. Having been drafted as a soldier in the Confederate army, he later deserted the Confederate cause and, after immigrating to Ohio, enlisted in an Ohio regiment of the Union army, serving until the close of the war. He was a drummer in his regiment and considered a good musician. In all of his services he was not wounded nor taken prisoner. Granville and Louisa Worrell were the parents of twelve children. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Educated in the schools of West Virginia, James G. Worrell began life for himself at the age of seventeen years and at that time immigrated to Farmers Station, Clinton county, where he worked by the month from the time he was seventeen until he was twenty-nine. Upon reaching the age of twenty-nine, he began renting land. In the fall of 1901, Mr. Worrell purchased a farm of ninety-five acres, seventy in the tract where he now lives and twenty-five nearby. Later, however, he sold the twenty-five acres and in 1915 bought twenty-nine acres near his home farm of seventy acres. He is engaged in general farming and stock raising.

On November 9, 1894, James G. Worrell was married to Eva Speaight, a native of Washington township and the daughter of George W. and Nancy Ellen (Borning) Speaight, both natives of this section.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Worrell were George and Polly Speaight, probably natives of Virginia and early settlers of this section. They were extensive landowners. Her maternal grandparents were William and Sarah Borning, who lived near New Antioch. Mrs. Worrell's father left the old home farm eight years before his death and moved to Grant county, Indiana, where he and his wife lived for some time. They had nine children, eight of whom grew to maturity. They were members of the Baptist church.

To Mr. and Mrs. James G. Worrell has been born one child, Florena. Mr. and Mrs. Worrell are active members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

FRANK W. HAWORTH.

The Haworth family in Clinton county dates from about the last year of the eighteenth century and for more than one hundred years, therefore, has been prominent in amost every phase of life in this county. Frank W. Haworth, a well-to-do farmer of Union township, is a representative probably of the fifth generation of the family in this county. He is recognized today as one of the leading citizens of Union township, and is a capable and skillful farmer. The founders of the Haworth family in America were members of the Society of Friends, who accompanied William Penn to this country, and the religion of the fathers has prevailed down to the latest generation.

Frank W. Haworth was born on the farm where he now lives, situated on the Prairie road in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, May 6, 1864, the son of George D., Jr., and Rebecca L. (Hogue) Haworth, the former of whom was born on April 19, 1828, in Wilmington, and who died on April 19, 1895, and the latter of whom was born in 1832, in the Dover neighborhood of Union township, and who died on May 15, 1903.

George Haworth, who established the Haworth family in Clinton county, was the grandson of another George Haworth, who came to America with William Penn from Lancashire, England, in 1699. George Haworth's father was James Haworth, the son of the first George, a native of Pennsylvania, but who removed to Frederick county, Virginia, where the second George also removed as a lad. He was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in 1748. He married Susannah Dillon. The family settled near Winchester, Virginia. Later they immigrated to the region of the Yadkin river, in North Carolina, near the home of Daniel Boone. On September 25, 1771, the family followed Boone into Kentucky. The first attempt to settle in Kentucky was repelled by the Indians, after which a temporary settlement was made in Tennessee. After numerous excursions to North Carolina from Greenville, Tennessee, they left their home in that state for Ohio, in 1803, and made a settlement on Todd's fork not far from the Center meeting house. Mr. Haworth bought seventeen hundred and fifty acres of land. A year later his son, Mahlon, brought his family from Tennessee and settled on a nearby farm. After some years several members of the family immigrated to the state of Illinois and George Haworth himself sold out and removed with his two youngest sons to Quaker Point, near Georgetown, in Vermillion county. George Haworth was a member of the Society of Friends and in later years a minister. About 1807, or 1808, he traveled on horseback to Baltimore to attend the yearly meeting as a representative from the Miami quarterly meeting.

In 1800 Mahlon Haworth, the son of George Haworth, who settled on Todd's fork in 1803, visited Ohio on a prospecting tour and in 1804 he and his family, in company with John and James Wright and their families, made their way northward from Tennessee to the wilderness of southern Ohio. On the trip northward Mahlon Haworth rode the wheelhorse, carrying an infant in his arms. This child, then two years old, was his daughter, Susannah. There were also three other children older than she, Rebecca, George D. and Ezekiel.

George D. Haworth, the son of Mahlon Haworth, was the grandfather of Frank W., the subject of this sketch. His mother was Phebe Frazier. At the time the family came to Ohio he was seven years old, having been born in Greene county, Tennessee, May 29, 1797. He died in Wilmington on June 27, 1881, at the age of eighty-four years and twenty-nine days. His early years were spent in assisting his father in the forest to open the land for cultivation. In 1815 he accompanied his grandfather, the first George, to Detroit to collect for a drove of hogs which he had sold in 1811. In 1817 George D. Haworth was married to Edith Hadley, the daughter of James and Ann Hadley of Newberry, Clinton county. They settled on a farm adjoining his father's on the east. In 1822 he was elected collector of state revenue and county levy and for the first year received for his compensation fifty-four dollars. The next year he received seventy dollars. He continued in the discharge of the duties of this office for a period of twenty years. In 1824 he sold his farm and settled in Wilmington, where he entered into partnership with a Mr. Fife under the firm name of Fife & Haworth. Later he entered into business on his own responsibility. He took great delight in raising cattle and was the first to import into the county the Shorthorn cattle, about 1835. For some time he was in partnership with Isaiah Morris in buying and selling land. His devoted wife died in April, 1851, and in 1858 he was married to Sarah Clark of Richmond, Indiana, the daughter of Samuel Stubbs, an early pioneer from the state of Georgia.

George D. and Edith (Hadley) Haworth had eight children, the three eldest of whom died in early childhood: Mary married Samuel R. Glass; Caroline E. married Robert D. Harland; George D., Jr., was the father of Frank W.; James Mahlon was a government inspector of Indian affairs; and Edith Emma married Laming R. Moody, of Wilmington. George D. Haworth survived his second wife but two days. After four days' illness he died on June 29, 1881. His remains were laid at rest in the Dover cemetery.

George D. Haworth, Jr., grew up in Wilmington, but early in life immigrated to Ft. Scott, Kansas, where he made a great deal of money in trading with the Osage Indians. He inherited a part of the farm where his son, Frank W., now lives in Union township and added more to it until he owned one hundred and sixty acres. In 1874 he built a fine brick house on his place in which his son now lives. His wife, Rebecca L. Hogue, was the daughter of Asa Hogue, who came with his parents from Virginia to Clinton county in early days. Asa Hogue became a merchant in Wilmington and in 1846 operated a large store at the corner of Locust and South streets, where the Citizens National Bank is now situated. All of the members of his family were Quakers and he was the head of the Wilmington meeting for many years. His wife died when their daughter, Rebecca L. Hogue, was only one week old, and he never remarried. Rebecca

L. (Hogue) Haworth had one sister who died when small, but she was the only child who grew to maturity. George D. Haworth, Jr., was a prominent Republican in Clinton county and served as commissioner for some time, filling the office with rare credit and efficiency. He also was township trustee of Union township. Both he and his wife were elders in the Wilmington meeting of the Friends church and strict in their religious belief. He was a very successful farmer and made great progress with Poland China hogs. George D., Jr., and Rebecca L. (Hogue) Haworth had four children, of whom Frank W. was the third born. The others were: Laura, who married J. W. Sparks, a banker and merchant of Wilmington; James B., who is state agent for a plow company at Des Moines, Iowa; and George D., who is proprietor of Sparks Hardware Company, of Wilmington.

Frank W. Haworth grew up on his father's farm in Union township and after his father's death purchased the home place, where he now lives.

Frank W. Haworth was married on April 28, 1898, to Emma Curl, a native of Union township, the daughter of Anthony and Mary Curl, both of whom are deceased. To this marriage three children have been born: Louise, born on October 30, 1899, is attending high school; Ruth Olive, February 18, 1900; and Helen, March 8, 1903. Mrs. Haworth died on April 25, 1912.

Frank W. Haworth is not only a prosperous farmer, but he is a well-known citizen. He and his family belong to the Friends church. His wife was also a member. He is a Republican, and is deeply interested in the educational progress of his county. Mr. Haworth is a worthy descendant of those noble men who had so much to do with the early development of this county.

ALBERT OGLESBEE.

Having resided in this county since he was twelve years of age, the well-known Union township farmer whose name is above noted has witnessed a marvelous development of the community in which he settled shortly after the Civil War. Industrious and progressive, Mr. Oglesbee has prospered in his farming operations and is accounted one of the substantial men of the Haws Chapel neighborhood, where he is held in the highest esteem, he and his widowed mother living quietly and comfortably on the old home farm, enjoying the respect and regard of the entire community.

Albert Oglesbee was born in Caesar Creek township, Greene county, Ohio, on August 16, 1860, son of Nelson and Maria (Powers) Oglesbee, both natives of Greene county, the former of whom was born in December, 1832, and died on November 25, 1903, and the latter of whom was born on November 22, 1840, and is still living.

Nelson Oglesbee was the son of Isaiah and Rachel (Devoe) Oglesbee, natives of Frederick county, Virginia, the former of whom was born on May 14, 1795, and the latter of whom was born on December 18, 1797, who married about the year 1820 and immigrated to Ohio, locating in Caesar Creek township, in Green county, where they entered a considerable tract of land from the government, out of which they created a valuable farm, on which the remainder of their lives were spent. Isaiah Oglesbee and his wife were Methodists and became influential in the affairs of the pioneer community in which they settled. They were the parents of eleven or twelve children. It was on this pioneer farm that Nelson Oglesbee was born and there he was reared. As a young man he became a carpenter and some of the buildings still standing in the Caesar Creek neighborhood display the substantial character of his handiwork. He inherited a portion of the old home farm and at the time of his marriage, in 1858, bought the interests of the other heirs and remained on the paternal acres until 1872, in which year he sold the farm and bought a farm of eighty acres on the Prairie road in the Haws Chapel neighborhood in Union township, this county, where the rest of his life was spent and where his widow and son still live. In 1874 he remodeled the house which stood on this farm and in 1891 built the present substantial barn. Nelson Oglesbee and his wife took an active interest in the affairs of the Haws Chapel Methodist church, of which they were members, and were also active in the general affairs of the community, Mr. Oglesbee for some time serving as school director in his district.

On December 2, 1858, Nelson Oglesbee was united in marriage to Maria Powers, daughter of Edward B. and Keziah (Beeson) Powers, both natives of Greene county, the former of whom lived until the year 1893. Edward B. Powers, whose father, a native of Ireland, was one of the earliest settlers of Greene county, was a farmer and carpenter and built many of the houses and barns that were erected in his community in pioneer days. He and his wife were the parents of five children, four sons and one daughter, of whom two are still living. Hiram Powers, who lives at Union City, Indiana, and Mrs. Oglesbee, mother of the immediate subject of this sketch.

To Nelson and Maria (Powers) Oglesbee were born three children, of whom the subject of this sketch is the eldest, the others being Ella R., born on June 11, 1864, widow of Frank J. Pendry, who lives in Wilmington, this county, and Edward E., August 4, 1870, who owns a feed store at Dayton, Ohio.

Albert Oglesbee was twelve years of age when his parents moved to this county and he completed his education in the old "Dutch" district school in Union township. Being the eldest child in the family, he early took an active part in the management of the home farm and upon his father's death remained on the place, making a comfortable home for his mother, to whom he is devoted. He is a quiet, unassuming man, but is doing well his part in life and enjoys the confidence and respect of all his neighbors.

CHARLES M. BOSWORTH.

The late Charles M. Bosworth was one of the most prominent men in Clinton county for the half century preceding his death in 1888. Born in Columbia county, New York, September 9, 1819, he came to Clinton county, Ohio, with his parents when he was three years old. The remaining sixty-six years of his eventful life were spent in this county and during this long period he became the leader in its financial life. He was educated in the public schools of Wilmington and early in life started in the mercantile business which eventually made him one of the wealthiest men in the county.

Starting in life as a poor boy, without influential friends to help him, he first became a grocer's clerk and with painstaking attention to the business he gradually worked into a business of his own. But it was only by incessant struggling for years, with unfaltering patience, energy and industry, that he arrived at a position where he could display his talents to the best advantage. While still a young man, his father died and the care of his mother and sisters was thrown upon his shoulders, but manfully, kindly and cheerfully he performed every office of love and duty toward them.

After many years of close attention to his mercantile interests, he was in a position to become identified with the banking business in Wilmington when a favorable opportunity presented itself in 1864. Upon the death of William C. Fife in December, 1863, he was persuaded by his friends to engage in the banking business himself. With his native talent and his reputation for honesty and fair dealing acquired through his many years of business transactions, it was evident that he would make a success of banking. On June 1, 1864, the First National Bank of Wilmington opened for business with Mr. Bosworth as president, and from that day until his death in 1888 he remained at its head. He gave to the business that careful attention which had characterized him in all of his private affairs, and the result was that the bank enjoyed the confidence of the people of the community from the beginning.

As president of the bank he came in contact with the whole business community and those who had dealings with him testified with one accord to his clearness of head, as well as his kindness of heart. While he was first of all a business man, yet no one ever came to him in financial difficulty who did not receive valuable and kindly advice, as well as material aid so far as he was able, in his situation, to grant it. Mr. Bosworth was no ordinary man; his mind was clear and far-reaching and capable of conducting great enterprises. In fact, he would have made a success in any calling to which he might have turned his attention.

No man of the county gave more freely of his means to the poor and his closest friends knew that he found a rare sense of pleasure in being able to relieve the distress of any suffering family. These acts of kindness were not known to the world at large, for his quiet and unobtrusive disposition enabled him to dispense favors without the one hand knowing what the other did.

But with all his attention to business, Mr. Bosworth was essentially a man of simple domestic tastes. He was married on November 24, 1852, to Virginia Lang, and to this union was born one son, Charles A. Mr. Bosworth died on October 11, 1888, and his wife survived him until January 25, 1905. Mr. Bosworth did his life work well and in such a manner that he was gathered to his fathers without a stain on his name.

Charles A. Bosworth, the only son of Charles M. and Virginia Bosworth, was born in Wilmington on September 16, 1853. He was educated in the public schools of his home town and later graduated from the University of Michigan with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in the class of 1877, and from the Cincinnati Law School in the class of 1880.

He was elected President of the First National Bank of Wilmington, Ohio, after his father's death in 1888, which position he filled until he moved to Cincinnati, Ohio, September 1, 1890, and engaged in the practice of the law, under the firm name of Foraker, Black & Bosworth, until he was appointed United States assistant treasurer, October 1, 1898, which position he held until June 1, 1911.

After he and his wife had taken a trip around the world, he was elected president, in July, 1912, of the Second National Bank of Cincinnati, Ohio, which position he now holds.

He was married April 24, 1884, to Jessie W. Clark, of Cincinnati, Ohio. They have two sons, Charles W. and Erwin P., who are both married.

FREDERICK D. MITCHELL.

Frederick D. Mitchell, a farmer of Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, was born in Union township, April 6, 1858. He is a son of Franklin Mitchell and Sarah (Whinery) Mitchell. He went to the Center district school, and entered Wilmington College, where he remained four years. His father died when he was twenty-six years of age, and upon him fell the task of settling up the estate, which included some four hundred and twenty-one acres of land, and of which he had been the manager for his father. He divided up the estate and continued to live on the home place until 1910, when he bought the Whinery homestead, to which he moved, and where he still lives. Mr. Mitchell now owns four hundred and thirty acres in Union township, and also owns some valuable land in Warren county, Ohio. In addition, Mr. Mitchell has the management of a farm of two hundred acres for his sister Harriet. He is very much interested in the subject of stock-raising, and feeds a great many hogs and cattle each year. He is treasurer of the Clinton Mutual Insurance Company. Mr. Mitchell is a Republican. He is unmarried.

Franklin Mitchell was born on Nantucket Island, December 24, 1812, and died on September 20, 1884. Sarah Whinery was born in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, on Dutch creek, June 15, 1818. She died on July 2, 1905. The former was a young boy when the family came to Cincinnati, where he grew to manhood, and after the death of his father, Jethro Mitchell, he and his brother Roland continued the business of manufacturing soap and candles, managing in addition to this a general store, as well as being engaged in the pork packing business. Franklin Mitchell first became engaged in the manufacture of soap and candles in Philadelphia, in 1850. Here he went into the business with his brother-in-law, Samuel Richie, for a time, and later formed a partnership with David Swaim, an old friend from Nantucket. Mr. Mitchell was in Philadelphia four years, during which time he became rich and retired from business. He sold out in 1854, and came to Clinton county, Ohio, where he bought the Nathaniel Carpenter farm of one hundred and seventeen acres, near Center meeting house, in Union township. After an active commercial business life, he enjoyed the quiet of the farm, which he continued to manage until he died. He was twice married. His first wife was Sarah Richie, to whom he was married on November 13, 1840. She died in 1845, and on September 16, 1847, he was united in marriage with Sarah Whinery. He was an expert mathematician, and was noted for his accuracy in bookkeeping. To Franklin Mitchell and his first wife, Sarah Richie, were born the following children: Hannah D., born on July 24, 1842, who became the wife of Jehu Moore, lived in New York City, and she died September 10, 1899; Robert R., July 18, 1844, lives at Sulphur, Oklahoma, where he is a farmer, as well as a dealer in real estate, was a soldier in the Civil War. By his second wife, Mr. Mitchell had four children, as follow: Emeline, born on July 18, 1848, and died December 1, 1911; Hattie, May 4, 1850, lives with the subject of this sketch; Benjamin F., July 7, 1855, was married to Mary E. Babb, and they lived in Chester township, his wife died August 17, 1909, he married, secondly, Mrs. Ida Miars, the widow of Ephraim Miars; and Frederick D., April 6, 1858.

The paternal grandparents were Jethro Mitchell, who died in 1832, and Mercy (Greene) Mitchell. The latter died January 1, 1859. She was a descendant of General Greene, of the Revolutionary army. The former was born on Nantucket Island, off the Massachusetts coast. He owned a fleet of whaling vessels, and also became a manufacturer of soap and candles in New York City, coming later to Cincinnati, where he continued in the same line of business, and where his life was cut short in a tragic manner. He was killed almost instantly by a fall through a hatchway, which had been left open, in his factory. He and his wife were orthodox Quakers. Mr. Gambel, of Proctor & Gambel, the great soap manufacturers, learned the business under Jethro Mitchell. The children born to Jethro Mitchell and his wife were as follow: Henry, born on August 11, 1806; Rachel, March 19, 1808, became the wife of C. M. Searles, and they lived in Cincinnati, Ohio; Mary, 1809, died in 1827; Roland G., January 2, 1811, was a manufacturer of oils in New York City, and became a millionaire; Franklin, father of the subject of this biography; Sarah died unmarried; Elizabeth died in infancy; Jethro, 1818, was united in marriage with Martha Hart, and became engaged in the lumber business in Cincinnati and was also a millionaire; Eliza married Sidney Snowden, and lived in Cincinnati; Walter married Mary E. Evans, became a Presbyterian preacher, and died on January 18, 1909; Thomas G., 1822, married Martha E. Coffin, was an attorney of Cincinnati; Mary became the wife of John Huntington, and lived in Cincinnati.

The maternal grandparents were Thomas and Ruth (Miller) Whinery, both of whom were born in Easton, Pennsylvania. About 1805 they settled in what is now Union township, the former dying on August 12, 1856, aged seventy-six years, in Clinton county, Ohio, where he owned one hundred and seventy-five acres of land. They were Quakers and were real pioneers. After the death of his first wife, Mr. Whinery married Elizabeth Hoddy, a Friend. He was a man of fine physique and was noted for his strength. They had nine children.

The first record of the Mitchell family is of James Mitchell in England. His descendant, Jethro Mitchell, settled in Nova Scotia. He followed the sea, and became wealthy. He and his brothers owned a fleet of vessels, plying between Boston and South America. One of the vessels was the "Minerva," and another the "Arctic." These were captured by the French, during the Napoleonic Wars, on the supposition that they were English. The United States congress paid the claim for indemnity in 1901, one hundred years later.

CARY W. BOYLAND.

Agriculture has been the true source of man's dominion over earth since man began to toil with his hands, and it has been the pivotal industry that has controlled for the most part all the fields of action to which man's intelligence and energy have been devoted. One of the sturdy farmers of Clinton county, whose labors have profited alike himself and the community in which he lives, is Cary W. Boyland, who lives on a farm of one hundred and two acres near Burtonville, in Union township; with a beautiful house, outbuildings and grounds on the pike at the crest of the hill just north of the village. In view of the consistent and honorable life of Mr. Boyland, most of which has been passed within the borders of Clinton county, it is particularly fitting that the following short account of his career be included in this volume.

Cary W. Boyland was born on September 16, 1860, in Highland county, Ohio, in Dotson township. He is the son of Bart and Sarah Frances (Wilkins) Boyland, the former of whom was a native of Highland county, born in 1841, and who died in 1904, and the latter of whom was also a native of Highland county, born in 1843, and still living in Burtonville.

The paternal grandfather of Mr. Boyland was Patrick Boyland, a native of Ireland, who emigrated from Ireland to America when a young man, and who married in Highland county, Ohio, a native of this state. He was a farmer and reared a family of seven children. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Boyland were Peter and Nancy Wilkins, the former of whom was a native of Pennsylvania, and the latter of Virginia. They came with their parents in early days to Highland county and engaged in farming, after reaching mature life. He was of Pennsylvania-Dutch descent. They had three children.

Bart Boyland grew to maturity in Highland county, Ohio, and during his early manhood learned the stonemason's trade. He purchased the interests of the heirs in the home farm and later sold the farm and moved to Hillsboro, Ohio, where he worked at his trade. Later he moved to Bainbridge, Ohio, and subsequently to Lynchburg. In 1890 he moved to Wilmington, where he lived until his death. In the meantime, he had become an extensive stone and brick building contractor, and a great deal of his stone work is to be seen in Wilmington today. Early in life he had been identified with the Democratic party, but in later years became a Republican. His wife is still living in Burtonville and is a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal church. They had four children, of whom Cary W., the subject of this sketch, is the only one surviving and the only one who grew to maturity. Anna, George and Mary died early in life.

Cary W. Boyland, during his boyhood, was a pupil in the public schools of Lynchburg and Hillsboro, Ohio, but at that time of life he did not recognize the advantages of an education, or the additional grasp it gives one upon the affairs of life, and quit school to work on the farm. Later, however, he regretted that he had not taken advantage of his educational opportunities. It must be admitted, however, that Mr. Boyland has made a very satisfactory progress as a farmer. For eleven years after his marriage he rented a farm from his father-in-law, John Skimming. In the spring of 1906 he purchased the old John Pond farm of one hundred and two acres near Burtonville, in Union township. A short time later he remodeled the house, and now has a beautiful country home just north of the village of Burtonville. He carries on general farming and stock raising and has been very successful.

Cary W. Boyland was married on December 28, 1895, to Jennie L. Skimming, a native of Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio, and the daughter of John and Lucinda (Hardesty) Skimming, the former of whom was the son of Anthony and Mary (McDow) Skimming, and was born in Allegheny county, Maryland, on January 12, 1832, and the latter of whom was an orphan child of Hezekiah and Sarah Hardesty, born in Union township on March 21, 1842. John and Lucinda (Hardesty) Skimming were married on February 18, 1864. They had two daughters: Mary E., born on May 2, 1865, and Jennie, December 15, 1872. The latter is now Mrs. Boyland. John Skimming, who was brought by his parents to Clinton county, Ohio, when four years old, was engaged in farming all of his life. He made a specialty of raising Poland-China hogs. All the members of the Skimming family were identified with the Christian church. In politics Mr. Skimming was a stanch Democrat.

Mrs. Boyland's grandparents, Anthony and Mary (McDow) Skimming, were natives of Scotland, born near Edinboro, and immigrated to the United States in 1818, settling in Allegheny county, Maryland, where they lived until the fall of 1836, when they came to Wilmington. Three years later they moved to Washington township, where they died, the former on April 22, 1855, and the latter on April 16, of the same year.

Mr. and Mrs. Cary W. Boyland have had one child, Mary Louise, born on August 27, 1901. She is attending the Wilmington high school and is considered a brilliant student.

Elected as a Republican, Mr. Boyland served as trustee of Washington township for seven years. The Boyland family are members of the Central Christian church of Wilmington and are prominent in the affairs of this congregation.

W. H. DAKIN.

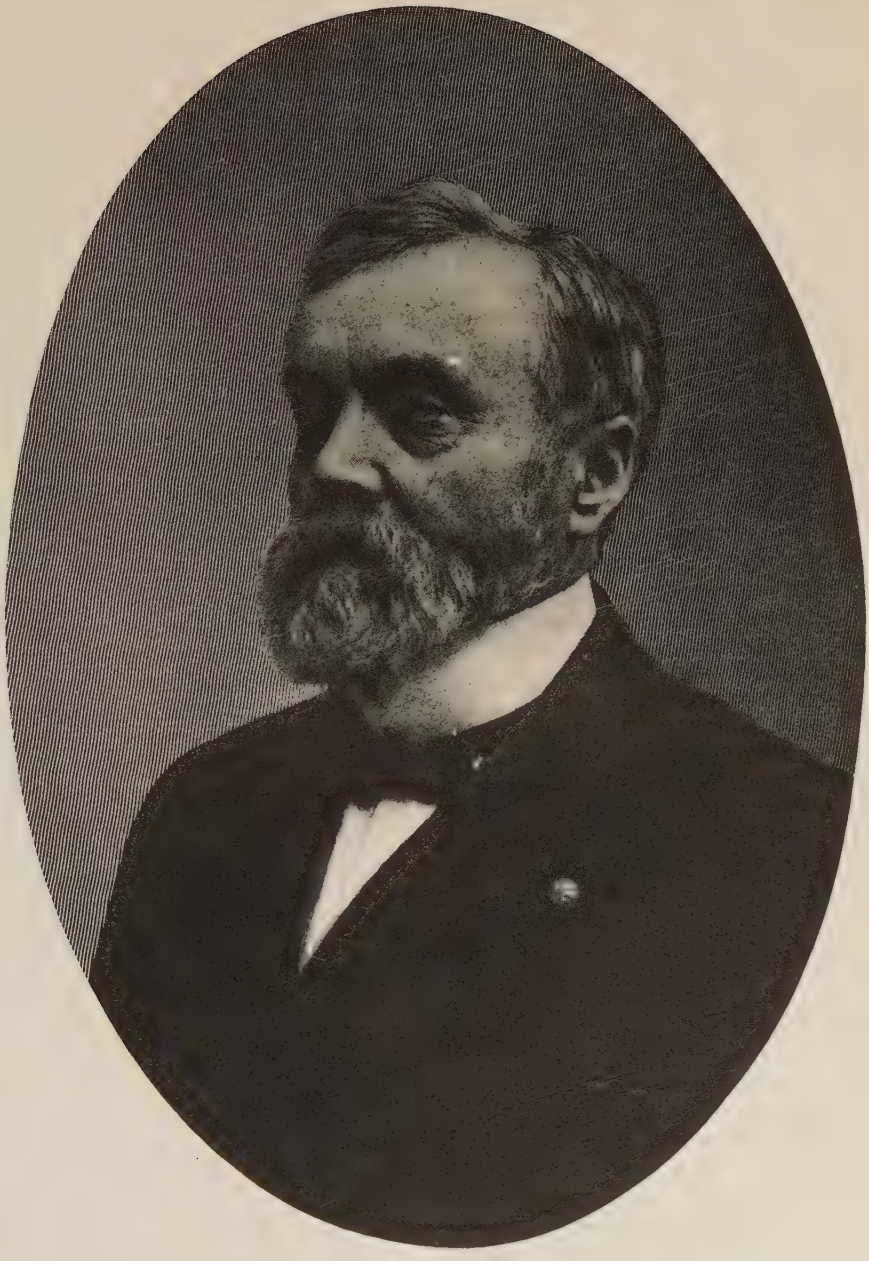
A lawyer by profession and mayor of Sabina, Ohio, W. H. Dakin is one of the best-known citizens of Richland township.

W. H. Dakin was born near Oakland, Chester township, Clinton county, on November 8, 1841. He is the son of O. H. P. and Margaret (Curtis) Dakin, the former of whom died on Jannary 24, 1858, and the latter of whom, the daughter of William Custis, died on January 17, 1870.

The paternal grandfather was Preserved Dakin, a native of New York state, who in 1806 came to Ohio and entered two thousand acres of land near Oakland in Chester township, Clinton county, where he lived the remainder of his life. In coming to Ohio from New York state, he brought with him his family, who, after arriving at Pittsburgh, floated down the Ohio river in a flat-boat. Preserved Dakin was a member of the Society of Friends, and was twice married. He was the father of six children, Desdemonia, Preserved, Jr.; Decator, Albert, Allen and O. H. P., all of whom are deceased.

The youngest of six children, O. H. P. Dakin, received a good common school education and for some years was a teacher in the public schools. For a time he lived on fifty acres of land near Oakland which he inherited from his father. This he sold and bought fifty acres near Sabina, but later sold out and removed to what is known as Dakin chapel, where he had one hundred and twenty-five acres of land. He taught school in that community for a number of years, and, in the meantime, presented to the church two acres of ground upon which a church was built. He also served as the local minister for ten years, justice of the peace for six years and as clerk of Richland township for a time. He voted the Republican ticket. O. H. P. Dakin owned a general supply store at Sabina for four years. Before the organization of the Republican party, he had been identified with the American or Know-Nothing Party.

Seven children were born to O. H. P. and Margaret (Custis) Dakin. The eldest, an infant, died at birth; William H., is the subject of this sketch. The others were



W. H. DAKIN.

Miles Milton, L. C. (deceased), Robert M., A. Brusler, and S. Webster. Of these children, L. C. married Susan Beard, by whom he had three children, as follow: Florence, Parry, a Methodist missionary; and Nina, who married Dr. James A. Park, a physician of Columbus, Ohio. Miles Milton married Ella Kelso and by her had two children, namely: W. C., who is a steel worker at Middletown, Ohio; and Homer, who is an electrician employed by the Western Union Telegraph Company at Chicago. Robert, who married Nellie Thompson. They have two children, Glen and Myrtle, and live in Columbus, Ohio. A. Brusler is a resident of Washington, C. H., Ohio. He married Martha Dice. They have seven children, namely: Minnie, Ida, William, Harry, Elizabeth, Eveline and Clarence. S. Webster is an attorney at Yellow Springs, Ohio. He married Josephine Huffman. They have had five children, as follow: Bessie, who married O. C. Wyke, a newspaper man of the state of Georgia; Georgie A.; Dora, who married John White, of New Richmond, Ohio; Susie T., who married Harry Littleton, of Sabina, and Frances.

W. H. Dakin obtained his education in the public schools of Clinton county and at the Lebanon normal school, which he attended for two years. At the outbreak of the Civil War, Mr. Dakin joined the Union army, enlisting in Company G, Seventy-ninth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, in which he served three years, participating, among others, in the battles of Chickamauga, Dalton, Maryette (Georgia), Peach Tree Creek, Smithfield Creek, Goldsburrow (North Carolina), etc. During his entire service, he never missed a battle in which his company and regiment were engaged. After the war, Mr. Dakin taught school for a time.

On February 11, 1874, about the time he was admitted to practice law, Mr. Dakin was married to Mary Elizabeth Theobald, a native of Sabina, Ohio, born December 1, 1848, and the daughter of Jacob and Lause (Bendell) Theobald. Mrs. Dakin's father was born in the Kingdom of Bavaria, July 26, 1818, and was nineteen years old when he came to America in 1837. He died on June 16, 1894. His wife, Lause (Bendel), was born in the Kingdom of Wittenberg, Germany, August 4, 1828, and died on February 8, 1912. She was eleven years old when she came to America, where she met her husband. They were married in Sabina, Ohio, in 1847. Jacob Theobald was the first of the Theobald family to come to America. His voyage to this country occupied six weeks on the ocean. Jacob Theobald owned a dry-goods store at Sabina as early as 1841; he also was a partner of Richard Curtis in the banking business. He was a self-made man in every respect. For about twelve and one-half years, he was a railroad agent at Sabina; he also served as postmaster for fifteen years. During his life, he was actively interested in the grain business. Jacob Theobald and wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal church. He voted the Democratic ticket, and was elected the first mayor of Sabina, as a Democrat. They had three children, Mary Elizabeth, Johanna F., and Emma L. Of these children, Mary Elizabeth is the wife of Mr. Dakin.

After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Dakin lived in Missouri for five years, where Mr. Dakin was engaged in business at Sedalia.

Four children have been born to W. H. Dakin and wife, Mabel Emma, Bertha Ines, Theobald O., and Walter H, Of these children. Mabel Emma was born on March 12, 1875, and died on May 4, 1904, unmarried; Bertha, November 22, 1877, and died on June 22, 1899; Theobald O., June 26, 1879. He is engaged in the insurance business and also owns a farm and is a graduate of Wilmington college, studied law at Cleveland and was admitted to the bar. He is a veteran of the Spanish-American War and is unmarried. Walter H. was born December 8, 1883, and died March 11, 1910. The mother of these children, during her youth, was educated in the Ohio Female College at Xenia. Both Mr. and Mrs. Dakin are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Dakin is a Republican, and has served six years as justice of the peace. He served as mayor of Sabina between 1881 and 1884, and, in 1911, was elected again to the same office. Fraternally, he is a member of the Masonic lodge and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Grand Army of the Republic, David Giffin Post No. 286, and was once commander and for years has been adjutant.

EDWARD MIARS HACKNEY.

Among the successful farmers of Union township, now in the prime of life and usefulness, is Edward Miars Hackney, who was born on April 22, 1877, in Union township, Clinton county, the son of Oscar M. and Judith (Haines) Hackney. Mr. Hackney's father was born in Chester township, Clinton county, April 14, 1852, and died on January 3, 1889. His mother was born on January 29, 1848, in Union township. They had three children, of whom Edward Miars was the eldest. Of the other children, Hattie married Clinton Sherman, and Wilbur H., who is unmarried, lives with his brother, Edward. After her husband's death Mrs. Hackney was married to George Williams, and they are now in Dayton, Ohio, where he is a real estate dealer.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Hackney were Bon and Mary (McKay) Hackney, the former of whom was an early settler in Clinton county, Ohio, and lived in Chester township, where he owned one hundred acres of land. His wife was a native of Clinton county. They belonged to Jones Run Baptist church and lived to rear a family of seven children. He died at the age of seventy-four, and she at the age of forty-four.

The maternal grandparents of Mr. Hackney were Joshua and Jane (Miars) Haines, the latter of whom was a native of Virginia and the daughter of Martin and Jane (Summers) Miars, who, in 1811, came by wagon from Virginia and settled on a farm, where Edward Hackney now lives, comprising one hundred and four acres. At that time it was all virgin timber-land. They built a log cabin and lived on the farm until death. Jane (Miars) Haines was one year old when she came with her parents to Clinton county, Ohio. She died in 1884 at the age of seventy-four. Joshua Haines was a native of Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, who was born in 1811, and died on September 10, 1875. He was the son of Jacob and Mary (Leonard) Haines, the former of whom was born in Pennsylvania on February 19, 1778, and when quite young removed with his parents to Guilford county, North Carolina. In 1800 he was married to Mary Leonard, and three years later emigrated to Ohio, remaining at Waynesville a short time, after which he came to Union township, in the spring of 1804. His family then consisted of his wife, Mary, and one child. Here he resided until his death on June 17, 1854. Jacob and Mary (Leonard) Haines had seven children. They had fifty cents and an ax when they settled in Clinton county, and owned at the time of their death seven hundred acres of land. Joshua Haines was given a farm by his father, Jacob, and added to his farm until he had at the time of his death three hundred acres of land. Joshua and Jane (Miars) Haines had five children, three of whom, Martin, Mary and Hannah, are deceased. Mary married James Williams, and Hannah married Edward Williams. Of the living children, Rebecca married Reese Oglesby, of Union township, and Judith is the mother of Mr. Hackney.

Oscar M. Hackney, father of Edward Miars, grew up on a farm and was married and lived on his wife's farm for a time, until 1880, when he purchased one hundred and four acres of the Miars farm. Later he remodeled the house. He was an ardent member of the Republican party. His family belonged to the Methodist Episcopal church.

Edward Miars Hackney was three years old when his parents moved to the farm where he now lives. He has made it his home ever since. He attended district school No. 11 in Union township, and after he grew to manhood his mother gave the home farm to her three children. Later Edward Miars purchased seventy-six acres out of the John Ballard farm adjoining, and now operates it also. He keeps a herd of Jersey cattle, including twenty milch cows, and sells the milk at wholesale.

On March 8, 1899, Edward Miars Hackney was married to Rosa B. Matson, who was born at Palestine, Illinois, the daughter of Daniel and Ann Matson, the latter of whom is deceased, the former living on a farm in Union township. Mr. and Mrs. Hackney are the parents of four children: Raymond, born in March, 1902; Wilford, March 17, 1905; Maynard, June 2, 1910; and Oscar, August 14, 1913.

Mr. Hackney is a Republican and has served as a school director; also as road superintendent. He is a man of considerable influence in local politics and is popular with his neighbors and well liked by the people of Union township.

JACOB NEWTON COLVIN.

Among the residents in the prosperous farming region in the neighborhood of Lynchburg, in Clark township, this county, few are better known or held in higher esteem among his neighbors than Jacob Newton Colvin, a member of one of the county's oldest families.

Jacob Newton Colvin was born on a farm in Green township, Clinton county, Ohio, April 22, 1854, son of William and Mary (Conner) Colvin, the former of whom was a native of Kentucky and the latter a native of Maryland. William Colvin came to this county as a boy, his father, Henry Colvin, emigrating from Kentucky with his family, locating in Washington township, where he spent the rest of his life. Henry Colvin was a small farmer, owning but fifty acres, which he cleared from the forest wilderness and made into a habitable place. On this small farm William Colvin grew to manhood, later locating in Green township, where his family was reared. He married Mary Conner, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Robnett) Conner, both natives of Maryland, who came to this county at an early day and located in Washington township, being among the earliest settlers of that section of the county. Jacob Conner owned a farm of eighty acres, a corner of which he gave as a site for Bethel church, upon the organization of that church, the church still standing on the spot donated by him. Late in life Jacob Conner moved to the village of New Antioch, where his last days were spent.

William Colvin became one of Green township's best-known farmers and ever displayed a lively interest in the affairs of his home community. He and his wife were the parents of four sons and three daughters, who were reared on the Green township home farm. In his later years, William Colvin moved to Highland county, where he spent the remainder of his life. He and his wife were devout members of the Christian church.

Jacob N. Colvin grew to manhood in Green township, this county, receiving his education in the district schools of that vicinity, and in 1885 went to work on the farm on which he is now living, which belongs to his wife, his marriage occurring in September, 1891, at which time he was married to Lucinda White, daughter of Jacob Frederick and Louisa (Troutwein) White, both natives of Wurtemberg, Germany. The former was the son of Jacob Frederick and Katherine (Hildebrant) White, who, with their family, came to America in 1841, locating about two and one-half miles south of the village of Lynchburg, in Highland county, this state, where they bought a small farm of twenty-six acres. On this farm the senior White spent the remainder of his days, his wife, after his death, moving to this county, where her last days were spent in the home of her son, Jacob F., father of Mrs. Colvin, on the farm in Clark township, which now belongs to Mrs. Colvin, through descent, her parents both being dead. Mrs. Colvin's mother was the daughter of Barnhart and Rachel (Getz) Troutwein, also natives of Wurtemberg, who came to America with the same party to which the Whites were attached and located on a farm of forty acres adjoining the farm which the Whites secured. There Barnhart Troutwein died, after which his widow made her home with her daughter, Mrs. White, mother of Mrs. Colvin, the rest of her life. The Whites and the Troutweins were devout members of the Lutheran church and this is the faith to which Mr. and Mrs. Colvin adhere, they being regarded as among the leading members of the congregation to which they are attached. Jacob F. White and Louisa Troutwein were married in Highland county, their respective parents being close neighbors there, and later acquired a farm of one hundred and seventy-five acres, one hundred and fifty of which is included in the farm on which Mr. and Mrs. Colvin are living, the remaining twenty-five acres lying over the county line in Highland county.

To Jacob N. and Lucinda (White) Colvin two children have been born, Bernice and Carmel. Mr. and Mrs. White take an active part in the affairs of their neighborhood and are held in high regard by all who know them.

TILGHMAN McKAY.

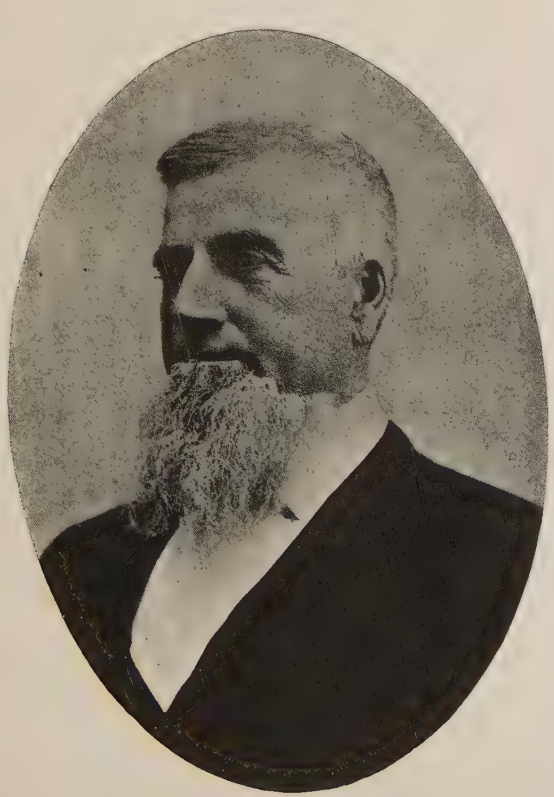
The life history of the late Tilghman McKay, one of the well-known and highly-esteemed citizens of Clinton county, who passed away several years ago, shows what industry, good habits and stanch citizenship will accomplish in life. His life record was one replete with duty well done and conscientiously performed. Descended from one of the pioneer families of this section, in a quiet way he had much to do with the progress and prosperity of Clinton county during his day and generation. He was a man whose interests were ever centered in his family and his home and his church.

The late Tilghman McKay was born on November 7, 1830, in Chester township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of George Washington and Mary M. (Ferguson) McKay. The mother of Mary M. Ferguson was a popular young woman in the old colonial days of Virginia.

The McKay family in America was established by three brothers, who immigrated from Scotland and settled in the Shenandoah valley of Virginia, where they remained for several years. It is known that they came to America about 1690, but it is not known whether they brought their wives with them or not. One of the brothers moved to North Carolina about 1700 and a little later another moved to Pennsylvania. Little is known of either. The remaining brother was the ancestor of Moses McKay, the grandfather of Tilghman, the subject of this sketch. Andrew McKay, the father of Moses, and the great-grandfather of Tilghman, was born in Frederick county, Virginia, in 1728, and in 1755 was married to Jane Ridgeway, of New Jersey. They were members of the Society of Friends and were the parents of five children, Jacob, Moses, Enos, Patience and Margaret, all of whom reared large families. Andrew McKay died in 1804. His widow later came to Ohio with the Whitaker family and made her home in Waynesville. She later married Joel Cloud in 1806 and died within a year, at the age of seventy-five.

Moses McKay, the next member of the family in line of descent, was born on September 7, 1766, in Virginia, and was married on March 3, 1793, to Mrs. Abigail Shinn, in Frederick county, Virginia. He lived in Virginia until March, 1818, at which time the family moved to Warren county, Ohio, where they lived the remainder of their lives. Of their thirteen children, one who was born in 1806, died in 1810. The remainder grew to maturity and reared large families. The names of the children were: Rachel, Robert, Sarah, George, Frances, Margaret, Virginia, Mariah, Jonas, Levi D., Jacob T. and Mary E. So numerous had the McKay family become by the time of the third generation, that the grandchildren of Moses and Abigail McKay numbered ninety-seven and the great-grandchildren one hundred and seventy-nine.

George McKay, the son of Moses and Abigail (Shinn) McKay, married Mary M. Ferguson and to them were born ten children, Moses, born on November 6, 1823, married Rachel Faulkner; Samuel, May 8, 1825, married Angeline Moore; Mildred, July 2, 1827; Jane, April 7, 1829, married Levi Shambaugh; Tilghman, November 7, 1830, is the subject of this sketch; Frank, January 12, 1833, married Elizabeth Peterson; Alfred, June 29, 1835, married Louisa Miars; Mary M., September 27, 1837, married Joshua



MR. AND MRS. TILGHMAN McKAY.

Oglesbee; Lucinda E., September 7, 1840; and George Washington, April 29, 1844, married Emma Daniels.. George Washington McKay and his family were among the very earliest settlers in Chester township, Clinton county, Ohio. Of their ten children, only three, Jane, Lucinda and George W., are now living.

Educated in the common schools of Ohio principally, the late Tilghman McKay, who was the fifth child in his parents' family, was married in 1853 to Sarah Jane Medsker, who was born at Hillsboro, Ohio, June 7, 1830. They were the parents of eight children, Mary M., who was born on October 9, 1854, and who was the wife of Lewis A. Smith, died on August 2, 1908; Oliver Elton, August 12, 1856, died on March 25, 1864; Sarah Alice, May 21, 1858, married Zimri Haines; Ella Florence, June 8, 1861, married Henry Pidgeon; Lucy L., April 9, 1864; Jennie E., January 6, 1867; Adelia C., June 1, 1869, married Horace Ellis; Daisy D., September 26, 1873, married Charles W. Babb.

The McKay family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. The late Tilghman McKay was quite active in church work during his life and was a member of the church at Lumberton, in Liberty township. Tilghman McKay owned a farm of two hundred and forty-nine acres in Liberty township, which comprises a beautiful country home. His widow is now living on the farm with the unmarried children. One of the daughters, Jennie, who lives at home, is an artist of no small ability. She has done considerable landscape work and has also painted a splendid likeness of her father.

ROBERT WICKERSHAM WHITE.

One of the conspicuous names on the roll of Clinton county farmers is that of Robert Wickersham White, a splendid young farmer of Union township and a young man of high standing in the community, where he has been engaged for some time in managing his father's farm and stock raising industry. The White family has been prominently identified with the material prosperity and agricultural growth of Clinton county and the life of Robert Wickersham White is closely interwoven with the history of the county. Various members of his father's family have been prominent in public life and have worthily discharged every position of trust and responsibility with which they have been charged.

Robert Wickersham White was born on January 23, 1877, on his father's farm in Union township. He is the son of John D. and Laura B. (Truitt) White, the former of whom is a native of Wilmington, born on August 28, 1850, and the latter of whom is a native of Union township, the daughter of Benjamin and Rebecca Truitt, both of whom are deceased. They were married on April 2, 1882, and to this marriage was born one child, Robert Wickersham, the subject of this sketch.

John D. White is the son of Grafton B. and Sarah (Morris) White and his father was born in 1825, at Georgetown, Brown county, Ohio, and died in 1858. His mother was born in 1826, in Wilmington, Ohio, where the Clinton County Bank is now situated, and died in 1875. Grafton B. White was the son of John D. White, Sr., who, after his marriage, came to Georgetown, Ohio, in Brown county, and followed school teaching. It was in Brown county that he was the teacher of a lad who was afterwards to become the foremost general in the Union army and the President of the United States, Ulysses S. Grant. Both he and his wife died in Brown county. He was of Scotch-Irish descent.

Sarah Morris, the mother of John D. White, was the daughter of Isaiah and Rhoda (Corwin) Morris, the former of whom was born in Greene county, Pennsylvania, in 1786, and the latter of whom was born in Lebanon, Ohio. The mother of Isaiah Morris was a Corbly. His parents moved in humble walks of life and were neither very poor nor very rich. The maternal grandfather of Isaiah Morris was a Baptist minister and Isaiah Morris's father owned a small farm. He had eight children, four of whom, including Isaiah, immigrated to the west. Two sisters settled in Ohio and a brother became a well-known farmer in Indiana.

Isaiah Morris came down the Ohio river with his uncle, a Mr. Huston, in a flatboat to Columbia, near Cincinnati, in the spring of 1803. His uncle opened a store at Columbia with goods he had brought with him. This store Isaiah Morris conducted until the fall of 1803, when the merchandise was moved to Lebanon. His uncle soon died leaving Isaiah, seventeen years old, far from home and entirely without friends, business or money. Warren county was organized in 1803 and David Sutton, afterwards General Sutton, was appointed clerk of the courts. Young Morris was given employment in his office, where he wrote until 1811. He also wrote in Judge McLean's office and between the two he had by this time saved about three hundred dollars. In 1811 he came to Wilmington and entered the mercantile business with William Ferguson, of Lebanon. They opened their first store in a frame house on the present site of the First National Bank. A few years later Mr. Morris was able to buy Mr. Ferguson's interest and continued the business alone. In 1812 Isaiah Morris married Rachel Carpenter, the step-daughter of Judge Francis Dunlavy, at Lebanon. They had two daughters, Maria, who married Robert B. Harland, and Rebecca, who married Rev. Stephen Hollis. Mrs. Morris died in 1819 and in 1822, Mr. Morris married Catherine Trimble, of Hillsboro, a cousin of Allen Trimble. They had one son and two daughters. Two of these children, the son and one daughter, died in infancy. The remaining daughter, Sarah Ann, married Grafton B. White, the grandfather of Robert Wickersham White. Catherine Morris died in October, 1828, and in 1840 Mr. Morris married Rhoda Corwin, a sister of Hon. Thomas Corwin, of Lebanon. They had a son and one daughter, Thomas Corwin and Mary Catherine, who married Robert W. Wickersham.

On June 3, 1816, Isaiah Morris was appointed clerk to the commissioners and this officer, until 1820, performed the duties of auditor. He held this office for one year. Upon the death of Peter Burr in 1816, Mr. Morris was appointed to fill the vacancy thus occurring as clerk of the court of common pleas of Clinton county. He served in this office until the close of the third term in 1837. From 1812 until 1815, he was postmaster of Wilmington. The postoffice and the clerk's office were both in Mr. Morris's store. He was the first representative of Clinton county in the Legislature in 1812 and again represented the county in 1815. In 1837 he was chosen by Clinton and Highland counties as a state senator for two years and in 1851 was elected a delegate for Clinton and Highland to the second constitutional convention of Ohio. The convention met in Columbus and after organizing, adjourned to Cincinnati and held their session in the summer of 1851, during which time they drafted a new constitution, which was approved by the people of Ohio at the election following. Mr. Morris was the first mayor of Wilmington, serving from 1828 to 1830. He was not a member of any religious sect but had a warm feeling for all. He gave to the Baptists the lot on which their church is built and in addition about eight hundred dollars. Of the one thousand acres of Clinton county land which he owned, much of it he purchased for seventy-five cents an acre. His health was in a failing state some two years before his death, which occurred on July 18, 1858, at the age of seventy-two.

Grafton B. White obtained a good education and was a lawyer by profession. Coming to Wilmington about 1842, he was a law partner of a Mr. Fuller and later the partner of Judge West, the father of the present Judge West. Grafton B. White served as prosecuting attorney of Clinton county one term. He died of tuberculosis in 1858. He and his wife had four children: Carr B., who is an attorney of Seattle, Washington; David, who died in 1908, and who was an attorney in Wilmington; Katie, who married Frank Noble and lives in Lynchburg, Ohio; and John D.

The educational opportunities afforded many of the earlier sons and daughters of Clinton county were indeed remarkable and these advantages are due in a great measure to the interest of the Society of Friends.

John D. White, after attending the Wilmington public schools and the old seminary where the Friends church now stands, became a student at Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio, where he remained for three years. He intended to become a physician, but his health failing, he returned home. His mother having purchased fifty acres of land in Union township near Wilson Station, he lived out of doors there for the benefit of his health. After his marriage, he purchased the farm from his mother and added seventy acres more. In 1883 he sold the farm and purchased the N. H. Moore farm of one hundred and seventy-five acres in Union township, to which he moved. Later he added forty-six acres to this farm and in 1913 purchased seventy-five acres adjoining. He owns a pretty country home and is surrounded with all of the comforts and conveniences of country life.

John D. White is a Republican in politics and for six years served as commissioner of Clinton county. He is a member of the official board of the Walnut street Church of Christ in Wilmington and is prominent in fraternal circles, being a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He is an extensive feeder of sheep and hogs. Mr. White was formerly a director in the First National Bank of Wilmington. For the past ten years, he has spent his summers in Petoskey, Michigan, a summer resort.

Robert Wickersham White attended the rural schools of Union township until he was sixteen years old and later became a student at and was graduated from Wilmington College in 1900, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Subsequently, he attended Johns Hopkins University, at Baltimore, Maryland, for one year, taking French and German. After leaving this university, he returned to his father's home farm in Union township and has been engaged in managing this farm ever since. After his marriage in 1904, another house was built on the farm and he and his father have farmed the two hundred and ninety-seven and one-quarter acres together.

Mr. White was married on June 15, 1904, to Ella Smith, the daughter of James E. and Mary Elizabeth (Osborne) Smith, a sketch of whose life appears elsewhere in this work. Mr. and Mrs. White have one child, Robert Wendell, born on September 6, 1907.

Robert W. White is identified with the activities of the Republican party. He served three years as township trustee of Union township and has been a member of the Union township school board for several years. The family are members of the Walnut street Church of Christ in Wilmington and Mr. White is a deacon in the church. He is also secretary and treasurer of the Clinton County Farmers' Institute Association.

FRANK RHONEMUS.

A descendant of the union of two of the oldest families in Clinton county, Frank Rhonemus, a substantial farmer of the Lynchburg neighborhood, is deeply interested in all that concerns the development of the county and is held in high regard in that section of the county in which he lives and where he is so well known.

Frank Rhonemus was born in Jefferson township, Clinton county, Ohio, on March 4, 1860, son of Jacob and Mary (Thornhill) Rhonemus, both members of pioneer families of that section of the county, the former of whom was born near the village of Cuba, in Washington township, and the latter of whom was born near the village of Macedonia, in Washington township.

Jacob Rhonemus was the son of Jacob and Sophia (Cluster) Rhonemus, the former a native of Virginia and the latter a native of Germany. The elder Jacob Rhonemus came to this county in the year 1808, as the driver of a six-horse team in the wagon train brought overland in that year by William Beggs. Liking the appearance of things in this part of the state, he decided to remain and never returned to Virginia. Though Clinton county had not been organized at that time, Jacob Rhonemus was discerning enough to see the immense possibilities the future held for this region and he secured a small tract of land, eighty-five acres, in the forest, cleared the same, erected a small log cabin, married one of the pioneer girls of the neighborhood and made his home in the Cuba neighborhood the rest of his life, becoming one of the best-known citizens of that community. Jacob Rhonemus served his country as a soldier in the War of 1812 and received land warrants in payment of his services during that struggle. He married Sophia Cluster, daughter of a pioneer family in Washington township, who proved a faithful and devoted helpmeet in his efforts to create a home in the then wilderness.

Jacob Rhonemus, son of this pioneer couple, was reared on the farm near the village of Cuba, receiving his education in the subscription schools of that neighborhood, and grew up with the expectation of becoming a farmer. He married Mary Thornhill, daughter of Barnett and Ruth (Jones) Thornhill, pioneers of Washington township, who came to this county about the year 1820, and in 1849 bought a farm of one hundred and fifty acres in the deep woods of Jefferson township, where he made a home, cleared the farm and spent the rest of his life. During the Civil War Jacob Rhonemus, Jr., served the Union as a soldier in the Eighty-third Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and though this regiment saw much bitter service, having participated in some of the hardest-fought battles of the war, he never was wounded and never was made a prisoner. In his religious belief, Jacob Rhonemus was a Universalist and took much interest in the affairs of the congregation of that church, being one of the leaders therein. He and his wife were the parents of ten children.

Frank Rhonemus, one of the ten children above mentioned, received his education in the district schools of Jefferson township and remained on the home farm until his marriage in 1891, in which year he bought a farm of seventy-five acres in Clark township and ever since has made his home there. He has done well in his farming operations and is regarded as one of the substantial citizens of that neighborhood. He is public-spirited and progressive and is a man of influence in his community, having served on the township board of education very acceptably to all for the past twenty-two years.

On March 14, 1891, Frank Rhonemus was united in marriage to Catherine Anna Lippolt, daughter of Jacob Lippolt, of Clark township, this county, and to this union six children have been born, namely: Mary, who is a well-known teacher in the public schools of Clinton county; John, a farmer, of this county; Theo and Leo, twins, who also are farming, and George E. and Ruth, who are students in the high school at Lynchburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Rhonemus are members of the Lutheran church and are warmly interested in the various beneficences of the congregation to which they are attached. They also take a deep interest in community affairs, being concerned in all measures designed to advance the common good and are held in the highest esteem by all who know them.

FRED WELDEN LINTON.

Not so many years ago it was rare indeed to find a young man who had received the advantages of a college education, who found the farm sufficiently attractive to make agriculture his life's vocation. The custom, however, for young men reared on the farm to return to the farm after their graduation from college is becoming more thoroughly established. In Fred Welden Linton, an enterprising young farmer of Union township, Clinton county, is a splendid example of the young man who has found the farm sufficiently attractive to take up agriculture as a life calling. He is descended from Nathan Linton, one of the earliest pioneer settlers of Clinton county, who was his great-great-grandfather.

Fred Welden Linton was born on July 18, 1889, in Adams township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of Walter and Gertrude (Hadley) Linton, the former of whom was a native of Union township, born on July 19, 1866, and at present a resident of Norwalk, Ohio. Mr. Linton's mother was born on December 13, 1870, in Adams township, and died on November 30, 1912.

Walter Linton is the son of Joshua and Olive (Hadley) Linton. Joshua Linton was the son of Seth and Sarah Ann (Moore) Linton, the former of whom was the son of Nathan and Rachel (Smith) Linton. Nathan was the son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Harvey) Linton and Samuel was the son of Benjamin and Jane (Cowgal) Linton. Benjamin was the son of John and Mary (Relf) Linton. John Linton was the son of Sir Roger Linton, of Yorkshire, England.

Sir Roger Linton had six sons: John, Jacob, Samuel, Benjamin, Roger and James. John was born at Yorkshire, England, and sent by his father to Oxford College, where he was educated for the ministry. Sent with a company of soldiers to attend one of the Quaker meetings to ascertain if anything was said against the Church of England, John Linton was so impressed by the simplicity, earnestness and faith of the worshippers that he became a convert, after which he was expelled from his father's house. He learned the carpenter's trade in London and was there married to Mary Relf, in 1691. After preaching for a number of years, he and his wife came to America, landing at Philadelphia on November 8, 1692. Before leaving England, he had been an associate of William Penn. John and Mary (Relf) Linton had four children: Mary, Joseph, Benjamin and John. Benjamin, the third child, was born in Philadelphia, October 6, 1703. He was a weaver by trade and an able and learned astronomer. By his first marriage to Elizabeth White, March 25, 1727, there were two children, John and Mary. The mother of these children was born on September 9, 1705, and died on January 25, 1732. He next married Jane Cowgal, who was born on July 3, 1708. By this marriage there were eight children: Lucia, Benjamin, Joshua, Sarah, Samuel, Jane, Daniel and Hezekiah. Samuel was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, December 17, 1741. He was a farmer and weaver and was married on May 10, 1775, to Elizabeth Harvey, who was born on March 8, 1748. They had six children: Samuel, Nathan, David, Jane and Elizabeth (twins), and James. Early in 1802, Samuel Linton and his family started from their Pennsylvania home towards the "far West." They floated down the Ohio river to Cincinnati and came by wagon to Waynesville, in Warren county, where he followed his trade of weaver. In 1804 he bought five hundred acres of land on Todd's fork, three miles northwest of Wilmington. He was a member of the Society of Friends.

Nathan Linton, the second son of Samuel, was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, January 17, 1778. He was surveyor at the time Clinton county was organized and held this office for twenty years. He surveyed Clinton and Fayette counties' townships and laid out the village of Wilmington. He died on February 11, 1858, honored and respected by all worthy people. Benjamin Butterworth, a member of Congress, was a son of his daughter, Elizabeth. Another grandson, Nathan, was a member of the Ohio Legislature. Nation and his wife, Rachel Smith, had twelve children: Elizabeth, Abi, Samuel, Seth, David, James, Mary, Nathan, Benjamin, Cyrus, Ruth and Jane.

Seth, the fourth child born to Nathan and Rachel Linton and the great-grandfather of Fred Welden Linton, was born on October 10, 1812, in Union township. His mother was born on January 18, 1790, and died on April 4, 1859. She was the daughter of Seth Smith, born on May 19, 1761, and who died on April 1, 1837, and Elizabeth Littler, who was born on April 9, 1769, and who died on July 7, 1842. The father of the latter was Samuel Littler, who emigrated from England to America with William Penn. Seth Linton was married on September 26, 1836, to Sarah Ann Moore, of Lytle's creek meeting. She was born in Clinton county, December 7, 1819, the daughter of Joshua Moore, who was born on October 10, 1791, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and who died on February 7, 1874, and Nancy Stratton, who was born on November 16, 1797, and died on December 19, 1881. By this marriage there were six children: Nathan M., born on March 18, 1838, a lawyer and former member of the Ohio Legislature; Nancy L., January 3, 1840, who married Thomas McMillan, a farmer; Rachel, October 8, 1841, who married E. Snowden; Joshua, April 2, 1843, who married Olive Hadley; Oliver, August 5, 1845, who married Sarah Hiatt; and Amanda, November 11, 1848, who married Jacob Lewis, a farmer.

Joshua Linton, the grandfather of Fred W., who was born in Clinton county, obtained little education. He grew up on the farm and was married in September, 1864, to Olive Hadley, the daughter of Joshua and Ruth (Edwards) Hadley, the former of whom was born in Guilford county, North Carolina, and who came to Ohio with his parents when he was twelve years old. His parents were William and Sarah (Clark) Hadley. William Hadley laid out the town of Clarksville, in what is now Vernon township, Clinton county, and named it for his wife's maiden name. He was a devout Quaker and died of heart failure while going to the monthly meeting of the Friends church. Ruth Edwards was the daughter of Archibald and Nancy Edwards, who were early settlers in Union township, having come here from North Carolina. In 1914 Joshua and Olive Linton celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. After his marriage, he had lived on his grandfather's farm near Clarksville in Clinton county for five years and afterwards obtained land in Union township, northwest of Wilmington, and lived there until 1892, when he retired and moved to Wilmington, where he and his wife still live on West Locust street. He still owns a farm of one hundred and fifty-three acres in Union township. He and his wife are lifelong members of the Friends church.

The parents of Gertrude (Hadley) Linton and the maternal grandparents of Fred W. Linton were Micajah and Ellen (Cowgill) Hadley, the latter of whom was a native of Highland county, Ohio, and is still living. The former, who was a farmer in Adams township, where he owned two hundred and fifty acres of land, died in May, 1898. He as the son of Eli and Abigail (Green) Hadley, the former of whom was born on September 27, 1804, and died on November 29, 1854, and the latter of whom died on April 30, 1837, at the age of twenty-eight. She was the daughter of Reuben and Rhoda Green. Eli Hadley was the son of John and Lydia (Harvey) Hadley, the former of whom was born on September 23, 1770, in Chatham county, North Carolina, the son of Joshua and Ruth Hadley. Lydia Harvey was the daughter of William and Elizabeth Harvey, of Orange county, North Carolina, who came to Ohio in 1806, and settled near Todd's fork. They were married in Crane's creek monthly meeting, North Carolina, in 1794.

Walter Linton, the father of Fred W., grew up in Union township, and after his marriage lived on his mother-in-law's farm until 1899, when he purchased seventy-five acres in Union township on the Waynesville pike. There he built a fine home, which is now occupied by the subject of this sketch. In 1913 the father moved to Norwalk, Ohio, where he is engaged in selling silos. He and his family are members of the Friends church. His wife died in 1912, and in January, 1915, he married Madora Kelly. He is an extensive breeder of Holstein cattle and for fourteen years was in the dairy business. He and his first wife had two children: Fred Welden, and one daughter, Eleanor, born on August 11, 1894, who is now a student at Cincinnati University. Walter Linton is an ardent Republican.

Fred Welden Linton received his education in the public schools of Adams and Union townships. Early in life he attended Wilmington College and was graduated from that institution in 1909. Subsequently, he worked one year in the West on the Sante Fe railroad as a civil engineer, but in 1910 came back to his father's farm and for two years rented a farm near Cuba, Ohio. In 1914 he purchased his father's farm of seventy-five acres in Union township and here he now lives.

On June 28, 1913, Fred W. Linton was married to Louise Truitt, who was born in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, the daughter of J. F. and Sue Truitt, the former of whom is a farmer of this township.

Mr. Linton is a Republican. He and his wife are members of the Central Christian church of Wilmington. Very few young men of the present generation in Clinton county are more enterprising, more capable or more popular than Fred W. Linton. Few young men have the inspiration of a more worthy and eminent ancestry than he. It may be truly said that he is fulfilling the natural obligations of the young man who is well born, and faithfully discharging all of the duties of life.

FRANK B. POND.

Frank B. Pond is an enterprising and successful young farmer of Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, who was born on March 21, 1877, at New Antioch, in Green township, Clinton county. He is the son of William A. and Alice (Tener) Pond, the former of whom was born on March 20, 1852, and the latter of whom was born at Locust Grove, in Adams county, Ohio.

William A. Pond is the son of William and Mary (Lieurance) Pond, the former of whom was born on June 2, 1812, in Green township and who died on January 10, 1902, and the latter of whom was born on March 21, 1815, and died on August 25, 1906. Mrs. William A. Pond is the daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Weaver) Tener, both of whom are deceased. He was a harness-maker of Adams county, and his wife was a native of Highland county.

William Pond, the grandfather of Frank B. Pond, was the son of Griffen Pond, who with his brothers, Henry, John and Jonathan, came to Clinton county, Ohio, in 1802, from Wilkes county, North Carolina.

Frank B. Pond grew up at New Antioch, Ohio, and there attended the public schools. When a young man he assisted his father on the farm and in buying live stock. When he was twenty-one years of age he came to Wilmington and worked here for J. P. Cole in his restaurant. In 1903 Mr. Pond purchased Mr. Cole's restaurant and the following year was married. In that same year he sold out the restaurant and removed to Hillsboro, Ohio, where he was engaged in the restaurant business until 1908, when the restaurant burned. From Hillsboro, Mr. Pond removed to Faukuier county, Virginia, where he managed a farm for his wife's uncle, James Boling. He managed this farm until Mr. Boling's death in 1912, and afterwards Mrs. Boling purchased one hundred and twenty-five acres out of the Wade farm in the eastern part of Union township, Clinton county. Mr. Pond has since managed this farm for Mrs. Boling in partnership with her son, Earl W. Boling. Mr. and Mrs. Pond live on the farm. He specializes in Shorthorn cattle and Percheron horses, also Duroc-Jersey hogs. He likewise raises a great many colts and mules.

On June 22, 1902, Frank B. Pond was married to Cleo Ansell, who was born in Perry county, Ohio, in March, 1880, the daughter of James Crooks and Esther (Wilson) Ansell. James C. Ansell lives in Zanesville, Ohio, where he is a retired farmer. He is a native of Perry county, Ohio, and the son of Peter and Lucy Ansell. During the Civil War he was a member of the Seventy-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served throughout the war, making the memorable march with Sherman from Atlanta to the sea. He was wounded in the shoulder during the Georgia campaign. Mrs. Esther (Wilson) Ansell was the daughter of Ezra and Elizabeth (Burges) Wilson, both of whom were natives of Allegheny county, Maryland. The former was born on May 26, 1812, and died on May 17, 1891. The latter was born on July 4, 1811, and died on April 16, 1891. They were married on May 1, 1828, and were early settlers in Perry county, Ohio, where they lived until their death. Mrs. Pond's mother was one of ten children born to her parents. Lewis, the eldest child in the family died of typhoid fever. Alfred died when a child, as did also Martha. Lavina married Peter Stoneberner and is now deceased. William is a resident of Crooksville, Ohio, where he is a butcher. Levi, who is deceased, was a farmer. Elizabeth, who was born on December 12, 1846, married James H. Boling, who was born in Perry county, Ohio, June 6, 1847, and who died January 10, 1912. James H. Boling was a Civil War veteran in Company A, Thirty-first Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He taught school for twenty-five years in Perry county, Ohio, and for ten and one-half years was superintendent of the Perry county children's home. He died on his farm in Virginia. His widow owns and lives on the farm which Mr. Pond now manages in Union township. Naomi, the eighth child, married John O. Skinner, they are both deceased. Esther is Mrs. Pond's mother. An infant died at birth.

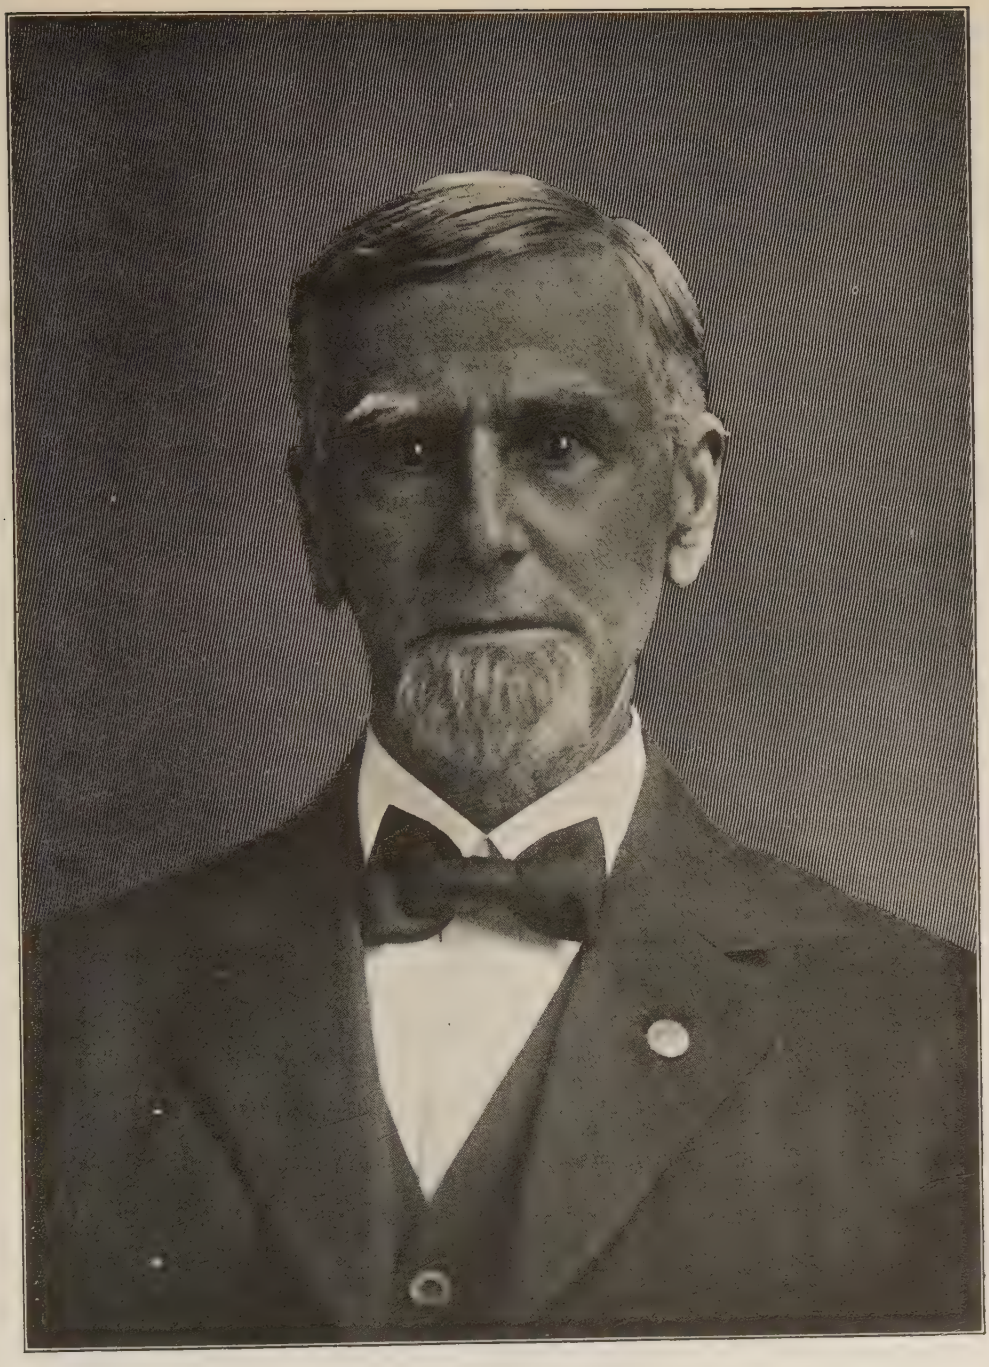
Frank B. Pond is a Republican. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, the Fraternal Order of Eagles and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, including the encampment.

CYRUS E. CUSTIS.

Respect is due to the brave sons of the North who left their homes and the peaceful pursuits of civic life to give their services and their lives, if need be, to preserve the integrity of the American union, and no man is more entitled to share in this respect than the venerable Cyrus E. Custis, a distinguished veteran of the Civil War and one, who, since the close of that war, has been prominent in the religious and political life of Clinton county. He proved his love and loyalty to the government on the long and tiresome marches in all kinds of situations. Exposed to summer's withering sun and winter's freezing cold, on the lonely picket line, a target for the unseen foe, on the tented field and amid the flames and smoke of battle, where the rattle of musketry mingled with the concussion of bursting shells and the diapason of the cannon's roar, made up the sublime but awful course of death. Enlisted as a private, he was promoted to first duty sergeant on October 1, following his enlistment; to orderly, April 3, 1863; and on August 19, 1864, was promoted to second lieutenant. On January 20, 1865, he was commissioned first lieutenant, and was assigned to the command of Company C.

It was on August 6, 1862, that Cyrus E. Custis, who was then just a little past the age of twenty-two, enlisted in the Seventy-ninth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, in Spencer's Company, afterwards called Company G. His regiment was assembled at Camp Denison on August 13, and ordered to Covington, Kentucky, in the following September. His first real service was a march to Crittendon, about twenty-five miles away. It required two days to go and about one day to return. His regiment guarded supply trains and railroads during the greater part of the time until 1864. On May 2, of that year, the regiment entered the Sherman campaign and there saw its first great battle. He took part in the following engagements: Resaca, May 15, 1864; Pumpkin Vine Creek, May 27, '64; and was in command of the company in all the battles of his regiment till the capture of Atlanta, where they camped till November 14, when they began the march to the sea. Arrived at Savannah, December 10, where they remained till January 18, '65. Then entered the Carolinas and was in battles of Averysboro, March 16, '65, in which he picked up the flag after the color bearer was shot down, and at Bentonville, March 18, arriving in Goldsboro about March 21st. Then marched to Raleigh, North Carolina, and at surrender of Joseph Johnston, was sent to Richmond and Alexandria, Virginia, and passed on grand review at Washington, D. C., May 25, 1865, and was in command of his company. Cyrus E. Custis was mustered from the Union army with honor and distinction on June 9, 1865, at Washington, D. C., and received his discharge June 17, 1865, at Camp Denison.

Born on August 3, 1840, in Richland township, Clinton county, Ohio, on the farm which his grandfather, Samuel Reed, had settled in 1803, Cyrus E. Custis is the son of William H. and Mary (Reed). His father was born in Scioto county, Ohio, December 15, 1813, and his mother in Richland township, Clinton county, April 12, 1813. She was the daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Paris) Reed. They were married on December 19, 1837.



CYRUS E. CUSTIS

On the maternal side, Mr. Custis' grandfather, Samuel Reed, was born on September 1, 1778, and died on April 5, 1854. His wife, who, before her marriage, was Sarah Paris, was born on August 25, 1782, and died on October 3, 1863. Samuel and Sarah Reed settled in Richland township in 1805. They came from Kentucky, in which state they were married, and it is probable that they were born in that state. Upon settling in this township, Samuel Reed bought one thousand acres of land, which he afterwards lost through an imperfect title and had to pay for the same land the second time. He and his wife were members of the Christian church and were of that class which gives tone and solidity to the community at large. Samuel and Sarah Reed had nine children: Elizabeth, born February 16, 1799; Absalom, November 25, 1800; Abner, January 10, 1803; Josephus, July 15, 1804, and died on September 10, 1840; Cyrus, June 9, 1806, and died on April 6, 1839; John, October 23, 1808; William, November 27, 1810, and died on January 15, 1863; Mary, April 12, 1813, and died on September 17, 1896; and Samuel P., September 3, 1815, and died on November 25, 1860.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Custis were Robison and Mary (Savage) Custis, natives of Virginia, who settled in Union township, Clinton county, in either 1821 or 1822. He purchased one hundred acres of partly cleared land, which became his permanent home. Before this he had lived temporarily in Scioto county, Ohio, having come to Scioto county from Virginia as early as 1810. After living in Union township for some time, he moved to Wilson township, where he owned a farm. Robison Custis was born on April 19, 1770, and died on November 28, 1848. His birthplace was near Norfolk, Virginia. His wife, Mary Savage, to whom he was married on August 7, 1793, was born on January 24, 1779, and died on November 22, 1848. Robison Custis was the son of John and Elizabeth Custis, an old Virginia family. The children of Robison and Mary Custis were twelve in number: Thomas, born on March 9, 1795; Littleton, November 13, 1796, and died on August 9, 1809; Robison, January 9, 1799; Abel W., May 13, 1801; Betsy, September 13, 1803; Ann, January 2, 1805; Elizabeth Ann, September 11, 1809; Mary Ann, September 25, 1811; William H., December 15, 1813; John W., May 6, 1815; Charles E., May 20, 1820; and Vienna, June 21 1822.

The tenth child in this family was William H. Custis, the father of Cyrus E. He was educated in the subscription schools of Union and Wilson townships, Clinton county, and while still a young man, worked on the farm with his father. Here he began farming for himself and in 1852 opened a general store in connection with his farm, which he conducted for six or eight years. He then sold out and devoted his entire time to the farm. About 1866, at the close of the Civil War, he retired but continued to live on his farm until his death. He owned one hundred and ninety-four acres of excellent land. By his marriage to Mary Reed, December 19, 1837, there were born five children: Samuel Robertson, born October 18, 1838, and died on July 3, 1900; Cyrus E., the subject of this sketch; Sarah Mary, May 20, 1842, who married J. H. Channell; Elizabeth A., July 15, 1844, who married John Small; and Josephus John, November 10, 1846, who died on December 28, 1898. Mr. and Mrs. William H. Custis were charter members of the Richland Methodist Protestant church and he was a member of the building committee which erected the church. Until the formation of the Republican party, he was a Whig in politics, but later identified himself with the party of Lincoln and Grant.

Cyrus E. Custis obtained a better education than most of the boys of his day and generation. Not only was he graduated from the common schools of Richland township, but in 1862 he was a student for one term at the normal school at Lebanon, Ohio. It was shortly after his return from school that he enlisted as a soldier in the Civil War.

After the war Mr. Custis and his brother, J. J., who was six years his junior, rented their father's farm and during the winters of 1866 and 1867 he returned to school at Lebanon and was able to complete a commercial course. In March, 1867, he entered into partnership with J. H. Channell in the general mercantile business. They were together two years. In 1869 he returned to the home farm and one year later he and his brother purchased a farm of two hundred acres in Richland township, which Cyrus E. now owns. Mr. Custis was married in 1870 and after his marriage moved to the farm where he has lived ever since, on April 14, of that year. In 1887 he purchased his brother's interest in the farm and now owns the entire two hundred acres. He has remodeled his house and erected all of the other buildings on the place. Mr. Custis is an extensive breeder of Shorthorn cattle and Delaine sheep. He is known throughout Clinton county as one of its most prosperous and well-to-do farmers.

On April 7, 1870, Cyrus E. Custis was married to Lutitia Douglas, who was born on January 10, 1844, and who is the daughter of Absalom and Mary (Coulter) Douglas. To this union have been born two children: Albert Reed, who married Catherine Devanney, and Mary Douglas, who graduated from Wilmington College in 1908.

Albert Reed Custis was born in Richland township, Clinton county, Ohio. He obtained the rudiments of an education in the common schools of Richland township and later was a student in Wilmington College, having been a resident student at that institution during 1890, 1891 and 1892. For some time after he left college, he was engaged in the stone-crushing business, which he continued for about three years, during which time he did considerable contract work at Wilmington. Later, he was in the coal and feed business in Wilmington, but he is now engaged in the grain business in partnership with William A. Ewing and owns an elevator at Melvin, Ohio. They buy all kinds of grain and sell feed, coal, cement, fencing, fence posts and many other supplies necessary on the farm.

Albert Reed Custis also farms in connection with his grain business, doing general farming and stock raising. He owns forty-five acres of land in Richland township.

Mrs. Albert R. Custis, before her marriage, was Catherine Devanney and is the daughter of William Devanney. They have no children. Politically, Albert R. Custis is a Republican. He is a member of the Methodist church and of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. Mr. and Mrs. Albert R. Custis live at Wilmington.

Returning to the father, Cyrus E. Custis, it may be said with exact truth that he is an intelligent, pleasant, strong, healthy and unpretentious man and one who has been a natural leader in almost every phase of public life in this county. He has been repeatedly called upon to serve his fellow citizens, because in the first public positions which he filled, he acquitted himself with credit and demonstrated his ability for larger service. Since he was eighteen years old, he has been a member of the Methodist Protestant church at Richland and during that time has served in all of the offices of the church. Four different times he has been elected to the general conference as a delegate, in 1896 he was a delegate to Kansas City, four years later he was a delegate at Atlantic City; in 1904 he was a delegate to the conference at Washington, D. C., and in 1912 to the conference at Baltimore, Maryland. Since 1896 he has been a trustee of Kansas City University. Altogether he served two terms and nine months additional as commissioner of Clinton county. He has also served several terms as trustee of Richland township. Mr. Custis has been a member of the Masonic fraternity since 1867 and is also a member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

JOHN C. CASHMAN.

Farming, to which the major part of the life of John C. Cashman has been devoted, is the oldest pursuit known to mankind. It is also the one in which he will always be the most independent. Although a comparatively young man, he has made a notable success not only of farming, but of the lumber business, as well as the construction of macadam roads. He is well known to the people of this county, where he has spent practically all of his life, and where he is honored and respected as one of the younger business men of the county.

John C. Cashman was born on January 23, 1871, at Rockville, Missouri, and is the son of Joseph and Sarah Louisa (Vandervort) Cashman, the former of whom was born on October 1, 1831, near Antioch, in Greene township, Clinton county, Ohio, and who died on November 21, 1913, and the latter of whom was born near Antioch, in Green township, January 20, 1844, and who is still living.

Mr. Cashman's paternal grandparents were John and Catherine Cashman, who settled in Clinton county, Ohio, after having come here from Virginia in an early day. He was engaged in hauling goods to and from Cincinnati before the railroads were built. During this period he lived at New Antioch. Late in life he made a considerable amount of money and owned several farms at the time of his death. He was a man of strictly temperate habits and who, beginning as a poor boy, became well-to-do for his day and generation. He and his wife were members of the Christian church. He was buried at New Antioch.

The maternal grandparents of Mr. Cashman were John and Martha E. (Riley) Vandervort, the former of whom was born on June 2, 1813, in Warren county, Ohio, and who was the son of Jonah and Elizabeth Vandervort, a full sketch of whose family is given in the biography of Nicholas W. Vandervort, deceased, which appears elsewhere in this history. John Vandervort was reared on a farm and received a good common-school education and taught school several years before and after his marriage. On October 20, 1842, he was married to Martha E. Riley, who was born on November 29, 1824, the daughter of Richard and Sarah Riley. They had eight children: Sarah E., who is Mr. Cashman's mother; Mary E., Amanda, who married Alpheus King; Ella, who married Samuel H. Trovillo; Preston, Charles, Emmerson and John, Jr. After his marriage John Vandervort moved to a farm three miles southeast of Harveysburg, where he lived several years, and then removed to a farm one and one-half miles northeast of New Antioch, where he lived fifteen years. He then located near Cuba, Ohio, where he died on December 17, 1865. At the time of his death he was worth more than fifteen thousand dollars. His widow and family later moved to Chester township, where she died.

Joseph Cashman, father of John C., was a farmer all his life. Immigrating to Missouri, he owned a prairie farm in that state, but on account of the ague returned to Clinton county, and purchased a farm in Washington township near Cuba, where he lived until within six years of his death. He then removed to Martinsville, Ohio, and there died. A man of strictly temperate habits, he never swore, used tobacco, nor intoxicating liquors in any form. He was a Christian gentleman and one who is well remembered by the people of this county for his clean mind and his honorable, upright habits. He owned two hundred acres of land at the time of his death. At the age of seventeen years he joined the Christian church and continued an active worker in this church all his life. Before the organization of the Republican party he was a Whig, but after its organization he identified himself with the party of Lincoln and Fremont.

Five children were born to Joseph and Sarah Louisa (Vandervort) Cashman, of whom John C. was the fourth. The others were: Elmer, who lives on a farm in Vernon township; Etta, who married James West, deceased, and who lives on her father's home farm; Minnie, who married Martin I. Shiveley, a resident of South Chillicothe, Ohio; and Lulu, who died on August 3, 1878, at the age of four years.

John C. Cashman was four years of age when the family removed from Missouri to Clinton county, Ohio. He attended the public schools of Cuba, Ohio, and also the normal school at New Vienna, after which he taught school for nine years in Clinton county, in Vernon and Adams townships. He then took up farming and after renting his father's farm purchased one hundred and twenty-eight acres of land and two years later sold the farm for a profit. Upon removing to Breathitt county, Kentucky, he engaged in the manufacture of lumber and there purchased a large tract of timber land, and with the use of a portable saw-mill turned out five million feet of lumber, which he sold. After three years in Kentucky, in 1910, Mr. Cashman returned to Wilmington. Previously he had built a home in this city, in the spring of 1907. Upon returning from Kentucky he purchased one hundred and seventy-two acres of land in Washington township. The Cashman family now live in town, however. Mr. Cashman manages his farm and is engaged in building macadam roads under contract. He built the first macadam road ever constructed in Clinton county.

On May 7, 1896, John C. Cashman was married to Corinna Blanch Smithson, who was born in Clinton county, Ohio, in Clark township, the daughter of William and Martha Smithson, both of whom are living. The father is a building contractor and lives on Library avenue, in Wilmington. Mr. and Mrs. Cashman have had five children: Claude Merland, born on April 19, 1897; Donald William, April 30, 1904; Robert Joseph, September 27, 1906; Neal Elmer, June 14, 1911; and Martha Louise, December 28, 1912.

Mr. and Mrs. Cashman and family are members of the Central Christian church of Wilmington, and Mr. Cashman is an elder in this church. He became a member of the Christian church at the age of eighteen at the old Macedonia church in Washington township, and served as superintendent of the Sunday school. Throughout his entire life Mr. Cashman has been identified with the Republican party.

FRIEND P. SPENCE.

One of the most successful farmers of Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, is Friend P. Spence, a native of Perins Mills, Clermont county, Ohio, born on September 27, 1840, the son of Edmund and Mercena (Perin) Spence, natives of Pennsylvania and Boston, Massachusetts, respectively.

The paternal grandfather of Mr. Spence was Shackleford Spence, a native of Ireland, and of Scotch-Irish descent. After coming to America, he settled in Pennsylvania, but died later at the home of his son, Edmund, at Batavia, in Clermont county. Mr. Spence's maternal grandparents were born in England and settled in Boston, Massachusetts. Relatives of this family came to America in the first settlement of Boston. Mercena Perin, who maried Edmund Spence, came to Michigan with her brothers and later immigrated to the state of Ohio.

The late Edmund Spence, the father of Friend P., was never able to attend school, and at the age of seventeen began working for Samuel Perin, a cousin of Mercena Perin. He served as recorder of Clermont county for six years. Subsequently, he entered the dry goods business at Batavia and later was engaged in the same business at Cincinnati. Later in life he returned to Perins Mills, in Clermont county, Ohio, and became one of its best known citizens, holding various township offices, including that of assessor and trustee. He was an active Democrat throughout his life.

Friend P. Spence was educated at Perins Mills, and at the age of sixteen years began farming. On December 19, 1873, he moved to a farm at the edge of Martinsville of one hundred and eighty acres, where he now lives. Mr. Spence owns, besides this farm, two hundred and seventy acres elsewhere. During the Civil War, he was a member of the famous organization known as the "squirrel hunters." At Martinsville he has a magnificent home and is surrounded with all of the comforts of life.

On March 6, 1873, Mr. Spence was married to Hannah M. Turner, the daughter of Daniel Turner, whose parents, Michael and Elizabeth (Beltz) Turner, came with four children from Bedford county, Pennsylvania, to Clermont county, Ohio, in 1808. Michael Turner was a native of Germany. Eight children were born after the removal of this family to Ohio, but Daniel was the last member of the family born in the Keystone state. The trip to Ohio was made in a flat-boat. Daniel Turner accumulated, during his life, eight hundred and fifty acres of land on the East fork in Clermont county and one hundred and sixty acres in the southern part of Clinton county. He also owned two hundred and thirty-three acres in Highland county, a total of twenty-two hundred and forty-three acres. Most of his money was made in raising and selling hogs. He was also engaged in the pork-packing business in Cincinnati and, although he could only write his own name, he was a man of very astute business ability. Daniel Turner, who married Susan Malott, had thirteen children, twelve of whom grew to maturity. He was for many years a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and a director in the Cincinnati & Eastern railroad. In this connection he was instrumental in the construction down the valley of the East fork.

Mr. and Mrs. Spence were the parents of six children: Leota M., who married Melvin Townsend; Alfred B., who lives at home; Edmund S., who lives in California; Daniel T., living in Martinsville; Isaac, deceased; and Susan, who married John Trenary, of Blanchester, Ohio, and they have one child, John. Mr. Spence is an independent voter, and has served as school director. Mrs. Spence died on November 16, 1882.

EARL WIRE BENLEHR.

Earl Wire Benlehr, an enterprising young farmer of Union township, was born on April 13, 1891, in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, and is the son of George H. and Hannah (Bowermaster) Benlehr, the former of whom was born on October 16, 1846, in Union township, Clinton county, and the latter of whom was born on March 8, 1846, in Greene county, Ohio.

George H. Benlehr is a well-known quarryman of Clinton county and a veteran of the Civil War. His parents were Frederick and Lavina Jane (Haws) Benlehr, the former of whom was born near Berlin, Germany, in 1810, and who died on December 25, 1890, and the latter of whom was born on April 23, 1824, in Union township, and who died on April 10, 1849. George H. Benlehr's paternal grandparents were natives of Germany, his grandfather having died in Germany and his grandmother having died en route to America. Mr. Benlehr's maternal grandparents were John and Sarah (Gibson) Haws (sometimes spelled "Hawes"). After the death of John Haws, his widow married George Hartman, who died in 1852. She died in 1867. Frederick Benlehr, the grandfather of Earl Wire, was the founder of the Benlehr family in Clinton county. In 1835 he purchased a farm in Union township and later operated a butcher shop in Wilmington, living on the farm, however, in the meantime. Frederick and Lavina Jane Benlehr had three children, of whom Earl Wire's father was the youngest. The others were: Louisa, born on February 8, 1840, who is the wife of William E. Parker, of Independence, Iowa, who was former superintendent of the Lee county schools; and Sarah, November 5, 1841, who is the wife of Jacob Schlotter, a florist at Keokuk, Iowa.

George H. Benlehr was educated in the public schools of Union township. His mother died when he was three years old and after her death, his father married Elizabeth Lynn and they had three children. George H. lived with his Uncle Jim and Aunt Sarah Haws and before that with his Grandmother Haws while she lived.

When he was only seventeen years old, George H. Benlehr enlisted in Company H, One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served until the close of the war, July 15, 1865, when he received an honorable discharge. For many years after the war he lived on the farm, but in 1913 moved to Wilmington. Nearly twenty years ago he bought the Babb quarry at Todds fork and has been engaged in crushing stone for building purposes ever since. His wife, who was Hannah Bowermaster before her marriage, was the daughter of R. A. and Ann (Venard) Bowermaster, the former of whom was a native of Cookstown, Pennsylvania, and the latter of Clinton county, Ohio. R. A. Bowermaster came with his parents to Clinton county, Ohio, and later moved to Bowersville, Greene county, Ohio, where he was a carpenter by trade.

Earl Wire Benlehr is one of nine children born to his parents, all of whom are living: Cleo Lavina, born on May 5, 1868, who married Ed Bean, a resident of Highland county; Cora, September 4, 1871, who married Seymour Murphy, deceased, and she now lives with her father; Charles E., February 6, 1874, who is a missionary in India for the Christian church; Sarah L., December 21, 1876, who is the wife of Thomas Pond, of Muncie, Indiana; Catherine, June 26, 1879, who became the wife of John Fleming, of Mercer county; Grace E., May 24, 1882, who married Ralph Duffy, of Urbana, Ohio; George A., December 18, 1884, who is a railroad engineer at Lancaster, Ohio; Fred A., July 4, 1887, who is a quarryman and lives at home with his parents; and Earl W., who is the subject of this sketch.

Earl Wire Benlehr attended the public schools of Union township and received practically all of his education at the old "Dutch" school, in district No. 11. However, he attended the public schools in Wilmington, Ohio, and helped his father on the farm in the meantime until 1907, when he rented a farm in Union township, for two years. After that he moved to Huntington, Indiana, where for one year he was a fireman on the Chicago & Erie railroad. In 1910 he returned to Clinton county and after his marriage, began renting his father's farm of seventy-five acres on the Xenia pike in Union township. Mr. Benlehr still farms that land in addition to seventy-five acres adjoining.

On December 14, 1911, Earl Wire Benlehr was married to Myrta Mae Sprague, who was born in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, February 14, 1890, and who is the daughter of George Bruce and Cornelia Catherine (Pidgeon) Sprague, both of whom are living, the former of whom is a prominent farmer and lives on the Port William pike in Union township. Mr. and Mrs. Benlehr have one child, Dorothy Hannah, born on May 10, 1913.

Earl W. Benlehr is a Democrat. He and his wife are members of the Christian church in Wilmington. He is a capable young farmer and business man and popular in the community where he lives.

ELI HAINES.

Of the many respected citizens and successful farmers now living retired in Wilmington, Ohio, Eli Haines, who owns a farm of one hundred and twenty-three acres in Clinton county, should be mentioned. He is descended from one of the very earliest settlers of this county, his great-grandfather, Jacob Haines, who was a native of Pennsylvania, having come to Ohio in 1803 and to Clinton county in the spring of 1804.

Eli Haines was born on August 9, 1857, in Caesars Creek township, Greene county, Ohio, the son of Samuel and Mary (Bales) Haines, the former of whom was born in 1818, near New Burlington, Ohio, and died in October, 1903, and the latter of whom was born in Greene county, Ohio, in 1820, and died in 1906.

Mr. Haines's paternal grandparents were Zimri and Elizabeth (Compton) Haines, the former of whom came from New Jersey with his parents. He was married near New Burlington, Ohio, and, having learned the cabinet-maker's trade in Philadelphia, followed this trade to some extent in early life. After coming to Ohio, he became a farmer, buying his land very cheaply. During the early years of his life, he owned about twelve hundred acres of land. He and his wife were members of the Friends church. He died at the age of eighty-seven, and she at a very advanced age.

Jacob Haines, who may be regarded as the founder of the Haines family in Ohio, was born in Pennsylvania, February 19, 1778, and when a young man moved with his parents to Guilford county, North Carolina. In 1800 he was married to Mary Leonard and three years later came to Ohio, remaining at Waynesville for a short time, after which he came to Union township, Clinton county, in the spring of 1804. His family consisted of his wife and one child, Zimri, who spent most of his life in this county. Jacob Haines passed away on June 17, 1854.

The maternal grandfather of Eli Haines was Elisha Bales, who lived in Greene county, Ohio, on the middle fork of Caesars creek, where he owned a farm of two hundred acres.

Samuel Haines grew up in Greene county, Ohio, and after inheriting a part of his father's home farm, added to it until he owned five hundred acres. He was a prominent man in local politics in Greene county and held several township offices. He was a Republican and a member of the Friends church, both he and his wife being elders in the church. They had eleven children, two of whom died in infancy and four of whom died in later life, namely: Amos, who died when a young man and who was a prominent church worker; Sarah, who married H. C. Faulkner and died in May, 1913; Zimri, who died of typhoid fever at the age of thirty-three; Elisha, who also died of typhoid fever after his marriage. The living children are: Eunice, who married Ed Bales, of Greene county, Ohio; Eli, the subject of this sketch; Hannah, who is the widow of Professor Calvin, and lives in Spring Valley, Ohio, and Alfred, who is a farmer of Greene county.

Eli Haines attended the public schools of Paintersville, Ohio, and lived at home on the farm until he was married. He purchased one hundred and twenty-three acres of the home farm and still owns that tract of land. In October, 1908, he purchased twenty-seven acres of land at the edge of Wilmington, Ohio, where he built a modern house and now has a comfortable home.

On September 20, 1882, Eli Haines was married to Louisa E. Faulkner, who was born in Greene county, Ohio, one mile from her husband's birthplace, the daughter of Allen and Elizabeth A. Faulkner, both of whom are still living, he being ninety years of age and she eighty-eight. Mr. and Mrs. Haines have had four children, one of whom is deceased, Homer, who was born in 1888, and died on February 13, 1901. The living children are: Lizzie Mary, born on June 23, 1884, who married J. R. Middleton and lives on a farm in Caesars Creek township, Greene county; Bernice, July 2, 1893, who is a school teacher; and Sylvester, August 28, 1904.

Mr. and Mrs. Haines and family are members of the Friends church and he was an elder in the church. He is identified with the Republican party.

WILLIAM HUNT.

Among the successful farmers of Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, is William Hunt, who was born on the farm where he now lives on March 8, 1870, the son of William S. and Phoebe (Haworth) Hunt, natives of Virginia and Clinton county, Ohio, respectively, the former of whom was born in 1816, the son of Thomas and Susan (Greene) Hunt, natives of North Carolina, who moved to Virginia and in 1818 to a farm north of Martinsville, where they remained until their death. The paternal great-grandfather was Robert Hunt.

Mr. Hunt's maternal grandparents were Ezekiel and Elizabeth (West) Haworth, natives of Tennessee and Virginia respectively. Ezekiel Haworth was the son of Mahlon and Phoebe (Frazier) Haworth, both natives of Tennessee who, before 1800, located on Todds fork near Wilmington, entering land from the government, where they died. Mahlon Haworth was the son of George and Elizabeth (Dillon) Haworth, who lived in Tennessee a part of their life but later immigrated to Clinton county. Ezekiel Haworth, the maternal grandfather, lived with his parents until his marriage, and then removed to Clark township. He and his wife both died in this township. On both sides of Mr. Hunt's family, he is descended from Quaker stock. Some of his ancestors came over to America with William Penn.

Mr. Hunt was educated in the common schools and in the New Vienna high school. He taught school for ten years in Clark township, including six years at Martinsville. Since leaving the school room he has been engaged in farming with the exception of six months spent in the railway service. Mr. Hunt has a fine farm of one hundred and fifty acres in Clark township, where he carries on general farming and stock raising. He has made quite a success in breeding a big-boned type of Poland China hogs, all registered, pure-bred stock.

On July 29, 1896, William Hunt was married to Alvaretta Long, who was reared in Clinton county but who was a resident of Greenfield, Indiana, at the time of her marriage, a daughter of Henry and Rachel (Moore) Long, of Green township and Washington township respectively, the former of whom served in the War of the Rebellion for four years.

Mr. Hunt is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, Modern Woodmen of America, and Junior Order of United American Mechanics. He is a member of the board of trustees of Wilmington College, president of the Martinsville Creamery Company, and one of its organizers. He is a well-known Republican in this county and served as township trustee, and for the past twelve years a member of the Clinton County Republican Central Committee. Mr. and Mrs. Hunt are members of the Friends church.

COL. OWEN WEST.

Among those men of sterling attributes of character, who have impressed their personality upon the community life of Clinton county and who have borne their full share in the agricultural, industrial, commercial and financial development of this great county, few men have had a larger part than Col. Owen West, of Lynchburg. He has exerted a strong influence for good on the entire county and is a man of upright principles, one who has always desired the advancement of the community along moral, educational and material lines. He is the inventor and manufacturer of the West tile ditching machine and in years past has invented useful fences and gates. In addition to all of his other activities, he has been an extensive contractor and builder and was one of the organizers and is still president of the Lynchburg Exchange Bank.

Col. Owen West was born on March 4, 1835, in Clark township, the son of James and Elizabeth West. In the veins of this family flows the warm and ardent blood of artistic temperament which gave to the world the celebrated artist, Benjamin West, who gained an international fame in his day and generation.

Before the year 1716, John W. West, who had married Sarah Pearson, came from England and settled in Pitts county, Pennsylvania. They had seven children: Joseph, Mary, William, Sarah, Samuel, Rachel and Benjamin. Benjamin, the youngest child of this family, was an artist heretofore referred to, whose work was well known on two continents. Joseph, the eldest, married Jane Owen, the daughter of John Owen, and they had nine children: Isaac, Tacy, Owen, John, Sarah, Joseph, Hannah, George and Benjamin. About 1750, Owen West, the third child of this family, and the nephew of the celebrated Benjamin West, was born. He married Elizabeth Martin and moved from Pennsylvania to Virginia and later from Virginia to Clinton county, Ohio. He and his wife had thirteen children: Nancy, Jane, William, Mary, Susan, Owen, Thomas, James, Payton, Elizabeth, Amelia, Rebecca and John. Of this family, James, the eighth child, whose wife was Elizabeth West, was the father of Col. Owen West. The grandfather, Owen West, came to Ohio from Virginia and located in the valley of the East fork of Little Miami river, where he purchased nineteen hundred acres of government land, all in Clinton county and nearly all in Clark township, where he and his wife died. James West, their son, was a farmer during his life and remained on the old estate, adding to his inheritance until he owned one thousand acres of the original nineteen hundred. He and his wife died on the old home estate. For nine years he was a justice of the peace in this county.

Col. Owen West, farmer, manufacturer, inventor and soldier, was reared to manhood on his father's farm and educated in the Martinsville schools and at Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware. For twelve consecutive years, with the exception of two years in which he was engaged in the mercantile business at Morrisville, he was engaged in teaching. During the War of the Rebellion he assisted in the organization of the Cincinnati Home Guards, and in 1863 he was chosen their major-general. In the early part of 1864, he was given the rank of lieutenant-colonel of the One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regimental Battalion of Ohio National Guards. He had commanded them for one year while at Fort Federal Hill and Baltimore, Maryland, and in the battle of Monocacy, in September, 1864, he and his regiment were honorably discharged for valuable services rendered to their country.

At the close of his military services, Colonel West returned home and resumed farming and lumbering. For some time he owned and operated two saw-mills, each with a capacity of five thousand feet a day. In 1914, after five years' labor, he placed on the market the West tile ditching machine of his own invention. He manufactures this machine at his factory on his farm just out of Lynchburg. The company is incorporated as the West Tile Ditching Machine Company. Some years ago he also invented a fence and a gate which were successes in their day. He operates three hundred acres of land which he has reclaimed by dikes and which includes considerable bottom land. Colonel West has also been a contractor and builder and there are many buildings standing now in Lynchburg and vicinity which he erected. He has also operated a brick and tile plant on his farm and is the present president of the Lynchburg Exchange Bank.

On September 20, 1855, Colonel West was married to Elizabeth A. Roberts, the daughter of James and Hannah E. Roberts, a native of Washington township, who was born on December 23, 1835. Nine children were born to this union: Margaret, James W., Anna M., Owen A., Hannah E., Amos F., Charles H., Laura E. (deceased), and Mary I. (deceased). Margaret married Rev. McLean Simington; Owen A. is a physician at Sabina, Ohio; Laura E. and Mary I. are deceased. Mrs. West passed away on February 1, 1879.

Colonel West is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Fraternally, he is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is a stalwart adherent of the principles of the Republican party and supports its candidates.

Colonel West married, secondly, September 19, 1882, Frances Alta Kelly, daughter of Rollin and Sarah Kelly, who are natives of Highland county, Ohio. To this second marriage the following children were born: Martha, who lives at home; George, who operates the home farm; Sylvia, a teacher at Lynchburg, Highland county, Ohio; Frances, deceased; Manetta, deceased, and Benjamin, who lives at home.

GEORGE P. WORRELL.

George P. Worrell, the proprietor of one hundred and eleven acres of good farming land in Clark township, and a brother of James G. Worrell, of this township, was born on August 10, 1868, in Mason county, West Virginia, the son of Granville and Louisa (Hubbard) Worrell, both natives of the eastern part of West Virginia.

The paternal grandfather of George P. Worrell was James Worrell, who spent all his life in Virginia. The maternal grandfather of Mr. Worrell was Samuel Hubbard, who lived and died in Mercer county, West Virginia.

Granville Worrell was educated in the early subscription schools of Carroll county, West Virginia, and, after his marriage there, moved to Gallia county, Ohio, during the Civil War, living there until 1870, when he returned to West Virginia and settled on the Kanawha river. He died in Nicholas county, West Virginia, as did also his wife. During the Civil War, he was drafted in the Confederate army but later deserted and, upon immigrating to Ohio, joined an Ohio regiment of the Union army and served until the close of the war. He was a drummer in his regiment and during his entire service was not wounded nor taken prisoner. He and his wife had twelve children They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

George P. Worrell was educated in the schools of West Virginia and began life on his own responsibility by working by the month in Clinton county, Ohio. On March 4, 1904, he purchased one hundred and eleven acres of land in Clark township, where he now lives.

George P. Worrell was married on December 9, 1896, to Magnolia Emma Emery, of Highland county, Ohio, the daughter of John Emery, a farmer of Highland county. John Emery was born near New Market, Highland county, March 27, 1819, a son of Samuel and Sarah (Anderson) Emery, early settlers of Highland county. They came to Highland county, likely, from Pennsylvania. The former was a farmer and was educated in the early schools of Highland county. John Emery became a farmer also and owned fifty acres of land. He was married on March 25, 1852, to Barbara Emery, the daughter of William and Phoebe Emery, of New Market. William Emery, who was, for some time, a resident of near New Market, later moved to Missouri, where he and his wife died. John Emery died in 1910, on the farm. His wife had died previously, in 1897. They had eleven children. During the Civil War he served for one hundred days in the Union army. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

To Mr. and Mrs. George P. Worrell have been born three children, Chester Emery, Lura Evelyn and Raymond Harold. The Worrell family are all members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

ORLAND TOWNSEND.

Orland Townsend, a well-known farmer of Clark township, was born on January 18, 1860, at Martinsville, Ohio, the son of Josiah M. and Esther J. (West) Townsend, both natives of Clinton county. Josiah M. Townsend was born in 1832, and received a limited education in the schools of this county and Hamilton county, Ohio.

After removing to Hamilton county at the age of thirteen years, Josiah M. Townsend drove a milk wagon. Previously he had worked on a farm in Clinton county at a dollar a week. About 1850, Josiah M. Townsend engaged in the dairy business in Hamilton county, and was engaged in this business intermittently until thirty-seven years of age, at which time he purchased the farm in Clark township, upon a part of which his son, Orland, now lives. He purchased four hundred acres, comprising the old West homestead. He was a general farmer and stockman, and lived on this farm until his death. He and his family were members of the Friends church. Josiah M. Townsend was honored by the people of Clinton county by an election to the office of county commissioner, a position which he filled creditably for three years. He was a member of the Free and Accepted Masons and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Josiah M. Townsend and wife were the parents of nine children, two of whom died in infancy.

Orland Townsend received his education in the public schools of Clinton county, and aside for a year spent in working at the carpenter's trade, he has been engaged in farming all his life. He owns one hundrd and ninety acres of the old home place.

In October, 1882, Orland Townsend was married to Mary Leaf, the daughter of John T. Leaf, and to this union have been born two sons, Horace and Lloyd. Horace married Mary Hazard, and they live at Ashtabula, Ohio, and Lloyd married Ada Noftsger, the daughter of G. B. Noftsger, of whom a biography is presented elsewhere in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Townsend are the parents of one son, William Eugene. Orland Townsend and wife are members of the Friends church, in whose welfare they are actively interested.

George Alfred Townsend, a brother of Orland Townsend, is also a native of Clark township, born on the home farm, July 15, 1873. The paternal grandparents of George and Orland Townsend were Josiah and Abigal (Holloway) Townsend, natives of Cape May county, New Jersey, and Virginia, respectively. They were married on November 14, 1818. The maternal grandparents of George A. and Orland Townsend entered the homestead where the two brothers now live. The maternal grandfather was Peyton West, a surveyor by occupation.

George and Orland Townsend were two of nine children born to their parents, of whom Orland was the eldest, and George was the seventh in the order of their birth. The other children were Clinton, Josiah, Cammie M., Sarah E., Herbert H., Melville W. and May.

George Townsend received his education in the common schools of Clinton county, and the Normal School at Lebanon, where he spent two years, and also at a business college in Cincinnati. For fourteen years he was engaged in the live-stock business at Lynchburg, but in August, 1908, he removed to the farm where he now lives, and which is a part of the old home place. He is the owner of two hundred and twenty acres of land and is engaged in general farming and stock raising.

In 1897, Mr. Townsend was married to Jessie Thompson, of Highland county, Ohio, and to this union two children have been born, Vivian, who died at the age of nine months, and Harry T. In 1903, Mr. Townsend was married, secondly, to Hattie M. Thompson, a sister of his former wife, and to this marriage there have been born three children, Floyd E., Dana G. and Harold E. Mrs. Townsend is an adherent of the Methodist Episcopal church, while Mr. Townsend's family are members of the Friends church.

George Townsend is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, at Lynchburg. He has served as treasurer of Dodson township, as councilman of Lynchburg, and as a justice of the peace in Highland county, Ohio.

J. FRANK WEST.

Clinton county has been fortunate in the character of her farmers and much of the material prosperity of the county can be attributed to the fact that the farmers have kept abreast of the times. The farmers are an index to the civilization of any community and if they are progressive and up-to-date, it follows that the standard of living in the community will be high. The business men of the towns are drawing the men from the country and everywhere it is noticed that men rising to prominence in the various activities of life were born and reared on the farm. Clinton county has long been known as one of the best farming counties of the state and its excellent farmers have been one of the big factors in the material advancement of the county. Among the excellent farmers of Clinton county is J. Frank West, the scion of an old and distinguished family of this county.

J. Frank West was born on August 1, 1852, in Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of James M. and Amy (Chaney) West, the former a native of Clark township and the latter a native of Highland county, having been born near Dunns chapel.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. West were James and Elizabeth (Leggett) West, the former of whom was a native of eastern Virginia, who came to Ohio very early in life. His maternal grandparents were Joseph and Sarah (Richner) Chaney; the former of whom was a native of Maryland, born near Hagerstown in 1777, who came to Highland county, Ohio, early in life, and died there on April 18, 1862, and the latter was a native of Pennsylvania, born near Philadelphia in March, 1785, and died on October 31, 1859, in Highland county, Ohio.

Among the celebrated men whom the West family of America has given to this country and to the world is the celebrated artist, Benjamin West. Reverting to the earlier ancestry, it may be said that about 1716 John W. West, who had married Sarah Pearson, came from England and settled in Pitts county, Pennsylvania. They had seven children, Joseph, Mary, William, Sarah, Samuel, Rachel and Benjamin. Benjamin, the youngest child in this family, was the first great American artist and his work came to be known not only in America, but in the fashionable salons of Europe. Joseph, the eldest child in this family, married Jane Owen, the daughter of John Owen, and they had nine children, Isaac, Facy, Owen, John, Sarah, Joseph, Hannah, George and Benjamin. Owen West, the third child of the above family, was born about 1750. He married Elizabeth Martin and they moved from Pennsylvania to Virginia, and later from Virginia to Clinton county, Ohio. He and his wife had thirteen children, Nancy, Jane, William, Mary, Susan, Owen, Thomas, James, Payton, Elizabeth, Emily, Rebecca and John. James, the eighth child in this family, married Elizabeth Leggett and they were the paternal grandparents of J. Frank West.

James M. West, the father of J. Frank, was educated in an old log cabin school house, the frame of which is now a part of the garage on the farm of J. Frank West. He became a farmer on land adjoining that now owned by his son and owned altogether about eight hundred acres. His family were members of the Methodist Episcopal church. To James M. and Amy West were born nine children, among whom were five sons.

Educated in the public schools of Clinton county, J. Frank West engaged in farming in Clark township upon attaining his majority. He owns two hundred acres of land and, for the past twenty-six years, has lived where he now resides. With the exception of the house, Mr. West has erected all of the buildings now standing on his farm.

On October 4, 1883, J. Frank West was married to Elva Leaf, who was born on March 6, 1859, a native of Clinton county, and the daughter of John T. and Belinda (Dumford) Leaf. They have been the parents of three children: Carl J., who is an instructor in mathematics in Ohio State University; Grace B., who is now a post-graduate student in Ohio State University; and Howard R., who is a student in the Cincinnati Academy of Fine Arts.

Mr. and Mrs. West and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Not only are they prominent in the church, but they are prominent in the social life of this township and are highly-respected citizens.

BERNARD Y. COLLETT.

The Collett family in America is of French Huguenot origin and is perhaps derived from one of three brothers of that faith, who, about 1660, fled from France on account of religious persecution. One fled to the mountains with a number of other people of his faith; one fled to England, from which either he or his descendants eventually immigrated to America. A third, with his wife, embarked on a ship to America and, during the voyage, the mother gave birth to a son and a little later died and was buried at sea. The child lived and was named Stephen and eventually located in Maryland near where Baltimore now stands. He married Elizabeth Armstrong, who was born on August 18, 1725, and they had eight children. Five of these children are unaccounted for. Practically the whole family, however, moved to Jefferson county, Virginia, about the time of the breaking out of the Revolutionary War. Daniel, the third child in the family of Stephen and Elizabeth Collett, who was born on February 2, 1752, was a soldier in the Continental army and a prominent judge in Virginia. About 1780 he married Mary Haines, who was born on October 10, 1753, and they had eight sons and a daughter, who, with his brother, John, and his sister, Sarah, are the ancestors of all of the Colletts in Clinton and Warren counties. Among these sons was Jonathan, who hauled the stone and also a part of the lumber and timber used in the construction of the United States arsenal at Harpers Ferry.

Bernard Y. Collett, one of the widely-known and highly-respected farmers of Chester township, is the grandson of Jonathan Collett, the great-grandson of Daniel and Mary (Haines) Collett and the great-great-grandson of Stephen and Elizabeth (Armstrong) Collett. Bernard Y. Collett was born on August 7, 1853, near Harveysburg, in Warren county. His parents were Benjamin and Sarah (Yeo) Collett, the former of whom was born in Chester township, August 26, 1829. She was the daughter of Joshua and Allie (Duffey) Yeo. They were married on October 3, 1850.

Jonathan Collett, heretofore referred to as the son of Daniel and Mary (Haines) Collett, was married on April 30, 1823, to Sarah McKay, a representative of the famous McKay family of this county, who was born on November 11, 1799, in Warren county, and whose parents, who had come originally from Virginia to Warren county, settled in Clinton county as early as 1814. Jonathan and Sarah (McKay) Collett had ten children, namely: Ann, born on March 14, 1824, who married William McCune; Moses, June 7, 1825; Benjamin, December 18, 1826; Francis, May 17, 1829; Martha, February 1, 1831; Aaron, October 19, 1832; George, December 21, 1834; William, June 30, 1838; Robert, December 27, 1840; and Azel Waters, September 17, 1842. The family were all members of the Baptist church. It was with the money obtained from work on the United States arsenal at Harpers Ferry that Jonathan Collett was able to buy a large tract of land.

Jonathan Collett's father, Daniel Collett, was a devout Episcopalian, who entered the Revolutionary army under Captain Wright, of Martinsburg, Virginia, and served at Valley Forge, White Plains and at the defeat of General Gates. He also served when the Virginia volunteers were encamped in Pennsylvania, and also fought at the battle of Monmouth. He resided in Virginia for forty years and for many years was a justice of the peace, being appointed as they were in that day in Virginia for life or during good behavior. He held his court monthly and it is said that there was more dignity attending the justices' courts in those days than is to be seen today in the higher courts of Ohio. On one occasion the judge of the court of Jefferson assessed a fine upon each of the justices of that county for neglect to provide suitable steps to the jail at Charleston. Mr. Collett paid his fine and then took the contract for erecting the stone steps which now grace the front of that historic edifice.

Of the ten children born to Jonathan and Sarah (McKay) Collett, Benjamin Collett, the father of Bernard Y., was the third. He was educated in the common schools of Chester township and began his life as a farmer in Warren county, but after a few years returned to Chester township, where he remained the rest of his life on a farm of one hundred and fifty acres. Benjamin and Sarah (Yeo) Collett had four children: Alley, who died small; Bernard Y., the subject of this sketch; Mary, who died at the age of nine years; and Anna M. The father of these children died on October 12, 1892, and the mother in 1907. They were members of the Baptist church. He was a Republican in politics. During the Civil War, he served as captain of the home militia and was later promoted to colonel. At one time, he was paymaster of the local militia.

Bernard Y. Collett, the second child born to his parents, received his education in the schools of Chester township and at Harveysburg. He has been a farmer practically all of his life. He and his sister have a farm of three hundred and thirty acres which is highly improved.

On December 23, 1874, Bernard Y. Collett was married to Emma Shidaker, who was born on October 16, 1856, and died on November 27, 1903, leaving one child, Edith, who married Shirley Scott, of Milford, Ohio.

Bernard Y. Collett was elected as a delegate from Clinton county to the constitutional convention of 1912. He is a Republican.

In 1914 the Collett families in Clinton county celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of the coming of the family to this section. One hundred and one members of the family were present at this reunion. During the last forty-nine years, the Collett and McKay families have held a family picnic every year without exception, and in all of this period Bernard Y. Collett has been a regular attendant. The forty-ninth annual reunion was held on Saturday, August 14, 1915.

GEORGE M. DENNY.

George M. Denny, of Chester township, is an unpretentious, unassuming man, who has had a large success in agriculture and who is well known throughout Clinton county. Mr. Denny was born on February 11, 1871, in Chester township, on the farm where he lives.

The parents of George M. Denny were John P. and Martha (Collett) Denny, the former of whom was born on July 4, 1823, near Lebanon, in Warren county, and the latter was born on February 1, 1831, the daughter of Jonathan and Sarah (McKay) Collett. On his mother's side, therefore, Mr. Denny is connected with two of the very oldest families in Clinton county. His grandfather on his paternal side, John Denny, married Hannah Leap. He was born on December 22, 1782, in New Jersey, and died on September 3, 1853, and his wife was born on October 13, 1792, in New Jersey, and died on March 28, 1870. They came to Ohio after their marriage and located in Warren county. After moving to this county and settling in Chester township, they lived on a farm all of their lives. Eleven children were born to John and Hannah Denny: Thomas, born on January 12, 1813; Martha, September 18, 1814; Peter, January 10, 1816; Faithful, August 26, 1818; Hannah, February 7, 1821; John P., July 4, 1823; Sarah, August 21, 1825; Elizabeth, October 17, 1827; Joseph, November 23, 1829; Samuel, March 31, 1832; and Abigal, September 26, 1835.

John P. Denny was a farmer in Chester township, where he spent all of his life and where he owned four hundred and twenty-eight acres of land. He owned the farm upon which his son, George M., now lives and he erected all of the buildings which now stand on this farm. George M. Denny was one of two children born to his parents, the other being Anna C., who is unmarried.

George M. Denny was educated in the common schools of Chester township and has spent his entire life on the farm. He is one of the most extensive farmers of the township, he and his sister owning five hundred and forty-three acres of land at the present time.

On October 24, 1894, George M. Denny was married to Mary Antram, the daughter of Ansalem and Louisa (Dakin) Antram. To this marriage two children have been born: John A., born on October 23, 1896; and Ruth McKay, August 7, 1913.

Mr. and Mrs. George M. Denny are members of the Jonas Run Baptist church and Mr. Denny, like his father before him, votes the Republican ticket. In this section of Clinton county, few families have occupied a position of greater prominence during the past half century than the Dennys.

ELMER CARTER.

Elmer Carter, a farmer of Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, was born on October 31, 1869, in Adams county, Ohio, a son of William Jasper and Mary Elizabeth (Storer) Carter, both of whom were natives of Adams county.

William Jasper Carter was born on January 31, 1845, in Adams county, Ohio, and was married on October 21, 1868, to Mary Elizabeth Storer, who was born on March 7, 1847, in Adams county, and was a daughter of George and Miriam (Ramsey) Storer. William Jasper Carter's father was Leander Carter, who was born on September 18, 1818, in the Old Dominion state, and who married Elizabeth Beaty. Leander Carter and wife came to Ohio immediately after their marriage and located in Adams county, Ohio, where they lived the remainder of their lives. There they owned eighty-seven acres of land and were farmers by occupation. They were the parents of nine children, Susannah V., Sarah E., William Jasper, Margaret Jane, Francis M., Martha Ann, Mary R., Laura, Emma. Of these children, Mary R., is deceased. The grandfather's family were members of the Methodist church, and he voted the Republican ticket.

William Jasper Carter was educated in the common schools of Adams county, Ohio, and began life as a farmer in that county. There he remained until 1897, at which time he removed to Clark township, Clinton county. Thirteen years later he purchased the farm where he now lives near Martinsville. To William Jasper and Elizabeth (Storer) Carter were born five children, Elmer, Rosa, Lillie, Zora and Edgar. Of these children Lillie and Edgar are deceased. The family are all members of the Methodist church, while William J. Carter votes the Republican ticket.

Educated in the common schools of Adams county, Ohio, Elmer Carter began farming on his own account in that county, and followed that occupation for eight years. He came to Clinton county, Ohio, February, 1897, with his parents, and has since lived in Clark township. He lived one mile west of Martinsville, and for twelve years lived on the David Hunt farm. About 1910 he purchased sixty-three acres of land where he now lives, and which is devoted to general farming and stock raising. Mr. Carter is an extensive feeder of hogs, and has made a considerable success of this line of farming.

On January 9, 1890, Elmer Carter was married to Anna Kennedy, who was born on November 7, 1865, a native of Adams county, Ohio, and a daughter of James Kennedy, a native of Ireland and an early settler in Adams county, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Carter are the parents of two children, Ray, who is farming in North Dakota, and Ruby, who is at home. The family are members of the Methodist church, in which they take an active interest.

C. D. KESTER.

C. D. Kester, a retired farmer of Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, and formerly a well-known merchant of Farmers Station, was born on December 20, 1841, in Clinton county. He is the son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Carey) Kester, who were natives of Grayson county, Virginia. Daniel Kester was born on May 30, 1811, and his wife in May, 1814. The former accompanied his parents to Clinton county in 1814. The latter was reared at Careytown, Highland county.

Of Daniel Kester, it may be said that he spent only three months in school. Eager for knowledge, he studied by the light of splinters by the fireside and became a well-informed man. He learned the carpenter's trade, and followed it for many years. Subsequently he purchased land and engaged in farming. In the last years of his life, however, he was occupied with his trade. He owned three hundred and eighty-five acres of land at the time of his death, all of which he had bought and paid for himself. When he started life on his own responsibility at the age of twenty years, he was given an ax and a pair of "jeans" by his master. Daniel and Elizabeth (Carey) Kester had eleven children, Miles, Anna, John, Carey D., Hannah, Rachel, Tamer E., Mary, Sarah, Jessie and Daniel S. The family were members of the Friends church, and all have remained faithful to the church of their fathers. Elizabeth (Carey) Kester was the daughter of Samuel and Anna (McPherson) Carey natives of Grayson county, Virginia, who immigrated first to Highland county, Ohio, and later to Martinsville, Clinton county. They died in Clark township at the home of a daughter. Samuel Carey was a blacksmith by trade, and owned one hundred acres of land in Highland county at the time of his death.

C. D. Kester was reared to manhood on his father's farm, and engaged in farming during most of his active career. In December, 1864, he enlisted in Company F, Eighty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served until the close of the war, being discharged on July 3, 1865. In January, 1878, he was employed as manager of the Farmers Station Joint Stock Company, and held this position for five years. During the same period he was the agent for the Baltimore & Ohio railroad at Farmers Station and also the postmaster. For many years he dealt extensively in live stock and in 1881 shipped two thousand head of hogs. He abandoned the stock business about 1890, and removed to Warren county where he followed farming. Subsequently, however, he returned to Wayne township, Clinton county, where he farmed for eleven years, until November 15, 1897, when he removed to Farmers Station and retired. In 1913 he erected new buildings at Farmers Station on the property which he owns and where he now resides.

On September 8, 1866, C. D. Kester was married to Nancy Betterton, a daughter of William and Delilah Betterton, a native of Clark township, where she was born on August 16, 1846. William Betterton was a native of Virginia, born on May 12, 1811. He was educated in the Old Dominion state, and immigrated first to Illinois where he was married and where his first wife died. They had one child who died later in life. Afterwards, William Betterton came to Clinton county and was here married to Delilah King, a native of Clark township, born on May 25, 1823, and the daughter of William and Nancy King, natives of Grayson county, Virginia. They were early settlers in Clark township and farmers by occupation. They were also members of the Christian church. Although William Betterton and wife were Universalists, they attended other churches. They had two children: John M., who died on April 22, 1913, and Mrs. C. D. Kester.

Of the four children born to Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Kester, two, Etta and Milton L., are living, and Ada M. and Eva E. are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Kester are members of the Society of Friends. Mr. Kester is a Republican. For many years he was prominently identified with the State Grange, and served this organization as master of Eureka grange.

HENRY DEBOLT JONES.

Henry Debolt Jones, who, for many years, was a well-known business man of Cincinnati, Ohio, and later a successful farmer of Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, was born at Newtown, in Hamilton county, Ohio, May 19, 1844, a son of James and Eliza (Debolt) Jones, both of whom were natives of Newtown, Hamilton county. James Jones was a farmer in Hamilton county, and his parents were pioneers of Hamilton county.

The paternal grandfather of Henry Debolt Jones was Henry Debolt, Sr., and he built the Debolt Exchange in the city of Cincinnati. He owned hundreds of acres of land in Hamilton and Clermont counties, having been one of the best-known pioneer citizens of southern Ohio.

Henry Debolt Jones received his elementary education in the public schools of Hamilton county, Ohio, and supplemented this by a course at the St. Xavier school at Cincinnati, a Catholic institution. He learned bookkeeping at the " Favorite" store in Cincinnati, and followed this occupation practically all the time he lived in that city, with the exception of three or four years when he was engaged in the commission business on his own responsibility. Cincinnati was his home until 1902, when he removed to the farm, where his widow now lives. Here he remained until his death, on February 19, 1908.

On October 17, 1885, Henry Debolt Jones was married to Minnie M. Turner, a native of Clark township, who was born on the farm where she now lives on January 7, 1861. She is a daughter of William and Nancy Jane (McCann) Turner, both of whom were born at Perintown, Clermont county, Ohio.

Mrs. Jones' paternal grandparents were Daniel and Susan Turner, while her maternal grandparents were William and Elizabeth (Carter) McCann, of Lynchburg, Virginia, who located in Perintown, Clermont county, Ohio, in an early day. They died in Clark township, Clinton county.

William and Nancy Jane Turner were educated in the schools of Clermont county. The former was a farmer during his life, who came to Clinton county some time prior to his marriage in 1859. He was the owner of one hundred and eighty-five acres of land and during his life erected a magnificent brick house and also built large and commodious barns, and otherwise improved his farm. He was a member of the Grange, in the welfare of which organization he was deeply interested. He and his wife were the parents of three children, Minnie M., Daniel and an infant son. They also reared Daniel H. Turner, who was a son of Mr. Turner's brother, Henry.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Jones were the parents of one daughter, Mabel Turner, who is living at home with her mother. She is the wife of Robert T. Conlin, a native of Canada, and they have one son, Robert Henry. Mrs. Jones is an earnest and devoted member of the Society of Friends, and takes an active interest in the affairs of that denomination.

The late Henry Debolt Jones was a well-known citizen, not only in Clark township, but of Cincinnati, Ohio, where, for some time, he was a prominent figure in the business life of the city.

Mrs. Jones now owns the home place, known as the "Fox" Turner farm of one hundred and thirty-five acres, also fifty acres in another tract, all in Clark township.

CHARLES W. SKIMMING.

Conspicuous among the farmers of Clinton county, Ohio, and numbered among its leading citizens is Charles W. Skimming, of Union township, who is a public-spirited citizen, well known in Clinton county for his activities in public affairs, and at present one of the commissioners of the county. Previously he served two terms as trustee of union township. He belongs to an old and distinguished family of Clinton county, and by marriage is connected with another very old family of this county, and one which has filled many important positions of trust and responsibility.

Charles W. Skimming was born on August 14, 1866, in Union township, a son of Robert Skimming, who was born in Allegheny county, Maryland, June 3, 1830, and who married Mary E. Babb, December 6, 1853. She was born on June 6, 1830, in Clinton county, Ohio, the daughter of Henry and Matilda (Woodruff) Babb.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Skimming were Anthony and Mary (McDow) Skimming, both of whom were natives of bonnie Scotland, the former was born in Edinburgh, and died on April 22, 1855. The latter was likewise born in Edinburgh, and their marriage occurred in Scotland. Anthony Skimming and wife came to America in 1818, settling in Allegheny county, Maryland, and here they remained until the autumn of 1836, when they immigrated to Clinton county, Ohio, and settled at Wilmington.

The second generation of the family in Clinton county represented by Robert Skimming, the father of Charles W., gained considerable prominence in public life. Robert Skimming was only six years of age when he accompanied his parents to Clinton county, and received his education in the public schools of this county. He attended Wilmington Academy also, and taught school for six years. In 1860 he embarked in the mercantile business at Burtonville, in Union township, in which he remained for fifteen years. He owned a farm in Union and Washington townships, comprising one hundred and seventy-one acres. About 1875 he retired from the mercantile business and returned to his farm, where he lived the remainder of his life. Four children were born to Robert and Mary E. (Babb) Skimming: Emma, born on November 26, 1854; Samuel H., February 25, 1858; Charles W., the immediate subject of this sketch; and Wilbert, January 10, 1872.

Not only did Robert Skimming serve for fifteen years as a director of the Clinton county infirmary, having been first elected in 1873, but he likewise served two terms as commissioner of Clinton county, having been elected on the Republican ticket. As a member of the Baptist church, he was loyal and devout in the faith of that denomination, and for several years was numbered among its most active workers in this county. He was a deacon in the church at the time of his death.

Charles W. Skimming, like so many of the native born citizens of Clinton county, attended Wilmington College after leaving the common schools, completing his education in that excellent institution. He was a student at this famous old college for two years. While still a young man he began farming in Union township, and except for a period of four years, has spent all his life in this township. These four years were spent in Chester township. Mr. Skimming is the owner of one hundred and seventy-five acres of land on which he lives in Union township.

On January 29, 1891, Charles W. Skimming was married to Martha M. McKay, who was born on November 25, 1870, a daughter of Robert F. and Mary F. (Mickerson) McKay. The history of the McKay family is contained especially in the sketch of Weldon McKay, presented elsewhere in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Skimming are the parents of two children, Robert M. and Mary Helen. The former was born on May 15, 1895, and is now a student at Ohio State University, at Columbus, Ohio. The latter was born on April 14, 1902.

Mr. and Mrs. Skimming are earnest and loyal members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Skimming is identified with the Masonic lodge and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

EBER WATTS HAINES.

Among the well-known young farmers of Chester township, Clinton county, Ohio, is Eber Watts Haines, who is the owner of one hundred and four and one-quarter acres of land, and who, several years ago, was engaged in conducting a general store at Lumberton, Ohio. Since 1909, however, he has devoted his attention exclusively to farming. He is a scion of a very old family in this county, and one whose ancestry had very much to do with clearing the forests and draining the swamps. Eber Watts Haines was born on February 28, 1872, in Caesars Creek township, Greene county, Ohio. His parents were Eber and Mary (Mendenhall) Haines, the former of whom was born on January 20, 1825, in Caesars Creek township, Greene county, and the latter was a daughter of Thaddeus and Priscilla (Sturgeon) Mendenhall.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Haines were Zimri and Elizabeth (Compton) Haines, the former a native of New Jersey, and the latter a native of North Carolina, who came with her parents when four years old to New Burlington, Ohio. Zimri Haines emigrated first from New Jersey to Pennsylvania, and there learned the cabinetmaker's trade. Later he immigrated to Greene county, Ohio, where he lived the remainder of his life. He was the father of nine children, Samuel, Elizabeth, Sarah, Maria, Elwood, Eber and Clayton, Aseph and Phoebe. He voted the Whig ticket and was a member of the Society of Friends.

Eber Haines received a good education in the common schools of Greene county, and followed farming in Caesars Creek township, in that county, until 1882, when he removed to Chester township, Clinton county. When about forty-five years of age, he began preaching in the local Friends church, and continued a minister in that faith until his death, December 19, 1911. He lived to perform the marriage ceremony for many of his grandchildren. The following children were born to Eber and Mary (Mendenhall) Haines: Lydia Ellen, who died while young; Margaret, the wife of John Turner; Zimri D., who married Alice McKay; Thaddeus A., who married Eliza Mary Hiatt; Priscilla, the wife of Jacob B. McKay; Daniel W. and Wilomena, twins, the former of whom married Estella McKay, and the latter died early in life; Mary, the wife of William Hiatt, died at the age of twenty-eight years; and Eber W., the immediate subject of this sketch.

Eber W. Haines was for some time a student at Wilmington College after leaving the common schools, and finished his education in that excellent institution. His career as a farmer was begun in Chester township, where he now lives, and where he owns one hundred and four and one-quarter acres of land. In 1906 he purchased the general store at Lumberton and conducted this business for two years, but in 1909 returned to the farm where he has since lived.

In 1906, Eber W. Haines married Mary Morris, the daughter of Allen and Louisa (Doan) Morris, the former of whom was a farmer of Clinton county. Mrs. Haines was one of four children born to her parents. The others are: Elias H., who married Amelia Stille; John, who married Mary Nye; and Lee, who married Luetta Farris, in 1912. Mrs. Haines' paternal grandfather was John Morris. Mr. and Mrs. Eber W. Haines are the parents of one son, Eber Allen, born on January 18, 1910. The family are all members of the Friends church, Mrs. Haines, however, retaining her membership in the Methodist church.

In 1905, about a year before his marriage, Mr. Haines spent the winter at Wauchula, Florida, with his parents and elder sister. His mother died there unexpectedly, December 27, 1905. Three years later his father spent the winter on Marco Island.

GEORGE E. CROUSE.

Agriculture has been an honorable vocation from the earliest time, and as a usual thing men of humane impulses, as well as those of energy and thrift, have been patrons of husbandry. The free, outdoor life of the farm has a decided tendency to foster and develop that independence of mind and self-reliance which characterize true manhood. Among the industrious and honorable citizens of Union township who have turned their attention to the farm is George E. Crouse.

George E. Crouse was born on February 3, 1856, near Cuba, in Washington township, Clinton county, and is the son of Empson and Mary (Horseman) Crouse, the former of whom was born in Washington township in 1820, and who died in April, 1881, and the latter of whom was born in Union township, Clinton county, in 1821, and who died in 1905. Empson Crouse was the son of John and Rhody (Matson) Crouse. The former was of German extraction, and the son of John Crouse, Sr., who came from Germany to America shortly after the close of the Revolution, when he was eighteen years old. John Crouse, Jr., was born in Frederick county, Virginia, in 1794, and in 1817 was married to Rhoda Matson, a daughter of John Matson. Some time during 1817 he immigrated to Ohio, and settled on land later owned by James Skimming, from whence he moved to Cowans creek on what was known as the Williams farm. John Crouse, Jr., died in 1867 in his seventy-third year. His widow died the next year in 1868. John Crouse, Jr., who was familiarly known as "Uncle Johnny" was a small man physically and one of a very militant disposition. He had little education. In fact he could not write his name, but, nevertheless, owned three farms at the time of his death and was considered very successful for his day and generation. His wife was familiarly known as "Aunt Rhody." They had nine children.

The maternal grandfather of George E. Crouse was Amos Horseman, whose wife died early in life, and after her death he married again. They were members of the Society of Friends and came to Clinton county from Virginia, settling on Cowans creek. Amos Horseman had a fair education. By his two marriages he had twenty-two children, most of whom died early in life of tuberculosis. Only one is now living.

The late Empson Crouse grew up in Washingtoin township, and had little opportunity to obtain an education. He inherited the home farm of one hundred and thirty acres from his father and was a succesful farmer. He was more or less prominent in local Democratic politics and served some time as a school director. Empson and Mary (Horseman) Crouse had eleven children, of whom one, Thurman, the youngest, died at the age of thirty-two; John lives on the home place; Eliza J., deceased, married Will

Conner; Elizabeth married Marion McKibben, a retired farmer of Cuba, Ohio; David H. is an electrician in Iowa; Sarah married James Turner, who is deceased, and now lives near Cuba, Ohio; Rhoda married Frank Ireland, of Washington township; Melvina is unmarried and lives in Cuba; George E. is the subject of this sketch; Charles lives at Aspen, Colorado, where he is a miner; and Della married Harry Dailey, a retired miller of Wilmington.

George E. Crouse was also limited in educational advantages and was able to attend school only three months each year. He remained at home until his marriage, farming the home place, after which he purchased twenty-seven acres of land. In 1902 he sold the farm and purchased eighty acres of the Boyd farm on the New Vienna pike, in Union township. In 1913 Mr. Crouse remodeled the house and barn and refenced the place.

On December 9, 1885, George E. Crouse was married to Addie Osborn, who was born in Adams township, Clinton county, Ohio, and who is the daughter of Peter and Louisa Osborn, the former of whom is a farmer and a minister in the Friends church. Mr. and Mrs. Crouse have had two children, Edna and Osborn. Edna was born on April 30, 1890, and was married to Fred Cast, who died of pneumonia four months after their marriage. Later she was married to Grover Early. Osborn was born on September 8, 1900.

Mr. and Mrs. Crouse formerly were members of the Beech Grove meeting of the Quaker church. Mr. Crouse is identified with the Democratic party.

W. JEFF McKIBBEN.

W. Jeff McKibben, the scion of an old and distinguished family of Clinton county, and a well-known farmer of Clark township, was born in that township on February 18, 1851, the son of John and Matilda (Garner) McKibben, the former of whom was born on December 2, 1809, in Greene township, Clinton county, Ohio, and died on August 24, 1894, and the latter of whom was born on September 3, 1811, in Clark township, Clinton county, and died on October 12, 1883. They were married on April 3, 1834, and had six children, as follow: Mrs. Eliza J. Davis, who was born on July 6, 1836; James M., October 14, 1837, died on November 30, 1913; Mrs. Mary E. Pittzer, July 17, 1843; Mrs. Martha A. Brown, May 6, 1848; J. F. and W. Jeff, twins, February 18, 1851.

John McKibben, Jr., was a son of John and Catherine (Leonard) McKibben, natives of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, the former of whom was a prominent land owner in Green township. Upon leaving Pennsylvania, they first settled in Kentucky, where they spent one year, and from which they immigrated to Green township, Clinton county, about 1803. Here they purchased one thousand acres of land, part of which was cleared. They had purchased a large tract of land in Kentucky, but the title proved defective and the vendor, being an honest man, gave them one thousand acres in Ohio in its place. They died at their home in Green township.

John McKibben, Jr., the father of W. Jeff, was reared as a farmer boy and his educational advantages were limited. His wife was the daughter of James and Polly (Moon) Garner, natives of North Carolina, who were married in Randolph county, North Carolina, in 1794, and moved to Tennessee in 1796, settling just across the road from the home of John Fushee Garner. Polly Moon was the eldest daughter of Joseph and Anna Moon. Mr. and Mrs. James Garner and family remained fifteen years in the state of Tennessee and from that state immigrated to Clinton county, Ohio, with their nine children, one having died in Tennessee. Four more were born after their arrvial in Ohio. It is an interesting fact that within eighty years, James Garner had five hundred and twenty-six descendants. After his marriage, John McKibben, Jr., moved to a farm which he had purchased in 1831. He owned one hundred and thirty-seven acres and was a member of the Grange and a stockholder in the Farmers Staton Joint Stock Company. He was a Republican in politics.

On May 2, 1878, W. Jeff McKibben was married to Mary O. Betts, who was born on October 18, 1851, the daughter of Christopher and Lydia (Huff) Betts, of Clinton county, Ohio.

To Mr. and Mrs. W. Jeff McKibben were born two children, Etta May and Bertha LaTaurette. The latter married Harry Milton Fawcett.

Mr. McKibben has always followed farming. He owns one hundred and ten acres in Clark township and has splendid buildings on his farm.

Mrs. McKibben is a member of the Friends church. Mr. and Mrs. McKibben are members of the Daughters of Rebekah, and Mr. McKibben is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

FRANK L. McDONALD.

Frank L. McDonald, the well-known superintendent of the Clinton county infirmary, is one of the worthy citizens of this county and one who has figured in the growth and development of the agricultural and commercial interests of this great section. Although still in the prime of life, he has been identified for many years with the progress and prosperity of Clinton county and has contributed his resourceful ability to many spheres of action. Earnest purpose and tireless energy, combined with sound judgment and every-day common sense, have been among his most prominent characteristics. He well merits the respect and esteem accorded him by the people of Clinton county.

Frank L. McDonald is connected by birth and marriage to families which have been prominent in the educational, agricultural, civic and political life of this county for more than a century.

Frank L. McDonald was born on November 17, 1871, near the Springfield meeting house in Adams township, Clinton county, the son of James W. and Sarah (Thatcher) McDonald. James W. McDonald was a native of Green township, born near Antioch, October 1, 1844, and died on April 1, 1907. He was the son of Thomas and Sarah (Bloom) McDonald.

Thomas McDonald was a native of Virginia, who located along the Ohio river, in Ohio, when a very young man, settling with his parents in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, where they purchased two hundred acres of land at one dollar and fifty cents an acre. He cleared off the timber and established a home. Thomas and Sarah (Bloom) McDonald were members of the Methodist Protestant church. The former, who was eighteen years older than his wife, died at the age of eighty-two years. His wife died on February 17, 1900, at the age of seventy-five. Thomas McDonald was the son of Jerod and Nancy (Marshal) McDonald, the former of whom was born on August 20, 1768, and died on April 2, 1845, and the latter born on January 3, 1776, and died on August 2, 1861. Both were natives of Virginia and early settlers of Clinton county, Ohio. Ten children were born to Thomas and Sarah McDonald, of whom James W., the father of Frank L., was the eldest. Seven of the children are now deceased and three are living. The names of the children in the order of their births are as follow: James W.; John, deceased, who was born on June 29, 1846; Cyrus B., July 30, 1847, deceased, who lived in Chicago; Alpheus, December 29, 1849, died May 28, 1870, who was a minister of the Methodist Protestant church; Charles H., April 11, 1852, deceased, who had a music store at Chicago, Illinois; Cornelius, May 3, 1854, who is a fruit tree salesman, of Chicago; George M., 1856, deceased, who was a real estate dealer in Dallas, Texas; Mary Ellen, 1859, who married John Watrous and lives in Evanston, Illinois; Thomas Elmer, 1862, deceased, who was a bank clerk at Des Moines, Iowa; and Anna May, April 14, 1870, who is the widow of Charles Compton and lives in Bradford, Pennsylvania.

James W. McDonald, the eldest child of this family, grew up on his father's farm near New Antioch, and in 1863 enlisted in the Thirteenth Ohio Cavalry, serving until the end of the war, when he received an honorable discharge. During his service he received a scalp wound but, with that exception, suffered no more than the ordinary hardships, which hard service entails. He was with the army which pursued Lee at the time of his surrender and at that time was on horseback constantly day and night for fifteen days. In 1864, when he was home on a furlough, he was married. After the war he rented farms for twenty-five years. His health failing in 1885, he moved to Wilmington and worked in a meat market as a meat cutter, following this trade until his death. He was prominent in local politics as a Republican and served as township assessor for several years after moving to Wilmington. He and his wife were members of the Wilmington meeting of the Friends church. In 1887 he purchased a comfortable home on Sugar Tree street, in Wilmington, where his widow now lives.

James W. McDonald was married on December 8, 1864, to Sarah Thatcher, a native of Union township, born three miles southeast of Wilmington, September 4, 1843. She is the daughter of Joseph and Deborah (Hadley) Thatcher, the former of whom was born on June 17, 1813, in Wilmington, Ohio, and died on May 3, 1857, and the latter, born on April 14, 1817, in the Springfield neighborhood of Clinton county, and died on September 1, 1862.

Joseph and Deborah Thatcher had eight children, four of whom are deceased, as follow: Mary Ellen, born on September 20, 1834, died December 25, 1854; William H., October 30, 1837, died September 18, 1857; Susan, July 29, 1840, who married George Brown and lives at Hillsboro Ohio; Sarah, September 4, 1843, who is the widow of James W. McDonald and the mother of Frank L.; Lydia Maria, July 20, 1846, who married Samuel Stattler, of Wilmington; Annie J., May 28, 1849, died June 1, 1881; Emily, August 11, 1852, died April 12, 1879; and Oliver Joseph, November 10, 1857, who for several years prior to 1906 held the chair of medieval history in the University of Chicago.

Joseph Thatcher was the son of Thomas and Susannah (Stratton) Thatcher, the former of whom was a native of Virginia and the latter of North Carolina. He was a tanner by trade and operated a large tannery in Wilmington in pioneer times. Thatcher's addition in Wilmington was named for him. Joseph Thatcher and his wife were farmers and throughout their lives were active members of the Quaker church. He was the clerk of the yearly meeting for many years. Her parents were William and Sarah (Lindley) Hadley, who were natives of North Carolina and early settlers in Clinton county, owning a home in Adams township. Besides being a farmer, Joseph Thatcher was also a blacksmith and operated a shop on his farm.

Frank L. McDonald is one of four children born to his parents, namely: Mary Annetta, who was born on September 24, 1867, is the widow of Frank L. Doan and lives in Columbus, Ohio; Frank L., the subject of this sketch; Thomas Russell, June 30, 1874, died November 20, 1913, in Chicago, where he was a grain merchant; and William Estus, December 17, 1884, is unmarried and is a merchant in Columbus, Ohio.

Frank L. McDonald was educated in the public schools of Union township. He spent his boyhood and youth on a farm. He was fifteen years old in 1886 at the time his parents moved to Wilmington, and here he learned the undertaking and furniture business as an apprentice under C. A. Marble. Seven years after coming to Wilmington, in partnership with Cary A. Holliday, he purchased Mr. Marble's establishment. He continued the business successfully until 1903, when Mr. McDonald sold out to Mr. Holliday and purchased a half interest in the carpet store of Frank Gallup. After four years, Mr. McDonald sold his interest in the Gallup store and purchased the John Hirt farm in Union township. This farm comprised one hundred and forty-seven acres. In 1907 he sold this farm and purchased the Judge Doan homestead in Wilmington. Eight years later he traded the Judge Doan homestead for one hundred and twenty-five acres in the Center neighborhood of Union township.

On March 1, 1913, Mr. McDonald was appointed superintendent of the Clinton county infirmary, a position which is now under the civil service and which he holds during good behavior and satisfactory service.

On September 18, 1895, Frank L. McDonald was married to Fannie M. Doan, who was born in Wilmington, Ohio, and who is the daughter of the late Judge Azariah Doan and his second wife, Martha G. Taylor, of Pennsylvania. Judge Azariah Doan was the son of Jonathan and Phoebe (Wall) Doan, the former of whom was a native of North Carolina and a blacksmith, who came to Ohio in 1804 and located in Union township, where he was a farmer. He died in July, 1874. Phoebe Wall was a native of Pennsylvania, who accompanied her parents to Ohio in 1808. She died in November, 1869. The late Judge Azariah Doan was a well-known lawyer of Clinton county, who served a term of two years in the Ohio state senate and a term of fifteen years as judge of the common pleas court of Clinton county.

Mr. McDonald is a member of all of the branches of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He and his family are ardent members of the Friends church.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonald have had two children: Margery, who was born on November 30, 1902; and Gerald, who was born on June 5, 1905.

HEBER W. CUSTIS.

Heber W. Custis, a prominent and successful young farmer of Union township, was born on the farm where he now lives, on the Washington pike, July 24, 1888, the son of Levi H. and Elizabeth Jane (Vanniman) Custis, the former of whom is a retired farmer of Richland township, and who was born on December 6, 1845, and the latter of whom is a daughter of Elias and Eva (Early) Vanniman, and was born on February 8, 1850. Levi H. Custis is the son of Douglas W. and Renniah (Gustin) Custis, the former of whom was born on December 20, 1811, in Scioto county, Ohio, and the latter of whom is the daughter of Elkany Gustin. Douglas W. Custis was a son of William and Elizabeth (Savage) Custis, the former of whom was twice married. By his first wife, Elizabeth Savage, he had five children, Sallie, John, William, Harriet and Douglas W.

Levi H. Custis was one of seven children born to his parents, as follow: William was born on September 8, 1836; Isaiah, November 2, 1838; Myra, March 18, 1840; Hannah J., July 21, 1843; Levi H., December 26, 1845; Rhoda, October 23, 1848, died on October 10, 1850; and Mary, February 13, 1851.

Heber W. Custis is one of five children born to his parents, and he is the youngest in order of birth. Lillian is the wife of Clark Haines, of Warren county, Ohio. Edna is the wife of Irving Peelle, of Wilmington, Ohio. Dwight married Nettie Hughes. He is a minister at Richwood, Ohio. Maude died in infancy.

Like most lads born and reared in Clinton county, Heber W. Custis attended the district schools, but he had unusual educational advantages in being permitted to attend Wilmington College for two years, after which he took an agricultural short course at Ohio State University, at Columbus. There he received a splendid training for practical farming, and completed the course in 1909. In 1911, Mr. Custis' father retired from active farm life and removed to Sabina, Ohio, since which time Heber W. has rented the home place of one hundred and twelve acres from his father. The farm has a very handsome brick house on the Washington pike, with an avenue of maples leading back to the house. Mr. Custis bought seventy-seven acres of land from his father near the home farm. In this community he is considered a very pleasant, agreeable young citizen.

On August 10, 1910, Heber W. Custis was married to Hazel Reed, who was born in Wayne township, Clinton county, Ohio, a daughter of Amos and Ella (Driscoll) Reed.

Mrs. Custis graduated from the Reesville high school and also attended Wilmington College, after which she taught school two years in Wilson township. Amos Reed was born in Wayne township, Clinton county, Ohio, in 1852, and died in 1888. He was a son of William and Rachel Rede, the former of whom was born in Clinton county, Ohio, and the latter of whom was born in Virginia. William Reed was a farmer in Wayne township. Ella (Driscoll) Reed, the mother of Mrs. Custis, was a daughter of Ephraim and Hester (Kaiser) Driscoll, the former of whom was a native of Clinton county, Ohio, and the latter of Indiana. Ephraim Driscoll was a farmer living near Cuba. Amos and Ella (Driscoll) Reed were farmers in Wayne township, and were the parents of two children: Orville, of Melvin, Ohio, and Hazel. Amos Reed died while Hazel was an infant, and in 1891 her mother, Ella (Driscoll) Reed, married, secondly, William B. Vermilyea, who was born in Wabash county, Indiana, a son of Solomon and Mary Jane Vermilyea. William Vermilyea served three and one-half years in the Civil War in the Seventh Missouri Cavalry. He was a widower, his first marriage occurring in 1866. He and his wife, the mother of Mrs. Custis, are now living retired in Reesville, Ohio. By this second marriage, there were two children: Ethel, who married Virgil Ireland, of Dayton, Ohio; and Wright, who is unmarried and lives at Reesville with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Heber W. Curtis have had two children: Jean, born on July 2, 1911, and Freda, January 2, 1914.

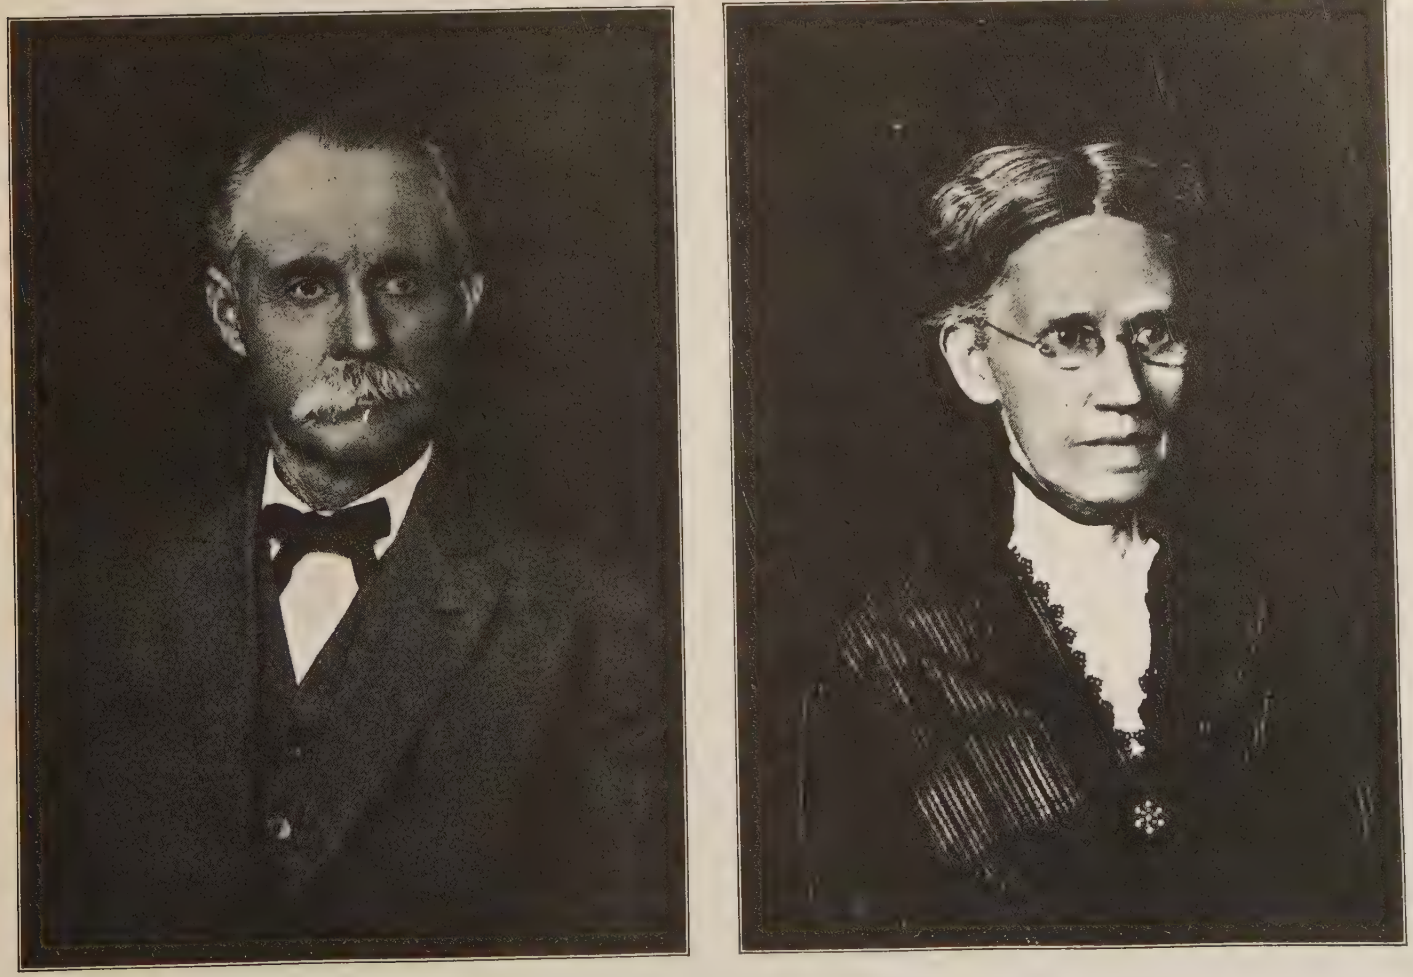
Mr. and Mrs. Custis belong to the Methodist Protestant church at Melvin, Ohio. Mr. Custis is a member of Sabina Lodge No. 324, Free and Accepted Masons.

ELIJAH MARMADUKE HAWORTH.

The Haworth family has been well established in Clinton county for more than a century, and the various members of the family have been prominent in the political and religious life of the various sections in which they have lived. Elijah Marmaduke Haworth, one of the older members of the family now living in this county, is a well-known churchman and farmer of Union township, where he is prominent in the Dover meeting of Friends, and a former trustee of Wilmington College. In Clinton county the name Haworth stands for honesty, integrity and the highest moral purpose, and the representative of the present generation are no exception to the rule established by the worthy pioneers and early members of this family.

Elijah Marmaduke Haworth was born on September 9, 1849, on the farm where he now lives in Union township, the son of Elijah and Elizabeth (Walthall) Haworth, the former of whom was born on March 1, 1813, on Todd's fork, Union township, and died in 1895, and the latter of whom was born in November, 1811, in Dinwiddie county, Virginia, and died in 1897.

Elijah Haworth was the son of Mahlon and Phoebe (Bailey) Haworth, the former of whom settled on Todd's fork in 1804. This is a part of Clinton county, now comprised in Union township. Mahlon Haworth was a son of George Haworth, said to have been the second settler in what is now Union township, and one of the earliest in Clinton county. He opened a farm and built a grist-mill. His son, James, settled on a farm long occupied by Eli Gaskill; Richard settled on the David Myers place, and John the Morris farm; George owned the John Haines place, while Samuel and Dillon lived at home with their father. A year later Mahlon brought his family from Tennessee and settled on the farm since owned by William Walker, of Todd's fork, two miles north of Wilmington, on the Dover road. Other sons opened other well-known farms in this part of the county until each of the eight had homes of their own. Here George Haworth continued to reside until about 1825, when several of his sons, having sold their possessions in Ohio, removed to Illinois. He also sold out and removed with his two younger sons, Samuel and Dillon, to Quaker Point, near Georgetown, Vermilion county,



MR. AND MRS. ELIJAH M. HAWORTH.

Illinois, in order to be near his children. Georgetown was laid out by his son, James Haworth, and called after his father's given name. George Haworth was a worthy member of the Society of Friends and in the latter years of his life a minister. About 1807 or 1808, he traveled on horseback to Baltimore to attend the yearly meeting as a representative from the Miami quarterly meeting, then, as now, held at Waynesville.

Mahlon Haworth, the son of George Haworth, who had settled on Todd's fork in 1803, visited Ohio first in 1800 on a prospecting tour and prosecuted his explorations up the Little Miami and Mad rivers, returning by way of Van Meter's. When he came from Tennessee with his family in 1804, he was accompanied by John and James Wright and their families. At this time Cincinnati contained altogether about eighteen houses. It is said that Mahlon Haworth on the journey north rode the wheel horse and drove the team over Clinch mountain, bearing an infant in his arms. This child, then nearly two years old, was his daughter, Susanna, who afterwards married Marmaduke Brackney. Besides Susanna, he brought to Ohio his three children older than she, Rebecca, George D. and Hezekiah. The families of George Haworth, Mahlon Haworth, James and John Wright were among the first white families to settle in Clinton county north of Wilmington. In the bottom of the opposite side of Todd's fork, where they built their cabin, was a camping ground of Indians. In their rude cabin and during the cold winter season a daughter, Mary Haworth, or "Polly," as she was called, was born to Mahlon Haworth. She grew so beautiful that she was admired of all the surrounding country, but in the midst of her loveliness, in her early womanhood, she was called away. Mahlon and Phoebe (Bailey) Haworth had also born to them upon this farm other children, as follow: Phoebe, Mahlon, Jr., John, Elijah, James and Richard. Rebecca died in early womanhood, and John and James in infancy. The remaining children all lived to be respected and influential citizens of Clinton county and heads of families. Mahlon Haworth finally owned about two hundred acres. He died on his farm at the age of sixty-eight in 1849. All the members of his family were ardent Quakers and he helped to start the Dover meeting in his neighborhood.

William and Elizabeth Walthall, the maternal grandparents of Elijah Marmaduke Haworth, were born in Dinwiddie county, Virginia, about 1825, and came to the Dover neighborhood, in Clinton county, by wagon. He purchased a farm of a hundred acres one mile east of the Dover meeting house and lived there until his death. They were strict Quakers.

Elijah Haworth grew up on a farm in Union township, and with only three hundred dollars cash for payment purchased ninety-seven acres of land out of the Wrightsman farm, where his son now lives. He built a cabin on the farm and kept adding to the place until he owned two hundred acres. In 1840 he built the house which yet stands on the place and in which his son lives. It is a very comfortable dwelling. In 1844 he built the large barn which also stands on the place, hewing every stick of timber in it. He lived on this farm until his death. He was a stock raiser and took especial pride in fattening large numbers of hogs. He served as township trustee, having been elected as a Whig, and during all his life was a radical Abolitionist, and on the formation of the Republican party became identified with it. He and his family were all active in the Dover meeting of the Friends church.

Elijah and Elizabeth (Walthall) Haworth had five children, three of whom, the eldest, are deceased. The living children are Elijah Marmaduke, the subject of this sketch, and Phoebe, who married H. Mather, a farmer of Union township. The deceased children are: Henry, who was a farmer in the Dover neighborhood, and was killed in 1861 by the kick of a horse; William, who died in 1909, was a farmer in Union township; Martha, who married Josiah Hoskins, died, February 15, 1915; her husband is also deceased.

Elijah Marmaduke Haworth attended the public schools and also the subscription schools in his neighborhood, and received a fair education. He also attended the Friends monthly meeting schools and lived at home with his father until after his marriage. As his father grew older he gradually took charge of the home farm and in 1895 purchased the interest of the other heirs. He now has a hundred and eighty-four acres in Union township. He keeps a fine grade of live stock and is well known as a stock breeder.

In 1870 Elijah Marmaduke Haworth was united in marriage to Louisa Gilpin, who was born in the Dover neighborhood of Union township, and died in July, 1883. After her death Mr. Haworth was married, secondly, in September, 1884, to Mary Jane Greene, who was born in Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, the daughter of John Greene, deceased. By the first marriage there were three children, namely: Alma, who married Kelly Underwood, died in 1903; Henry is in the transfer business at Dayton; and Lindley M. is a farmer in Union township. By the second marriage there were two children, Ila, who married Herald McKay, a farmer of Union township, who operates his father-in-law's farm, and Elizabeth, who is unmarried and lives at home.

Elijah Marmaduke Haworth is a Republican. The Haworth family are members of the Dover meeting of Friends, where Mr. Haworth is an elder. He served as trustee of Wilmington College for six years.

WILLIAM C. PARLETT.

Specific mention is made in this volume of many worthy citizens of Clinton county who lived during a former generation, citizens who figured in the growth and development of the county and whose interests were identified especially with its agricultural progress. Among such men was the late William C. Parlett.

William C. Parlett was born in Chester township, Clinton county, Ohio, on April 23, 1830, and died on June 13, 1904. He was the son of David and Elizabeth (Clark) Parlett, both of whom were natives of Virginia. The father died in 1834 and his widow later married William Bathcall, a resident of northern Ohio.

William C. Parlett grew up on the farm and after attaining manhood was married to Anna N. Woolery, who died in 1862, whereupon he came with his children to Clinton county, Ohio, and rented land.

On April 6, 1865, William C. Parlett was married to Sarah Elizabeth Kline, who was born on April 11, 1842, in Wilmington, the daughter of Henry and Sarah (Chipman) Kline, the former of whom was born in Hampshire county, Virginia, December 4, 1801, and who died on August 30, 1870, and the latter of whom was born on January 25, 1817, in Kentucky, and who died on July 11, 1907.

The parents of Henry Kline were Jacob and Catherine (Brill) Kline, the latter of whom died when Henry was only six weeks old. Both Jacob and Catherine (Brill) Kline lived and died in Hampshire county, Virginia. They were born and married, however, in Germany, and came from their native land to Virginia. Sarah (Chipman) Kline's parents died when she was an infant and she was reared by several different families in succession. At the age of ten she went to live with Judge Jesse Hughes, in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, and lived with them until her marriage.

Henry Kline learned the gunsmith trade in Virginia, and about 1820 came to Wilmington, Ohio, and built a house and shop on the lot on Columbus street where the Methodist Episcopal parsonage is now situated. He was first married to Catherine Eaton and she died two years after their marriage. They had no children. Afterwards he was married to Sarah Chipman. They lived in Wilmington until their death. They attended the Methodist Episcopal church. Mrs. Sarah Kline was a member of the church. Early in life he was a member of the Whig party, but became a Republican later on. He was a natural mechanic and an especially fine carpenter. In the latter year of his life he suffered a great deal from "white swelling."

There were six children born to Henry and Sarah (Chipman) Kline, namely:

William David died soon after the Civil War in which he had served under Colonel Doan in the Twelfth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry; Catherine Lydia died at the age of nineteen, in 1858, and was the first person buried in the Wilmington cemetery; Mary Virginia is unmarried and lives on Columbus street in Wilmington; Mrs. Parlett was the fourth born; Rachel Ann married Benjamin Kingery, a resident of Kansas, where both died; and Melissa Jane died at the age of twenty-one.

Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth (Kline) Parlett, who received her education in a school in Wilmington where the Friends church now stands, is the mother of one child, Frances Catherine, who was born on September 27, 1876. She married Vincent Rollison and they live on a farm in Adams township and have four children, Lola, Dora, Russell H. and Clarence V.

Mrs. Parlett is a member of the Friends church as was her husband also during his life. He was identified with the Republican party, but was a man who never took an active interest in political matters, leaving those matters to others who had more time and a keener inclination for them. William C. Parlett was a highly-respected and well-known citizen.

SETH RICHARD SNOWDEN.

Among the younger farmers of Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, who have established comfortable homes and surrounded themselves with valuable personal and real property, few have attained a greater success than Seth Richard Snowden, who has overcome many discouragements, and who, though in the prime of life, has the satisfaction of knowing that the community has been benefited by his presence and his counsel. He is descended from two very old families in this county and comes from a line of hardy and vigorous pioneer ancestry.

Seth Richard Snowden, who was born on January 2, 1877, on the Waynesville pike, in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, is the son of Charles Edward and Rachel (Linton) Snowden. Mr. Snowden's father was born in Maryland, October 19, 1836, and died in 1892. He was the son of Richard and Mary (West) Snowden, natives of Maryland and of English descent. They immigrated to Ohio in 1837, and located in Clinton county. Charles E. received his education in the Ohio public schools, and for many years was engaged as a school teacher. Later in life he became a farmer. In 1862 he was married to Rachel Linton, daughter of Seth and Sarah Ann (Moore) Linton. Seth Linton was born in Union township, October 10, 1812, and was married to Sarah Ann (Moore), September 21, 1836. A complete history of the Linton family is found in the sketch of Walter Welden Linton, contained elsewhere in this volume. The late Charles Edward Snowden was an infant when his parents, Richard and Mary (West) Snowden, removed to Clinton county, Ohio. He grew up in Chester township. He owned a nice home of one hundred and twenty acres, two and one-half miles from Wilmington, but in later years spent his winters in Florida. He was a member of the board of trustees of Wilmington College, and president of the Clinton County Farmers Institute for several years. Although a Republican early in life, he later became a Prohibitionist. He and his wife were members of the Center meeting of the Quaker church and were regular attendants. They had four children, namely: Mary, the eldest, died in 1885, at the age of twenty-one; Alton L., formerly was a farmer, but is now a salesman for the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company; Seth is the subject of this sketch; Sarah married Carl Lukens, of Wilmington.

Richard Snowden, the founder of the Snowden family in Clinton county, was a native of Anne Arundel county, Maryland, and an iron manufacturer. Snowden Manor, located near Baltimore, was the family estate. Richard, who was Hicksite Quaker, came with his family to Clinton county about 1836, first living on Mr. Wall's farm in Chester township. Subsequently, he purchased a farm in Chester township and later removed to Union township, where he died. Richard Snowden died at the age of eighty-three and his wife at the age of fifty-five.

Seth Richard Snowden attended district school No. 4, in Union township, and also Wilmington College, where his education was completed. His father died when he was about fifteen years old and after the father's death he made his home until he was grown with his uncle, Henry Snowden, on the Waynesville pike, on the farm where he now lives. Henry Snowden had been a traveling salesman for a Brooklyn, New York, wall-paper firm, and had invented the Snowden wall-paper trimmer, which brought him a splendid revenue. He made two trips around the world and when he was ready to retire was a wealthy man. He purchased the old Nathan Linton home place on the Waynesville pike in Union township, and in 1885 built a magnificent frame house on this farm, where he lived until he died. Seth Richard lived in this house for several years and then in Wilmington for a time. After his marriage he took charge of his uncle Henry's farm, which he now owns. Mr. Snowden specializes in pedigreed stock, which he raises especially for breeding purposes. He keeps several jacks and thoroughbred trotting horses, as well as Hampshire hogs. Every year he buys up a great many mules and holds a stock sale on his farm.

Seth Richard Snowden was married on October 10, 1900, to Florence Paukette, who was born in Liberty township, Clinton county, Ohio, and who is the daughter of Franklin and Dora (Early) Paukette. The father was a farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Snowden have no children.

Although Mr. Snowden is an ardent Republican, he has never aspired to office. He and his wife are members of the Friends church of Wilmington.

MOODY H. PRICE.

There is no calling which gives to a man the independence of life or which brings him closer to nature than does farming. In pioneer times farming was very much of a drudgery, but with modern improvements the farmer is relieved from a great deal of the hard work which was the portion of his forefathers. Farming has risen in dignity and is frequently referred to now as a profession, rather than as an occupation. Fifty years ago, however, the science of agriculture was in its infancy and it was considered unnecessary to have scientific training for agriculture. Today it is different. Many of the most successful farmers of Ohio either have been educated in the agricultural colleges, or in the classical colleges, in which they have learned methods of doing work and acquired a scientific point of view. Good roads are threading every portion of our state, and the interurban car and the automobile keep the farmer in close touch with his neighbors and also with the people in the cities. Clinton county has many fine farms and successful farmers, and among the most enterprising and successful of these is Moody H. Price, of Union township, a man who stands high in the esteem of the people of this county.

Moody H. Price was born on the Clarksville pike in Union township, this county, on March 25, 1875, son of Henry C. and Martha Jane (Humphreys) Price. Henry C. Price was born in Franklin county, Indiana, on April 15, 1841, and died on June 10, 1910. He was the son of Thomas and Mary (Hutchinson) Price, the former a native of Wales, and the latter a native of England, both Presbyterians, who came to the United States on the same ship. They were farmers in Franklin county after their marriage, and four years after his wife's death, in 1856, Thomas Price sold out and moved with his children to Clinton county, purchasing a farm near Villar's chapel, in Vernon township. His two children were Henry C., the father of Moody H., and Jane, who married William Lows, and who died at Connersville, Indiana, in January, 1910. The late Henry C. Price was a soldier in Company I, Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. On October 14, 1866, he married Martha J. Humphreys, who was born in Warren county, Ohio, January 25, 1843, the daughter of John L. and Julia Ann (Sidel) Humphreys, the former a native of Warren county and the latter a native of Clinton county. John L. Humphreys was the son of James and Elizabeth (Long) Humphreys, who came from New Jersey to Warren county in 1814. Julia Ann Sidel was the daughter of Israel and Nancy (Morrison) Sidel, the former a native of Pennsylvania, and the latter a native of Clinton county. John L. Humphreys and wife were members of the Methodist church and reared a family of twelve children, six sons and six daughters. Henry C. Price, who made a splendid success of farming, spent the later years of his life in Wilmington. He was a Republican in politics, and he and his wife were active members of the Friends church. He was especially well known in this county as a sheep raiser.

Moody H. Price received his elementary education in the public schools of Union township and later attended Wilmington College, completing his education in that institution. In 1904 his parents moved to Wilmington and he continued to reside on the old homestead. Mr. Price now owns two hundred and fifty acres of land on the Clarksville pike, west of Wilmington, in Union township. In 1907 he remodeled his father's home place and there he still lives. He has become prominent among the stockmen of Clinton county and keeps on the farm several hundred head of sheep, making a specialty of sheep breeding.

On October 5, 1898, Moody H. Price was married to Ida May George, who was born at Oxford, Ohio, daughter of Jackson George, a wagon and carriage maker, and wife, both of whom are now deceased. To this union three children have been born, Martha, born on August 20, 1899, a student in the Wilmington high school; George, September 22, 1900, also a student in the Wilmington high school, and Howard, April 30, 1903.

Mr. and Mrs. Price belong to the Presbyterian church at Wilmington, and Mr. Price is a Republican. He is undoubtedly one of the most progressive farmers, as well as one of the leading citizens and foremost exponents of country life living in Clinton county.

JOHN A. CRAIG.

Any community is willing to do honor to the man who starts out in life with little or no assistance from family or friends; who, by good business management and good farming, acquires a competence of his own. Such a man is John A. Craig, a well-known farmer of Chester township, who is a booster for all worthy enterprises, and who likes to see local undertakings succeed.

John A. Craig was born on January 5, 1865, near New Burlington, in Greene county, Ohio, a son of Samuel L. and Mary C. (Le Mar) Craig, the former of whom was born on July 17, 1838, in Greene county, and who died on March 22, 1915, and the latter of whom was born on November 26, 1845, a daughter of John and Barbara (Swain) Le Mar.

Samuel L. Craig was the son of Addison T. and Dorothy (Le Mar) Craig, the former a native of Virginia, and the latter a native of this county. Addison T. Craig emigrated from Virginia to Ohio, when a young man of about sixteen years, but before coming to Clinton county, lived for a short time in Warren county. He was married at New Burlington, and after his marriage, started a grist-mill in that town, which mill he operated for many years, later disposing of it and removing to a farm in Spring Valley township, Greene county, near New Burlington, where he spent the remainder of his life. A man of more than average intelligence, he was a prominent citizen in his community, and for many years served as justice of the peace. Addison T. and Dorothy (Le Mar) Craig were the parents of ten children, of whom Samuel L., the father of John A. was the eldest. The others in the order of their birth were: Noah, Charles, Hiram, Anna, James, William, Franklin, Tilghman and Clement V.

Samuel L. Craig received his education in the common schools at New Burlington, Ohio, and supplemented his early education by attendance at Holbrook Normal School at Lebanon, Ohio. This school for a great many years was conducted by Professor Holbrook, who died a few years ago at a very advanced age. After Samuel L. Craig completed his educational training, he taught school for twelve years, and then engaged in farming in Greene county. About 1895 he came to this county, locating in Chester township, where he spent the remainder of his life. He was very active in church work, and during the last thirty-five years of his life, was a local minister, preaching in Greene, Warren and Clinton counties. He was well educated and widely read and a man of considerable influence in his section. He was unfortunate during the last years of his life, being broken in health and greatly handicapped by his physical condition. To Samuel L. Craig and wife three children were born, of whom John A. is the eldest. The others were Edgar, who married Ella Tremper, and Samuel Eugene, who married Maud James. Throughout his life Samuel L. Craig was identified with the Republican party, and served many years as justice of the peace in Chester township.

John A. Craig started in pursuit of an education in the common schools of Greene county, Ohio, and later attended Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, for two years, after which he taught school for a period of two years. He then worked on a farm by the month for about three years, at the end of which time he began farming for himself in Chester township, where he has since lived. In 1897 Mr. Craig purchased the farm where he is now living, comprising thirty-five acres. Three years later he built a barn, and in 1893 he purchased another farm nearby, consisting of ninety-eight acres, and now owns altogether one hundred and thirty-five acres, which is devoted to general farming and stock raising. When it is remembered that Mr. Craig started with a very small competence, his success must be an admitted fact. His farm adjoins the little village of Oakland, and is very well situated.

On November 15, 1906, John A. Craig was married to Mary A. McKinney, daughter of William and Rhoda McKinney, and to this union two children have been born, Ruth R. and Dorothy, the former born on July 16, 1907, and the latter on November 26, 1908.

As a Democrat, Mr. Craig was appointed deputy assessor of Chester and Adams townships, and served in that capacity for one year. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Hiawatha encampment of that order. Mr. and Mrs. Craig are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and are devoted to all movements having to do with the general betterment of conditions in the community at large.

DANIEL J. FOLAND, M. D.

Pleasantly situated in his delightful home in Wilmington, this county, Daniel J. Foland, a well-known former druggist, who for many years enjoyed a position as one of the most important factors in the commercial life of the county seat, now is living in quiet retirement, enjoying the fruits of a life of useful endeavor. Dilligent in business, he prospered as he deserved to prosper, and in the evening of his life is able to rest serenely on the rewards accorded him by the community in which he ever has taken so deep an interest. During the dread days of the Civil War, Doctor Foland performed well his part in the service of the Union and at the close of that gigantic struggle resumed his place in the commercial life of his community, becoming one of the foremost druggists of this section of the state, later taking up the practice of medicine, in which he also achieved an honorable career. More than twenty years ago he retired from the active callings of life, since which time he has been living in quiet ease at his pleasant home in Wilmington.

Daniel J. Foland was born on a farm in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, on March 8, 1841, son of Daniel and Matilda (Crawford) Foland, both natives of Virginia, the former of whom was born in 1794, and died at his home in this county in February, 1841, and the latter, born in 1795 and died in 1874.

Daniel Foland, father of Doctor Foland, came to Clinton county about the year 1820, his parents emigrating from Virginia and locating here at that time, becoming prominent factors in the development of the neighborhood in which they settled. Mr. Foland's maternal grandparents also were early settlers of Clinton county and influential in pioneer days. The elder Daniel Foland was a brass-worker by trade and made carding machines for use in the wool-weaving industry. He also was a large landholder in this county, at one time owning as much as four hundred acres of land in the Miami valley, but most of his time was devoted to the promotion of his carding machines, his travels in this connection taking him all over the country. He died of typhoid fever, being taken off in the very height of his useful career, and his widow never remarried. Daniel and Matilda (Crawford) Foland were the parents of three children, namely: Martha, who died unmarried; Sallie, who is living at Wilmington, this county, and Daniel J., the immediate subject of this sketch.

Bereft of his father, even before his birth, Daniel J. Foland, at three years of age, was placed in the Pedrick family, residents of this county, who later moved to a farm in McDonough county, Illinois, where the lad remained until he was eleven years of age, at which time he ran away from the Pedrick home and returned to Clinton county, going to Wilmington, where he began working in the drug store of Roger B. Morey, in time becoming thoroughly acquainted with the drug business. In the summer of 1863, Daniel J. Foland enlisted in the naval service and was engaged in fighting the battles of his country until the close of the war, being discharged with the rank of captain. His first service was on the monitor "Osage," and later on the monitor "Neosia." He saw much active service and participated prominently in the immortal siege of Vicksburg.

At the lose of the war Captain Foland returned to Wilmington and began work in Doctor Martin's drug store, his previous experience in the drug business making his services valuable. He also entered thoughtfully upon the study of medicine, and in 1872 was admitted to practice medicine, soon gaining a wide practice in and around Wilmington. Doctor Foland was a successful pharmacist and manufacturing chemist and many of his chemical and pharmaceutical preparations attained a wide sale throughout the country. In 1893 he retired from active business, since which time he has been living quietly at his home in Wilmington, enjoying the confidence and esteem of the whole community.

On September 27, 1877, Dr. Daniel J. Foland was united in marriage to Lucy V. Tracy, who was born in Piedmont, West Virginia, to which union two children were born, Willie and Ida, both of whom died in infancy. The mother of these children died on January 30, 1894, and on June 15, 1898, Doctor Foland married, secondly, Sarah B. Shields, who was born in this county. To this latter union one child has been born, a son, John D., born on September 23, 1900, now a student in the Wilmington high school.

Doctor and Mrs. Foland are members of the Central Christian church at Wilmington and take an active part in the various good works of that congregation, Doctor Foland being one of the trustees of the church. Doctor Foland is a thirty-second degree Mason, a member of the Ohio consistory and of the Mystic Shrine. He is the oldest living member of the Masonic lodge at Wilmington, of which he is past master, and he also is past commander of the commandery at Wilmington. He is a Republican and for many years gave much attention to the political affairs of the county, his sound judgment and through acquaintance with local affairs giving much weight to his counsels in the deliberations of the party managers in this section, though he never has been included in the office-seeking class; his only public service in that connection having been performed in 1870-72, when he filled, by appointment, an unexpired term as county recorder. Though practically retired from active business life, Doctor Foland continues to take a warm interest in local affairs and is deeply concerned in all measures looking to the advancement of the general welfare. For years he has been a director of the Clinton Telephone Company, in which connection his services have been valuable in promoting the interests of the telephone service in this county. Doctor Foland has many friends in and about Clinton county and is held in high regard hereabout.

LAFE RECORD.

Lafe Record, who formerly was a contractor and builder in Clinton county, but who is now a well-known farmer of Union township, was born in Brown county, Ohio, near Fincastle, March 21, 1848, the son of Washington S. and Sarah Catherine (Darling) Record, the former of whom was born on February 21, 1818, in Brown county, Ohio, and died on July 1, 1881, and the latter of whom was born in Brown county, Ohio, in 1818, and died in 1857.

The paternal grandparents of Lafe Record were natives of Virginia. His grandfather, John S. Record, grew up in the Old Dominion state, but was an early settler in Brown county, Ohio. He and his wife were members of the Christian church. He was a school teacher in his early days, and one of the best penmen of his generation. He and his wife reared a family of ten children. Mr. Record's maternal grandparents lived and died in Brown county, Ohio.

Washington S. Record grew up in Brown county, Ohio, and owned a farm in that county, but in 1853 he and his family emigrated to Livingston county, Illinois, where he purchased a farm of eighty acres at ten dollars an acre. His wife died in Livingston county, Illinois, in 1857, and three years later he sold the farm and returned to Brown county, Ohio. The next year he emigrated to Clinton county, and having learned the cooper's trade when a lad he worked at his trade in this county. He rented farms also until his death. After the death of his first wife he married Lydia A. Brown, whom he survived for several years. All of the members of his family were prominent in the work of the Christian church.

To the first marriage of Washington S. Record were born six children, two of whom, Sarah Ellen, the third born, and Frank, the youngest, are deceased. Sarah Ellen married William Lower, a resident of Illinois. Frank died at the age of one year. The living children are: Rachel, who married John Young, of Pontiac, Illinois; John Spencer, of Boise, Idaho; Lafayette, the subject of this sketch; and Laura, who married James Brock, of Madison county, Ohio. By the second marriage there were four children, of whom the two eldest and the youngest are deceased. Carrie and Jennie died early in life and Frank died in infancy, Katie married Foster Warner.

Lafe Record attended the district schools of Illinois, and was taught at home by his mother until he was eight years old, and after that was a pupil in the public schools. When a young man he learned the carpenter trade under James and Thomas Babb, at Burtonville, Ohio, and worked for them three years. Later he engaged in contracting and built many fine houses all over southern Clinton county and in Wilmington. For thirty-five years he was engaged in contract building. In 1897 he purchased the Dwiggins farm north of Wilmington in Union township and now owns a hundred and thirty-three acres. The magnificent brick house on this farm was built in 1812 by the McWhirter family. Mr. Record is now living retired.

On November 30, 1876, Lafe Record was married to Eva Jane Burton, who was born near New Antioch, Ohio, in Clinton county. She is the daughter of a well-known miller of New Antioch. Her parents are both deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Record have had two children, Charles, who lives in Wilmington, and Jessie, who married Julian McKenzie, a farmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Record belong to the Baptist church in which Mr. Record is a deacon and a former trustee. He is identified with the Republican party.

RESIDENCE OF LAFE RECORD, IN UNION TOWNSHIP, BUILT IN 1812.

JERREMMA D. HURLEY.

Jerremma D. Hurley was born on June 1, 1884, in Chester township, this county, Ohio, of which township he is still a resident. He is a son of John H. Hurley and Elizabeth (Linton) Hurley. In his early youth, he attended the public schools of Chester township, and when he arrived at the age of young manhood, started to farm, renting at first. He has farmed in this county all his life, with the exception of three years spent in the state of Indiana, where he was engaged in the same line of business. In 1894, he returned to Chester township and purchased a farm of two hundred and ninety acres, which he still cultivates. In 1908, he built a comfortable home, and is at present conducting a general farming and stock-raising business.

John H. Hurley was born in Chester township, this county, on January 23, 1835. His early education was secured at the public schools of Chester township, and, as a young man, he started to cultivate a farm in that township, remaining there all his life. He prospered and became the owner of two hundred acres of land. He married Elizabeth Linton, daughter of Allen and Elizabeth Linton, to which union eight children were born as follow: Nora, who married Elias Paxon; William A. who married Emma Oglesbee; Anna, who married Isaac Peterson; Jerremma D., the subject of this sketch; Lillian, who married C. J. Lundy. Carey, who married Bertha Edwards; Charles, who married Hattie Wilson and, secondly, Blanche Swindler; Frank, who married Agnes McDana. He is a member of the Methodist church, and in politics, is a Republican.

John H. Hurley is the son of William and Drusilla (Mann) Hurley, the former of whom was a farmer, and resided in Chester township, this county, where he owned about three hundred acres of land and in addition to his farming interests, operated a sawmill.

On December 22, 1886, Jerremma D. Hurley was married to Ida Stingley, who was born on April 17, 1865, daughter of Noah and Sarah (Jones) Stingley, to which union have been born the following children: Edith, who married Bernard Hunt and has two children, Esther and Elizabeth; Horace J., who married Edith Haines, by whom he has had one child, Mary Elizabeth; Ethel, who married James B. Harner, and has two children, Carl and Loren; Howard W., who is at home; Elizabeth, also at home; Ralph, at home; Roy, who died when eleven years of age, caused by an injury to his side; Mary, who died in infancy, and Jesse. In his religious belief, Mr. Hurley is a member of the Friends church, and in politics, he is a Republican. Fraternally, he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

PHILIP EDMOND PAGETT.

Philip Edmond Pagett, a succesful farmer of Union township, this county, was born on Caesars creek, in Greene county, Ohio, on August 12, 1871, the son of Philip C. and Elizabeth (Peterson) Pagett, the former of whom was born in Winchester county, Virginia, on April 27, 1827, and died on November 16, 1901, and the latter of whom was born in April, 1826, in Greene county, Ohio, and died in February, 1901. Philip C. Pagett was the son of William and Susanna Pagett, both natives of Virginia, who bore in their veins an admixture of Irish, French and Welsh blood. In 1833 they came to Ohio and settled on a farm in Greene county. William Pagett was a carpenter by trade and lived to a good old age.

Mr. Pagett's maternal grandparents were Jonas and Susanna (Coiner) Peterson, both natives of Pennsylvania, who at an early date settled on Caesars creek in Greene county. At the time they came to this state they had only a few personal effects and no money. They were thrifty people, however, industrious and good managers, and finally came to own fourteen hundred acres of land. Both were members of the German Reformed church. The grandfather at one time lived in Indiana, where he purchased land. They were the parents of ten children.

Philip C. Pagett was six years old when the family came from Virginia to Ohio. He grew up in Greene county, where he was married, and in 1854 removed by wagon to Oskaloosa, Iowa, where he purchased eighty acres of land and remained four years, at the end of which period he returned to Ohio and purchased a farm in Greene county. In 1881 he sold out and came to this county, purchasing one hundred and eighteen acres of land in Union township, where he and his wife spent the rest of their lives. They were members of the German Reformed church, and during the Civil War he was a member of the famous "squirrel hunters" organization.

To Philip C. and Elizabeth (Peterson) Pagett were born eight children, of whom five, Jennie, Susan, Jonas, Arthur and Hannah, are deceased. Susan died in January, 1902; Jonas died in 1901; Arthur died in 1883, and Hannah died at the age of two years. The living children are Davis, a farmer who lives at Port William, Ohio; Ada, who married Elton Bentley, a resident of Wilmington, Ohio, and Philip Edmond, the subject of this biographical sketch.

Philip E. Pagett attended the public schools of Greene county, and later the public schools of Union township, this county, but received only a limited education. He lived with his father until the latter's death in 1901, and thereafter worked for a time in a store in Wilmington as a clerk. For a year and a half thereafter he worked in the Irwin auger-bit factory at Wilmington and in 1908 purchased a farm of sixty acres in Union township, and is now living on that farm.

On June 14, 1894, Philip E. Pagett was married to Alice Lewis, who was born in Chester township, this county, the daughter of John W. and Hannah Lewis, both of whom are deceased. John W. Lewis was a well-known farmer of Chester township. To this union three children have been born, all of whom are living, as follow: Harry, born on May 31, 1896; Myra, November 1, 1898, and Paul, January 16, 1912.

Although Mr. Pagett has devoted his time and attention principally to his own personal business, he has always taken a keen interest in politics and is a man of no little local influence, having served as township assessor and as a school director for many years. The Pagett family belong to the Dover meeting of the Society of Friends and are prominent members of the church and liberal contributors to its support. They take an earnest interest in the good work of the neighborhood and are held in the highest esteem thereabout.

ALVIN STINGLEY.

Alvin L. Stingley, one of the well-known descendants of John Stingley, who settled in Clinton county, nearly a century ago, son of Gilead E. Stingley and brother of Calvin and J. Albert Stingley, was born on June 5, 1873, on the farm in Chester township, this county, where he now lives. Gilead E. Stingley was born in Ross county, Ohio, on November 24, 1820, and died in 1909. His wife was born in Highland county, in 1831, the daughter of Richard and Mary (Curtindoll) Lucas, and is still living.

Gilead E. Stingley was educated in the common schools of Chester township and was a prominent farmer of this county, owning seven or eight hundred acres of land. During the five years following 1875, he was engaged in the pork-packing business at Wilmington and for many years was a large cattle raiser. He voted the Democratic ticket and he and his wife and family were members of the Friends church. To him and his wife eleven children were born, namely: Eliza, who married John F. Oglesbee; William, who died in March, 1913; Amanda, who married James Bailey, is now deceased; Elizabeth, who married James Swindler; Emma, who died at the age of five years; J. Albert and Calvin, who are referred to elsewhere in this volume; Ada, who married Lester Oglesbee; Alonzo, who died at the age of two years; Nettie, who married Elijah Turner, and Alvin, the immediate subject of this biographical sketch.

Gilead E. Stingley was the son of John and Elizabeth (Bush) Stingley, the former of whom was born in Virginia on August 22, 1792, and the latter of whom born on May 21, 1798. After their marriage on April 16, 1818, they located in Ross county, this state, and four years later came to Clinton county. John Stingley had come to Ohio from Virginia originally in 1800. He owned a farm of two hundred and nine acres in Chester township and was a well-known pioneer citizen. He and his wife were the parents of four children: Noah B., born on February 24, 1819; Gilead E., November 24, 1820; Talitha, April 27, 1823, and Julian, October 7, 1825. John Stingley died on September 6, 1826, and, after his death, his widow married his twin brother, Sebastian Stingley, to which second union there was no issue. The Stingley family originally came to America from Germany, where George Stingley, the great-grandfather of Alvin L., was born on September 12, 1763.

Alvin Stingley was educated in the common schools of Chester township and has farmed all his life. He owns one hundred acres of land in Chester township, and is very well circumstanced.

In 1896 Alvin L. Stingley was married to Hattie J. Thomas, the daughter of Joshua and Martha Thomas, to which union four children have been born, namely: Alie L., born in June, 1897; Luther A., in September, 1898; Clarence L., in November, 1900, and Charles T., in May, 1906.

Mr. Stingley is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, the Knights of the Maccabees, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Daughters of Rebekah, the Knights of Pythias and the Pythian Sisters. He is independent in politics and he and his family are members of the Methodist church at Lumberton.

CALVIN STINGLEY.

Chester township owes much to the Stingley family, especially to the sons of Gilead Stingley, who was a well-known farmer of Clinton county, and one of the pioneer pork packers of Wilmington. The distinguished family in Clinton county, however, goes back to the time when John Stingley, the father of Gilead, purchased a farm of two hundred and nine acres in Chester township, nearly a century ago. For the most part, later generations of the family have been identified with agriculture and more than this the various members of the family have been good citizens and prominent in the neighborhoods and communities where they have lived.

Calvin Stingley, the son of Gilead and Nancy (Lucas) Stingley, was born on June 6, 1863, on the old Stingley farm in Chester township, where he now lives. His father was born on November 24, 1820, in Ross county, Ohio, and died in 1909, while his mother was born in 1831 in Highland county, the daughter of Richard and Mary (Curtindoll) Lucas, and is still living.

The paternal grandparents of Calvin Stingley were John and Elizabeth (Bush) Stingley, who were married on April 16, 1818, the former a native of Virginia, born on August 22, 1792, who came to Ohio in 1800, first locating in Ross county, and the latter, born on May 31, 1798. About 1822 they purchased a farm of two hundred and nine acres in Chester township and there spent the remainder of their lives. John Stingley was one of the foremost farmers of the township and did much clearing. John and Elizabeth Stingley were the parents of four children: Noah B., born on February 24, 1819; Gilead, November 24, 1820; Talitha, April 27, 1823; and Julian, October 7, 1825. The father of these children died on September 6, 1826, and after his death, his widow married his twin brother, Sebastian, but to this latter union no children were born. The original home of the Stingley family was in Germany, where John Stingley's father, George Stingley, the great-grandfather of Calvin, was born on September 12, 1763.

Gilead Stingley received his education in the common schools of Chester township and, having taken up agriculture as a life vocation, became the owner of about eight hundred acres in this county. He was an extensive cattle raiser and about 1875 entered the pork-packing business at Wilmington and was thus engaged for five years. He was a member of the Friends church and voted the Democratic ticket. Gilead and Nancy Stingley were the parents of eleven children, namely: Eliza, who married John F. Oglesbee; William, who died in March, 1913; Amanda (deceased), who was the wife of James Bailey; Elizabeth, who married James Swindler; Emma, who died at the age of five years; J. Albert, who is referred to elsewhere in this volume; Calvin, who is the subject of this biographical sketch; Ada, who married Lester Oglesbee; Alonzo, who died at the age of two years; Nettie, who married Elijah Turner, and Alvin, who is referred to elsewhere in this volume.

Calvin Stingley, who was educated in the common schools of Chester township, began farming when a young man on the land where he now lives. Except for three years during which he lived in Dayton, Ohio, he has lived on the farm all of his life. In September, 1904, he went to Dayton, where, during the first year, he worked for the Dayton & Xenia Traction Company. The next year he was a merchant policeman and February, 1907, he returned to the farm, where he has since resided.

On August 1, 1886, Calvin Stingley was married to Mary Hurley, the daughter of Henry and Lauretta (Colvin) Hurley, to which union two children have been born, Verna, who is still at home, and Velmer, who married Eva Hurley and has one child, Donald.

Mr. Stingley is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Knights of the Maccabees. Nominally, he is identified with the Democratic party but is independent in local politics. The Stingley family are members of the Friends church and are held in high regard in the community in which they live.

ISAIAH MORRIS HAWORTH.

It is not common to judge American citizens as a class from the standpoint of their religious views because citizenship in America does not rest upon any religion, but when we look about to find a whole class of men who have fitted themselves into American ideals and have made, as a class, universally good citizens and then, after analyzing this class, we find, incidentally, that they all belong to one religious denomination, we are inclined to conclude, that at least in this citizenship, religion—their religion—has been a desirable factor. And such has proven the truth in the Quaker or Friends church. In every community of Friends—and they usually abide in communities—we find that wholesome democratic character and ideals which have distinguished America, and among the first of these citizens might be included the subject of this sketch, Isaiah Morris Haworth, of Union township, Clinton county, Ohio.

Isaiah Morris Haworth was born on August 16, 1848, on what is known as the Haworth homestead, in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, on Todds fork and died on June 15, 1915. He was the son of Richard M. and Elizabeth M. (West) Haworth. Richard M. Haworth was born on July 1, 1823 on this same Haworth homestead and died in October of 1902. Elizabeth M. West was born near Martinsville, Ohio, on July 10, 1824, and died in November of 1862.

Richard M. Haworth was the son of Mahlon Haworth, whose pioneer ancestry is easily traceable to Revolutionary times. He was born on October 23, 1775, in Frederick county, Virginia. The father of Mahlon Haworth was George Haworth, whose father, James Haworth, was the son of George Haworth, who came from Lancashire, England, with William Penn in 1699. The mother of Mahlon Haworth was Susannah Dillon. George and Susannah Haworth in their early married life moved to North Carolina and settled on the Yadkin river near the home of Daniel Boone. George Haworth and his brother, James, accompanied Daniel Boone on his second visit to Kentucky, their families being two of the six families which made up the party that attempted the first settlement of Kentucky. They were violently attacked by the Indians and were so discouraged that the Haworth brothers returned to North Carolina, where they remained for twelve years. They then went again to Kentucky, but finding the Indians still hostile they turned their course toward Greene county, Tennessee, where George settled the place for his new home and returned to North Carolina, where after a short stay he again started, with his two little sons, John and Mahlon, aged ten and twelve, for Tennessee. After a perilous and dangerous trip he reached the spot he had selected for a home and with the aid of these two boys he built a cabin on the site and made other preparations to receive his family. When this work was completed the party returned to North Carolina, for the wife and remainder of the children, leaving the two boys behind to guard the cabin until their return. The father had calculated that this trip would take about three weeks and had left more than an ample supply of provisions for the two boys during his absence, but high water, and other impediments to travel on pack-horses, detained them and it was more than six weeks before they returned to the spot. During that time the provisions which were left for the boys gave out, and they were obliged to subsist on parched corn, roots and berries, such as they could gather in the woods. They were also much in fear of an attack from the Indians, and when at last their parents arrived they ran to meet them with outstretched arms, and the mother springing from her horse gathered the boys in her arms and they all wept for joy.

In Greene county, Tennessee, Mahlon Haworth married Phoebe Frazier and they built a home on the Little Holson river, near Greenville, where they resided until the pioneer spirit again influenced them to seek a new home in an unopened forest. In 1800 Mahlon Haworth made a prospecting tour to Ohio and pushed his explorations as far as the Little Miami and Mad rivers. Some authorities say his father accompanied him. He did not move to Ohio, however, at this time, because of objections made by his wife, but his father did move to Ohio in the fall of 1803, and Mahlon, with his family, and the families of John and James Wright, followed the next year, and on reaching the place early in November, selected for their home a spot across the river opposite Cincinnati which was at that time a village with about eighteen houses. A story is told of their passing through Cincinnati that might be of interest here. They moved in "old Virginia wagons"—a four-horse van—and drove their cattle and other stock with them. Mahlon Haworth had a very fine horse that he called "Major." In Cincinnati a citizen there took a fancy to this horse and offered Mahlon one hundred and fifty acres of land on which the city of Cincinnati now stands for him, but Mahlon because of his fondness for the horse and his mistrust for the future of the land refused to consider the trade and moved on with "Major."

In making this trip to Ohio, Mahlon Haworth rode the "wheel-horse" of his team-of-four and carried his infant daughter in his arms. He had with him his three elder children, Rebecca, George Dillon and Ezekial, and on his arrival in Ohio, as he drove on through the woods he "blazed" the trees as he went in order to find his way back if need be. The land selected on which to settle was on Todd's fork, two and one-half miles from where Wilmington now stands. George and Mahlon Haworth and John and James Wright were among the earliest settlers north of Wilmington. They arrived at this spot too late to build comfortable houses before the winter set in, and so in haste they built a cabin of round logs, filling the cracks with moss and mud, and moved in without laying a floor. They built a fire-place in the middle of this cabin and left an opening in the roof for the smoke to pass out, their windows being openings over which they hung bedquilts to keep out the cold and rain. Their beds were made on poles laid across sticks driven into the ground. One night, soon after their arrival in their new "northern" home, the horses seemed restless and awakened the household by moving about and shaking the chains by which they were tethered, and Mr. Haworth got up to see what the trouble was. He put his head out of the door and cried back to his wife:

"Phoebe, hard times are at the door." Their first snow had begun to fall and continued to fall until the ground was covered to a depth of over two feet.

In the bottoms, on the opposite side of Todds fork, was an Indian camping ground, and in the season when the Indians occupied these grounds, the lights of their camps were plainly visible from the Haworth cabin and these Indians were not unfrequent visitors at this cabin, and once, when Mahlon Haworth was absent from home an Indian lifted the quilt at the door of the cabin and looked in, with a friendly grunt he then set his gun outside and entering, walked over to a stool and deliberately took from his belt a butcher knife and began scraping the Spanish needles from his leggings, after thus grooming himself for a while, in broken English he asked for food and after being supplied with a hearty meal he departed in peace. To show the different dangers to which these earlier settlers were subject we might further relate that later on this very same day three large bears came up to within a few feet of the cabin.

The question of food supplies was often a grave question with these earlier settlers. Soon after the arrival of the Haworths in their new home they exchanged with a neighbor, Timothy Bennett, a horse for one hundred bushels of corn, a small quantity of hog meat and a small hog. This meat, in addition to the wild turkey, bear and venison, which they could kill, was all the meat which they had until they could raise it, and for a long time they ground corn with a hand-mill for their bread. In these surroundings during this cold winter was born to Mahlon and Phoebe Haworth a beautiful daughter, Mary (or "Polly" as she was called), who was admired by the whole country around but who died in her youth. Their other children were: Phoebe, Mahlon, who with his sons became inventors and invented the first check-row corn planter and settled at Decatur, Illinois, where they manufactured this machine and became very wealthy, and he is still living at Decatur; Elijah, James, and Richard, who was the father of the subject of this sketch. Rebecca, the eldest child died early in womanhood, John and James in infancy, and the remainder of the children lived to be respected and influential citizens of Clinton county.

At the close of the War of 1812, there came to Mahlon Haworth's house a company of "light horse," as they were called, which had been in the service during the war. The horses were almost dead. He took them all in and fed the horses and the men until they were able to go their way. Mahlon Haworth was a man of strong intellectual powers. He was an active, useful citizen in everything that related to the advancement of the people and the good of the community. High official positions in the state were offered him by his people but these he declined because of the conscientious scruples of his wife who was a Friend of the strictest type.

Richard M. Haworth, the father of the subject of this sketch, was the youngest child of Mahlon and Phoebe Haworth and was nursing on his mother's breast when she was fifty years old. He inherited the homestead of one hundred and sixty acres and took care of his parents until their death. In 1859 he traded with his brother George D. for a farm east of Wilmington. He increased his holdings, until, at one time, he had five farms of over five hundred acres in all. He invested very heavily in the pork-packing business in Wilmington, Ohio, and reverses caused the loss of almost his entire property. In 1883 he moved to Hendricks county, Indiana, near Plainfield, and bought a small farm on the edge of Morgan county, where he did general farming. He was twice married; his first wife, Elizabeth M. West, was the mother of the following children: Thomas M., who died in 1910, on his farm adjoining the subject's farm; James M., who died in youth; Isaiah M., subject of this sketch; Frances Elizabeth and Caroline Evalyn, who both died in infancy; Harriet Ellen, who married Orlando Hadley, of Wilmington; and Anna E., who was born on October 12, 1862, and died on August 22, 1882. The second wife of Richard M. Haworth was Jane Janney, who was reared at Martinsville, Ohio, and who was the mother of two children: Lenora P., who was born on November 6, 1866, and who married Calvin Newlin and lives on a farm near Plainfield, Indiana; and Clinton R., who was born on March 23, 1869, and now lives near Plainfield, Indiana. Richard M. Haworth was a Republican and a stanch member of the Friends church.

The parents of Elizabeth M. West were Thomas and Detamer (Hadley) West, natives of North Carolina and members of the Friends church. They were the parents of the following children, all of whom are now dead: Sarah, who married David Pyle; Elizabeth M., who was the mother of the subject of this sketch; Jeremiah, who died at the age of sixteen; Mary, who married Doctor Bond and lived in Iowa; Isaiah, who lived on the farm where the subject of this sketch now lives, and Eldon, who married Micajah Moore and lived in Adams township, Clinton county..

Isaiah Morris Haworth, the subject of this sketch, attended the district schools at Dover and later in Wilmington two years, and then at the Dutch district school in Union township. He had but a limited education and as a young man he worked on his father's farm for several years and then bought what is now known as the Charles Hunnicutt farm which he soon sold and bought a one-hundred-acre tract of the Thomas West farm, where he lived until he sold this tract and in 1883 he bought the present farm across the road from the George D. Haworth farm at Starbucktown, Union township. He then rented his farm and went to Hendricks county, Indiana, for eighteen months, after which he returned to his present home. There is a little over one hundred acres in this tract, which was formerly the old West homestead. The house was remodeled by Mr. Haworth.

On September 20, 1871, Isaiah Morris Haworth was married to Mary Johnson, who was born in the Center neighborhood of Union township. They were the last couple to be married by the Friends ceremony in the old Center meeting house. Mary Johnson was the daughter of Louis and Rachel (Stanton) Johnson. Louis Johnson was the son of Louis, Sr., and Mary Johnson, natives of Virginia, who emigrated to Ohio, and was born near Port William, Ohio, on November 13, 1821, and died on December 5, 1908. Rachel Stanton was the daughter of William and Margaret Stanton, who came from Virginia and settled in Wilmington, Ohio, where for many years he was a hatter. Rachel Stanton was born in Wilmington, Ohio, on January 15, 1818, and died on January 10, 1899.

Louis Johnson, Jr., and wife were farmers and owned a farm in the Center neighborhood which they cultivated for years until their retirement, when they moved into Wilmington, where they died. They had the following children: Ahira, who lives in Wilmington; Sarah Ann; Mary, the wife of the subject of this sketch; Joseph, who lives in Indiana on a farm; and Mrs. Elizabeth Sprouse, who lives on a farm in Union township.

Isaiah Morris and Mary (Johnson) Haworth were the parents of six children, of whom three are dead and three living, as follow: Adelbert R., who was born on July 31, 1872, and died on September 19, 1872; Delena Ann, August 30, 1873, married Charles Hunnicutt and now lives in Wilmington, Ohio; Rachel C., August 17, 1875, died on May 4, 1887; Alton M., July 2, 1877, is a farmer now living on the Port William road in Liberty township on the old George Bailey farm; Alice E., August 11, 1880, married Dr. C. B. Thomas and lives in Plainfield, Indiana; and Marietta, October 14, 1882, died on December 11, 1884.

Isaiah Morris Haworth was, as are all his family, attached to the Friends church, of Wilmington, Ohio. Mr. Haworth was a Republican in politics, and was conservative in his beliefs. He was humble and unseeking in his attitude toward his fellow men and was held in the very highest esteem by all who knew him. He was one of the men who has indeed proved that true religion and true citizenship go hand-in-hand, and whenever he was called on gave full evidence "that a friend in need is a friend indeed."

ADDISON PEALE RUSSELL, LIT. D.

One of the greatest men which Wilmington and Clinton county, Ohio, ever produced was the late Dr. Addison Peale Russell, editor, statesman, critic and author. Wilmington people esteemed Doctor Russell for all of the public distinctions which he brought to the city, but they loved him for himself. Handsome and courtly in appearance, he was the most genial of companions and the most faithful of friends. During the long years of retirement he lived a social life in the highest and best sense of the term. As Doctor Venable beautifully expressed it—"at leisure, but never idle," the late Dr. Addison Peale Russell belonged to that school of writers produced in the Ohio valley, whose works constitute its chief claim to distinction in a literary way. Associated with the Hon. Addison Peale Russell, who was called the "Washington Irving of the West," were Col. Coates Kinney, Prof. William H. Venable, Cincinnati's Arnold of Rugby, and Mr. John James Piatt, Cincinnati's Thoreau.

Addison Peale Russell, who was secretary of state of Ohio during the governorship of Salmon P. Chase, and who was several times in the company of Abraham Lincoln, was born in the house now occupied by Harry Dailey on Main street near Mulberry, in Wilmington, Clinton county, Ohio, September 8, 1826, and died at his home in Wilmington, Wednesday, June 24, 1912, in the eighty-sixth year of his age. His father was of Revolutionary stock and his mother came from the Scottish clan, MacNabb. His death came not from the effects of disease so much as the natural and inevitable passing of all things earthly. During the last year of his life he was practically blind, but he went about familiar streets and mingled with his friends. During the declining years of his life he was faithfully cared for by the untiring ministrations of his niece, Clara Russell Burns.

The first work of Doctor Russell as an author was a volume published anonymously by D. Appleton & Company, entitled, "Half Tints: Table d'Hote and Drawing-room." A few years later Hurd & Houghton, of New York, published his "Library Notes," which eventually went into a second edition. His third book, "Thomas Corwin: a Sketch," was published in 1881 by Robert Clarke & Company, and three years later a companion volume to his "Library Notes," entitled "Characteristics" was published by Houghton, Mifflin & Company. In 1887 appeared anonymously a volume of essays, entitled, "A Club of One," which had an immense sale in this country and abroad. In 1890 he published "In a Club Corner," and in 1895 his last work, "Sub Coelum: A Sky-built Human World."

Addison Peale Russell was a son of Charles and Mary (MacNabb) Russell, the former of whom was born at Harper's Ferry, Virginia, July 2, 1794, and died, April 16, 1872, and the latter of whom was born on the Isle of Man, December 15, 1795, and died, September 25, 1862. They were married May 15, 1815. Charles Russell was the son of William and Jane (Sewall) Russell, the former of whom was born March 19, 1756, and died November 25, 1829, at the age of seventy-eight years, and the latter of whom was born October 15, 1767, and died September 28, 1814. They married June 21, 1795. Both parents of Charles Russell were born in Virginia, and about 1800 emigrated to Warren county, Ohio, and settled there. The father was killed in a barn raising.. Doctor Russell's maternal grandparents were John and Catherine (Warnock) MacNabb, who were born in Scotland and who emigrated from Scotland to the Isle of Man, where he was a linen draper and dealer. Later they settled in Virginia. Catherine (Warnock) MacNabb was a granddaughter of Lord Warnock, of Scotland.

On May 16, 1815, Charles Russell arrived in Warren county, Ohio, from Virginia. He had been brought by his parents. He was an ambitious lad and wished to obtain a good education. He chopped wood to earn money to buy a new dictionary. He was married in Warren county, and with his wife moved to Wilmington, where he built a woolen-mill, which is still standing on the corner of South and Burdsall streets. For many years he operated this mill, and finally failed in business because he had lent his name to the security of a friend's note. He was a strictly temperate man who never touched liquor or tobacco, which was a remarkable thing for the day and generation in which he lived. He and his wife were members of the Methodist church. He was a great class leader and a splendid singer. Charles Russell was an ardent Whig.

Charles and Mary (MacNabb) Russell had nine children. J. Warnock, the eldest child, died at the age of twelve. Jehiah L., who was born, December 31, 1817, and died January 10, 1890, was married January 12, 1841, to Mary Ann Crosby, a native of Mason county, Kentucky, born on July 4, 1817, and died September 18, 1892. Jehiah L. Russell was born at Lebanon, Ohio. He was a physician by profession and studied at Cincinnati, and finally at the Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia. He began practicing at Lebanon, Ohio, and from Lebanon removed to Covington, Ohio, and from Covington to Maysville, Kentucky, where he practiced almost until the time of his death. He was an active Democrat. Both he and his wife were members of the Christian church. He served as clerk of the court in Clinton county, Ohio, when a young man. Jehiah Russell and wife had four children, namely: Laura, married David S. White, and they live on a farm in Kentucky; Alice, married Sidney C. Neal and lived in Washington, D. C., but is now deceased; Jehiah, Jr., died at the age of eighteen; Clara is referred to elsewhere in this sketch.

Amanda, the third child of Charles and Mary Russell, was born on January 12, 1820, and married Jackson Marble. They lived in Wilmington. He was a cabinetmaker and well-to-do. Charles C. and William MacNabb were twins, born on February 22, 1824. Charles C. married Louisa Moorehead and was a banker in Zanesville, Ohio. William MacNabb, who married Elizabeth Allen, a native of New York, was a physician and lived at Port Gibson, Mississippi. They had one son, Irwin, born at Port Gibson, who became a writer of prose and verse, especially in Negro dialect. Irwin died in New Orleans at the age of twenty-seven. Addison P. was the sixth child. Phineas, died unmarried. Catherine, born on September 15, 1832, died unmarried. Mary Elizabeth married Samuel McQuilty, a blacksmith, and lived at Middletown.

Dr. Addison Peale Russell's great-grandfather on his paternal side came from Ireland to America about 1720. He was more of an Englishman, however, than an Irishman. A carpenter by occupation, he was a large, fine looking man, and died about 1766. Doctor Russell's great-grandmother on his paternal side was also an English woman, and the mother of one daughter and four sons. Mary, the eldest, married James Cowan about 1770. Thomas, the eldest son, settled in the state of Georgia about 1786, and nothing further was ever heard from him. William, who was Doctor Russell's grandfather, was born in 1756, and at twelve years of age was bound out as an apprentice to Adam Hope, in New Jersey, where he became a wood-worker. As a skilled workman he made many of the early spinning wheels used in his community and state. He served in the War of the Revolution as a member of the militia from Somerset county, New Jersey, and was a private. He also was in the company of Capt. Jacob Martin, a battalion of the second degree, establishment of the Continental line, from Somerset county, New Jersey. Moses and Charles, the younger sons, settled near Gallipolis, Ohio, and lived to very advanced ages.

On his maternal side Doctor Russell's great-grandfather's name was Timothy Sewell, a strongly built and powerful man, nevertheless kind and peaceful and a friend to everyone. He died in 1807. He had one brother and two sisters. The great-grandmother Sewell's maiden name was Tullis. She was the eldest of a large family of twelve brothers and three sisters, and died at an advanced age near Wilmington. Most of the members of this family died in Ohio. Jane (Sewell) Russell, who was Doctor Russell's grandmother, was the eldest of a large family. Her sisters were Sarah, Mary, Hester, Hannah and Nancy, and her brothers were Moses, Peter, Rion, David and Amos. Jane (Sewell) Russell was an exceptional woman. She was unusually talented as a conversationalist.

The education of Addison Peale Russell was limited to the common schools, which he attended in Wilmington. When he was sixteen years old he was indentured to a printer in the office of the Zanesville Gazette, and in 1845 became editor and publisher of the Hillsborough News, a Whig newspaper. Two years later he removed to Lebanon, and was there connected with the Western Star. These associations with the political press led to his appointment as clerk to the Ohio state Senate in 1850. Upon returning to Wilmington he purchased a half interest in the Clinton Republican and in 1855, while editing the paper, was elected by the Republicans of Clinton county as a member of the state Legislature. He served as representative for two years, and in 1857 was elected secretary of state by the Republicans. In 1859 he was re-elected to this office. During his administration the statutes of Ohio required a financial agent for the state to reside in New York City, and in 1862 Doctor Russell was appointed to this important position by Governor Todd, and re-appointed in 1864 by Governor Brough. He was again re-appointed in 1866 by Governor Cox. In 1868 he retired from the public service with an unstained and untarnished record.

Drawn naturally toward literary pursuits, Doctor Russell had been a reader and writer from the time he was a small lad.

In 1867 appeared "Half Tints; Table d'Hote and Drawing-room" from the press of D. Appleton & Company. Eight years later appeared the first edition of "Library Notes," published by Hurd & Houghton, of New York. This volume gained a wide reputation and was commended uniformly for its value and interest. The first edition was soon out of print and soon after a second edition, revised and enlarged, was published by Houghton, Mifflin & Company, of Boston. "Library Notes" was described as "a sort of banquet of books, the author acting the part of symposium with easy grace, now and then dropping a keen remark, or making a comprehensive summary of his own." In 1881 appeared from the press of Robert, Clark & Company, of Cincinnati, "Thomas Corwin: a Sketch." This was a "brief sketch of a great genius by an acquaintance and and admirer." The volume avoided a tedious recital of dry fact and uninteresting incidents, and was confined to statements, references and illustrations, such as to give a fair idea of Corwin's character and genius. In 1884 appeared "Characterists," published by Houghton, Mifflin & Company, which was well received, not only in America, but in Great Britain. In 1887 appeared anonymously, "A Club of One." Under the disguise of invalidism the author indulges himself with the privilege of very free writing, witty, quaint, keen, ponderous and most genial. Styles fascinating, anecdotes, witticisms, epigrams abound, and all sorts of subjects are discussed with ability of a high order. Altogether the volume is a group of very charming essays. Three years later appeared the companion volume, "In a Club Corner," published by Houghton, Mifflin & Company, which the Philadelphia Press declared was "brighter than its predecessor." Five years later was published "Sub Coelum; a Sky-built Human World." This was a fanciful description of a highly-improved human society, but really a strong protest against the apparently growing materialistic and socialistic tendencies of the day. It was an original work and many readers and some critics pronounced it the author's masterpiece.

In 1894 Doctor Russell was elected a member of the Author's Club of New York City. In 1898 the Ohio University at Athens conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Literature. In December, 1910, he was elected a member of the Author's Club of London, England.

On the occasion of Doctor Russell's eightieth birthday he received from the well-known Davis Wasgatt Clark, of Cincinnati, the following letter:

"My Dear Friend: Hail to you as you come to be, as Oliver Wendell Holmes puts it, 'eighty years young.' I belonged to you before you ever saw me! It was by that inaudible and invisible proprietorship which the true author has in his true reader. But far thro' memory will shine that day of first personal touch. With best wishes. Ever your affectionate admirer. Davis Wasgatt Clark."

Of the late Doctor Russell, Dr. William H. Venable, the author of "A Dream of Empire," wrote in the Ohio Educational Monthly in October, 1901: "I may say that Doctor Russell's books are obvious growths—results of many years' study, observation and reflection. Of his processes, little or nothing is known; indeed he has said he hardly knows them himself. In assimilation he has been likened to Bayle, who had 'the art of writing down his curious quotations with his own subtle ideas.' In the analogical, there seems to be no limit to his range and ability. It is only after a close study of his books that one can have any intelligent comprehension of their scope, and the universality of their application to life in every phase of experience, effort and development."

It was Dr. Addison Peale Russell's niece, Clara, the daughter of his brother, Jehiah L. Russell, now Mrs. Clara Burns, who cared for him during the last five years of his life. Before that his home was cared for by Mrs. Katherine Worster, the daughter of Mrs. Jackson Marble, his sister.

Clara Russell was married on January 16, 1900, to James M. Burns, who was born near Steubenville, Ohio, November 14, 1837, and died on June 14, 1906. James M. was the son of Thomas and Sarah (McKinley) Burns, both of whom were born near Steubenville, Ohio. Thomas Burns was a potter and had a large pottery and brick-yard near Steubenville. He also operated a large livery stable. He and his wife were members of the Methodist church. James M. Burns was educated at Beatty College in Steubenville, and became a proof-reader and printer in Wheeling and later worked in Cincinnati. Subsequently he removed to Maysville, Kentucky, and after his marriage lived in Alleghany. He was a member of the Methodist church. For a few months he served in Gen. Lew Wallace's regiment of "home guards" during the Civil War.

Mrs. Burns received a good education, having been enabled to attend college in Cincinnati. Later she taught private students in her home in Maysville, Kentucky, for seventeen years, and then became a private tutor in Cincinnati. When a young woman she had attended the Science Hill Seminary, in Maysville, Kentucky, and had never been a student in the public schools. After her husband's death she made her home with the late Doctor Russell, and was one of his favorites. At his death she inherited his home and estate in Wilmington, where she is still living. Mrs. Burns' mother was Mary Ann Crosby, whose parents were John and Nancy (Colvin) Crosby, the former of whom was born in New Jersey and the latter of whom was born in Maryland. They settled in Mason county, Kentucky, where he was a farmer.

Mrs. Burns is a cultivated and refined woman, who is well known and widely admired by the people of Wilmington and Clinton county. Her beloved uncle, who never married, who brought honor and distinction to the Russell family as well as to the great state where he lived and worked, is gone, but his influence goes on in the hearts not only of the members of his immediate family but of those who come under the influence of his gracious personality. He was a noble man and a noble citizen.

There hangs in Mrs. Burns' parlor an oil painting of Doctor Russell by Charles T. Weber, the Ohio valley artist, dean of the Cincinnati artists. The painting received favorable notice in Cincinnati, Boston and Paris.

WILLIAM D. MOORMAN.

The following is a brief sketch of a man, who, by close attention to business, has achieved a satisfactory measure of success in agricultural affairs and who has risen to an honorable position among the enterprising farmers of Union township with whom his interests are identified. His record is a plain one and rendered remarkable by no strange or mysterious adventures, no wonderful or lucky accident. William D. Moorman, however, is one of those estimable characters whose integrity and honor win for them an enviable position in society.

William D. Moorman was born on April 3, 1845, in Greene county, Ohio, in the city of Xenia, and is the son of Samuel and Lucy W. (Johnson) Moorman, the former of whom was born in Campbell county, Virginia, May 16, 1792, and the latter, born in Campbell county, Virginia, March 1, 1800, and who died in Judy, 1877. The paternal grandparents of Mr. Moorman lived and died in Virginia. They were of English descent. His maternal grandfather was a native of Virginia and settled near Port William, in Liberty township, in 1810. The first township election ever held in Liberty township was held at his house.

The late Samuel Moorman, father of William D., was sixteen years old when the family left Virginia, in 1808, for Ohio. He enlisted in the War of 1812, but peace was declared before he saw active service. In his boyhood he learned the brick-mason's trade and at different times lived in different towns in Clinton county. Married in 1824, he workd in Cincinnati, Ohio, for some time and later twelve years in Xenia, Ohio. After that he lived three years in Peru, Indiana, and some time in Jamestown, in Greene county, Ohio. Still later he lived at Port William in Clinton county. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Protestant church.

To Samuel and Lucy W. (Johnson) Moorman were born nine children, five of whom are deceased. The names of the children are as follow: Henry, born in 1827, died young; Pamelia and Emily, twins, March 4, 1825, the former married Ezekiel Leonard, a well-to-do farmer and blacksmith, and the latter married David Teach; Mary Anna, November 25, 1830, married Jacob Good, of Greene county, and they are deceased; John Johnson, June 7, 1833, deceased, was a brickmaker and justice of the peace at Port William, Ohio; Barnett G., July 21, 1836, is a retired farmer of Xenia, Ohio; Susannah, June 23, 1839, is deceased; Catherine died of cholera in 1849 at the age of eight years; William D. was the youngest child of this family.

William D. Moorman enjoyed only limited educational advantages, having attended school for a short time in Indiana, at Peru, and a little while at Port William, Ohio. In the meantime he was engaged in helping his brother at brickmaking. Subsequently, he married and lived with his father-in-law and worked on his farm on the shares for eight years. Mrs. Moorman inherited some land and since that time they have added more and have now one hundred and eleven acres. They still live on the farm and carry on general farming. Mr. Moorman raises Shorthorn cattle.

On February 1, 1876, William D. Moorman was married to Martha Starbuck, who was born on the farm adjoining the one where she now lives on January 29, 1848, and who is the daughter of Jesse G. and Amy (Cox) Starbuck.

Mr. and Mrs. Moorman have had one son, Charles R., born on May 3, 1878. He is unmarried and lives at home with his parents.

Mrs. Moorman's father, Jesse G. Starbuck, was born in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, October 8, 1819. His paternal great-grandparents were Thomas and Rachel Starbuck, the former of whom was born on Nantucket Island, May 12, 1707, and who died on February 2, 1777, and the latter, born in 1710, and died on May 31, 1789. His grandfather, Hezekiah Starbuck, was born on Nantucket Island, April 10, 1749, and was married on November 19, 1771, to Mary Thurston. He was a seafaring man and for a part of his life was captain of a whaling vessel. He was on a cruise when the Revolutionary War broke out and on his return he had great difficulty in entering the harbor, which was blockaded by the enemy. In 1785 he emigrated to Guilford county, North Carolina, where he reared his family and where his wife died on June 9, 1806. He afterwards removed to Clinton county, where he remained until his death, which occurred on June 10, 1830. The father of Jesse G. Starbuck, Gayer Starbuck, was born on Nantucket Island, August 10, 1777, and removed with his parents to North Carolina, where he spent the early part of his life. He learned the blacksmith's trade and for many years followed that vocation. He was married on January 17, 1799, by permission of the New Garden monthly meeting, to Susannah, the daughter of Jesse and Anna Dillon. By this marriage five sons and five daughters were born, of whom one son died at the age of twenty-two years, and the rest married and reared families. In 1807 he removed with his family to Ohio and settled temporarily in the edge of Greene county near where Paintersville now is, but in 1810 they came to Clinton county. Here they remained until their death. He died on December 30, 1866, and she on March 12, 1861. Jesse Dillon, who was of Irish descent was born in North Carolina in October, 1753, and on April 29, 1778, was married to Hannah Ruckman, who was born on March 20, 1754, to Joseph and Sarah Ruckman. They came to Ohio, in 1807, and settled in the wilderness on land later owned by John T. Starbuck.

Jesse G. Starbuck was married at Fairfield meeting in Hendricks county, Indiana, October 20, 1842, to Amy Cox, who was a daughter of Harmon and Martha Cox. She was born in Wayne county, Indiana, June 1, 1823, and moved to Hendricks county with her parents when a child. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Jesse G. Starbuck settled on a farm in Union township where he was a farmer and miller. They reared a family of five children, others having died in early life: Adin L. married Louisa M. Pidgeon; Asa married Almira Custis; Martha is the wife of Mr. Moorman; William R., born on May 12, 1858, graduated from Wilmington College; Jesse H., November 11, 1864, became a farmer.

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Moorman are members of the Dover meeting of Friends. Mr. Moorman is a Republican. He is an enterprising farmer, an honorable citizen and a popular man in Union township.

HOMER JESSE LUNDY.

The biographies of successful men are instructive as guides and as incentives to the great body of young men, whose careers are yet to be made. The examples they furnish of patient purpose and endeavor strongly illustrate what every one may accomplish. Homer Jesse Lundy, a splendid, hard-working, young farmer of Chester township, this county, whose life story is here briefly set forth, is a conspiciuous example of one who has lived to good purpose.

Homer Jesse Lundy was born in Union township, this county, on January 8, 1881, the son of Enoch and Phoebe (Wall) Lundy, both of whom were born in the same township, the former on July 18, 1830, and the latter of whom was a daughter of Asariah Wall.

Enoch Lundy was the son of Jesse and Abigail (Green) Lundy, the former born in Grayson county, Virginia, on September 19, 1805, and the latter, on December 19, 1794, the daughter of John and Ruth Green. Jesse Lundy was a farmer by occupation, who emigrated to Clinton county about 1810 with his parents, who located on a farm in Chester township, where he was reared and where he lived practically all of his life. In addition to farming, he operated a blacksmith shop on his farm of ninety-seven acres. Jesse and Abigail (Green) Lundy were the parents of six children: Enoch, the father of Homer J.; Ruth, who married Benjamin Johnson; Elizabeth, who married Peter Osborn; Margaret, who became the wife of Aseph Paxon; John, who died in infancy, and James, who married Sarah Venable. The family were all members of the Friends church. Jesse Lundy was the son of James Lundy, a native of Virginia, and one of the early settlers in Clinton county. James Lundy was twice married, the first time to Elizabeth Johnson, to which union ten children were born, James, Levi, Jesse, William, John, Anna, Susannah, Asenath, Enoch and Rachel.

Enoch Lundy, a representative of the third generation of the Lundy family in Clinton county, received his education in the common schools of Chester township, and was engaged in farming and carpentering all of his life. He owned a farm of ninety-three acres and was a devout member of the Friends church and an ardent Republican. By his first wife, Sarah Babb, who was the daughter of Henry Babb, there was born one child, Calvin. After her death, Mr. Lundy married secondly, Phoebe Wall, to which union there was born one child, Homer Jesse, the subject of this biographical sketch.

Like his father and his grandfather, Homer Jesse Lundy was educated in the common schools of Chester township, but he had an additional advantage, in that he was permitted for some time to attend school at Delaware, Ohio, where he pursued a commercial course. After he had finished his education he began farming in Chester township, where, with his mother, he now owns one hundred and fifty-six acres of land. Mr. Lundy is a general farmer and stockman and is one of the well-known young citizens of that township.

On June 7, 1905, Homer Jesse Lundy was married to Ruth Oren, who was born on January 28, 1881, the daughter of Alfred and Laura (Nance) Oren, to which union there has been no issue.

During the past ten years, Mr. Lundy has been treasurer of Chester township, having been elected to that office by the Republican party, with which he is identified politically. Mr. and Mrs. Lundy are members of the Friends church and are held in the highest regard by all who know them.

J. ALBERT STINGLEY.

J. Albert Stingley, who comes of an old and long established family of Clinton county and one which has been prominent in the agricultural life of the county for nearly a century, was born in Chester township, this county, on May 31, 1861, the son of Gilead and Nancy (Lucas) Stingley, and the grandson of John and Elizabeth (Bush) Stingley.

Gilead Stingley was born on November 4, 1820, in Ross county, Ohio, the son of John and Elizabeth (Bush) Stingley, and died in 1900. His wife, Nancy Lucas, was born in Highland county in 1831, the daughter of Richard and Mary (Curtindoll) Lucas, and is still living. Educated in the common schools of Chester township, Gilead Stingley was a farmer during almost his entire life and owned seven or eight hundred acres of land. For about five years, following 1875, he was engaged in the pork packing business in Wilmington and was for many years a large cattle raiser. Eleven children were born to Gilead and Nancy Stingley, as follow: Eliza, who married John F. Oglesbee; William, who died in March, 1913; Amanda (deceased), who married James Bailey; Elizabeth, who married James Swindler; Emma, who died at the age of five years; J. Albert, the subject of this sketch; Calvin, who is referred to elsewhere in this volume; Ada, who married Lester Oglesbee; Alonzo, who died at the age of two years; Nettie, who married Elijah Turner, and Alvin, who is referred to elsewhere in this volume. Gilead Stingley and wife were members of the Friends church and he voted the Democratic ticket.

John Stingley, grandfather of J. Albert Stingley, was born in Virginia on August 22, 1792, and came to Ohio in 1800, first locating in Ross county, where, on April 16, 1818, he married Elizabeth Bush, who was born on May 31, 1798. Four years later they purchased a farm of two hundred and nine acres in Clinton county and ever since that time the family has been established here. Four children were born to John and Elizabeth Stingley: Noah B., February 24, 1819; Gilead, November 24, 1820; Talitha, April 27, 1823; and Julian, October 7, 1825. The father of these children died on September 6, 1826, and after his death, his widow married Sebastian Stingley, the twin brother of her first husband. The Stingley family in America dates from the coming of George Stingley, a native of Germany, who was born on September 12, 1763, and who was the great-grandfather of J. Albert Stingley, the subject of this sketch.

Like his other brothers, J. Albert Stingley was educated in the common schools of Chester township and has farmed in that township practically all of his life, except for one year which he spent in Wilmington, during which brief period he conducted a butcher shop on West Main street. For seven years prior to his marriage, Mr. Stingley dealt largely in stock and is one of the well-known stock buyers of Clinton county today. In February, 1894, he purchased a farm of seventy-two acres, where he has since lived.

On December 18, 1887, J. Albert Stingley was married to Rosa M. Fudge, daughter of H. C. and Emeline Fudge, to which union have been born two children, Hazel, who married Foy Powers and has one child, Dorothy Lucile, and Oscar L.

Mr. and Mrs. Stingley are members of the Friends church and are highly esteemed in their neighborhood. Mr. Stingley is a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Knights of the Maccabees. He is independent in politics, believing that local government is more effectually served outside the realm of partisanship.

JOSEPH F. BALLARD.

Joseph F. Ballard, a well-to-do farmer of Union township, this county, is a representative of the sixth generation of the Ballard family in Clinton county. His great-great-grandfather, David Ballard, emigrated to Ohio about the year 1800 and located within the present limits of the city of Wilmington.

Joseph F. Ballard was born on November 4, 1872, in Liberty township, the son of Abraham S. and Mary J. (Oren) Ballard, members of the Friends church, the former born in Union township on January 14, 1838, and the latter in Liberty township, in April, 1838, sister of the Hon. Jesse N. Oren. Abraham S. Ballard was educated in the common schools of Liberty township and farmed in that township all of his life, owning eighty acres of land. On September 12, 1861, he married Mary J. Oren, and to this union three children were born, namely: Clara, who married Hiram Arnold; Charles E., who married Jessie Parker, and Joseph F., the subject of this sketch. Abraham S. Ballard was a Republican and served as trustee of Liberty township. He was also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Abraham S. Ballard, who died in 1913, was the son of Joseph and Susannah G. (Stillings) Ballard, the former of whom was born on April 29, 1912, in Clinton county, and the latter, on June 24, 1817, in Virginia. In 1826 she came with her parents, Abraham and Sarah Stillings, to Clinton county. Susannah G. Stillings was the youngest of a family of six children. Joseph Ballard owned one hundred and thirty acres of land in Liberty township, where he farmed most all of his life and where he was well known. Besides Abraham S., he and his wife had three other children, Margaret, Eunice and Emma. They were members of the Friends church and he was a Republican in politics.

The Clinton county branch of the Ballard family goes back to the Old Dominion state, where David, the grandfather of Joseph and the great-great-grandfather of Joseph F., was born about the middle of the eighteenth century. He married several years before the Declaration of American Independence and about 1800 came to Ohio and settled within the present limits of Wilmington, purchasing a military land warrant. He was among the first, if not the first, minister in the Friends church in Clinton county and served locally for many years, or until his death about 1820. He and his wife were the parents of seven children, all of whom grew to maturity. Six married and one died unmarried. John Ballard, the next in line of descent, was born in either Pennsylvania or Virginia, about 1770, and married Dinah Pickerell ,on April 20, 1798. In 1809 they came to Clinton county and he died on May 13, 1814. They also were the parents of seven children. After John Ballard's death, his widow married John Whitson, a native of Pennsylvania. She passed away on June 7, 1835.

Joseph F. Ballard, the subject of this sketch, who was educated in the common schools of Liberty township and in Wilmington College, which he attended for one term, began farming in Chester township after completing his education, farming there for two years. In 1895 Mr. Ballard purchased the farm in Union township where he now lives. This farm originally consisted of fifty-eight acres but he has since added to the tract until he now owns one hundred and fifty-one acres, a splendid farm. From year to year, he has invested considerable money in all kinds of improvements and is regarded as one of the more successful men of Union township.

In 1893 Joseph F. Ballard was married to Irene Johnson, the daughter of Harry and Margaret (Painter) Johnson, to which union four children have been born, as follow: Donald, born in 1897; Nadine, in 1899; Frances, in 1906, and Herbert, in 1908.

Mr. and Mrs. Ballard are members of the Friends church, true to the religion of Mr. Ballard's great-great-grandfather, the Rev. David Ballard, probably the first minister of the Society of Friends in this region. Politically, Mr. Ballard is a Republican. He and his wife are interested in all good works in their neighborhood and are held in high esteem throughout that part of the county.

JUDGE EDWARD JOSEPH WEST.

The high standing of the West family in this country began several generations ago, when Thomas West, known as Lord Delaware, governor of Virginia, early in the seventeenth century, probably became the progenitor of the family in America. Benjamin West, the great painter, is of the same stock. Peyton West, grandfather of the subject of this review, surveyed the town of Westboro, which was named for him, while his son, the father of the Judge, was elected probate judge on the same ticket which elected Lincoln to the Presidency, and, as a delegate to the Republican national convention at Philadelphia in 1864, helped to renominate the martyred President. With an ancestry such as this, it is not surprising that Edward J. West has attained a front rank among his fellow citizens. Lawyer, publicist, judge, politician, lecturer and orator, Judge West's name and fame have extended beyond the confines of the state in which he lives. As a politician of the higher type, he is known from one end of the state to the other; as a lyceum lecturer, he has addressed audiences in many states of the Union; and as a member of several national organizations, he has been the recipient of signal honors.

Edward Joseph West, now judge of the common pleas court of Clinton county, was born on December 8, 1851, at Blanchester, Clinton county, the son of Joseph H. and Henrietta (Stroud) West, the former of whom was a native of this county, and the latter of whom was born in Williamstown, Grant county, Kentucky.

The West family came originally from England, and settled on Fall creek, in Pittsylvania county, Virginia. It was here that Owen West, great-grandfather of Judge West, married Mary Martin. Of their children, Peyton West, grandfather of the subject, married Sarah Hadley, who was born near Guilford, North Carolina. They were the parents of six boys and five girls. Peyton West was among the ambitious men of the East, who migrated westward, settling in 1804 on a farm in Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, before the county was organized. Here it was that Joseph H. West, the father of Judge West, was born. Peyton West, besides being a surveyor, held public office, including that of county treasurer. He died on his farm, three miles southeast of Martinsville, Ohio.

The life of Joseph H. West, father of the subject, was as varied and full of public honor and service as the life of a man living in that stirring time could well be. Born on November 22, 1822, he was only twenty-six years of age when the Mexican War broke out. Enlisting at New Orleans in 1846, he served until the close of that struggle, being mustered out in the same city in which he began service. The war over, he returned to Cincinnati, Ohio, and from there went to Williamstown, Kentucky, to take charge of a store. There he was married, on September 19, 1850, to Henrietta Stroud. Returning to Clinton county about 1851, he continued to live here until his death, which took place on November 25, 1879. In 1864 Joseph West had a part in national politics, as a delegate to the national convention that renominated Abraham Lincoln to the Presidency. Four years prior to this, he was elected probate judge of Clinton county, was afterwards re-elected, and served six years. Being admitted to the bar in 1854, he was in active practice all of the time he did not hold public office. His widow is still living, making her home with her son, Edward J.

In the maternal line, Judge West is descended from Southern stock, his mother's mother having been Harriett Vanlandingham, who was born in Stafford county, Virginia, a descendant from the French Huguenots. When she was a young girl, her parents moved to Fairfax county, Virginia, and thence to Grant county, Kentucky. There she became the wife of Edward Stroud, who was born in Reading, Pennsylvania, and their daughter, Henrietta, became the wife of Joseph H. West. Of the nine children born to this union, Edward J., is the eldest, the others being: Clarence, now living in Los Angeles, California; George, Harriet and William H. are deceased; Benjamin, of Charleston, West Virginia; Mellville, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; and Alfred, deceased.

Edward J. West received his education in the common schools of Wilmington and the high school, being compelled, on account of ill health, to leave school before graduation. He then taught school for two years, his first teacher's certificate being dated April 2, 1870. During this period he lived at home, one and one-half miles west of town. Meanwhile he had read law under his father's directions and he was admitted to the bar on January 29, 1873, practicing thereafter with his father.

With his election as prosecuting attorney in 1875, the official life of Edward J. West began. When he went out of office, after serving twelve years, or five terms, he again resumed the law practice in January, 1889, which he continued until April 6, 1906, when he was appointed by United States District Judge A. C. Thompson as referee in bankruptcy for Clinton county, resigning this office to assume the duties of judge of common pleas, a place to which he was appointed, on September 4, 1908, by Governor A. L. Harris, having been previously endorsed by a primary vote of his county. Later, he was elected to fill a short term, and in November, 1910, was elected for the full term of six years.

In 1896 Judge West was elected as delegate to the Republican national convention at St. Louis in 1896. He is considered one of the best public speakers in the state and has done much effective work in this line for the Republican party. He was formerly chairman of the Republican county central committee.

On January 3, 1878, Edward J. West married Katharine E. Bowshier, who has taken a keen interest in the career of her husband and has had her share in his success. Katharine E. Bowshier is the daughter of Stephen E. Bowshier and was born on a farm in Pickaway county, Ohio. The children born to Judge and Mrs. West were: Winnifred C., who passed away at the age of twenty-two years; and Kathleen C., wife of William M. Weller, of Cincinnati, Ohio, whose children are Katharine W. and Winnifred C., both born at Lynchburg, Virginia. One of the interesting phases of the family life of this home is the devotion and tender care lavished on the Judge's mother, now eighty-two years of age. By her gentle nature and lovable personality, this aged woman has won many friends, who brighten her declining years.

Judge West is the type of man whose active mind must find many and varied channels of expression. This he has sought in a number of organizations, some of which are national in their scope. Among these is the National Geographic Society, of Washington, D. C., an organization which numbers among its members men and women of the highest scholarship and attainment. He also belongs to the Luther Burbank Society, another association which is broad in its scope and membership. For several years the Judge has been actively affiliated with the International Lyceum Association, for which he occasionally lectures. He is also a member of the Ohio State Bar Association. He is a well-known speaker on fraternal and patriotic subjects, of which his favorite topic is the Grand Army of the Republic. When a boy on the farm, Judge West joined the Patrons of Husbandry, or Grangers' Association, an organization in which he has been active ever since. He belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Fraternal Order of Eagles, the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, and the Royal Arcanium, being grand orator of the grand council of Ohio of the last-named order; Modern Woodmen of America and Daughters of Rebekah.

Among the interests of Judge West's early childhood and young manhood was the church, and he is now an elder in the Presbyterian church, of which his wife, daughter and son-in-law are members. The Judge formerly found time to be active in Sunday school work, having represented his home county in the state and national conventions of that body.

Life has been to Judge West a thing of deep interest and signal value. Clear in his intuitions, true in his judgments, broad in his sympathies and kindly in his nature, his life has been far-reaching in its influence for good. With every opportunity for self-aggrandizement, he chose rather to serve the common people and in so doing he has ever had their merited respect and esteem. Clinton county has been dignified by his life and achievements, and his influence in the civic and social life as well as in professional circles, has been of a most beneficent order.

JOHN BRENNAN.

No better farm is to be found in Wilson township than the seventy-six acres which is owned by John Brennan, living on Rural Route No. 1, out of Sabina, Ohio.

John Brennan was born on May 22, 1860, in Fayette county, Ohio, a son of Thomas and Margaret (Mitchell) Brennan, the former of whom was born in County Sligo, Ireland, in 1812, and the latter also a native of Ireland, born in county Wexford, the daughter of Patrick Mitchell. Thomas Brennan was a son of Thomas Brennan, a native of Ireland and a devout member of the Catholic church, who never came to America. Thomas Brennan, Jr., father of John, wes educated in a private school in Ireland, and came to America about 1849, proceeding to Cincinnati, where for some time he worked on a railroad, which was being constructed at that time through this section of Ohio. He later married Margaret Mitchell, and commenced farming in Clinton county about 1859. Although he always thereafter was engaged in farming he never owned land. He was a devout member of the Catholic church and died in that faith, his death occurring on November 25, 1895. His wife had preceded him to the grave many years before, her death having occurred in 1876, at the age of thirty-seven years. They were the parents of six children, Mary, Catherine, John, Jerry, Margaret and Ann, of whom Mary and Margaret are now deceased.

Educated in the common schools of this state, John Brennan has become a successful farmer of Wilson township, this county. He was married in 1887 to Margaret Sullivan, a native of Ireland, the daughter of Thomas Sullivan, who is now living in Wilmington, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Brennan have no children. Mr. Brennan is the owner of seventy-six acres of land in Wilson township, where he lives. This land is level and very rich.

Twelve years ago he built a comfortable and modern house, and four years ago erected a large and commodious barn, and has improved his farm in many ways, so that he now has a very neat and attractive place.

WALTER T. McMILLAN.

Walter T. McMillan is widely known as a successful farmer in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, where his well-directed efforts in the practical affairs of life, his capable business management and sound judgment have won for him a competence in farm property and a comfortable status in the business affairs of this county. He owns the old Seth Linton farm of two hundred and thirty-three acres, which he purchased in 1896. His life fully demonstrates what may be accomplished by a man of energy and ambition who is not afraid to work and who is possessed of a capacity for perseverance. In all of the relations of life he has commanded the confidence and respect of his associates and friends, and has ably carried forward the work of his illustrious ancestors who were pioneers in this community.

Walter T. McMillan was born near Gurneyville, Chester township, Clinton county, Ohio, November 22, 1865, and is the son of Isaac and Nancy (Linton) McMillan, the former was born in Chester township in 1836, and died in 1874. The latter was born on the farm where her son, Walter T., now lives, March 1, 1840, and died on March 12, 1911. Isaac McMillan was the son of David and Sarah (Carpenter) McMillan, the former of whom was born in Chester township, Clinton county, the son of David and Hannah (Hussey) McMillan. Sarah Carpenter was a native of New York state who came to Clinton county, Ohio, with her parents when three years old. David McMillan, Sr., who was born on March 2, 1772, in Pennsylvania, was the son of William and Deborah McMillan. They were residents of York county, Pennsylvania, after coming to this country, the former having been born in Scotland and the latter in Wales. They had eight children: Thomas, William, Henry, Samuel, David and Jonathan (twins), Mary and Lydia. Jonathan married Anne Hussey; David married Hannah Hussey; Mary married Joseph Baxter; Lydia married William Jay. After coming to Ohio David and Hannah (Hussey) McMillan settled where Thomas McMillan later owned a farm. They had ten children, five of whom were born in Pennsylvania, and five in Ohio. After locating in Clinton county in 1804, David and Hannah (Hussey) McMillan obtained a land grant signed by President George Washington, purchasing the land for a dollar and a quarter an acre. They were members of the Society of Friends. David, Jr., and Sarah (Carpenter) McMillan had two children, Isaac and Judiah, the latter of whom was the first cashier of the Clinton County National Bank, and who died in California.

Isaac McMillan grew up on the farm near Gurneyville and operated this farm for his father until 1866, when he opened a hardware store and also began packing pork. He assisted in the establishment of the Clinton County National Bank. He was a Republican in politics and as a member of the Friends church served as clerk of the Center monthly meeting for many years. For some time he was the proprietor of a dry-goods store. He died while still a young man of lung trouble. His wife was the daughter of Seth and Sarah Anne Linton. The genealogy and family history of the Linton family are presented in more complete form in the sketch of Fred Weldon Linton, contained elsewhere in this volume.

After the death of Isaac McMillan, his widow, the mother of Walter T. McMillan, married an uncle of her first husband, Thomas McMillan. They lived in Chester township near the Chester church. By Nancy (Linton) McMillan's first marriage there were six children, namely: David R., born on March 3, 1861, died at the age of three years; Seth L., February 15, 1863, an attorney at Columbus, Ohio; Walter T., November 22, 1865; Clifton, December 21, 1867, died at the age of two years; Carrie E., November 3, 1869, died at the age of two years; and Maria E., October 4, 1874, died at the age of six months. Thomas and Nancy (Linton) McMillan were the parents of one son, Thomas Henry, who lives on the old McMillan homestead in Chester township. Mrs. Nancy (Linton) McMillan spent her later years among her children and died at the home of her son, Walter T.

Walter T. McMillan obtained the rudiment of an education in the public schools of Chester township, and later became a student at Wilmington College. He was nine years old at the time of his father's death, in 1874, and after his death lived with his grandfather, Seth Linton, until thirteen years of age. After this he worked for his step-father, Thomas McMillan until his death, when in partnership with his mother he purchased the old Seth Linton farm in Union township, where he now lives. Mr. McMillan has since remodeled the house and buildings and greatly improved the farm.

On December 24, 1894, Mr. McMillan was married to Martha Blanch Kirk, a native of Adams county, Ohio, the daughter of Albert DeWitt and Phoebe D. (McIntyre) Kirk. The father of Mrs. McMillan is a resident of Winchester, Ohio, where he is a merchant tailor. His wife is deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. McMillan have been born six children; Florence Nancy, born on November 22, 1895, is a graduate of Wilmington College; Damaris, January 22, 1898, is a student in the Wilmington high school; Isaac DeWitt, September 7, 1899; Leontine, died at the age of one year; Kirk, January 1, 1904; and Harriet, December 15, 1912.

Mr. and Mrs. McMillan are members of the Center meeting of the Society of Friends. Mr. McMillan is an ardent Republican.

AARON BOWMAN.

Some of our brainiest men and women have had little or no acquaintance with the interior of a school room, but they have not only taken advantage of every opportunity for gaining knowledge, but they have made opportunities for themselves. They had that force of character that would not admit of the neglect to follow every avenue leading to an education. We cannot but admire the man who wins out in spite of such a drawback.

Aaron Bowman, farmer of Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, was born in Brown county, Ohio, August 4, 1862. He is a son of Benjamin and Mary Ann (Greeley) Bowman. He received a meager education in the public school near his home in Brown county. When he was fifteen years old, his parents moved to Kentucky, and in 1887 he came to Clinton county, where he was married. After renting several farms in Green township, he purchased seventy acres in Green township, and lived there twelve years. In 1911 he sold out, buying seventy-eight acres in Union township, on the Waynesville pike, where he has since resided. He remodeled his house, and it is one of the most attractive and comfortable homes in the neighborhood. Mr. Bowman is a member of the Christian church, and is a Democrat.

Benjamin Bowman, father of the subject of this sketch, was born in 1821, in Brown county, Ohio, and died on June 30, 1902. His wife was Mary Ann Greenley, who was born in 1831, and died in December, 1902. He grew to manhood in Brown county on a farm. He married, and soon after bought a farm in Brown county, which he sold in 1878, going from there to Kentucky, settling in Clark county. Here he rented land and farmed, devoting his special attention to the raising of tobacco. He lived on the H. P. Thompson farm twelve years. About 1890 the family came to Clinton county. He died on the Ferren farm in Union township. He and his wife were members of the Christian church. They were the parents of ten children, namely: Lucinda, Louis, James B., Nelson, Lucius M., Aaron, Nannie, Thomas, Harvey and Ida. Lucinda became the wife of Whitmore Freeland, and lives in Indiana; Louis, died in Adams county, Ohio; James B., deceased, lived in Clinton county; Nelson lives in Clark county, Kentucky, and is a tobacco raiser; Lucius M. lives in Wilmington,, Ohio, and is a retired farmer; Nannie became the wife of George Green, and lives in Nicholas county, Kentucky; Thomas lives in Kentucky; Harvey lives in Union township, and is a farmer; Ida died in 1903.

The paternal grandparents were both probably born near Aberdeen, Ohio, as the family were early settlers there. They were of German descent. Mr. Bowman was a farmer.

Aaron Bowman was married on November 12, 1892, to Miss Jennie Lieurance, who was born in Green township, Clinton county, Ohio, and is a daughter of William Henry and Rachel Anna (Pond) Lieurance. Mrs. Bowman died on March 3, 1908, leaving one son, W. Ernest, born on August 29, 1893, who now lives in Cincinnati, where he works as a barber.

FRANK WILLIAM ANTRAM.

Frank W. Antram is one of the prominent farmers of Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, who has lived a quiet, honorable life, and is well known and well respected in Union township and Clinton county.

Frank W. Antram was born at Antram Corners, in Union township, January 10, 1858, the son of John M. and Catherine (Babb) Antram, the former of whom was born in Clinton county, one mile west of Wilmington, June 19, 1825, and the latter, born on a farm in Union township where her son, Frank W., now lives, July 21, 1827, and who died, June 24, 1898.

John M. Antram, with the exception of six years spent in Warren county, has resided in Clinton county all his life, and is still living at the age of ninety years. He is the son of Hiram and Sarah (Whitson) Antram, of Irish descent, the former of whom was a native of Frederick county, Virginia, and the latter of Center county, Pennsylvania. They were married in Clinton county, where both settled at an early day. Hiram Antram was a farmer, but kept a hotel and store at Harveysburg, in Warren county, for many years. He was born on January 29, 1799, and died in April, 1866. His wife was born in 1800, and died in 1872. The Antram and the Whitson families came to Clinton county, Ohio, in 1817. The latter had settled in Madison one year previously. Hiram Antram was the son of John and Ann (Hackney) Antram, who also spent a part of their lives in Clinton county. Sarah (Whitson) Antram was the daughter of John Whitson, who married a Miss Moore. The Antram family has been connected with the Friends church for several generations. Hiram Antram owned a farm of two hundred and thirty-six acres one mile west of Wilmington. He and his wife had nine children, of whom five are deceased: James W. is living at Monticello, Missouri, at the age of ninety-two; John M., the father of Frank W., is living with his son at the age of ninety; Calvin H. is living in California at the age of eighty-eight; Priscilla married Frank Larzelere. The deceased children are Emily, Amanda, Joseph, Maria and Mary. Emily died in childhood; Amanda Louisa died in infancy; Joseph died in 1912, in Warren county; Maria, who is deceased, was the wife of Alfred Haines; Mary died at the age of twenty.

On the maternal side of Mr. Antram's family, his mother, who before her marriage was Catherine Babb, was the daughter of Azel and Hannah (Hollingsworth) Babb, both of whom came from Center county, Pennsylvania, and in 1817 settled south of Wilmington, in Union township. They were strict Quakers and good farmers and died at advanced ages. Azel Babb was the son of Henry, who was the founder of the family in Ohio. In 1806 he came from Frederick county, Virginia, and settled about a mile and one-half north of the court house at Wilmington. His wife's father, Mordecai Walker, early in 1805 purchased one thousand acres of land of Thomas Posey, the owner of a survey on which Wilmington was laid out, and divided the same into four equal parts and gave each of his four children, two sons and two daughters, one of these parts, Elizabeth Babb, the wife of Henry Babb, received her portion in the northeast corner of the one-thousand-acre tract, including the land upon which Mr. Babb settled. At the first election of county officers Henry Babb was elected county commissioner and served two years. He and his wife had five sons and six daughters. The sons were Peter, Thomas, Henry, Azel and Samson. The daughters were Mary, who married Thomas Babb; Rebecca, who married William Crumley; Rachel, who married John Walters; Hannah, who married Joseph Smith; Lydia, who married a Mr. Smith, and Betsy, who married a Mr. Wall.

John M. Antram grew up on his father's farm and was married, in 1851, to Catherine Babb. Subsequently he purchased seventy-seven and three-quarter acres of land and added to that tract until he owned one hundred and forty acres at what is now known as Antram's Corner. He lived there for thirty-seven years, until 1888, when he retired and removed to Wilmington. He lived in Wilmington until 1903, but now lives with his son, Frank William, and at the home of his other son, Arthur D. (deceased), at Antram's Corner. He served as trustee of Union township for four years and is a "dyed-in-the-wool" Republican. In 1870 the Antram family all joined the Friends church, and he formerly was an elder in the church. He bought and sold stock extensively at Antram's Corner, and for several years kept a tavern. There were two children born to his marriage: Arthur D., who was born on March 7, 1855, and who died on August 10, 1911; Frank William, the subject of this sketch.

Frank William Antram attended the public schools of Union township, and later Wilmington College. After his marriage he moved to farm near Gurneyville, Ohio, and lived there from 1879 to 1881. Later he lived in Greene county for three years, and then returned to the old farm, where he lived until 1900. In 1900 he purchased one hundred and ten acres of the Probasco farm of Wilmington, Ohio, and has improved the place. He was engaged in the dairy business for six years, and now owns a very fertile and well-equipped farm.

On October 15, 1879, Frank William Antram was married to Florence Belle Saville, who was born on July 1, 1862, six miles south of Xenia, in Greene county. She is the daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Ketteman) Saville, both of whom are deceased. They were natives of Virginia who came to Greene county when young people, and engaged in farming. He was a Republican, and a member of the German Reformed church. They had six children who grew to maturity. To Mr. and Mrs. Frank William Antram have been born two children: Carrie Ethel, who was born on February 2, 1881, was married on April 24, 1903, to Clarence L. Haworth, who died on April 24, 1905; Ada, January 21, 1889, married C. Herbert Green, and they live in Dayton, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Antram are members of the Friends church and influential in the congregation at Wilmington. Mr. Antram is an uncompromising Republican.

EDWIN F. McKAY.

Three grandsons of Francis and Mary (Collett) McKay are represented in this vol- one. They are Welden N., Clarence H. and Edwin F., the subject of this sketch. The family has been a prominent one in Clinton county history and was established here by the father of Francis McKay, Moses McKay, who was the son of Andrew, who, in turn, was the son of Robert. The representatives of the present generation of the family in Clinton county are not only successful men in the various vocations to which they have turned their attention, but they are among the leading citizens of this county.

Edwin F. McKay was born on March 7, 1873, on the farm where he now lives in Chester township, the son of Moses C. and Sarah (Bales) McKay, the former of whom was born on the old McKay homestead in Chester township, September 10, 1832, and the latter was the daughter of Silas and Elizabeth (Smith) Bales. Sarah Bales had been previously married to a Mr. Marshall. She was the second wife of Moses C. McKay. He was educated in the common schools of Chester township and, by occupation, was a farmer and surveyor. He owned about two hundred and forty acres of land at the time of his death. On October 3, 1855, Moses C. McKay married Matilda Ferguson, the daughter of Edward and Ann Ferguson, who was born on August 26, 1838. To this union there were born three children: Emma, who married Charles Jessup; Anna, who is the wife of Mansfield Swindler; and Charles A., who married Susan Mallow. Mrs. Matilda McKay died on April 27, 1865, and after her death, Mr. McKay married Sarah Bales, April 4, 1867. To this marriage there were born two children: William S., deceased, who married Mary Wililamson; and Edwin F., the subject of this sketch. Moses McKay was one of the trustees of the Methodist church, and as a Republican he was elected trustee of Chester township. He also served as land assessor in 1890, and as justice of the peace for several terms.

The remote ancestry of the McKay family goes back to Andrew McKay, a native of Scotland and a son of Robert McKay. Andrew McKay, some time prior to 1766, had married Jane Ridgeway and settled in Frederick county, Virginia. They had five children: Moses, Enos, Jacob. Margaret and Patience. Of these children, Moses was born on September 17, 1766, and at the age of twenty-seven, in 1796, married, according to the discipline of the Society of Friends, Abigal Shinn, a daughter of George and Rachel (Wright) Shinn, who was born on May 3, 1776, in Stafford county, Virginia. They had thirteen children, as follow: Rachel, born on January 19, 1794; Robert, December 17, 1795; Sarah, November 11, 1797; George, March 11, 1800; Francis. January 9, 1802; Margaret, January 16, 1804; Jonas, September 9, 1806; Virginia, August 22, 1808; Maria, May 23, 1811; Jonas T., May 10, 1813; Levi D., February 29, 1816; Jacob F., June 3, 1819, and Mary E., July 27, 1822. About 1814 Moses McKay and his wife and children emigrated from Virginia, via Pittsburgh and thence by flatboat to Cincinnati, and from there to Lebanon, Ohio, after stopping a short time, they left for Waynesville, purchasing a large tract of land east of the Little Miami river and a short distance west of Caesars creek in what is now known as Massie township, Warren county.

It was Francis McKay, the fifth child born to Moses and Jane (Ridgeway) McKay, who is the grandfather of Clarence H., Welden N. and Edwin F. McKay, of Chester township. Francis McKay was born in January, 1802, in Frederick county, Virginia, and was married on October 7, 1830 to Mary Collett, the daughter of Moses and Rebecca Collett, who was born on November 7, 1808. They had eleven children, seven of whom lived to maturity. In the spring of 1832, Francis McKay settled in the northern portion of what is now Chester township, Clinton county. He had inherited several hundred acres of land, which was partially cleared, from his father, who died on January 28, 1828. He had also inherited land at the death of his mother, who died in July, 1828. He was a man of very industrious habits, of sterling integrity and unblemished character. He passed away on March 26, 1871. At the time of his death it was said of him: "In his death, Clinton county lost one of her most worthy and respected citizens. Not only is his presence missed by the loved ones of his own family, who mourn his loss. but by the poor and needy to whom he ever extended a helping hand."

Edwin F. McKay began his education in the schools of Chester township and later, for two years, was a student at the National Normal University, at Lebanon. After finishing his education, he began farming in Chester township and now owns two hundred and eighteen acres, on which he carries on general farming and stock raising. In 1906 Mr. McKay built a barn and the following year a house, where he now lives.

On November 25, 1896, Edwin F. McKay was married to Allie Oglesbee, who was born on May 8, 1872, the daughter of Solomon and Sabina (Middleton) Oglesbee. They are the parents of two children: Cleo, who was born on April 26, 1900; and Edna, April 28, 1904, and died on May 16, 1906, at the age of two years.

Mr. and Mrs. McKay are members of the Methodist church. He is a Republican and is a member of the Knights of the Maccabees. Edwin F. McKay is a young, intelligent and prosperous farmer, popular in the community where he lives and honored and respected, not only for what he himself has done, but for what the many worthy members of his family have accomplished in this county.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN THOMPSON.

One of the best-kept farms in Washington township, this county, is that owned and successfully operated by William Franklin Thompson, who has owned the farm and lived there since the spring of 1902, at which time he gave up his profession of school teaching, to which he had been devoted for a period of ten years or more, to give his entire attention to farming. Mr. Thompson has brought to his agricultural operations the most approved methods of modern agriculture and has been quite successful, his skill in renewing the fertility of his fields by the judicious culture of alfalfa and clover and his scientific application of fertilizers and magnesia lime adapted to the quality of the soil of which his farm is composed having strongly recommended his example to many of his neighbors.

William Franklin Thompson was born on a farm in the northern part of Fayette county, Ohio, on November 14, 1866, son of Joseph F. and Mahala (Brakefield) Thompson, both of whom were born near the village of Greenfield, in the same county, the former a son of James Thompson, a Virginian, who came to Ohio in an early day in the settlement of Fayette county, where the rest of his life was spent, and the latter the daughter of pioneer parents.

Joseph S. Thompson was reared to the ways of the farm and upon reaching manhood's estate became a farmer on his own account, his early holdings being gradually increased until he became the owner of a fine farm of two hundred and fifty acres in Fayette county. He was a good farmer, energetic and industrious and by the time he had reached middle life had attained a competence, upon which he retired to the pleasant village of Sabina, in this county, where he spent his last days and where his widow still resides. Joseph S. Thompson and wife were the parents of eight children, all the survivors of whom have done well in the various walks to which their life work has called them. Two of Joseph S. Thompson's brothers, Trusler and Cassius, were soldiers in the Union army during the Civil War and served valiantly in an Ohio regiment until the close of that dreadful struggle between the states.

William F. Thompson received his elementary education in the district schools of his neighborhood in Fayette county, supplementing the same by a course in the National Normal School at Lebanon, Ohio, following which he joined the ranks of Clinton county's excellent corps of teachers and for four years taught district schools north of Sabina; after which he joined the ranks of Fayette county's teachers and for six years was engaged with equal success in teaching in that county, in the meantime spending his summers farming in the latter county. He thus acquired a practical knowledge of farm work and conceived a cordial liking for the fine freedom of the farm, and in the spring of 1902 bought his present farm of one hundred and eighty-three acres in Washington township, this county, on which he since has made his home and where he has prospered, as properly becomes the intelligent and industrious efforts he has put forth to bring his place to as high a state of cultivation as any in the county. Mr. Thompson is intensely interested in the best development of the agricultural resources of Clinton county and for the past ten years has been diligent in his efforts to secure to the soil of this section proper and scientific fertilization, and, in pursuance of this laudable ambition, has been the agent for the distribution of thousands of tons of excellent fertilizer throughout this section of the state. In his farming operations he has found the raising of hogs a most profitable undertaking and for some time has made a specialty of this phase of agriculture. His farm has been brought up to a high state of cultivation and is regarded as a model thereabout.

On August 21, 1889, William F. Thompson was united in marriage to Clara MacPherson, who was born in this county, daughter of Joseph and Caroline (West) MacPherson, the former of whom was born on a farm near the village of Highland, just over the line in Highland county, on December 15, 1835, and died on July 7, 1889, and the latter of whom was born on a farm in the vicinity of Martinsville, in this county, the daughter of Peyton and Sarah (Hadley) West, the former a Virginian who came to this county with his parents in pioneer days, and the latter a daughter of James Hadley and wife, pioneers of the Martinsville neighborhood.

Joseph MacPherson was the son of John and Maria (Bonsell) MacPherson, Virginians, who came with their parents to Ohio about the year 1810, the two families locating in the same neighborhood north of Highland, both becoming prominent and influential in that section, large farmers and substantial citizens, who did very much toward bringing about proper social and economic conditions in that now well-established and prosperous farming section. Joseph MacPherson received his elementary education in the schools of his neighborhood and then entered Lebanon University, taking up the study of medicine with a view to becoming a physician. Before his studies were completed, however, the failing health of his father compelled him to return home to take charge of the farm and he never returned to school, his life being spent on the farm. He and his family were members of the Friends church and for eighteen years or more he was an influential minister in that body, his sermons receiving a most attentive hearing.

On April 21, 1864, Joseph MacPherson was united in marriage to Caroline West, daughter of Peyton and Sarah (Hadley) West, and to this union eight children were born, Florence, Clara, Sarah, Everett, Mary, Minnie, Lowell and Raymond. Peyton West was the son of Owen and Elizabeth (Martin) West, natives of Pittsylvania county, Virginia, who came to the territory now included in Clinton county about the year 1806, locating on the east fork of the Little Miami, in what is now Clark township. With them came a large family of children, Owen, William, James, Thomas, Peyton, John, Nancy, Jane, Mary, Susan and Rebecca. The senior West was a surveyor, as also were his sons, Owen and Peyton, and at an early day did much of the surveying throughout this section of the state. The Wests were devout members of the Friends church and the influence of this fine, wholesome family was very strongly marked for good upon the early community life of this region. Peyton West was a skilled surveyor and followed that vocation, in connection with his extensive farming operations, most all his life and served for two terms, 1840-46, as surveyor of Clinton county. He also was agent for some of the original owners of land in this region and surveyed and sold their holdings for them. To Peyton West's union with Sarah Hadley, daughter of James and Ann Hadley, there were born eleven children, namely: James H., Joseph H., William H., Peyton M., Elisha B., Edith, Sarah Ann, Esther Jane, Caroline, Jemimah H. and Hannah M., all of whom married and reared children, with the exception of the last named, who died in girlhood. At an early day, Peyton West was engaged for two years in mercantile pursuits in Wilmington, but, with that exception, always resided on his farm in Clark township, where he died on August 22, 1868, his widow surviving him about eight years, her death occurring on June 23, 1876. Their bodies were interred in the Odd Fellows cemetery in Clark township. Peyton West was a vigorous, forceful character and was reputed to have been one of the best farmers in Clinton county in his day. He owned a large farm, was highly successful in his operation of the same and gave all his children a good start in life.

To William F. and Clara (MacPherson) Thompson four children have been born, Franklin, Everett, May and Ralph. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are birthright members of the Friends church, in the faith of which their children also have been reared, and they are among the leaders in the good works of that earnest communion in this county, as well as in all good works in their community, they being warmly interested in all movements designed to advance the general welfare. Mr. Thompson is a Republican and ever has given close attention to the political affairs of the county, being an ardent advocate of good government. For some years he served the public very acceptably as trustee of Washington township, in which office his fine administrative ability was exerted very usefully in behalf of the common good. The Thompsons have a delightful home, being very pleasantly situated on their fine farm, and this home is the scene of much cordial hospitality, the family being held in the highest esteem throughout that entire region.

CHARLES E. TERRELL.

Charles E. Terrell filled a large place in the ranks of the enterprising and public-spirited farmers and citizens of his day and generation, and the memories which attach to his name and character form no inconsiderable chapter in the history of the community where he did his work and achieved his success as a farmer. He is entitled to honorable rank among the energetic and self-made men of Clinton county.

Charles E. Terrell, was born on January 4, 1866, and died on April 15, 1901. He was a son of Israel A. and Sidney (Huff) Terrell, the former of whom was born in 1818, in Highland county, Ohio, and died in 1906, and the latter, born in 1827, and died in 1902. Israel A. Terrell removed to Clinton county in 1848, and first located in Wayne township on a farm. At that time Wayne township was a wilderness and roads were not even laid out. During his life he cleared and drained about half of the eleven hundred acres of land which he owned. He paid the carpenter who built his house thirty-seven and one-half cents a day, and the hewers who assisted in its erection, twenty-five cents a day. At the time of his death he was vice-president of the New Vienna Bank, and a stockholder in the bank at Lessburg. He was a most energetic worker, and no man in his neighborhood could cradle more wheat in the same length of time. Interested in education he was one of one hundred men who guaranteed the support of Wilmington College. Six children were born to Israel and Sidney (Huff) Terrell, of whom Charles E. was the fifth in order of birth. The others were Allen L., Sarah, William, Ann and James H.

The paternal grandparents of Charles E. Terrell were Pleasant and Esther (Haines) Terrell, the former of whom was born in 1791, in Virginia, and who died in 1837, and the latter died in 1846. Pleasant Terrell came to Highland county, Ohio, from Virginia with his parents when a mere lad. They stopped a while in Cincinnati, where Pleasant learned the brickmason's trade, at which occupation he worked during most of the remainder of his life. He owned the first saw-mill and grist-mill in Highland county. He passed away in 1854 or 1855, after rearing a family of eight children; John, who was the first born; Israel, born in 1818, and died in 1906; David, Mary, Narcissa, Ruth, and two others. The great-grandparents of Mr. Terrell were David and Mary (Anthony) Terrell, the former of whom was born near Lynchburg, Virginia, and who died in 1858, and the latter died in 1858. They came to Highland county, Ohio, in 1806, and located near Highland. David and Mary (Anthony) Terrell were the parents of eight children: Pleasant, Christopher, David, Joseph, Mary, Judith, Sarah and Elizabeth. David Terrell served as justice of the peace of Fairfield township, for about a quarter of a century. He was a great hunter in his day, and spent a large part of his time in the wilderness. The father of David Terrell was David Terrell, Sr., born in 1698, who was married three times, first to Sarah Johnson, secondly to Sarah Clark, and thirdly to Martha Johnson. He reared a family of nine children. The father of David Terrell, Sr., was David Terrell, the first, who was born in 1675, and who died in 1757. He and his wife reared a family of twelve children. He was a son of William Terrell, born in 1650, who had come to America from England with his brothers in 1670. Three brothers were sent to Virginia by King James the Second, as explorers and hunters, and for their services were granted a large tract of land in Virginia.

Educated in the district schools of Wayne township, Charles E. Terrell was also graduated from Wilmington College in 1888, and the same year graduated from the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle, Chautauqua, New York, and later took several seals. He was a man of broad and liberal education. Because of his scholastic standing, he was given a scholarship to Haverford College, where he received his Master's degree in 1890. Returning to the farm he lived here the remainder of his life and owned a farm of one hundred and ninety-five acres in Wayne township.

In 1890 Charles E. Terrell was married to Anna N. Harris, the daughter of James and Elizabeth (Babb) Harris, both of whom came from old Virginia families, and Mrs. Terrell was their only child. Mr. and Charles E. Terrell were the parents of one child, Oneita F., born in 1898.

The Terrell family now own two hundred and fifty-three acres of land, and since the death of the husband and father, Mrs. Terrell and her daughter, Oneita, have lived on the farm.

FRANCIS R. WILLIAMS.

Francis R. Williams, an enterprising young farmer of Chester township, Clinton county, Ohio, who was born on August 5, 1884, in this township, is the son of Richard and Hannah (Davis) Williams, the former of whom was a native of Monmouthshire, England, born on July 6, 1838, and died on March 20, 1905, and the latter survived her husband and now lives at 421 North High street, Wilmington, Ohio.

The paternal grandfather of Francis R. Williams was William Williams, a native of Newport, England, born in 1795, and who died in 1877. He married Sarah Lewis, a native of Monmouthshire, England, and, after immigrating to America, they moved to Ohio in pioneer times and purchased two hundred and twenty-six acres of land near Oakland. They had seven children, of whom Richard, the father of Francis R., was the sixth. The others were, John, William, Edward (who died in infancy), James Edward, and Thomas. Mr. Williams spent four years in Hamilton county, Ohio, before coming to Clinton county. During his life he was a devout member of the Baptist church.

Richard Williams was a mere lad when his parents emigrated from England, in 1849, and settled at Sharonville, in Hamilton county, Ohio. In 1853 they moved to Oakland, Clinton county, Ohio, and purchased a farm, where he grew to maturity. He and his eldest brother, John, remained on the home farm. He and his brother John owned the entire farm of two hundred and ninety-four acres, where he lived until his death.

During the Civil War, Richard Williams was a member of the Union navy and, for about one year, was on one of the monitors and participated in the river campaigns. He was a Republican and served as school director for a number of years. No man was fonder of his home than Richard Williams nor more devoted to the interests of his church. The family were connected with the Jonas Run Baptist church and were regular attendants and substantial contributors to the support of the church.

On October 29, 1881, Richard Williams was married to Hannah Davis, a native of Monmouthshire, England, born in the town of Pontypool, and the daughter of Francis and Hannah (Roberts) Davis, who came from England to Iowa and settled in Agency City, in Wapello county. There they operated a flour- and woolen-mill until 1872, when they returned to England. He died there in 1892. His wife later returned to the United States on a visit and was living with Mrs. Richard Williams at Oakland, Ohio, where she died, December 31, 1897. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Williams were married in England, where the former had gone for his bride in 1881. After their marriage they came back to the United States. Richard and Hannah (Davis) Williams had four children: An infant, deceased; Francis R., the subject of this sketch; Edith, who lives with her mother in Wilmington, and John W., deceased. The family built a comfortable home at 421 High street, where the mother and daughter now live.

Francis R. Williams received his education in the common schools of Chester township and later became a student at Wilmington College, where he spent about two years. After his father's death, he took up farming and managed the home farm for four years and then moved to Union township, where he remained for three years. He returned to Oakland and now superintends four hundred and thirty acres of land.

On August 8, 1906, Francis R. Williams was married to Bessie Cummins, the daughter of Jesse L. and Nora (Wright) Cummins. They are the parents of two children: Arlene C., and Ernest J., born on September 4, 1910.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams are members of the First Baptist church at Wilmington. Mr. Williams is a Republican.

HORACE W. COLLETT.

Horace W. Collett, a well-known citizen of Chester township, this county, who has always been an industrious worker, was born on April 12, 1852, on the farm where he now lives. He is a progressive farmer and stockman, who owns one hundred and fifty acres of land in Chester township, but who farms about two hundred and fifty acres.

Mr. Collett is the son of Daniel H. and Maria (McKay) Collett, the former of whom was born in Warren county, Ohio, in 1806 and died on January 11, 1871. He was married on November 4, 1830, to Maria McKay, daughter of Moses McKay. Daniel H. Collett was the son of Moses and Rebecca (Haines) Collett, the former of Virginia, one of the eight sons born to Daniel and Mary (Haines) Collett, among the others being Jonathan, Isaac, Aaron, Benjamin, Daniel, Jr., and Joshua. Moses Collett married Rebecca Haines in Maryland and in 1812 she wanted to visit her people in the East, so she and Jonathan made the journey through on horseback. Daniel Collett, at the age of sixty years, sold out his possessions in Maryland and, with the mother and daughters, came back with them in a carriage. A colored boy, "Black Dan," came with them and lived with the family until his death. Daniel Collett, the third child born to Moses, Sr., and Elizabeth (Armstrong) Collett, born on February 2, 1752, was a soldier in the Continental army and a justice of the peace for many years in Jefferson county, Virginia. About 1780 he was married to Mary Haines, who was born on October 10, 1753. They had eight sons and a daughter, who, with his brother, John, and his sister, Sarah, are the ancestors of all the Colletts in Clinton and Warren counties. Moses Collett, Sr., was born on November 17, 1718, and died in 1783. His wife, Elizabeth Armstrong, was born on August 18, 1725. Moses was the son of Stephen Collett, whose father and mother were French Huguenots, who fled from France to escape religious persecution. Stephen's mother died after his birth at sea and she was buried on the voyage to America.

In 1814 Daniel Collett purchased two thousand three hundred and fifty-eight acres from James Smith, Sr., paying two and one-half dollars an acre in three annual installments. In 1815 Daniel Collett purchased from William Elzey and wife nine hundred and ten acres for three dollars an acre, making a tract of three thousand two hundred and sixty-eight acres. Much of this land has been handed down from generation to generation in the Collett family.

Daniel H. Collett, who was one of the eight sons born to Moses and Rebecca (Haines) Collett, was the father of Horace W. He was educated in the common schools of Chester township and was engaged in farming and clearing all of his life. He owned three hundred and sixty acres of land. By his marriage to Maria McKay, he had seven children, of whom Horace W. is the youngest, the others being as follows: Tamson, who married Jesse Woods; Moses; Abigal, who is the wife of Joshua Nickerson; Elizabeth, who married Joseph Browning; Sarah, who became the wife of Joseph Shambaugh, and Francis, who married Sallie Ferguson. The family were members of the Baptist church at Jonas Run and Daniel H. Collett served many years as a deacon of that church. He was a Republican.

Horace W. Collett also was educated in the common schools of Clinton county and of Warren county. He attended the high school at Harveysburg and, when about twenty-one years old, began farming on the farm where he now lives.

In 1881 Horace W. Collett was married to Rachel Anne Rayburn, who was born in 1859, the daughter of James and Margaret (Haines) Rayburn, to which union two children have been born, James W., who was born on July 6, 1883, and Margaret, in 1886, the latter of whom is still at home. James W. Collett attended the high school at New Burlington and is a farmer in Chester township, where he owns eighty-three acres of land, though he farms altogether two hundred and ninety acres. James W. Collett married Laura McCoy, daughter of J. R. and Martha McCoy, and one child has been born to this union, Thomas W., who was born on October 19, 1914. James W. Collett is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, a Republican in politics and, fraternally, a member of Masonic Lodge No. 574.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace W. Collett and daughter, Margaret, are members of the Methodist church at New Burlington and he is an ardent Republican, politically.

HARLEY H. SMITH.

Perseverance and sterling worth are almost always sure to win conspicuous recognition in all localities. Harley H. Smith, who, for a number of years, has been recognized as one of the leading educators of this county, is a young man of genial presence, intelligent and broad-minded. He is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, superintendent of the Kingman high school, and owner of one hundred and seventy acres of land in Chester township. His career is a splendid example of the successful, self-made young man, and he eminently deserves the trust reposed in him by his fellow citizens.

Harley H. Smith was born on May 2, 1880, at New Burlington, at the edge of Greene county, Ohio, a son of Lewis and Rachel E. (Craft) Smith, the former of whom was born on May 5, 1837, in Warren county, Ohio, and died on May 7, 1902. The latter was born on September 10, 1839, at New Burlington, in this county, a daughter of Allen and Rachel (Mann) Craft.

The paternal grandparents of Harley H. Smith were James and Elizabeth (Cain) Smith, both of whom were natives of Warren county, Ohio. James Smith was a blacksmith at New Burlington, and owned the first blacksmith shop in that town. He worked at that trade all his life and, in addition to his work as a blacksmith, was the owner of a farm, which he operated in connection with his work in the blacksmith shop. He was a member of the old Whig party and a stanch citizen, he and his wife having been prominent members of the Methodist church. James and Elizabeth (Cain) Smith were the parents of twelve children, Lewis, Wesley, Joseph R., Hannah, Josephine, Arabella, Laura, Alice, Nancy, and three who died in infancy.

The late Lewis Smith, father of Harley H., learned the blacksmith trade after finishing his education in the schools of New Burlington, and worked at that trade practically all of his life in that town. During the last eight years of his life, he served as commissioner of Greene county, Ohio. Several years before he was elected commissioner he served as trustee of Spring Valley township in that county. He was a Republican in politics, a member of the Methodist church, and held about every office in that church. He was a prominent member of the Masonic lodge, and his six sons were all members of the same fraternal organization. Lewis Smith and wife were the parents of ten children, Rena Bell, Wesley A., William F., Wayne C., Harry, Minnie, Le Roy, Harriet and Harley H. (twins) and Leslie.

Harley H. Smith began a pursuit of education in the common schools at New Burlington, but later attended the Xenia high school for two years. After leaving high school he taught school for eight years in Greene county, and subsequently entered Ohio Wesleyan University, and was graduated from that excellent institution with the class of 1911, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Since his graduation he has been engaged in teaching. He was in charge of the history department of the Greenville high school for one year and from Greenville returned to his home in Chester township, this county, where he has had charge of the Kingman high school for three years. Mr. Smith is the owner of one hundred and seventy acres of land in Chester township, where he is living at the present time.

In 1907 Harley H. Smith was married to Sarah A. McKay, daughter of Robert F. and Mary F. (Nickerson) McKay, and a sister of Welden McKay, whose biographical sketch, presented elsewhere in this volume, gives a history of the McKay family.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith, who are both descendants of leading families of Clinton county, are a young couple of wide and liberal culture. They are earnest and consistent members of the Methodist church at New Burlington and take an active part in church work. Politically, Mr. Smith votes the Republican ticket, while fraternally he is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons.

JOHN SPEER.

John Speer, one of the leading farmers of Liberty township, this county, and one of the best-informed citizens of that township, lives on the old paternal homestead. He was born at Ashgrove, Illinois, on November 18, 1869, the son of Samuel and Eliza (Oren) Speer, the former born in Greene county, Ohio, on September 30, 1835, and the latter in Clinton county on November 25, 1837.

Eliza Oren was the daughter of John and Martha (Bailey) Oren, the former a native of Tennessee, who came with his father, John Oren, Sr., to this state. They settled on two hundred acres of land in Union township, this county, and became prominent in the affairs of the Friends church. By Martha Bailey, who was his first wife, John Oren, Jr., had seven children, of whom Daniel B. and Henry served in the Civil War, both giving their lives to the service. The other children were Eli, Eliza, Martha, Asa and Lewis. John Oren, Sr., was a native of Pennsylvania, who moved to Tennessee, but not being able to reconcile himself to the presence of human slavery, came to Ohio in order to live in a free state. Arriving in 1810, he settled in Union township and became very active in the work of the Friends church, being rated as a very valuable man in the life of the community. Samuel Speer's parents were James and Mary (Fletcher) Speer, natives of North Carolina and Ohio, respectively, the former of whom was a mere lad when he came with his father, Samuel Speer, to this state. James Speer owned over two hundred acres of land in Greene county, Ohio. He and his wife were the parents of six children, Samuel, John, Sarah, Lydia, Henry and Benjamin, the latter of whom was a soldier in the Union army during the Civil War. James Speer was a son of Samuel and Sarah (Dunkin) Speer, natives of North Carolina, who moved with their parents to Ohio and settled in Greene county where they spent the rest of their lives. They were prominent members of the Friends church and Mrs. Samuel Speer was a minister in that church. They were the parents of three children, James, John and Samuel.

Samuel Speer, the father of John Speer, the subject of this sketch, received the rudiments of an education in the common schools, which he supplemented by extensive home reading and became one of the most enlightened farmers in this section of Ohio. He owned one hundred and seventy-eight acres of land in Liberty township, which is the farm his son John now owns. He was active in the Friends church all his life. He died on February 10, 1911, his wife having died a few days previously, on January 20, of the same year. They were the parents of five children, Eli B., John, James, Henry and Jennie, the three latter of whom died in childhood in Illinois. Eli B. Speer, who died on October 5, 1901, married Testa Spears, and at his death left two children, Frank and Ethel.

Reared on the farm and educated in the common schools of Clinton county, John Speer was married on July 25, 1890, to Tacy Smith, who was born in this county, January 26, 1872, the daughter of Samuel and Ester (Smith) Smith. Samuel Smith was a native of Greene county, Ohio, and a shoemaker by trade. During the latter part of his life, he was engaged in farming. He was a soldier in the Civil War, a member of Company H, Seventy-fourth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was once wounded in a skirmish.

After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Speer located on the farm where they now live, and where five children have been born to them, of whom two, Henry and Harold (the third and fourth in the family), are twins. May, Frederick and Gladys are the other children. Frederick married Louise Turner, and is at present a student in a veterinary college. The remainder of the children are unmarried.

Mr. and Mrs. Speer own altogether two hundred and sixty-four acres of land. They are members of the Friends church and regular attendants at the Dover Sunday school and meeting. Mr. Speer is a member of the board of education of Liberty township, and he and his wife are warmly interested in all good works in that vicinity, being held in the very highest regard by all their large circle of acquaintances.

E. MARSHALL RENNER.

That life is most useful and desirable which results in the greatest good to the greatest number and, though all do not reach the heights to which they aspire, yet in some measure each can win success and make life a blessing to his fellowmen. It is not necessary for one to occupy an eminent public position to do so. In all walks of life there remains much good to be accomplished and many opportunities for the exercise of talent and influence that in some way will touch the lives of those with whom one may come in contact, making them better and brighter. Among the enterprising and prosperous farmers of Clinton county and among the citizens of high standing in Adams township, is E. Marshall Renner, who owns a fine farm and home on Route No. 4, out of Wilmington. He is a successful farmer, a valuable citizen and a good neighbor.

E. Marshall Renner was born on November 2, 1860, in Clermont county, Ohio, the son of Gilman S. and Mahala Q. (Browning) Renner, who were natives of Clermont county, Ohio, and Fleming county, Kentucky, respectively. Gilman S. Renner was the son of Samuel and Mercy (Gordon) Renner, natives of Pennsylvania and early settlers in Clermont county, where they spent their last days. Mahala Q. Browning was the daughter of Basil Browning, a farmer of Kentucky, who remained there all his life. He was the son of Basil Browning, Sr., who was also a farmer in Kentucky and the father of four children, John M., Basil, Jr., Meshock and Josiah.

Gilman S. Renner, who died in February, 1897, at the age of seventy-four years, was educated in the public schools of Clermont county and, for a time, taught school in that county, where he spent his entire life. He farmed about four hundred acres of land which he owned and took a prominent part in the civic and political life of that county, having been especially active in local affairs. He was a member of the Universalist church and of the blue lodge of the Masonic fraternity. Gilman and Mahala Q. (Browning) Renner were the parents of six children, of whom Horace, the first born, is a well-known real estate dealer in Chicago. E. Marshall, the subject of this sketch, was the second child. Cora lives in Clermont county, Ohio. Henry Clay is a resident of Atlantic City, New Jersey. Herbert lives on the old home place in Clermont county. The youngest member of the family died in infancy. The mother of these children died in 1902, some five years after the death of her husband.

E. Marshall Renner was educated in Clermont county, Ohio, and spent two years in the high school. He has been twice married, the first time, in 1884, to Elizabeth Meyers, who died the following year. There were no children by this first marriage. On December 24, 1890, Mr. Renner married, secondly, Mary Alice Hale, who was born in Clinton county on December 5, 1865, the daughter of Alfred and Rachel (Hadley) Hale.

Alfred Hale, who was a farmer in Adams township, this county, and a member of the Friends church, died on November 11, 1914, at the age of seventy-three, having been born on December 23, 1841. He was twice married, his first wife having been Rachel Hadley, who was born on July 26, 1841, and died on April 19, 1901. To this union there were born four children, Mary Alice, Clark J., Emma (deceased) and Hannah. After the death of his first wife, Alfred Hale married Emma Wright, daughter of Joseph Wright. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. E. Marshall Renner were Jacob and Hannah (Andrew) Hale, both natives of Clinton county and the parents of three children, William, Susannah and Alfred, the two latter of whom are deceased. Jacob Hale was a farmer and a member of the Friends church. He was one of six brothers, the others having been Joseph, William, Samuel, Armona and Eli, who came in pioneer days from North Carolina to Clinton county.

By Mr. Renner's second marriage, two children have been born, Clarence H., born June 10, 1893, and Robert A., July 17, 1897, both of whom live at home with their parents. Clarence H., the eldest son, was graduated in June, 1915, from Wilmington College.

Mr. Renner owns two hundred and ninety-eight and one-half acres of land in Adams township, which is all in one tract. In 1910 he built a modern country house, one of the most beautiful to be found in all Clinton county. Both Mr. and Mrs. Renner are members of the Friends church at Wilmington and are regular attendants at Sunday school.

CHARLES WESLEY VAN PELT.

The late Charles Wesley Van Pelt, a valiant soldier of the Civil War and a farmer in Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, was born on May 22, 1839, near Danville, Ohio, and died August 16, 1914. He was a son of Charles and Elizabeth (Butcher) Van Pelt, natives of the Keystone state, who were early settlers at Danville and Highland county and who died in that county. Charles Van Pelt, Sr., was a farmer by occupation. The Van Pelts are of German origin, Mr. Van Pelt's paternal grandfather having been a sea captain.

Charles Wesley Van Pelt was educated in Highland county, and was a farmer by occupation. He served three years in Company H, Thirty-ninth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and re-enlisted for three additional years, but further service was not required. After the war he returned home, and about 1878 came to Clinton county, where for some time he rented land across the road from the farm where his widow now resides. Two years later, he bought a tract of ninety-six acres, and here he erected excellent buildings, and lived until his death.

On March 1, 1866, Charles Wesley Van Pelt was married to Sarah Rankins, a native of East St. Louis, Illinois, and a daughter of William and Elizabeth (Runk) Rankins, both natives of the Old Dominion state. Mrs. Van Pelt's paternal grandparents were Samuel and Rebecca Rankins, who were natives of Virginia but who immigrated to Illinois and there died. The maternal grandparents were John and Elizabeth (Miller) Runk.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Pelt have five children, Joseph M., Eliza May, Charles William, Edward Franklin and Mary Elizabeth.

The Van Pelt family are members of the Methodist Protestant church, Charles Wesley Van Pelt having joined the church at the age of eighteen years and having been active in this church during all his life. He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and identified with the Merrell post at Lynchburg.

Of the children born to Charles Wesley Van Pelt and wife, Joseph M., the eldest, was born on December 27, 1866, in Highland county, Ohio, and was educated in Highland and Clinton counties. He rented land in Highland county, and in 1908 bought a farm in Clark township of fifty-two acres, where he now lives. Recently he has remodeled the barn and fences. He was married in June, 1908, to May Pierson, a native of Indiana. They have two children, Herbert Cecil and Delbert Francis.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES W. VAN PELT.

Joseph M. Van Pelt was for two terms a school director in Clark township. The Van Pelt family are quite highly respected in Clark township and are well known here.

WILLIAM H. FISHER.

Agriculture has been an honored vocation from the earliest ages, and, as a usual thing, men of honorable and humane impulses, as well as those of energy and thrift have been patrons of husbandry. The free out-of-door life of the farmer has a decided tendency to foster and develop that independence of mind and self-reliance which characterizes true manhood. It has been the fruitful soil from which have sprung the moral bone and sinew of the country. The majority of our nation's great warriors, renowned statesmen and distinguished men of letters were born on the farm, and are indebted largely to its early influence for the distinction they have gained. William Fisher is a successful farmer of Liberty township and a man of agreeable and pleasant manner.

William Fisher was born on January 21, 1841, in Frederick county, Virginia, the son of Asa and Frances (Williams) Fisher. Asa Fisher was born in Virginia on October 24, 1805, and died on May 5, 1846. His wife was born on May 1, 1810, and died on December 25, 1895. She was a daughter of Isaac and Delphia Williams, the latter of whom died on July 8, 1828. They were farmers by occupation.

Asa Fisher was the son of Barake and Martha Fisher, both natives of Virginia and farmers by occupation, who spent all their lives in their native state. They were the parents of five children, Butler, Asa, Elizabeth, Louisa and Hetty.

Of the six children, born to Asa and Frances (Williams) Fisher, only two, Sarah E. and William, the subject of this sketch, are living. Sarah E. was born on September 17, 1838. The deceased children are Mary Frances, born on December 28, 1834; Delphia, November 4, 1836; Louisa C., January 17, 1843, and James Polk, December 1, 1844. Although Asa Fisher had little education, he became a very efficient tailor at Gainesboro, Virginia. He died at the age of about thirty years, when his son, William, was about five years old.

William Fisher was educated in the subscription schools at Gainesboro, Virginia. He came to Ohio on October 24, 1863, and on January 27, 1875, was married to Mary M. Henry, a native of Warren county, born on December 29, 1843, the daughter of John and Catherine (Stump) Henry, farmers in Warren county, Ohio, who moved to Clinton county about 1854, settling in Union township, where they became prominent members of the Christian church. Mrs. William Fisher is one of ten children born to her parents. The others were Daniel, William, Jonas, John, Sarah, Lydia, Fannie, Reese and Joshua. To William and Mary M. (Henry) Fisher three children have been born, namely: Edwin C., of Liberty township, born on November 25, 1875, who married May Gilcrest and has five children: Emerson A., Vada, John W., Irma and Ruth; Dora D., February 27, 1877, who married Rev. John M. Cosby, a Baptist minister living in West Mansfield, Ohio, and Laura, May 5, 1881, who married Frederick Steele, of Union township, this county, and has two children, Earl and Ethel M.

William Fisher owns three hundred and seventy-four acres of land, all of which is located in Clinton county, the home farm consisting of seventy-six acres. Until the disbanding of the Grangers, he was a prominent member of that organization. Mrs. Fisher is a member of the Baptist church and she and Mr. Fisher are warmly interested in all movements having to do with the betterment of local conditions, being held in high esteem by all who know them.

ANDREW R. SHIDAKER.

Andrew R. Shidaker is a prosperous farmer and dairyman of Adams township, who has lived on the farm he now occupies for a quarter of a century. He was born in this county on August 11, 1849, the son of Mitchell W. and Elizabeth (Dakin) Shidaker, the former of whom was born in Miami county, Ohio, and the latter in Chester township, Clinton county.

Mitchell W. Shidaker was the eldest of the six children born to Michael Shidaker and wife, the others being Catherine, Elizabeth, Jonathan, Henry and Robert. He was educated in the common schools of Miami county and when a young man began teaching in the public schools of Warren and Clinton counties. He continued in this profession all of his life, but owned a farm of two hundred acres in Chester township, which he operated in connection with teaching. For about fifteen years he was also engaged in selling fruit trees in this community.

To Mitchell W. and Elizabeth (Dakin) Shidaker nine children were born, namely: Warren H. (deceased); Andrew R., the subject of this sketch; J. H., a farmer in Chester township; George Riley (deceased); Emma, who married B. Y. Collett; Lyda, who married J. Collett, and four who died in infancy. Mitchell W. Shidaker served for many years as the clerk of Chester township. He voted the Republican ticket and was more or less prominent in local politics.

Born in Clinton county and educated in the public schools of this county, Andrew R. Shidaker was married at the age of twenty-one to Mary E. Slack, who was born on the farm where Mr. and Mrs. Shidaker now live, the daughter of Joseph W. Slack, a prominent farmer of this county, to which union one child has been born, Mattie, who married Herbert Wire, of Wilmington, and has one child, William. Joseph W. Slack was a lieutenant in Company I, Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, serving for three years, until the close of the war, when he returned to his home on the farm where the Shidakers now live and there he spent the rest of his life, his death occurring on September 19, 1882. Joseph W. Slack was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, on May 23, 1824, son of Jacob and Susan Slack. In 1846 he came to this county, locating in the village of Sligo, where for fifteen years he was engaged in the wagon and carriage business, but upon returning from the army enaged in farming, becoming quite successful, having been the owner of two hundred and forty acres of fine land in Adams township. He was active and influential in public affairs and was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity. He had served his township very acceptably as trustee and in 1870 was elected county treasurer of Clinton county. In 1880 he was elected county commissioner from his district and in both of these important public offices gave excellent service.

DAVID F. MURPHY.

Farmer and stockman of Liberty township, this county, David F. Murphy, who owns one hundred and fifty acres of land in that township, was born on December 15, 1856, in Green township, the son of Isaiah and Delilah (Smith) Murphy, natives of Clinton and Highland counties, Ohio, respectively. Isaiah Murphy was born on March 2, 1830, and Delilah Smith, on October 8, 1833. They are still living at the ages of eighty-five and eighty-two years, respectively, and on October 8, 1914, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. The venerable Isaiah Murphy, who was educated in the old-fashioned log-cabin school, when hewed logs were used for seats and greased paper for windows, has lived on the farm, which his father owned in Green township, since he was four years old. The old home farm consists of sixty-six acres. During the active years of his life, Isaiah Murphy was active in local affairs and was rated as a prominent citizen of this community. Only two of the nine children born to Isaiah and Delilah (Smith) Murphy are deceased, Seymour L., the sixth born, who died on April 3, 1915, and Ida, who died at the age of one and one-half years, the seventh child. The living children are James W., David F., Samantha, Sarah Louisa, Andrew C., Everett and Eva. Mrs. Isaiah Murphy is the daughter of Abner and Cynthia (Cast) Smith, who were pioneers in this section of Ohio.

The maternal grandfather of David F. Murphy, Abner Smith, who was born in New England, came to Ohio before his marriage. He was twice married, Mrs. Isaiah Murphy having been a child by his second wife. Abner Smith was a farmer in Highland county, this state, and later settled in Green township, this county, where he owned a small farm. He was a devoted member of the Christian church and was regular in attendance.

The paternal grandparents of David F. Murphy were Jacob and Mary (Lomand) Murphy, both natives of Virginia. They were the parents of seven children, of whom Isaiah Murphy was the third born. The others were David, William, Rebecca, Catherine, Susannah and Mary A. Jacob Murphy moved from Virginia to Ohio and located in Clinton county about 1825, becoming the owner of considerable land in Green township. Eighty-one years ago he purchased a farm in that township, upon which his son, Isaiah, has lived since he was four years old.

David F. Murphy was educated in the common schools of his day and has been twice married. In 1893 he married Anna Earley, who was born in Clinton county, a daughter of George Earley, a pioneer farmer of this county. She died on August 7, 1907, leaving one child, Herman, who married Hazel Houser, and has one child, Franklin Willis. Mr. Murphy married, secondly, Mrs. Emma (Ward) Williams, a native of Newark, Ohio, to which second union there has been no issue.

Mr. and Mrs. Murphy have a farm of one hundred and fifty acres which they purchased in 1900. Fraternally, David F. Murphy is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He and his wife are members of the Baptist church at Wilmington and are held in high esteem by their many friends.

E. WILSON HARVEY.

E. Wilson Harvey and his sister, Mrs. Ruth Ellen Harris, are the only living members of their generation of the Harvey family in Clinton county. The Harvey family is one of the pioneer families of Clinton county and deserves special consideration in a volume of this character.

E. Wilson Harvey was born on October 3, 1853, in Clinton county. Both he and his sister, Ruth Ellen Harris, are children of Simon and Ann (Townsend) Harvey, the former born in North Carolina and the latter born in Ohio, the daughter of John Townsend, a farmer and horse raiser. Simon Harvey, who died in 1870, was the son of Joshua and Mary (Morrison) Harvey, natives of North Carolina. By his first marriage, Joshua Harvey had five children, Hannah, Simon, Libert, Levi and Saleb. After the death of his first wife, he married a Miss Moon, and by this marriage had two children, Nancy and Jehu.

Simon Harvey was educated in the common schools, and became the owner of two hundred and twenty acres of land in Adams township, this county. He was a man very much interested in local politics and prominent in the councils of the Republican party in Clinton county. He and his wife were members of the Friends church and their children were reared in that faith. There were nine of these children, the survivors being as heretofore set forth, E. Wilson Harvey, the youngest, and Mrs. Ruth Ellen Harris, the third born. The deceased children are Lydia, Aaron, Jane, Mary, Martha, Henry and George.

E. Wilson Harvey, who was educated in the district schools of Clinton county and reared on the farm, was married to Kate Cowgill, the daughter of John and Amanda (Van Pelt) Cowgill, who were farmers by occupation. Mrs. Harvey died in 1894, at the age of thirty-two years, leaving two children, Winifred and Martha. Winifred married Charles Cook, of Harveysburg, Ohio, and they have two children, Margaret and Howard. Martha is a nurse in Columbus, Ohio. The father of these children leans toward the Quaker church.

Ruth Ellen Harvey married Charles Harris, who died in December, 1913, leaving no children. He was the son of Samuel and Phoebe (Kibby) Harris, the latter of whom was the daughter of Ephraim Kibby, a pioneer of Clinton county. The photograph of the early settlers of Clinton county, contained in this history, was taken at the home of Ephraim Kibby in 1869. The late Charles Harris was a soldier in the Civil War, having served in the Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Although he survived the war, he came out of it much worn in health and suffered from the effects of that terrible contest until the end of his life. He was a farmer in Warren county for a time, but later lived in Wilmington and was living in the county-seat of Clinton county at the time of his death. Mrs. Harris owns property on Sugartree street in Wilmington.

Mr. Harvey and his sister, Mrs. Harris, live on the old Harvey homestead, which comprises one hundred and seventy acres of land in Adams township, and are held in very high esteem throughout that section of the county.

FRANK H. MORRIS.

Frank H. Morris, a skillful farmer of Clark township, who is well known in Clinton county, was born on August 3, 1857, in Highland county, Ohio, and is a son of Avery and Lydia (Jackson) Morris, natives of Adams and Highland counties, Ohio, respectively.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Morris were William and Depsy (Bales) Morris, natives of Scotland and the state of Alabama, respectively. William Morris came to America when a young man, possibly with his parents, and lived to be ninety-seven years old. He was active until the time of his death. Having located in Adams county, Ohio, he remained there until his removal to Clinton county about 1865. A farmer by occupation and a member of the Christian church, in which he was active, he died in Washington township. Depsy Bales is supposed to have come north from Alabama with her parents in an early day. The maternal grandparents were Joseph and Lydia Jackson, who were early settlers of Highland county, Ohio, and who died in that county. They were also active members of the Christian church and farmers by occupation.

Avery Morris, the father of Frank H., was educated in the public schools of Adams county, Ohio, and although he enjoyed limited educational advantages, by home study and close observation he became a well-informed man. He began farming in Highland county, Ohio, about 1867, and later removed to Clark township, in this county, where he farmed on a portion of the farm which is now owned by his son. He owned one hundred and seventy-two acres in this tract and one hundred and sixty acres south of this farm. He and his wife were devoted members of the Christian church. They reared a family of six children.

Frank H. Morris received his education in the public schools of Clinton county, and was reared to the life of a farmer, and on attaining maturity took up farming on his own account on the old home place. Mr. Morris is a well-known soil builder. When he was about fourteen years of age he made the remark to his father that he would like to own some time the land north of the northern boundary of the A. J. Bates farm between the two roads and as far north as Morrisville. His father replied: "Stranger things than that have come to pass." That land is exactly what Mr. Morris now owns. It comprises seventy-five acres and Mr. Morris claims that it is sufficient for any one man to cultivate and cultivate properly. He has erected all of the buildings on the farm and made practically all of the improvements, except the old house, which was formerly used as a dwelling, but which is now used as a shed.

On January 1, 1881, Frank H. Morris was married to Hannah Turner, the daughter of A. J. Turner, of Clark township, and to this union have been born three children, Susie, Myrtle and Hattie. Susie is the wife of Josiah McKibben, a farmer of Washington township. Myrtle is the wife of Edwin Wilson, of Washington township, and they have one son, Morris Edgar. Hattie became the wife of William Steele, a farmer of Clark township.

MR. AND MRS. FRANK H. MORRIS

Mr. and Mrs. Morris are loyal and devoted members of the Friends church.

OLIVER J. TOWNSEND.

The Townsend family were originally residents of Oyster Bay, having settled on Long Island in 1656, Richard Townsend, who emigrated from England, being the ancestor from whom Oliver J. Townsend is descended. He, however, was one of three brothers and the youngest who emigrated to America from England. The name Townsend is of noble origin and comes down from the time of the Norman conquest of England. In direct line, Oliver J. is descended from Dayton H. Townsend, whose father was Josiah, whose father was Jesse, whose father was Isaac, whose father was Isaac, Sr., whose father was Richard, whose father was John, whose father was Richard, the original immigrant. The Townsends left Long Island because of differences with the Dutch. From Long Island they emigrated to Rhode Island, where for a long time they were prominent in the affairs of that state. Later, however, they returned to Long Island.

Oliver J. Townsend, the subject of this sketch, was born at Avondale, Cincinnati, in 1861, the son of Dayton H. and Rachel (Hollingsworth) Townsend, natives of Springboro, Warren county, Ohio, and of Rochester, Warren county, Ohio, respectively. Dayton H. Townsend was the son of Josiah and Abigal (Holliway) Townsend, the former of whom was born in Cape May county, New Jersey, and the latter in Virginia. They were married on November 14, 1818. Josiah Townsend, who was the son of Jesse Townsend, moved with his widowed mother and her other children from New Jersey to Columbiana county, Ohio, where they built a home in Salem. In 1810 the family emigrated to Waynesville and Josiah returned to New Jersey to learn the blacksmith trade, remaining there until he reached his majority, later returning to this state. He is buried in the Center neighborhood of Clinton county.

Dayton H. Townsend was a dairyman near Cincinnati, and later purchased the land in this county where his son, Oliver J., now lives, and there he spent the remainder of his life, becoming the owner of more than five hundred acres. All the members of the family were identified with the Friends church.

Oliver J. Townsend was educated in the Martinsville high school and at Wilmington College, later beginning his farming operations on land located a little west of Martinsville. Mr. Townsend served for seven years as commissioner of Clinton county, and is now a justice of the peace in Clark township. He has dealt extensively in live-stock and grain and is very well circumstanced.

On March 21, 1894, Oliver J. Townsend was married to Emma Spencer, who was born in Warren county, this state, a daughter of John K. and Drusella (Russell) Spencer, the former of whom was born in Salem, Massachusetts, and the latter on the Isle of Wight, adjacent to England. They were early settlers in Warren county, Ohio, and their descendants have been prominent in the public life of that county. Mrs. Townsend's paternal grandfather was Thomas Spencer, a noted Abolitionist. Her father removed to Beech Grove, Clinton county, when she was four years old, and, after remaining at Beech Grove for eight years, returned to Warren county, Ohio. His brother, Frank Spencer, was a captain in the Union army during the Civil War. Both the Spencer and the Townsend families have always been identified with the Friends church.

Oliver J. Townsend is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America.

ETHELBERT BLOOM.

Specific mention is made in this volume of Clinton county history of many worthy citizens who have figured in the growth and development of the county, and whose interests are identified with its various phases of progress. Each has contributed his share to the well-being of the community and to the advancement of its normal and legitimate growth. Among this number is Ethelbert Bloom, a resident of Wilmington, this county, a member of the firm of Bloom & Conner, which is engaged extensively in the stone-crushing business and in road building.

Ethelbert Bloom was born on January 30, 1869, in Green township, this county, the son of William H. and Miranda Jane (Roberts) Bloom, the former of whom was born in Clinton county, in August, 1829, and died in 1905, and the latter, born in Kentucky, in August, 1827, died in April, 1913. Mr. Bloom's paternal grandparents were Cornelius and Eunice Bloom, Quakers, who came from Pennsylvania to Ohio and were early settlers in Green township, this county. It was Cornelius Bloom who built the brick house on what is now the D. M. Fife farm. In early days he drove four- and six-horse teams to Cincinnati with merchandise, long before the railroads were built and when the people of this county pooled together to have their hauling done. He died at the age of sixty and his wife at the age of sixty-seven. Ethelbert Bloom's maternal grandparents died when his mother was a little girl, and she was reared by her uncle, Fred Roberts, of Green township.

William H. Bloom grew up on the farm and himself became a farmer. Early in life he purchased a farm one mile south of New Antioch, consisting of eighty-one acres, and there he spent the remainder of his life. He was a man of considerable prominence locally, and for many years served as school director. He was identified with the Republican party. He and his wife were devout members of the Seventh-Day Adventist church. They were the parents of eight children, of whom two are deceased. Ethelbert was next to the youngest of the family. The deceased children are Sarelda Jane, who married Vincent Fisher, and Harvey, who died at the age of thirteen, of diphtheria. The living children are Mary, who married Charles M. Noftsger, of Green township; Malissa, who married D. H. Taylor, of Illinois; Sarah, a twin sister of Sarelda Jane, who married C. W. Fisher, a resident of Cozad, Nebraska; Rosa, who married Grant Gregory, of Union township, and Christiana, who married Edward Taylor, of Union township.

Ethelbert Bloom attended school at New Antioch, Ohio, and after finishing his common-school education was employed on his father's farm until he reached his majority. For some time he then worked by the month for different people and for one year attended the Seventh-Day Adventist College at Mt. Vernon, Ohio. After leaving college Mr. Bloom rented a farm and engaged in quarrying and hauling building rock to Wilmington. It was he who furnished the stone for the foundation of the public library in Wilmington, and also the stone for the stand-pipe. In 1905 Mr. Bloom moved to Wilmington and there he is still living. Twelve years previously he formed a partnership with John A. Conner, under the firm name of Bloom & Conner, and they have since that time been engaged in the stone-crushing business in Clinton county, their plant being recognized as the largest stone crusher in this section of the state, comprising two complete outfits. In 1912 the firm had the honor of winning the contract for the building of the first four miles of the state road through Clinton county, Mr. Bloom himself superintending the construction of the road. They have now, and have had for many years, large contracts for crushing stone in different parts of the county.

On March 17, 1898, Ethelbert Bloom was married to Mary Minionette Greentree, who was born in Fayette county, Ohio, the daughter of William and Jennie (Rowe) Greentree. The former, born in Brown county, Ohio, in 1848, is still living, and the latter, born in 1852, died in 1882. To Mr. and Mrs. Bloom three children have been born, namely: Martha Ellen, born on July 14, 1899; Mildred Jane, September 1, 1901, who died on August 13, 1902, and Irwin William, April 17, 1908.

Politically, Mr. Bloom is a Republican. The Bloom family are all members of the Seventh-Day Adventist church and are devout believers in the doctrines of that organization, Mr. Bloom being the leading elder of the local church. He is a very respectable and a representative citizen of Clinton county, and he and his wife are held in high esteem by their many friends.

JAMES E. CAREY.

"In Memoriam!" No two words combine in more meaningful expression than these. How much of respectful consideration; how much of tender devotion, and how much of sincere regard for the memory of one who has gone before, is implied in the use of the phrase with which this paragraph is introduced. In a monumental work of the character contemplated by the compilers of this extraordinary volume it seems eminently fitting that there should, here and there throughout these pages, be presented for the consideration, not only of the present generation of readers, but for those who, perchance, shall have occasion to review these pages in generations yet to come, a brief and modest summary of the lives of those departed fathers of the commonwealth who long since have passed from the scenes of present worldly activity. In following this design, the biographer surely would be remiss in his duty to the people of Clinton county if this book were permitted to go forth without an epitome of the life and of the works of the gentleman whose name heads this particular chapter of the biographical section of the history of the county, a name which has the power to recall many pleasant memories on the part of those now surviving, who, in his day here, knew so well and respected so highly the subject of this respectful memoir.

The late James E. Carey, who died at his home in Green township, Clinton county, Ohio, on June 8, 1906, was born on a farm in Highland county, Ohio, on December 1, 1857, son of David and Rebecca (Hiatt) Carey, early settlers of that county. Reared on the home farm, James E. Carey received his education in the district schools of his neighborhood and early became a saw-mill man and operator of a threshing-machine outfit, remaining in Highland county until 1899, in which year he came to this county, locating on a farm in Green township, on which his surviving family now resides. Mr. Carey was an excellent farmer and a good citizen, faithfully discharging all his duties toward his fellowmen, true to every trust reposed in him and loyal in all his relations in life. Diligent in business, his industry was amply rewarded and at the time of his death he was the possessor of a fine farm of one hundred and sixty-three acres in Green township, all of which was under excellent cultivation and well improved, the same being looked upon as one of the best farms in that part of the county. Devoted to his family, a kind husband and an indulgent and loving father, his home life was all that could be desired and upon his passing there was created a most sorrowful vacancy in that home. A good neighbor, stanch and true in his relations with his fellowmen, Mr. Carey made and retained hosts of friends throughout that part of the county and there was wide mourning at his death. Mr. Carey was a Republican and was devoted to the principles of good government, ever willing to give of his time and of his services in the promotion and extension of the same. He was a faithful and devoted member of the Friends church and his personal example was influential for much good in his neighborhood, his neighbors all holding him in the very highest esteem.

On February 7, 1894, James E. Carey was united in marriage to Harriet Bernard, who was born in Green township, this county, daughter of James K. and Kezia (McVey) Bernard, the former of whom was born in the same township in 1835, and the latter, in Wayne township, this county, on January 19, 1838. To this union four children were born, namely; Keziah, born on April 23, 1898; Rebecca, June 27, 1900; James Edward, September 26, 1903, and Oscar, September 13, 1905, all of whom are in school. Mrs. Carey and her children have a delightful home and are held in the highest regard by their neighbors, their interest in neighborhood affairs and their active part in the community life thereabout making them important factors in the social development of the part of the county in which they reside.

ASA STARBUCK.

The name Starbuck is said to have been given by an ancient king to a hunter on account of his great skill in killing a buck deer by starlight. The family is of English descent and was established in America by Edward Starbuck I, who was born at Derbyshire, England, in 1604. He married Catherine Reynolds, a native of Wales, and settled first in Dover, New Hampshire, in 1643. He served as a representative to Massachusetts from 1643 to 1646, and became an elder in the church. In 1659 he was one of nine persons who purchased Nantucket Island. He died on December 4, 1690.

Asa Starbuck, who is a representative of the eighth generation of the Starbuck family in America, was born in Union township on the old Starbuck homestead, March 3, 1846. He had the advantage of a good education and during his long life has become one of the prominent farmers and stockmen of Clinton county. He is also a well-known business man and honored and respected throughout the length and breadth of Clinton county.

The parents of Asa Starbuck were Jesse G. and Amy (Cox) Starbuck, the former of whom was born on October 8, 1819, and died on January 4, 1913, and the latter of whom was born on February 1, 1823, and died on April 13, 1892. Jesse G. Starbuck was educated in the common schools of Union township, and was married at Fairfield meeting, in Hendricks county, Indiana, October 20, 1842, to the daughter of Harmon and Martha Cox. Amy (Cox) Starbuck was born on June 1, 1823, and removed to Hendricks county with her parents when a child. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Starbuck settled on a farm, where they resided until their death. During the first ten years of his married life Mr. Starbuck was engaged in running a steam saw-mill, which had a run of burrs attached for grinding corn. The balance of his life was devoted to farming. He and his wife reared a family of five children, others having died early in life, as follow: Adin L., who was born on May 10, 1844, was married on October 12, 1865, to Louisa M. Pidgeon, who was born in Guilford county, North Carolina, November 21, 1847, a daughter of Charles and Catherine Pidgeon; Asa, the subject of this sketch, was the second son; Martha, January 29, 1848, was married on February 16, 1876, to William D. Moorman, who was born on April 3, 1845, a son of Samuel and Lucy (Johnson) Moorman; William R., May 12, 1858, graduated from Wilmington College and became a school teacher and farmer; and Jesse H., November 11, 1864.

Reverting to the earlier ancestry of the Starbuck family, Edward Starbuck, who married Catherine Reynolds, had a son, Nathaniel, who was born in 1636, who married Mary Coffin, died on June 6, 1719. They had a son, Jethro, born on December 14, 1671, who married Dorcas Gayer, "among friends," and who died on August 12, 1770. Jethro and Dorcas (Gayer) Starbuck had a son, Thomas, who was born on October 12, 1796, who married Rachel Allen and who died on July 5, 1777. They had a son, Hezekiah, who was born on February 10, 1749, and who died on January 10, 1830.

Of Thomas and Rachel (Allen) Starbuck it may be said further that the latter was born in 1710 and died on May 31, 1789. Hezekiah Starbuck, their son, was born on Nantucket Island and was married to Mary Thurston, November 19, 1771. He was a seafaring man and captain of a whaling vessel for some years. He was on a cruise when the Revolutionary War broke out and on his return he had great difficulty in entering the harbor which was blockaded by the enemy. In 1785 he emigrated to Guilford county, North Carolina, where he raised his family and where his wife died, June 9, 1806. He afterwards removed to Clinton county, where he remained until his death, which occurred on June 10, 1830. During their residence in Guilford county, North Carolina, they lived at New Garden. Hezekiah and Mary (Thurston) Starbuck had ten children.

One of these ten children, Gayer Starbuck, the third born, was the paternal grandfather of Asa Starbuck, the subject of this sketch. The ten children, in the order of their birth, were as follow: Mary, was born on August 17, 1772; George, April 8, 1775; Gayer, August 10, 1777; Clarissa, January 28, 1780; Hezekiah, Jr., October 14, 1782; Jethro, May 15, 1785; Samuel, January 10, 1788; Mary, March 3, 1790; Latham, February 3, 1793; and Rebekah, January 14, 1800.

Gayer Starbuck was born on August 10, 1777, on Nantucket Island, and removed with his parents to Guilford county, North Carolina, where he spent the early part of his life. He learned the blacksmith trade and for many years followed that vocation. On January 17, 1799, by permission of the New Garden monthly meeting, he was married to Susannah Dillon, the daughter of Jesse and Anna Dillon. Jesse Dillon, who was of Irish descent, was born in North Carolina in October, 1753, and on April 29, 1778, married Hannah Ruckman, who was born on March 20, 1754, a daughter of Joseph and Sarah Ruckman. They came to Ohio in 1807. To Gayer and Susannah (Dillon) Starbuck five sons and five daughters were born, of whom one died at the age of twenty-two, the remainder living to marry and rear families. In 1807 Gayer Starbuck and family emigrated to Ohio, locating in Greene county, near where Paintersville is now situated. In 1810 they came on to Clinton county and located on the farm later owned by Jesse G. Starbuck. Gayer Sarbuck died on December 30, 1866, but his wife preceded him about five years, dying on March 12, 1861.

Gayer Starbuck was a director of the first agricultural fair ever held in Clinton county and was one of the pioneer movers in the organization. Jesse G. Starbuck served as vice-president of the agricultural society in 1856, 1857 and 1858. Gayer Starbuck was also active in the first movement of importing Shorthorn cattle from England about 1834.

Asa Starbuck obtained his education in the Dover district schools in his neighborhood and at Earlham College, where he spent one term, and then spent two years at Franklin College, at Wilmington. He, therefore, enjoyed superior educational advantages. After leaving college he worked on his father's farm for a year and then married and rented one of his father's farms for a few years. In 1876 he purchased one hundred and twenty-two acres from his father and upon this farm he still lives. In 1892 Mr. Starbuck built his present dwelling. He raises Shorthorn cattle and Merino sheep. He is a public-spirited citizen and has helped to build highways, railroads, colleges and churches. There is a stone quarry on Mr. Starbuck's farm and he sells stone for building macadamized roads.

On June 25, 1868, Asa Starbuck was married to Almira Custis, who was born in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, on the old Custis homestead, the daughter of John W. and Louisa (Smith) Custis, both deceased. The father of Mrs. Starbuck was born in Virginia, and the mother in Scioto county, Ohio. They lived in the eastern part of Union township and were farmers.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Starbuck are the parents of eleven children, as follow: Nettie, married Alpheus Hartman, who died in 1895, since which time she has lived with her parents; they had one child, Alpheus, born on February 2, 1895; Laura, married G. H. Carter, a resident of Wilson township; Charles A., lives on a farm in Union township; Jessie C., lives on a farm in Union township; Sallie, who was born in July, 1875, died in 1890; Cora D., is unmarried and lives at home; Marion R., is a resident of Union township; Amy, is a stenographer and lives in Washington, Ohio; Bertha, is unmarried, and lives at home; Ella, is also unmarried and lives at home; Myra, is a stenographer for the Irwin Auger Bit Company, of Wilmington.

Mr. and Mrs. Starbuck divide their religious affiliations, he being a member of the Friends church at Dover and she of the Central Christian church at Wilmington. Since 1879 Mr. Starbuck has been identified with the Prohibition party and is a strong opponent of the traffic in intoxicating liquors. He has had a most commendable and praiseworth part in every public movement in this county and has lived a life to a very good purpose. He is popular and well known in this county.

JOHN H. STROUP.

The paternal grandfather of John H. Stroup, who was Michael Stroup, a native of Pennsylvania, was a typical pioneer in this section and there are many incidents in his life that are of exceptional interest to men and women of the present generation. In the first place, Michael Stroup tramped from Pennsylvania to Highland county, Ohio, in 1801, dressed in the rough garb of the pioneer tramp. Instead of a hat, he carried an eighteen-gallon copper kettle on his head. He also had a large bundle strapped on his back with buffalo thongs and carried a small bundle under his arm. He was a hatter by trade and had gone to Highland county directly from Chillicothe, looking for a place to begin business. In those days he was accustomed to sell wool hats for eighteen dollars a dozen. Originally, he had lived at Humington, Pennsylvania, but later, as early as 1798, settled on the banks of the Scioto river, then called the Farnklin river. He helped to lay out the town of Springfield, Ohio, and afterward moved on to Chillicothe and still later to New Market, where he was married in 1803 to Polly Walker, a native of Fleming county, Kentucky, the marriage ceremony having been performed by Squire Oliver Ross. The bride was dressed in calico, which cost one dollar a yard.

In time Michael Stroup came to be the owner of two thousand acres of land in Highland county. He and his wife were the parents of fourteen children, William, Henry, Simon, Clayborn, Walker, Eliud, Eliud (2), Mary Ann, Harriett, Cynthia, Margaret, Elma, Eliza J. and Mary Anne.

John H. Stroup, the son of Simon and Barbara (Pulse) Stroup, and the subject of this sketch, was born on February 6, 1849, in Highland county, Ohio. His father was born in Highland county, in 1808, and his mother in Virginia. She was the daughter of David Pulse, who married a Miss Fry. David Pulse was a farmer in Highland county, but a native of West Virginia, having moved from that state to Hillsboro, Ohio. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and owned fifty acres of land in Highland county.

Simon Stroup was educated in the common schools of Highland county and spent his entire life in that county with the exception of a short time when he was working in Wisconsin and for a short time when he operated a steamboat from Cincinnati to New Orleans on the Mississippi river. He owned four hundred acres of land in Highland county and one hundred and sixty acres in Iowa. For twelve years he was assessor in his township and also held other offices of trust and responsibility. He died in 1877 and his widow eleven years later, in 1888. They were the parents of twelve children, Lewis, Michael, John, Simon, Mary Ann, David, Sarah Jane and five who died in infancy.

Educated in the country schools of Highland county and reared on a farm, John H. Stroup married Jemima Bogart, a native of Hamilton county, Ohio, the daughter of John and Emma (Stokes) Bogart, farmers in Hamilton county, and to this union six children have been born, namely: Emma, born on December 4, 1873, married William Troutwine, of Highland county, and died on June 3, 1915; Evelina, April 10, 1876, married David Larrick, and lives in Clinton county; Samuel, January 15, 1878, now deceased, married Virgie Craine, of Clinton county; Lillie Pearl, April 2, 1883, married Russell Moore; Sophia, May 21, 1885, and Elliott, May 31, 1893.

Mr. and Mrs. Stroup and family left Highland county in February, 1910. They owned one hundred and five acres in Highland county and, after coming to Clinton county, purchased one hundred and nine acres where they now live and where they are engaged in general farming. Mr. and Mrs. Stroup are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and are warmly esteemed by their many friends both in this and in Highland county.

BURCH T. PENN.

For more than a quarter of a century one of the most active factors in the development of the best interests of this county, Burch T. Penn, cashier of the New Vienna Bank, has created for himself a position in the life of the community in which he so long has played an important part that makes him easily one of the most useful and influential men in Clinton county. Though not a native of this county, he has given of the best of himself to its interests for many years and few men in the county stand higher in the general esteem of the whole community or possess in a fuller measure the confidence and respect of all. Coming to this county in 1888, to take the position of assistant cashier in the bank at New Vienna, Mr. Penn rapidly rose to the position of cashier of that excellent old financial institution and in this capacity has served faithfully and well, not only the immediate interests of the bank, but the whole interest of the community and is very properly regarded as a leader thereabout.

Burch T. Penn was born in Highland county, this state, on July 20, 1866, son of W. H. and Sarah (Foraker) Penn, the former of whom was born in Pike county, Ohio, in 1841, and the latter, in Highland county, same state, in the same year. W. H. Penn was the son of Lloyd Penn, who was born in Maryland, whose parents came to Ohio in an early day in the settlement of this section of the state and became prominent pioneers of Pike county, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Lloyd Penn became one of the most influential men of the neighborhood in which he was reared in Pike county and was a man of large usefulness in the early development of that section. He married a Core, member of another of the pioneer families of that section, and they reared a considerable family of children, the various descendants of whom are now doing well their parts in their respective spheres of life.

W. H. Penn, one of the children above mentioned, was reared on the paternal farm in Pike county, receiving his education in the schools of that neighborhood and became a farmer and merchant. In 1862 he enlisted in the First Ohio Light Artillery and served as a soldier of the Union until the close of the war, after which he located in Highland county, where he became a farmer and merchant at East Munroe and a man of large influence in that neighborhood. He married Sarah Foraker, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Upp) Foraker, well-known residents of Highland county and leaders in the Methodist church in their neighborhood. Henry Foraker was prominent in the political life of his community and was one of the leading Republicans of that section. To W. H. and Sarah (Foraker) Penn were born three children, Burch T., John W. and Charles E. Mr. and Mrs. Penn were members of the Methodist church, active in all the good works thereof, and their sons were reared in that faith. W. H. Penn was a Republican and a member of the Masonic fraternity. He died in December, 1910, and his widow is still living.

Burch T. Penn was reared in the town of East Monroe, Ohio, and received his education in the schools of that place. He entered the Leesburg bank as a clerk in 1882, remaining with that institution until 1888, in which year his services were secured by the bank at New Vienna, this county, which he entered as assistant cashier. He continued in that position until 1890, when he was elevated to the position of cashier of the bank, in which capacity he since that time has been serving most acceptably, not only to the directors of the bank, but to the customers of the same and to the general public. This bank, which was organized in 1871, is regarded as one of the soundest old financial institutions in this part of the state, and it is undoubted that Mr. Penn's services with the bank during the past twenty-five years or more have done much toward establishing the institution so firmly in the favor of the people. In addition to his banking interests, Mr. Penn gives much attention to farming and is the owner of a fine farm adjoining the village of New Vienna.

On October 10, 1889, Burch T. Penn was united in marriage to Louise Miller, who was born in this county, daughter of Zadock and Emily (Hodson) Miller, the former of whom is now dead and the latter of whom is living in Los Angeles, California. To this union three children have been born, Marjorie, who married H. Lee Sullivan, of Ashtabula, Ohio; Howard, a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, of the class of 1915, and Burch T., Jr., who is a student in the schools of New Vienna.

Mr. Penn is a Republican and has given close attention to the political affairs of the county, being looked upon as one of the leaders of his party in that part of the county. For twenty years he served the people of New Vienna as treasurer of the village. He is a member of Dalton Lodge No. 578, Free and Accepted Masons, and is a member of the chapter, council and commandery of that order. Alert, active and enterprising, an excellent banker and a good citizen, Mr. Penn commands the highest respect of the entire community and enjoys the full confidence of commercial and financial circles hereabout, his business associates paying him the compliment of their most cordial esteem.

JOSEPH KUEBLER.

Joseph Kuebler, who owns one hundred and eleven acres of land in Adams township, this county, where he is a successful farmer, was born on October 15, 1863, at Wittenberg, Germany, the son of Valentine and Catherine (Tren) Kuebler, both natives of Wittenberg, the former born on Febuary 14, 1834, and the latter born on May 21, 1838. Katherine Thren was the daughter of Joseph Thren, a native of Germany, who spent his entire life in his native land. He was a member of the Catholic church.

Valentine Kuebler, after coming to America from Germany in 1867, first located in Massachusetts and later emigrated to Brown county, Ohio, where he purchased seventy acres of land. After living in Brown county for thirty years, he moved to Clinton county and settled in Adams township, where he purchased one hundred and eight acres, on which farm he spent the remainder of his life. He was a member of the Catholic church. He died on March 21, 1909. His wife died on February 2, 1897. They were the parents of nine children, Joseph, Caroline, Michael, Frank, Katherine, Frances, Anna, Peter and John. Of these children, all are living in this county except Katherine and Anna.

Joseph Kuebler was three years old when the family came to America. He was educated in the common schools of Brown county, Ohio, and on October 25, 1904, was married to Julia Keefe, a native of Clinton county, born on May 8, 1867, the daughter of James and Ann (Shea) Keefe, both natives of Ireland, the former born on November 16, 1844, and the latter on June 4, 1844. She was the daughter of Michael Shea, a native of Ireland and a member of the Catholic church, who came to this country about 1850, locating in Warren county, Ohio, where be became the owner of two hundred and seventy acres of land, and where he spent his last days. Mrs. Kuebler's paternal grandfather was John Keefe, a native of Ireland, who married Johanna Creedon, also a native of Ireland. They came to America in April, 1858, and located on a farm in Clinton county, near Wilmington, where they spent the remainder of their lives. They were the parents of six children, Timothy, Mary, James, Patrick, Hannah and Julia. Of this family, Patrick and James, the latter of whom is the father of Mrs. Kuebler, were soldiers in the Civil War, Patrick having died during the service. James, who was twelve years old when his family came to America, served about three years in the Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He was for many years engaged in farming but has been retired for twenty years and is now living in Wilmington. He and his wife are members of the Catholic church. They are the parents of five children, of whom Mrs. Kuebler is the eldest, the others being John, Mary, Nora and James M., all of whom are living in this county.

After his marriage, Mr. Kuebler located on the farm of one hundred and eleven acres in Adams township, where he built a pleasant home, where he and his wife now live. They have no children. Mr. and Mrs. Kuebler are members of the Catholic church at Wilmington.

JOHN T. HUMPHREYS.

In analyzing the career of the agriculturist, it is invariably found to be true that unless he is the recipient of estates, his success is the natural outcome of hard work and careful management. While this is so in the case of the gentleman above mentioned, his has not been a selfish attention to his vocation, for he has ever borne in mind the fact that society had claims upon him, and to this demand he has responded with an altruism that makes the community his debtor.

John T. Humphreys, now a well-known farmer of this county, was born on July 8, 1851, in Warren county, Ohio, the son of John L. Humphreys, a brother of David A. Humphreys, whose history appears elsewhere in this volume, and is thoroughly identified with the history of Vernon township, having located there with his parents in 1856, when he was but five years of age. He pursued his studies in the public schools of the township, and in early manhood devoted himself to the cultivation of the soil. He prospered and at the present time owns thirteen hundred and thirty-nine acres in Vernon township, part of this holding being the farm which belonged to his father, and which he bought.

On January 31, 1879, John T. Humphreys married Jennie M. Hartman, who was born in this county on April 22, 1860, the daughter of James and Allie (Townsend) Hartman. James Hartman was born on November 22, 1821, the son of Gaynor Hartman, a pioneer of Clinton county. He died on June 21, 1908. His wife, who was born on August 3, 1832, also is deceased, and Mrs. Humphreys died on May 24, 1910. To Mr. and Mrs. Humphreys were born five children, Arthur (deceased); Everett, Charley, Fred and Ruth.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Humphreys were for many years active in the social life of the community in which they lived. Mrs. Humphreys was a Baptist in faith, while her husband attended the Methodist Episcopal church. As to the phases of his social and political life, Mr. Humphreys always has taken keen interest in the success of the Republican party, for whose welfare he works. He is a believer in fraternal orders and their purposes, and is a member of the Knights of Pythias.

The present sketch forms an appropriate part of this county history, for it concerns a man of sterling qualities, of strong, interesting personality, and one whose career has been of quiet usefulness.

JESSE H. ALLISON.

Jesse H. Allison, a well-known and prominent citizen of New Vienna, this county, who served as a soldier in the Union army during the Civil War, was born on December 26, 1839, in Rush county, Indiana, the son of John and Eunice (Hunt) Allison, the former of whom was born in Highland county, Ohio, in 1807, and the latter in the same county four years later. John Allison was the son of William and Nancy Allison, pioneers of that county, where both died. Eunice Hunt was the daughter of Asa and Marian Hunt, also pioneers of that county, where they spent practically all of their lives. John Allison was a farmer, who emigrated to Rush county, Indiana, in 1835, and later to the Wabash country, near Lafayette, where he died in 1844. Later, his widow and family returned to Rush county, and after being there for three years, came to Clinton county, settling near New Vienna. Mrs. John Allison died in Rush county, Indiana, in 1901. They were the parents of six children, Asa H., Achasa, Isaac R., Jesse H., Thomas G. and William G. Of these five sons, all served as Union soldiers during the Civil War, except William, and all are now deceased, except Jesse H., the subject of this biographical sketch.

In September, 1861, Jesse H. Allison, then twenty-two years of age, enlisted in the in the Forty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served, successively, as a private, sergeant and lieutenant. For a time he commanded his company. During the Vicksburg campaign, he was an aide-de-camp, attached to the brigade staff. Among the more noted engagements in which he participated were the battles of Shiloh, Corinth, Vicksburg and Jackson. He received his honorable discharge in 1864. After coming home from the war, Mr. Allison engaged in business at New Vienna, where, for many years, he conducted a hardware and agricultural implement store, doing a very successful business.

In 1869, Jesse H. Allison was married, in New Vienna, by the Rev. Charles Bowers, minister of the Methodist Episcopal church, and the Rev. John Henry Douglas, the Friends minister, to Sarah Charity Miller, who was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, in 1844, daughter of Samuel and Charity P. Miller, who emigrated from Columbiana county, to Clermont county, this state, and then to Clinton county. Their remains are buried in the cemetery at New Vienna. To Jesse H. and Sarah Charity (Miller) Allison the following children have been born: Frank O., Veda Henrietta, William Logan, Mary A., of Detroit, Michigan; Jessie Augusta, who died at the age of nine years; Earl M. and Harry J., who died early in life, the latter having been drowned.

Mr. Allison was an Abraham Lincoln Republican until the campaign of 1896, when he became a William Jennings Bryan Democrat. He served as treasurer of Green township and as corporation treasurer, also as a member of the school board for a number of years. He is a member of Carey Johnson Post No. 405, Grand Army of the Republic, and was commander of the post for some years. Mr. and Mrs. Allison are members of the Methodist Episcopal church at New Vienna.

FRANCIS MARION IRELAND.

Having been a resident of this county since he was two years old, the subject of this biographical sketch, a prosperous and substantial farmer of Washington township, is one of the best-known men in the county. Though having passed the three-score-and-ten milestone in the journey of life, Mr. Ireland retains the liveliest interest in current affairs and is still regarded, as he has been for many years, as one of the most influential men in his neighborhood; his voice ever having been raised in behalf of all good things thereabout. Though his farm is not as large as those of some of his neighbors, its well-tilled fields and admirable appointments, fine residence and ample farm buildings, display unmistakable evidences of careful management and prudent, energetic and thrifty husbandry; creating the presumption that its owner has so ordered his affairs as to be in no present fear regarding provision for the remainder of his mortal pilgrimage.

Francis Marion Ireland was born on a farm in Warren county, Ohio, on June 17, 1844, son of John C. and Emma (Baker) Ireland, the former of whom was the son of Frank Ireland, a native of Scotland, who emigrated to America in the closing years of the eighteenth century, locating in Warren county, this state, where he engaged in farming and became a substantial citizen. Frank Ireland was a soldier in the army of his adopted country during the War of 1812 and was a man who was held in the very highest regard among his pioneer neighbors in Warren county.

John C. Ireland was reared on the paternal farm in Warren county and married Emma Baker, who was born in that county, daughter of Abram Baker and wife, Virginians, who located in that section of Ohio at an early day and became prominent citizens of Warren county, and it was there that Francis Marion Ireland was born. In 1846 John C. Ireland and his family came to Clinton county, locating in Washington township, where Mr. Ireland and his wife spent the rest of their lives. John C. Ireland bought a farm of one hundred and seventeen acres in that township and became one of the best-known farmers of that section. This farm is now owned by James B. Ireland, brother of the subject of this sketch.

At the time his parents moved to Clinton county, F. M. Ireland was but two years of age, consequently he has spent practically all his life in this county. He was reared on the Washington township farm, receiving his education in the neighboring district school and has always lived in that neighborhood, his well-appointed farm of something like seventy-five acres adjoining the paternal farm, being separated from the latter by the highway, he and his brother, James B. Ireland, thus remaining close neighbors.

In 1872, Francis M. Ireland was united in marriage to Rhody Ellen Crouse, who was born in Washington township, this county, daughter of Emerson Crouse and wife, prominent pioneers of that section. Additional details regarding the Crouse family in this county are set out in the biographical sketch relating to J. W. R. Crouse, a cousin of Mrs. Ireland, presented elsewhere in this volume.

To the union of Francis Marion Ireland and Rhody Ellen Crouse three children have been born, Virgil, Verda and Stella. Mr. and Mrs. Ireland are genial, hospitable and generous; charitable in their relations with their neighbors and for many years have taken a prominent part in all good works in that neighborhood, being held in the highest esteem by all persons thereabout. Mr. Ireland is a good citizen, having performed well his duties to his fellowmen, and may safely be said to be approaching the "sunset time" of his life with few regrets and certainly with no reasonable complaint concerning the manner in which he has fared along the way.

ROBERT TURNER STANFIELD.

The name of Robert Turner Stanfield is one familiar to the residents of Vernon township, this county, as that of a hard-working, energetic and neighborly farmer, whose toil in the cultivation of the soil has brought him a competence, but who has not limited his activities to one occupation. Mingling with men, he has found other lines of work equally as absorbing, and for years has served the public in the capacity of assessor, an office which he has filled most creditably.

Robert T. Stanfield was born in Greene county, Ohio, on March 22, 1855, the son of James and Mahala (Turner) Stanfield, both born in the same county, the former in 1824, and the latter four years later. James Stanfield was the son of Samuel and Massey (Kennedy) Stanfield, the former, Samuel, was a native of North Carolina, whose father, William Stanfield, was a pioneer of Greene county, this state, where he died after a worthy and useful life. Massey Kennedy was born in Georgia in 1901. She died in Greene county, this state, in 1873, having outlived her husband nearly twenty years, his death having occurred in 1854. Mahala Turner was the daughter of Robert and Christena (Hegler) Turner, the latter a native of Pennsylvania. Robert Turner was quite a young man when he migrated to Greene county, where he afterwards married. After the death of his wife in 1868, when they still resided in the above-named county, he moved to Warren county, to make his home with his daughter, and there he spent the rest of his life, living to the extraordinary age of ninety-seven years, his death occurring in 1892.

James Stanfield came from Greene county to Clinton county in 1876 and soon afterwards purchased a farm across the line in Warren county, near the present home of the subject of this sketch. This piece of land consisted of one hundred and ninety-five acres. He passed away in Vernon township, in 1905, his wife's death following five years later. They were the parents of ten children, as follow: William, John (deceased), Christina (deceased), Robert T., Frank, Elva, Aaron (deceased), Samuel, Sarah and Mattie.

Robert T. Stanfield was born and reared on the farm of his father, receiving the usual common-school education, after which he was privileged to attend the Spring Valley high school. In 1876 he began a residence in Warren county which lengthened into twenty years, after which he and his family removed to this county, and the following year, he bought the farm of fifty acres which he still owns and on which he has become a successful stock raiser.

In 1881 Robert T. Stanfield was united in marriage to Florence E. McCray, who was born in Clarksville, this county, in July, 1855, daughter of Joseph and Amanda (Seaver) McCray, who had lived in this county since its early days. Joseph McCray died in 1897, having been a widower since 1877. To Robert T. and Florence (McCray) Stanfield two children have been born, Zula M. and Albert H. The former married Charles Camp and has four children, Leland, Leona (deceased), Nina and Evelyn. Albert H. Stanfield married Mary Pagenkopf, of Wisconsin, and has four children, Virgil, Virgene, Augusta and Neda.

The man who can remain in one public office for fifteen consecutive years must be a man of sterling worth; otherwise, keen competition would see to it that he took up another line of work. Robert T. Stanfield has been township assessor of Vernon township for this length of time and has fulfilled the obligations of the office in such a way as to win the respect and confidence of the public. Having lived in the county for so long a time, he is one of the best-known farmers in the vicinity, and has a great many warm friends.

RICHARD C. GREENE.

The early surroundings of the man whose name appears as the theme of this biography were not propitious from the world's viewpoint, and yet, the success of his subsequent career shows that there were even in his boyhood the stalwart elements which go to make up strength of character and the sort of persistence that the world admires. Through strenuous work and fidelity to an ideal of personal excellence, Mr. Greene has risen in importance and usefulness in his community, he has been elected county treasurer, has won the respect of his fellow-citizens.

Richard C. Greene was born on April 18, 1857, on the farm in Wayne township, Clinton county, on which his father was born, and which his grandfather settled. He is the son of Hazael and Millie (Chern) Greene.

Hazael Greene was the son of Isaac Greene, who came to Wayne township when most of it was in forest, and it might be said of him, as it has been said of others, "Men who plant civilization in the wilderness, who organize backwoodsmen into communities, and throw around them the protection of the law, should not be forgotten. They render mankind a priceless service, and those who come after them and enjoy the fruits of their labor and their sacrifices should never tire of honoring their memory." The farm which Isaac Greene developed from its primal raw condition has remained in the family ever since, with the exception of a period of two or three years. Hazael Greene died in Wilmington at the age of seventy-eight. His wife, Mrs. Millie (Cherry) Greene, died in 1860, when Richard C. was three years of age.

Richard C. Greene received his elementary education in the public schools in the country. He afterwards was graduated from high school, and later went to the Wilmington College for two years. Mr. Greene was a teacher in the public schools for several years, after which he devoted his time to the management of the home farm. After taking up his residence in Wilmington, about 1901, Mr. Greene engaged in the insurance business for a number of years, being manager of one of the largest and most successful agencies in the town.

On February 26, 1880, Richard C. Greene was united in marriage to Sadie M. Davis, a daughter of Jordan and Phebe Davis, and a native of Highland county, Ohio. To Mr. and Mrs. Greene three children have been born, as follow: Grace, married Chester Sanders, of Dayton, Ohio; Mary, married Russell D. Jay, of Xenia, Ohio; and Charles Herbert Greene, of Dayton, married Ada Antram, a daughter of Frank and Belle Antram, natives of Clinton county, Ohio.

Mr. Greene is a Republican and takes an active interest in the affairs of that party. In 1912 he was elected treasurer of Clinton county, and re-elected in 1914.

Mr. Greene has the qualities that would make him a power for good in any community. He has energy, judgment, self-reliance, and that sterling characteristic called integrity. In all of the relations of life, he has been honest, fair and helpful. Such a man is an asset to any community.

HUBERT J. DERIVAN.

Hubert J. Derivan, a well-known merchant and farmer of New Vienna, this county, was born there on August 12, 1856, the son of Hugh and Bridget (Foley) Derivan, both of whom were natives of Ireland and who were married in their native land. Three children were born to them in the old country, Maria, Anna and Patrick, the last two of whom are deceased. Leaving these children in their native land, they came to America in 1855 proceeding to Ohio, locating at New Vienna, this county, and two years later the children came alone to America, the voyage and trip requiring three months, at that time the children being ten, eight and six years of age, respectively. The late Hugh Derivan was a laborer, a Democrat in politics and a member of the Catholic church.

Another child was born to Hugh and Bridget (Foley) Derivan after coming to this county. Hubert J., the subject of this sketch. Maria, the eldest child, married Adam Clark and they later settled in Tecumseh, Nebraska. There Mr. Clark died, leaving his widow with five children, Lucy, Clara, Anna, Mary and Ethel, who later moved to Lincoln, where they now live. Two sons, Frank and Hubert, had died in Tecumseh, Nebraska. Hugh Derivan died on March 19, 1884, and his wife on March 22, of the same year. Their remains are buried at Hillsboro, Ohio.

Hubert J. Derivan was educated in the public schools at New Vienna and learned the blacksmith's trade as soon as he was old enough to begin work. Afterward, however, he gave up this trade and for fourteen years was engaged in the implement business, but on February 6, 1912, he took up blacksmithing again, in connection with the implement business. He handles farm implements, seeds of all kinds, fence posts and drain tile, besides doing a general business in blacksmithing. Mr. Derivan owns his own business building in New Vienna, in 1912 having bought out Eugene Edwards, who owned the building.

On February 5, 1890, Hubert J. Derivan was married to Susan Irene McCabe, who was born in Highland county, Ohio, the daughter of James and Mary McCabe, both deceased, to which union five children have been born, namely: Joseph, who was graduated from the veterinary department of Ohio University in June, 1914; Harry, of the 1916 class in civil engineering at Ohio State University; Mary, a student in the normal school at New Vienna, who is a graduate of the New Vienna high school and has taught at New Vienna, Cuba and Martinsville; Hubert, Jr., a student in the New Vienna high school, and John, a student in the public schools.

Mr. Derivan owns a farm of one hundred and eighty acres in Green township, which he himself has bought and paid for with his own earnings and savings. He also owns several pieces of property in New Vienna, besides his residence. He is a Democrat and has been a member of the board of public affairs for five years and a member of the council for six years. Mr. and Mrs. Derivan are members of the Catholic church and their children have been reared in that faith.

HENRY CLAY WISBEY.

The life of the subject of this short biography is instructive in that it indicates what can be done by the determined will, the resolute purpose, and the ability to concentrate one's powers upon a worthy object in life and work until that object is attained.

Henry Clay Wisbey is the son of Lewis and Agnes (Clark) Wisbey, referred to in the sketch of George M. Cole in the present volume, and was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, on August 20, 1858. He received his early education in the Cincinnati schools, and in his sixteenth year went to Illinois. After a year's residence there, he came to Clinton county, rented a farm and lived there for the next forty years. In 1905 he bought the farm of one hundred and ten acres, and thus saw the result of almost a life-time of strenuous work.

Henry C. Wisbey has been twice married. His first wife was Ida Cole, a daughter of Benjamin and Martha Cole, mentioned elsewhere in this work, who died four years after her marriage, in 1881, leaving two children, Charles and Cassie May, the latter of whom died in infancy. The former was born on January 2, 1882, and married Anna Garrison of Vernon township, this county, to which union were born three children, Mabel May, Walter and Ralph, all of whom are living. On March 13, 1890, Mr. Wisbey married, secondly, Ida Espey, the marriage taking place in Blanchester, this county. She was born in Union City, Indiana, on February 22, 1868, the daughter of John and Nancy (Wittaker) Espey, the former a native of Union City, and the latter of Darke county, Ohio. John Espey died at Rochester, Warren county, Ohio, in 1911, at the age of seventy-five. His wife had died near Union City in 1871. They were the parents of two children, Edgar and Ida. By his second wife who was Hannah Lyons, and to whom he was married in 1873, John Espey had six children, Burt Elmer, Charles Tilden, Estelle, Ollie Jane, Bessie and Celia.

To Henry C. and Ida (Espey) Wisbey two daughters have been born, Bessie, who died while quite young, and Vinnia, who recently married Edward Blatt, of Newport, Kentucky.

Mr. Wisbey has taken keen interest in political affairs, and has always voted the Republican ticket. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Odd Fellows.

The life here briefly outlined furnishes an example of what persistent effort will accomplish; and as the present publication is devoted to a review of those citizens of the county, who by their integrity and ability, have won a place of prominence in the community, it is but fitting that the present sketch should appear. Mr. Wisbey is a man, who as husband, father, neighbor and citizen, is worthy of emulation.

RAYMOND J. HUMPHREYS.

Raymond J. Humphreys, an intelligent young farmer of Vernon township, this county, was born in that township on February 21, 1879, the son of David A. and Callie (Goodwin) Humphreys. He was reared on a farm and was educated in the public schools of the county, having been graduated from the Blanchester high school with the class of 1899, since which time he has been engaged in farming. Mr. Humphreys owns one hundred and forty acres of land in Vernon township and is a general farmer and stockman.

David A. Humphreys, subject's father, was reared on his father's farm and educated in the public schools of Pansy, in Marion township. Mr. Humphreys has always been engaged in farming. At the present time, he owns approximately three hundred acres of land, but also formerly owned one hundred and thirty-five acres which now belong to his son, Raymond J. Besides his extensive interest in farm land, Mr. Humphreys is a director of the First National Bank, of Blanchester, and of the Farmers National Bank, of Clarksville.

In December, 1877, David A. Humphreys was married to Caroline Goodwin, who was born in Indiana, and who is the daughter of James Goodwin, a brother of Levi Goodwin, mentioned elsewhere in the sketch of E. M. Goodwin, of Marion township. James Goodwin was a farmer by occupation, who lived in Warren county, Ohio. He is now deceased.

Mr. and Mrs. David A. Humphreys have two children, Raymond J., and Vance, who was born in 1866.

On October 28, 1903, Raymond J. Humphreys was married to Nora Nicholson, who was born in Warren county, Ohio, on September 12, 1880, daughter and only child of John and Susan (Penquite) Nicholson, both natives of that county. John Nicholson was born on January 9, 1855, and his wife on June 30, 1855. They now reside on a farm in Washington township, Warren county. To Raymond and Nora (Nicholson) Humphreys two children have been born, Clarence Edwin, born on July 27, 1904, and Helen Lavonne, June 9, 1906.

Mr. and Mrs. Humphreys are prominent citizens of Vernon township, Mr. Humphreys being one of the trustees of that township. He is now president of the farmers institute at Clarksville, and, as the head of that organization, is contributing in a large measure to the spread of interest in this community in scientific farming. He is a Republican and has served as a member of the school board. Fraternally, he is a member of the Knights of Pythias at Blanchester.

WALTER G. RICHARDSON.

Walter G. Richardson, now a well-known and prosperous young farmer of Vernon township, this county, was born on August 2, 1870, in the township where he is still living, a son of the late Charles Pierson and Jane (Villars) Richardson, the former born in Cincinnati, on March 15, 1840, and the latter on the old Villars homestead in Vernon township, on December 7, 1832.

Charles Pierson Richardson was widely known during his life as one of the successful farmers of Clinton county. He began life with one hundred acres of land inherited by Mrs. Richardson, and gradually added to this tract until at the time of his death on July 12, 1894, he was the owner of four hundred and thirty-five acres of splendid land in Vernon township. He was a son of Pierson Jackson and Elizabeth (Skillenger) Richardson, the former born in 1815 in Genesee county, New York, who died on December 17, 1902, and the latter born on April 27, 1814, in Cincinnati, Ohio, who died on October 3, 1883. Her parents were natives of Germany. Charles Pierson Richardson was a farmer and specialized in pure-bred live stock and kept road-bred horses of the Wilkes and Hambletonian breeds. He also made a specialty of raising Shropshire sheep and Shorthorn cattle. After his death his widow moved to Wilmington, where she now resides with her daughter, Bessie. Before her marriage, Mrs. Richardson was Jane Villars, the daughter of James and Frances (Gregg) Villars, the former of whom was born on October 28, 1800, in Jefferson township, Greene county, Pennsylvania, and died in June, 1890, and the latter of whom, her mother having died when she was a child, was reared by Mrs. Woodmansee. She was a daughter of George and Margaret (Wiley) Gregg. Charles P. Richardson was married to Jane Villars on October 3, 1865. James Villars was a son of James and Rebecca (Davidson) Villars. Charles P. Richardson and wife were the parents of nine children, three of whom, Howard, Horace and Lillie, are deceased. The living children are: James Pierson, Jr., Charles Hinkle, Walter G., Frances Elizabeth, Herman and Bessie. Mrs. Richardson is a member of the Methodist Protestant church.

Walter G. Richardson was reared on his father's farm, receiving his education in the public schools and in the Wilmington high school, from which he was graduated in 1895. He is a farmer by occupation and lives in Vernon township on his mother's farm of one hundred and twenty-five acres. He is a well-known breeder of Shorthorn cattle.

On January 29, 1903, Walter G. Richardson was married to Edna Hadley, who was born on March 28, 1873, in Adams township, this county, daughter of Harlan H. and Susannah (Kimbrough) Hadley, the former of whom was born on October 21, 1833, in Adams township, and the latter, on November 15, 1836, on Cabin creek, in Indiana. Mrs. Richardson's paternal grandparents were Jonathan and Rebecca (Harvey) Hadley, the former of whom came from North Carolina in 1810, and who died in Vernon township in 1879, at the age of eighty-seven. His wife died in 1876, at the age of eighty-three. Mrs. Richardson's maternal grandparents were Thomas and Elizabeth (Hiatt) Kimbrough, pioneers in Clinton county, the former of whom came from North Carolina and the latter, from Virginia. He died in 1883, at the age of eighty-three, and his wife lived to be the same age, her death occurring in 1885. Mrs. Richardson is one of five children born to her parents, the others being Ella Bevan, Atwell Miller, Isaac Parker, and Horace Allen.

To Walter G. and Edna (Hadley) Richardson three children have been born, Ruth Eleanor, born on July 21, 1904; Horace Hadley, June 4, 1908, and Esther Rebecca, October 5, 1911.

Mrs. Richardson's maternal grandmother, Elizabeth Hiatt, came on horseback from Virginia to this county in 1812, with her parents, Jesse and Martha (Stuyvesant) Hiatt. Her paternal grandfather, Jonathan T. Hadley, came on horseback from North Carolina in an early day and entered land from the government in Clinton county.

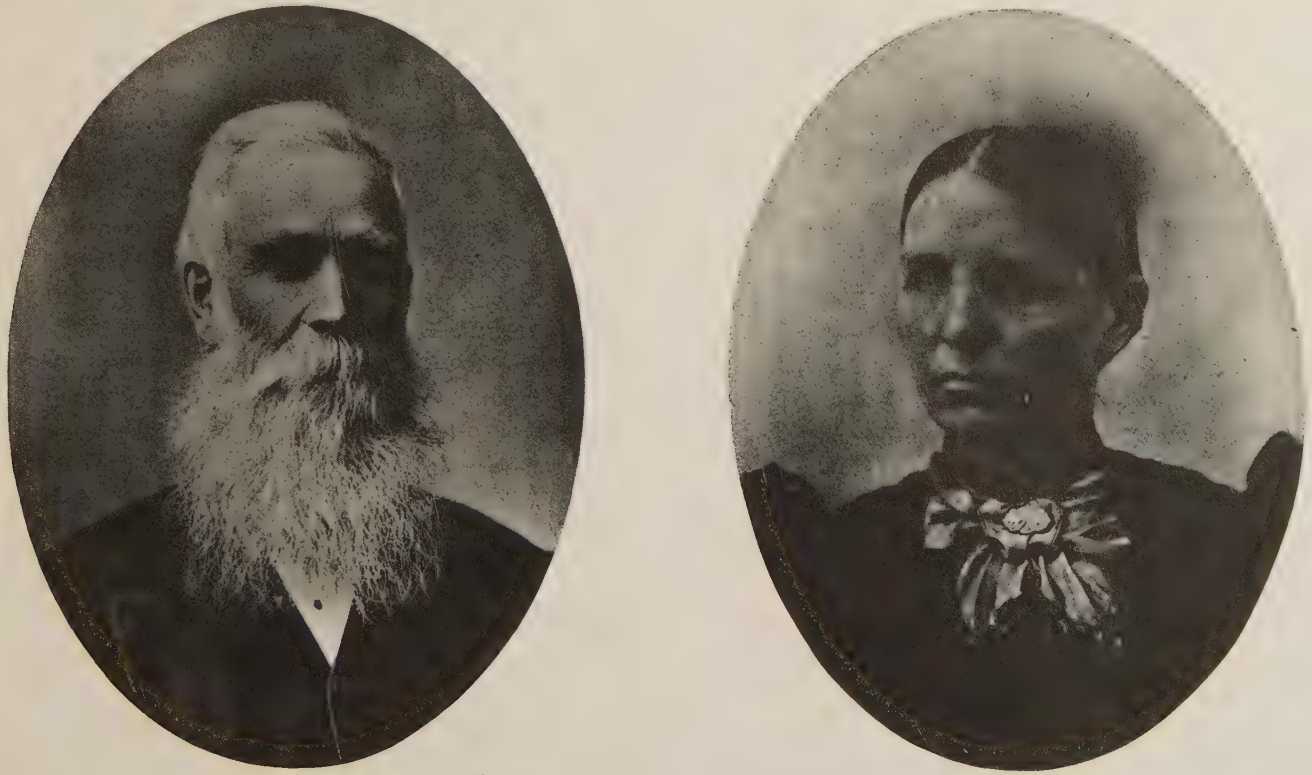
Walter G. Richardson is a Republican, but he has never taken an active interest in political affairs. He and his family are earnest members of the Methodist Protestant church, in which they are actively interested.

JAMES W. BABB.

One of the best-remembered farmers and business men of the past generation in Clinton county was the late James W. Babb, who at the time of his death owned and lived on a farm on the Vienna pike, in Union township. Of Mr. Babb it may be said that he was a man of strong and active sympathies. His temperament was warm and ardent, his feeling deep and intense. These and other attractive characteristics unconsciously drew him an unusual number of devoted friends, upon whom under all circumstances he could rely and who, now that he has passed from earth, revere his memory. He is remembered today as a manly man, of pleasing and dignified presence, influential in the circles in which he moved and cordial, friendly and kind in all the relations of life. He stood as a conspicuous example of symmetrically-developed American manhood.

James W. Babb was born on May 8, 1837, at Xenia, Ohio, and died on November 30, 1896. He was the son of James M. and Hannah (Smith) Babb, the former of whom was born on January 17, 1811, and the latter of whom was born on June 4, 1817, both in Frederick county, Virginia. James M. Babb was the son of Henry Mercer and Grace (McCool) Babb, and Henry was the son of Thomas and Blanche (Mercer) Babb, who were off-shoots of an old English family in Virginia. Hannah (Smith) Babb was the daughter of John S. and Susan (Crouse) Smith.

James M. and Hannah (Smith) Babb were married on August 14, 1834, in Virginia, and immediately after their marriage made the journey to Xenia, Ohio, their wedding trip. They began housekeeping at Xenia, where he became a carpenter and an influential citizen. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church and lived and died in



MR. AND MRS. JAMES W. BABB.

Xenia. They had six children, all of whom are now deceased, namely: John Henry, who was born on May 19, 1835, died on May 30, 1835; James W., was the second born; Mary Jane, 1839, died in 1841; Thomas M., April 8, 1842, died on March 14, 1895, and was for many years a partner of his brother, James W., in the saw-mill and building business; George H., February 22, 1844, died on February 15, 1915, made his home with his brother, James W., until the latter's death and afterwards lived with Mrs. Babb until his death, in the spring of 1915; Charles S., May 30, 1836, died in 1894.

James M. Babb was married, secondly, to Susan McCreary on February 16, 1853, and they had three children, all of whom are living, as follow: Leonidas, is a resident of Xenia, Ohio, and a carpenter by occupation; Grace, married David McClellan, of Greene county, Ohio: Eliza, married John McLean, and they reside near Jamestown, Ohio, on a farm.

James W. Babb was first married to Angeline Hays, February 11, 1858. She died, however, July 7, 1862, and he was married, secondly, on June 11, 1863, to Louisa Lacy, who is still living.

Louisa Lacy was born on June 29, 1835, in Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio, the daughter of John Johnson, who was familiarly known as "Jack," and Ruth (Brown) Lacy. Mrs. Babb's father was born on December 25, 1810, in Washington township, Clinton county, and died on March 1, 1892. The mother was born near Morrisville, in Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio, in 1811, and died in 1875. The late "Jack" Lacy was the son of J. Johnson and Ruth (Clevenger) Lacy, natives of Frederick county, Virginia, where they were married early in the last century. They came to Ohio in 1809 and settled in the present limits of Clinton county, where the village of Cuba now stands. Here the elder Lacy kept a tavern for several years, finally settling in Washington township, where he died about the time of the breaking out of the Civil War, his wife having died some years previously. His family consisted of ten children, of whom "Jack" Lacy was the eldest. He received a limited education in the primitive schools of the day and purchasing land in Washington township in 1838, located on it in the fall of 1840. In 1855 he purchased a small tract of land, which became the nucleus of a five-hundred-and-twenty-three-acre farm, which he later owned. He married Ruth Brown, in October, 1833. They had eleven children, as follow: Mrs. Louisa (Lacy) Babb was the eldest; Henry, died in 1910; David Bell, born in December, 1840, married Mary Jane Crouse, is a farmer of Union township; Susan, married George Olvis, of Burtonville; Mary, married Clay Olvis, of Burtonville; Florence, married John Gray, of Wilmington; Sarah, died unmarried, at the age of twenty-seven; Finley, is a resident of New Vienna; Levi, lives near Lytle, Ohio, where he is a farmer; Leroy, lives near Harveysville; one child died in infancy.

Mrs. Babb's mother, who, before her marriage, was Ruth Brown, was the daughter of David Brown, one of four brothers, who settled early in Washington township. David, Asa, Elisha and James Brown were natives of Massachusetts, born during the War of Independence, and who at the close of the war removed with their father to Owen county, Kentucky, where they grew to manhood. Between 1807 and 1810 all removed from Owen county, Kentucky, to somewhere within the present limits of Washington township, purchasing land in Steel's, Carrington's and Johnsons's surveys, where they all resided for many years, rearing large families. Asa died in 1843; David, 1844; Elisha, 1856, and James, 1863. David Brown and his wife, Jane Brown, were members of the Christian church.

James W. Babb grew up in Xenia, Ohio, and became a carpenter by occupation and later a building contractor. Subsequently, he operated a saw-mill at Paintersville, in Greene county, in partnership with his brother, Thomas M., for several years. In 1894 he removed to his farm on the Vienna pike, in Union township, and in that year built a house. Two years later he died. His widow, Mrs. Louisa (Lacy) Babb, still lives on the farm.

While living at Paintersville, Mr. Babb served as justice of the peace for several years. He was an uncompromising Republican. He and his wife were active members of the Christian church. They had no children, but two children had been born by Mr. Babb's former marriage. One of these children, Amanda E., born on January 30, 1862, died on February 22, 1881, unmarried. Mary E., the eldest, born on December 24, 1858, married John Leininger, a farmer of Union township.

Mrs. Louisa (Lacy) Babb is a well-known woman, well informed, cultured and refined. She is highly respected by the people of this township.

MILNER VAN PELT.

Milner Van Pelt is a very successful farmer of Wayne township, who is sprung from a fine old family, whose ancestry goes back to the Old Dominion state. Several generations of the family have been prominent in the religious and political life of Clinton county, and Milner Van Pelt himself is a man of established worth as an enterprising citizen.

Milner Van Pelt was born on March 6, 1855, in Wayne township, this county, the son of Ryan and Rebecca (Milner) Van Pelt, the former of whom was born on August 28, 1822, at Richmond, Indiana, and the latter, March 7, 1825, in Highland county, Ohio. Mr. Van Pelt's maternal grandparents were Moses and Sallie (Slaughter) Milner, the former a native of Halifax county, Virginia, born on July 4, 1785, whose death occurred on January 16, 1864. Moses Milner was a son of Beverly Milner and emigrated from the Old Dominion state to Highland county, Ohio, in 1807, when a young man. A few years later he returned to Virginia, where he married, and then came back to live permanently in Highland county, locating near the village of Leesburg. Sallie Slaughter was also a native of Virginia, born August 23, 1787; was married in her native state to Moses Milner, in October, 1807, and died on April 19, 1885. Beverly Milner, the father of Moses, was born on March 22, 1756, in Halifax county, Virginia, and came to Ohio in the spring of 1807. He married Olive Anna Hendricks, who was also a native of Virginia, born in 1760, who died in 1828. Beverly Milner died on January 10, 1843, at the ripe old age of eighty-seven years.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Van Pelt were Elijah and Lucy (Bethel) Van Pelt, the former a native of Loudoun county, Virginia, born on September 19, 1794. He came to Clinton county, Ohio, in 1847, and was a pioneer farmer in Wayne township, where he owned one hundred acres of land. Elijah Van Pelt and wife were the parents of four children, namely: Ryan, the father of Milner; John, born on June 30, 1829; Lydia, June 14, 1843, and Abigail, August 1, 1825, who died in infancy. The parents of Elijah Van Pelt were Jacob and Sarah (Ryan) Van Pelt, the former of whom was born on August 12, 1759, and who died on August 3, 1831, and the latter, born on September 22, 1761, died on August 29, 1831.

Ryan Van Pelt received a good education in the public schools of Highland county, Ohio, and became a farmer in Wayne township, this county, where he purchased one hundred acres of swamp land. This land he cleared, drained and improved and there he spent the remainder of his life. On October 18, 1849, he was married to Rebecca Milner, to which union five children were born, of whom Milner was the third in order of birth, the others being: Albert, born on January 31, 1851; Lydia Ann, April 17, 1853, who died on March 16, 1881; Elijah, March 10, 1858, and Lucinda, December 3, 1864. Elijah and Lucinda are unmarried.

Milner Van Pelt, after completing his education in the schools at Highland, began farming in Wayne township, and has lived there all his life. In 1879 he inherited thirty-seven and one-half acres of land, and ten years later he added forty acres to this tract, being now the owner of a farm of seventy-seven and one-half acres of fine land, on which he makes a specialty of raising thoroughbred Shorthorn cattle and Duroc-Jersey hogs.

Mr. Van Pelt married Ella Hodson, the daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Lamb) Hodson, and to this union have been born four children, namely: Cora, born on February 3, 1878, married Quincy Morris, and has two children, John Ryan, born on July 24, 1909, and Helen, May 4, 1915; Ola, November 22, 1882, died on March 24, 1906; Royal, August 31, 1884, died on January 10, 1896; Arametha, May 18, 1901, is living at home with her parents.

From 1904 until 1910 Milner Van Pelt served as county commissioner of Clinton county, having been elected to this office on the Republican ticket, he being an ardent Republican, as was his father. The Van Pelt family are members of the Methodist church at Memphis, and Mr. Van Pelt is a trustee in the church, as well as superintendent of the Sunday school. He takes a worthy pride in his farm and the improvements which he has made upon it. In 1913 he built a new and commodious country home on his farm and has improved and developed the place in many ways.

FRANK HOGGATT.

The history of a county or state, as well as that of a nation, consists principally of the records of those men and women who have served society. While the quality of statehood is determined by the character of the rank and file of its citizens, it is obvious that the state itself or any part thereof becomes known to the world by the lives and deeds of those citizens who have risen above the general average. In point of service to the community, it is a question whether any should receive more honor than he who has taught its young. While the gentleman whose name appears at the head of this article is now a justice of the peace, he, for twenty years was a teacher, and as such, should be considered as one deserving of honor and appreciation by those whose personal and community interests he has served.

Frank Hoggatt was born on a farm near Westboro, in Jefferson township, this county, on December 22, 1867, son of Alexander and Mary (Rhonemous) Hoggtat, well-known and respected residents of that neighborhodo. Alexander Hoggatt was born in Greene county, Tennesse, in 1822, and his wife was born in Clinton county, Ohio, in 1824. He was the son of Nathan and Mary (Babb) Hoggatt, natives of Tennessee, who came to this county in 1830, settling in Jefferson township. The grandmother died about the time of the Civil War and the grandfather lived until 1880, at the time of his death being eighty-five years of age. Mary Rhonemous was the daughter of Jacob and Sophia Rhonemous, of Pennsylvania-Dutch stock, who, soon nfter the states of the Middle West began to attract Eastern inhabitants, transferred their home from Pennsylvania to this county, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Alexander Hoggatt was a Whig and a member of the Universalist church. He became a member of what was then known as the Know-Nothing party, later joining forces with the Republicans. He died on his farm in Jefferson township in 1900, two years after his wife died. Their children were, Susan, Joel, Leander, Jacob, Lavina, and Frank.

After completing his studies in the district schools, and the New Vienna high school, Frank Hoggatt began his career as teacher, a career which lasted for twenty years, ending in 1914, since which time he has given all of his attention to farming In 1915 he and his wife, who has been, since 1900, a true help-mate, took much pleasure in the erection of a beautiful residence. Before her marriage, Mrs. Hoggatt was Jessie Greenwood, of Xenia, Ohio. Her parents are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Hoggatt have one child, a daughter, Vera, whose birth occurred on December 13, 1903.

The confidence in which Frank Hoggatt is held by his neighbors and townspeople is indicated by the fact that for eight years he has been justice of the peace, an office which he has filled most creditably. He is a Republican, and a member of the Odd Fellows lodge of Clarksville. From the time when he determined upon an education more advanced than that which was usual in his day, until the present, Mr. Hoggatt has been guided by high ideals, which he has faithfully sought to impart to the younger generation who, as pupils, came under his influence. The good accomplished by a man of this type is incalculable, and a community can never adequately pay for the service such a man has rendered.

ENOCH L. CAREY.

Enoch L. Carey is one of the more extensive farmers of Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, and a man who, for many years, has been conspicuous in the religious, educational and civic life of Clinton county. He comes from an old family of this section and has filled many important offices within the gift of the people of Union township, having served as township trustee for a period of seven years, a part of one term by appointment and later two terms by election. He is an elder in the Chester meeting of the Friends society and for the past eight years has been trustee of Wilmington College. He also helped to organize the Clinton Mutual Insurance Company and has been one of its trustees and directors since its organization. In addition to all of this, Mr. Carey is perhaps best known as a skillful, scientific farmer. He is proprietor of a magnificent farm of three hundred and fifteen acres in Union township.

Enoch L. Carey was born on April 12, 1859, at Martinsville, in Clinton county, the son of John and Elizabeth (Lundy) Carey. John Carey was born on August 6, 1826, in Highland county, and died in 1909. Elizabeth Lundy was born in Union township, on the farm where her son now lives, in 1828, and died on August 23, 1889. Mr. Carey's maternal great-grandparents were James and Elizabeth Lundy, both of whom came to Clinton county from Virginia about 1810, and settled on a farm in Liberty township now owned by Charles McKee. They brought their birthrights in the Quaker church and first affiliated with the Center meeting and later, when the Chester meeting was found, they affiliated with that. For a number of years James Lundy sat at the head of that meeting. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Carey were Enoch and Charlotta (Green) Lundy, the latter of whom was born in 1804, and when twelve years of age came with her parents, John Green and wife, from near Hillsville, in Grayson county, Virginia. They purchased one hundred and eighty-five acres of land in Union township, where Enoch L. Carey now lives. Charlotta Green, Mr. Carey's grandmother, grew up on her parents' farm in Union township. Enoch Lundy was a lad when his parents came to Clinton county in 1810. He grew up and married in Liberty township and was killed by a falling tree three months before his daughter, Elizabeth, was born. He had two children: Alice, who died at the age of fourteen, and Elizabeth, Mr. Carey's mother.

The paternal grandparents of Enoch L. Carey were Samuel and Anna Carey, both natives of Virginia, born near the Pennsylvania line. They grew up and were married there and later moved to Grayson county, where they became acquainted with the Greens. In 1818 they settled on a farm in Highland county, Ohio, now owned by Zimri Carey, who founded Careytown, Ohio. They were ardent Quakers. He died at the age of ninety-three, in 1874, and his remains were buried at Martinsville, Ohio. She died in 1868. Although he lived on a farm, he was a blacksmith by trade and his boys operated the farm while he worked at his trade. Most of the sons, however, learned the blacksmith's trade. He had eight children, of whom only one is now living, Rachel, who married Charles West.

John Carey learned the blacksmith's trade from his father and early in his life and built a house and shop in Martinsville and followed the trade. He was married at the age of thirty years, and four years later purchased a farm and began farming. He traded farms several times and finally purchased the farm owned by Grandmother Lundy and her two sisters, comprising ninety-two acres in Union township. In 1886, when his son, Enoch L., was married, he moved to Wilmington, where his wife died in 1894. He married, secondly, Mrs. Mary Thomas, and both are now deceased; she died in 1906, and he died on April 9, 1909. He and his wife belonged to the Friends church and he was an elder and a minister in the church for a time. They had three children, of whom Enoch L. was the eldest. The others are Samuel F., who has a blacksmith shop on the Xenia pike and lives at Wilmington, Ohio; and Nathan H., who lives at La Habra, California.

Enoch L. Carey attended the public schools of Martinsville until he was eight years old, and then became a student in the Guerneyville public schools. Later he attended the normal school at Lebanon, Ohio, for ten weeks and this completed his educational training. From the time he was ten years old, he had active charge of the management of his father's farm, his father doing very little farm work. When Mr. Carey was grown he purchased his father's interest in the farm and subsequently, in partnership with his brother, Nathan, purchased ninety-three acres of the old Lundy place, on which he now lives. Later he added thirty-three acres farther east and still later purchased his brother Nathan's interest. He now owns in all three hundred and fifteen acres and has a productive farm.

On January 21, 1886, Enoch L. Carey was married to Jane McMillan, who was born in Chester township, the daughter of Josiah and Rebecca (Whinery) McMillan, the former of whom is a prominent farmer in the eastern part of Chester township, and is a recorded minister of the Friends society since 1907.

Mr. and Mrs. Carey have had four children: Dallas, born on March 14, 1887; Mary, May 17, 1888; John, June 16, 1891; and Esther, November 11, 1899. Dallas is a blacksmith and lives in Guerneyville. He married Buelah McElwee and has one son, Harold. Mary married Raymond Thornburg, and lives on a farm in Union township. John married Louise Bevan, and lives on a farm adjoining his father's. Esther is at home.

Prominent as he is in the religious, educational, political and civic life of Clinton county, Enoch L. Carey is a highly-respected and widely-honored citizen. He is a man who has always been straightforward in all of his business dealings, and being possessed of friendly and affable manners has a host of friends in this county, where he is so well known.

DAVID E. SUMMERS.

David E. Summers, a prosperous farmer of Green township, this county, who owns one hundred and fifty-one acres of the old Summers homestead, was born on February 12, 1871, a son of John Jackson and Hannah (Hoskins) Summers, the former of whom was born in Hampshire county, Virginia, on November 21, 1825, and the latter, in Clinton county, Ohio, in October, 1827.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Summers were John and Mary Summers, both natives of the Old Dominion state, who in 1837, moved to Franklin county, Ohio, and about eighteen months later to Leesburg, Highland county, Ohio, where they lived until 1825, at which time they removed to Green township, this county. John Summers died in Henry county, Ohio, his wife having died previously on the old home farm in this county. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Summers were George and Mary (Hodgson) Hoskins, pioneers in Clinton county, where both died. John J. Summers was a farmer and a carpenter by occupation. In 1840 he purchased a farm of one hundred acres in Green township, for twelve hundred dollars, and, and there he lived for about fifteen years. He traded the land for a farm near Wilmington, but he never moved to this second farm, afterwards exchanging it for a farm in Green township, consisting of two hundred acres, on which farm he died on April 1, 1907. His wife's death occurred on August 5, 1900. John J. Summers was a Republican and a member of the Methodist Protestant church. He and his wife were the parents of fourteen children, namely: Wesley, living in Illinois; Mary Elizabeth, a resident of Sedgwick City, Kansas; Samantha, of Wayne township; Caroline, deceased, as are Eliza and Ella; Ruth, a resident of Kansas; Lewis and John, both deceased; Joseph, of Green township, this county; Ida, of Green township; Margaret, a resident of Trumbull county, Ohio; David, living on the home farm, the immediate subject of this review, and Isaac, who is the owner of one hundred acres of land in Green township, where he is living.

David E. Summers was reared on the home farm, which he now owns. He received his education in the public schools of Green township, and after leaving school took up farming for himself, and is engaged in general farming and stock raising, in which he has made a very gratifying success.

On February 11, 1890, David E. Summers was married to Lina Rolston, who was born in this county on August 29, 1871, a daughter of Robert and Anna (Wallace) Rolston, both natives of Ireland, who came to Clinton county, after their marriage, and after the birth of four children in the old country. They now live retired in Green township. Mr. and Mrs. David E. Summers are the parents of four children: Carrie, born on January 10, 1891, is the wife of Alonzo Curtis, and they have two children, Donald and Charles Glenn; Eva, August 26, 1898, married Clyde Steele, and they are living with Mr. and Mrs. Summers; Mary, who died in infancy, and Martha May, May 15, 1900, who is at home with her parents.

David E. Summers is a Republican and prominent in the local counsels of his party. Mr. and Mrs. Summers and family are members of the Christian church.

W. F. HILDEBRECHT.

One of the former large land holders of this county, and a man well known during his life-time was Rudolph Frederick William Hildebrecht, who was a native of Germany having been born in the city of Berlin on February 4, 1848. His parents were Theodore and Henrietta Hildebrecht, both natives of Germany, who, in 1849, crossed the ocean in order to find their home in the New World, of which they had heard wonderful accounts. Landing in New York, they soon decided to come West, and remained in Cincinnati until 1873, in which year they came to this county, locating in Vernon township, where they bought two hundred and sixty-five acres of farm land, and there they made their home. To this farm they later added, by purchase, thirty-two acres, making two hundred and ninety-seven acres in all. In 1896, the family moved back to Cincinnati, where, five years later, Theodore Hildebrecht died, at the age of seventy-five. The following year, his wife passed away, she being at that time seventy-one years of age. Theodore Hildebrecht was a cabinetmaker and during his residence at Cincinnati was foreman of the Mitchell & Raumelsburg Furniture Manufacturing Company. He voted the Republican ticket. Both he and his good wife were members of the Lutheran church. Their children were Rudolph F. W. (deceased), Matilda, Otto, Lena and Theodore, the latter of whom died in infancy.

Rudolph F. W. Hildebrecht was reared and educated in Cincinnati. When it came time for him to select an occupation, he became a blacksmith, adopting that vocation byfore he was of age. During the Civil War he was engaged in shoeing government horses, later taking employment with the George Miller Carriage Company at Cincinnati. During a time of business depression, he left this employment and, taking his blacksmith hammer, started to travel through Mexico and South America. He was gone for nearly two years, during which time he traveled over almost all of the southern continent. Upon the removal of his parents to this county in 1873, he accompanied them and the rest of his life was spent here. In the year 1897 he bought the home farm in Vernon township, later adding thirty-two acres to the same, and it was there that he passed away in 1902. His widow still lives on the farm. She was, before her marriage to Mr. Hildebrecht, Clara Reuter, who was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, on January 27, 1854, daughter of Rudolph and Minnie Reuter, both natives of Germany, who located in Cincinnati about the year 1851, living there the remainder of their lives. Their children were Frederick, Minnie, Clara and an infant, of whom only Clara is living.

Rudolph Hildebrecht allied himself with the Republican party. He was much interested in school affairs, and was for several years, treasurer of the school board. He was interested also in the purposes and work of secret orders, and was a member of the Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias, having attained the encampment degree of the first-named order.

Mr. and Mrs. Hildebrecht were blessed with a large family of children, whose subsequent history may be of interest to the reader. Robert, who was born in 1874, was educated in the public schools of Clarksville. His wife was before her marriage Florence Starr. She is now a widow, her husband having died on June 13, 1914. Their only child is Carroll LeRoy.

The second child born to Mr. and Mrs. Hildebrecht was William F., born on June 6, 1876. He was educated in the Clarksville schools and was graduated from the high school. Since taking up farming as an occupation, he has been very successful, owning seventy-nine acres of splendid farm land. His prominence in political affairs is indicated by the number of official positions he has held of a more or less political nature, all of which offices he has held as a Republican. He is at present clerk and treasurer of the school board, and has been a member of the Republican central committee of Vernon township, as well as trustee of the same township, and trustee of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows Cemetery Association. He is a member of the Odd Fellows lodge at Clarksville, having joined that order ten years ago; is a member of the encampment at Wilmington and of the Knights of Pythias at Clarksville. For eight years he has been secretary of the Odd Fellows lodge at Clarksville. On August 10, 1888, William F. Hildebrecht was married to Mary Winfield, of Adams township, and to this union four children have been born, Dewey, Rudolph, Louise and Herschel.

The third child of the Hildebrecht household was Henrietta, who was born in 1878, and who lived to be only four years of age. The next born was Emma, who was born in 1880. She is now the wife of Albert Urton, son of Thomas Urton, of Blanchester, this county, having married soon after her graduation from the Clarksville high school. The next child born in the Hildebrecht family was Florence, the year of whose birth is 1883. She, too, graduated from the Clarksville high school, after which she studied bookkeeping at Dayton, Ohio. She then went to Washington, D. C., entered Garfield hospital as a student nurse, graduated from that institution, and is now nursing in Chicago. After his high school course was completed, Theodore Henry, born in 1885, became a merchant in Texas, and later went to Dakota and Wisconsin. At one time, he was a thresher, working with Albert Urton in this county and Warren county. He died in 1912 at Blanchester, and was buried with honors by the Free Masons and the Odd Fellows, to both of which orders he was attached. Frederick Rudolph Hildebrecht was born in 1889, and after completing the course of study in the Clarksville high school, entered a business college at Cincinnati. He lives at present in Dakota. Clara M., who was born on October 24, 1898, spent her childhood and youth in Clarksville, where she was graduated from the high school, winning the scholarship to Cedarville College. She is now living at home with her mother.

It is rare indeed that parents of so large a family of children find it possible to give their children the educational advantages which Mr. and Mrs. Hildebrecht gave to theirs. And it is a matter of common observation that often when the means are available, the desire for intellectual attainment is lacking. Therefore it would seem that in this home, there was much in the early training and in the general atmosphere to encourage the pursuit of studies beyond the usual curriculum, for both ambition and studious habits are evident mental characteristics of the entire family. The mother took enough time from arduous household duties to teach her little brood to read good books, and thus very early encourage those mental habits which afterwards made it possible for her children to attain scholarship which reflected credit upon their home and their parents, as well as upon themselves. Mr. and Mrs. Hildebrecht gave their children an inheritance which cannot be estimated except in spiritual values; and in so doing, they gave also to the community of the richness of their lives. They found their best work in enriching the lives of their children, and of them it may be said as of others, "Blessed is that man who has found his work." Mr. Hildebrecht, as a public official was honorable and square in all of his dealings, winning not only the respect of those with whom he came in contact, but also their regard, for he was strong, and at the same time, kind. He was of a genial nature, and conscientious in all that he undertook to do. The schools, under his tenure of office, improved in efficiency, and to them he gave his best thought and effort. The community owes him a debt of gratitude for his efficient public service.

JAMES CHRISTOPHER WEBB.

As with growing civilization and increasing limitations upon individual initiative, the problem of living becomes more and more complex, the term "self-made" becomes a badge of honor, and he who wears it an object of emulation. He who has achieved a successful and honorable career out of difficulty, has worked while others have slept, and to him should come unstinted reward and praise. A brief study of the life of James Christopher Webb will reveal the fact that from early childhood, it was his purpose to succeed; and that in order to do so, he was willing to forego some of the pleasures and many of the extravagances which in so many lives prove the rock on which their boat is wrecked.

James C. Webb was born in Fayette county, Ohio, on December 14, 1869, the son of John Wesley and Elizabeth (Bonecutter) Webb, both of whom were born in above-named county. John W. Webb was the son of Burt Webb, who was born in Virginia, as was his wife, who was a Redish. Burt Webb and his wife were early settlers in Fayette county, Ohio. The former passed away near Sabina, this county, while the latter died near Washington, in Fayette county. Mr. Webb's maternal grandparents, Christopher and Charlotte (Heffley) Bonecutter, both were natives of Ohio and early settlers in Fayette county. John W. Webb was reared in and attended school in the county of his nativity, and was a farmer all of his life. He voted the Republican ticket, attended the Methodist Episcopal church, and was the father of eight children, May Jane, Annie, Armanda, James Christopher, Oliver, William Edward, Harvey, Charles Thomas. He died in June, 1912, and his widow makes her home with her children.

The early training of James C. Webb was not different from that of other youths who were born and reared on a farm, and his first venture in the outside world only served to confirm his love of the life and wholesome work of the farm. After five years as an employee of the street railway company at Erie, Pennsylvania, he went to Greene county in 1874, later coming to this county, where he bought the farm which he now owns, this consisting of one hundred and five acres in Vernon township. He then went to Erie, Pennsylvania, to work for the street car company, and returned to his farm in 1910, since which time he has made many improvements and has become well-known as a breeder of Duroc-Jersey swine.

In 1899 James C. Webb was united in marriage to Mary Stewart, who was born near Waterford, Pennsylvania, on October 4, 1866, daughter of Aaron and Rebecca (Gillespie) Stewart, both natives of Belfast, Ireland. After living for some time in Erie county, Pennsylvania, the Stewarts moved to Highland county, Ohio, where Mrs. Stewart died in 1871. Mr. Stewart then went to Wilmington, Ohio, and the rest of his life was spent there, his death occurring in 1896. Their children were Robert, John, William, Mary, Aaron (deceased), and Victor. Mr. Stewart married again and to the second union five children were born, Rosa, Lee, George, Ida and Charles (decesaed).

Mr. Webb is a Democrat and is a member of the Methodist Protestant church. It is such painstaking work as his that commends itself to the student of human nature and human affairs. Mr. Webb was willing, in order to get his start in life, to work by the day for six years; and for two years he worked by the month, thus laying the foundation for a later life of thrift and industry which should result in land ownership. He has taken great pride in the scientific development of his land, and is respected and esteemed by all who have the pleasure of knowing him.

SEYMOUR CURTIS MORRIS.

Among the many small, intensively cultivated farms in Washington township, this county, few receive more careful attention than that which is owned by S. C. Morris, one of the best-known farmers of that township. Having given close study to modern methods of intensive farming, Mr. Morris is obtaining results from the cultivation of his small farm which are proving not only personally gratifying to himself, but which offer an excellent object lesson to others who, perhaps, are getting fewer returns from a much larger acreage. In addition to his farm in Washington township, this county, where he makes his home, Mr. Morris also owns a farm of fifty-eight and one-half acres in Jay county, Indiana, where he formerly lived, which now is in the hands of a capable and responsible tenant.

Seymour Curtis Morris was born in Union township, Highland county, Ohio, on December 16, 1860, son of Avery and Lydia (Jackson) Morris, the former born in Adams county, this state, and the latter, in Highland county. Avery Morris was the son of William Morris, a native of Scotland, who emigrated in his young manhood, coming to Ohio and locating in Adams county, where he remained until his removal to this county in 1865. He settled in Washington township, where the rest of his life was spent. William Morris married Depsey Bales, a native of Alabama, who came north with her parents and located in Adams county, Ohio, and to this union several children were born, whose descendants today are numbered among the most substantial residents of this section of the state. William Morris lived to be ninety-eight years of age and was held in high respect hereabout.

Avery Morris, son of William and Depsey (Bales) Morris, was reared in Adams county, this state, and in 1867 began farming in Highland county, later coming to this county, where he became a large land-owner, owning, at the time of his death nearly three hundred and fifty acres of land, about equally divided between two farms in the same vicinity of this county. Avery Morris married Lydia Jackson, daughter of Joseph and Lydia Jackson, early settlers of Highland county, to which union six children were born. Mr. and Mrs. Morris were members of the Christian church and their children were reared in that faith. Additional details regarding this family are set out in a biographical sketch relating to Frank H. Morris, presented elsewhere in this volume.

Seymour Curtis Morris was eight years of age when his parents moved to the Morrisville neighborhood and he received his education in the excellent schools of that village. Upon reaching manhood he moved to Jay county, Indiana, where he bought a farm of fifty-eight and one-half acres, and there he lived for fourteen years, at the end of which time he returned to Clinton county, though still retaining his farm in Indiana, and, in 1905, bought the farm of sixty-two and one-half acres on which he now lives and where he is doing well.

On March 16, 1889, Seymour C. Morris was united in marriage to Flora Haines, who was born near Westboro, in this county, daughter of James Haines and wife, well-known residents of that neighborhood, and to this union one child has been born, a daughter, Leora, who married Harley Batson, a well-known young man of this county. Mr. and Mrs. Morris are members of the Christian church, in the various beneficences of which they are deeply interested in and in which they take an active part, being also concerned in all good works in their community, and are held in the highest regard by all who know them. Mr. Morris is a member of the Masonic lodge at Martinsville and takes a prominent part in the affairs of that order. He is public spirited and energetic and posseses the entire confidence of his neighbors, who hold him in the highest esteem.

FRANK W. HADLEY.

Frank W. Hadley, who for more than a quarter of a century, has been engaged in the mercantile business in Clinton county and who is now the proprietor of a hardware and grocery business at New Vienna and vice-president and director of the New Vienna Bank, was born in Clark township, this county, May 19, 1865, the son of William and Rebecca Jane (Hunt) Hadley, both of whom also were born in Clinton county, the former near Sligo on March 14, 1832, and the latter, near Martinsville.

William Hadley was a farmer and merchant of Wilmington and for many years was in partnership with Mathew Fife. He died in Clark township on October 8, 1900. His wife is also deceased. He was a Republican and he and his wife and family were members of the Friends church. They were the parents of four children, of whom Ida B. died at the age of seventeen years; Emma S. is the wife of S. C. Haines, of Detroit, Michigan; Frank W. is the subject of this sketch and Anna died in infancy. The paternal grandparents of Mr. Hadley were Jonathan and Margaret Hunt, who were early settlers in Clark township, but who later moved to near Richmond, Indiana, where both died.

Born and reared on a farm and educated in the public schools of Clinton county, especially in the Martinsville public schools and in the high school at that place, Frank W. Hadley taught school for several years. Later he attended the Cincinnati College of Pharmacy and was engaged in the drug business at Martinsville, this county, for eleven years, beginning business there in 1890, operating a general store in connection with the drug business. In 1901 he moved to New Vienna and engaged in the hardware and grocery business, his store occupying a double room with a fifty-foot front.

On June 20, 1894, Frank W. Hadley was married to Winna Woodmansee, of New Vienna, daughter of Robert J. and Caroline (Hussey) Woodmansee, to which union one child has been born, Miriam, born on July 4, 1899.

Robert J. Woodmansee, the father of Mrs. Hadley, was born on June 4, 1845, in Highland county, this state, three miles east of New Vienna, where he now lives. He is the son of Joseph and Abigail (Jeffries) Woodmansee, the former of whom was born at Toms River, New Jersey, in 1806 and who died in 1868, and the latter born at the same place. Mrs. Hadley's paternal great-grandparents were Francis and Hannah Woodmansee, natives of Toms River, New Jersey, who migrated to Highland county, Ohio, about 1839, Francis Woodmansee and his only son, Joseph, purchasing land there in partnership. The former engaged in the brick business and erected a magnificent house on the old Woodmansee homestead, which is still standing. Joseph Woodmansee, the father of Robert J., owned sixteen hundred acres of land in Highland county and was a member of the Methodist church. He was educated in New Jersey and after coming to Ohio about 1839, farmed in Highland county the remainder of his life. He owned two hundred and sixty acres of land and a grist-mill at New Vienna for four or five years. He also owned a saw-mill at New Vienna. To Joseph and Abigail (Jeffries)

REV. AND MRS. JESSE H. HARVEY

Woodmansee six children were born, Alice, Francis, Jesse, Adolphus, Robert J. and Alonzo. The family were members of the Methodist church and Joseph Woodmansee voted the Republican ticket. Robert J. Woodmansee has been a farmer all of his life, but has lived most of the time in New Vienna, having gone there with his father in 1859. He owns two hundred acres of land in Highland county, where his son, Brent, now lives. He married Caroline Hussey, daughter of Nathan Hussey, to which union three children were born: Fred, who married Jennie Clark and has one daughter, Jennie May; Brent, who married Maud Hunt, and Mrs. Hadley. Robert J. Woodmansee and wife are members of the Methodist church. He votes the Republican ticket and is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fllows.

Mr. Hadley is also a Republican in politics, but has never aspired to public office. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, including the subordinate and the encampment branches. Mr. and Mrs. Hadley are members of the Methodist church at New Vienna.

REV. JESSE H. HARVEY.

Rev. Jesse H. Harvey is descended from a splendid old Quaker family of Clinton county, whose father was born on the farm now occupied by his worthy son, more than a century ago, and whose grandfather, like so many of the members of the Society of Friends, of one hundred years ago, came to Clinton county from North Carolina. Recorded a minister in the Friends church in 1878, Rev. Jesse H. Harvey has been pastor of the Springfield church since 1895 and is, therefore, well known in Clinton county.

Born on the farm where he now lives in Adams township, April 10, 1849, Rev. Jesse H. Harvey is the son of Isaac and Sarah (Edwards) Harvey, the former of whom also was born on this farm, on November 27, 1809, and who died on August 11, 1883. On November 2, 1831, he was married to Sarah Edwards, who was born on November 10, 1812, the daughter of Nathaniel and Mary (Hadley) Edwards.

The paternal grandparents of Rev. J. H. Harvey were Caleb and Sarah (Towel) Harvey, natives of North Carolina, the former born on December 21, 1776, the year in which the Declaration of Independence for the American colonies was proclaimed, who came to Clinton county in 1806 and located in Adams township, where he owned two or three hundred acres. Caleb and Sarah Harvey were the parents of seven children, namely: Joshua, born on November 24, 1803; Isaac, November 27, 1809; Hannah, June 26, 1806; Elizabeth, November 4, 1816; Doctor Jesse, November 26, 1801; Eli, December 12, 1808, and Rebecca, April 11, 1813. Caleb Harvey, the son of William and Elizabeth (Carter) Harvey, was a very active worker in the Friends church and held all of the important offices in the church. During the late years of his life he was identified with the Republican party.

Of Isaac Harvey it may be said that he received the rudiments of an education in the common schools of Adams township and that he supplemented this education by wide and extensive reading and became a well-informed man. He began farming after reaching maturity and followed this occupation all his life. He owned about two hundred acres of land and a saw-mill which was located on the farm. He took a great interest in the activities of the Friends church and devoted all of his spare time toward promoting the growth of the church. Politically, he was a Republican. Isaac and Sarah Harvey had nine children: Caleb J., born on November 7, 1832; Elizabeth, March 6, 1835; Mary Jane, August 22, 1836, who died on February 11, 1906; Rebecca, July 24, 1839, who died on September 21, 1902; William, May 22, 1841, who died in November, 1913; Nathaniel, June 30, 1843; Abigail, June 11, 1846, who died on June 18, 1846; Jesse H., April 10, 1849; and Enos Francis, February 2, 1853, who died on October 10, 1871. Elizabeth also is deceased.

His education began in the common schools of Adams township and Jesse H. Harvey later attended school at Greensburg, Indiana. After finishing his education, he taught for one year, after which he took up farming in Warren county, where he remained for two years. About 1872 he moved to the old home farm, where he has since followed this occupation and here he owns one hundred and fifteen acres of land.

Rev. Jesse H. Harvey was married on October 20, 1870, to Lucy C. Hadley, who was born on June 22, 1851, the daughter of Simon and Rachel (Bangham) Hadley, to which union four children have been born, one of whom, Olive Etta, died on October 17, 1903. The living children are: Lizzie V., who married William P. Hadley and has six children, Naomi, Willard J., Loren S., Robert E., Olive A. and Wendell Deane; Elsie R., who is at home, and R. Myra, who is also at home.

Before the Civil War was fought, the Society of Friends was opposed to slavery and many members of this denomination joined the Republican party at its formation in 1856. The members of the Friends church, generally speaking, have remained Republican to this day and Rev. Jesse H. Harvey is no exception to the rule.

JAMES E. SMITH.

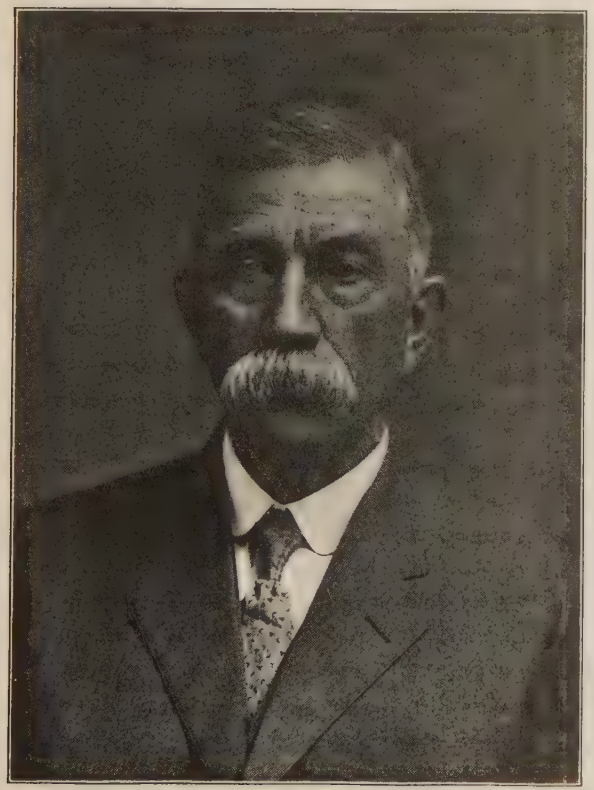
A man's reputation is the property of the world, for the laws of nature have forbidden isolation. Every human being either submits to the controlling influence of others or wields an influence which touches, controls, guides or directs others. If he be honest and successful in his chosen fields, investigation will brighten his fame and point the way along which others may follow with like success. The reputation of James E. Smith, one of the leading citizens of Clinton county, has been of the very highest order and he is today filling one of the responsible positions in this county, having been appointed nearly twenty years ago as superintendent of the Clinton county children's home.

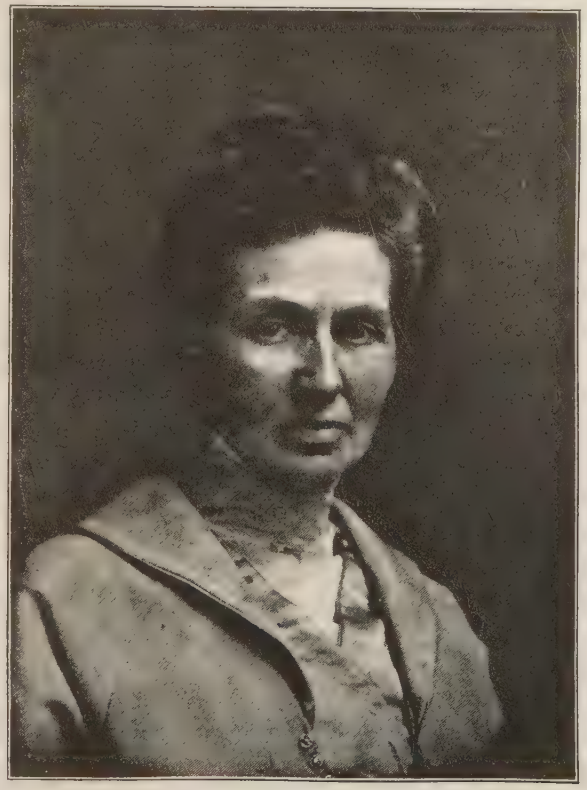
James E. Smith was born on March 27, 1847, at Hawes Chapel, Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of Daniel and Anna Maria (Hartman) Smith, the former of whom was born on April 15, 1809, near Chatham, North Carolina, and died on March 30, 1880, and the latter of whom was born in 1815, in West Virginia, and died in 1888. The parents of Daniel Smith were Conrad and Elizabeth Smith, the former of whom settled on the Smith farm, in Gates' survey, about 1815. Conrad Smith's wife, before her marriage, was Elizabeth McDaniel. They had five children: John, George, Daniel, Abigail and Susanah. John married Mariah Smith, Abigail married Samuel Wingfield, and Susannah married Aquilla Reese. Conrad Smith and his wife were highly-respected residents. Their remains were interred in the cemetery at Lytle's creek. They owned one hundred acres of land at the time of their death.

Anna Maria Hartman was the daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Hartman, who were natives of West Virginia, born about 1820. After coming to Clinton county, they located near Starbucktown, in Union township, where he was a blacksmith. He was tall and a very strong man physically. Late in life he immigrated to Jay county, Indiana, where he purchased a farm. He and his wife died in Jay county. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Daniel Smith was nine months old when the family came to Clinton county, Ohio. He learned the blacksmith's trade and the cooper's trade from Jonathan Doan. Eventually, he purchased the interests of the heirs in his grandfather's farm in Adams township, where he died. Both he and his wife were members of the Friends church. They had five children.

Of these children, Joseph H. Smith, a retired farmer of Wilmington, was a soldier in the Civil War. He enlisted on September 12, 1861, in Company G, Seventeenth Regiment, Ohio Volunter Infantry. This regiment was attached to the First Brigade of the Third Division of the Fourteenth Army Corps, and was mustered out on July 25, 1865, and discharged at Columbus, Ohio. Joseph H. Smith participated in the Grand





MR. AND MRS. JAMES E. SMITH.

Review at Washington, D. C., at the end of the war. He was a sergeant when discharged and had been wounded in the arm by a canister ball during service. Among the engagements in which he participated were the following: Mill Springs, Kentucky, January 19, 1862; Corinth, Mississippi, May 17, 1862; Chickamauga, Georgia, September 19 and 20, 1863; Resaca, Georgia, May 14, 1864; Kenesaw Mountain, Georgia, June 18-24, 1864; Savannah, Georgia, December 21, 1864; and Raleigh, North Carolina, April 13, 1865. Joseph H. Smith was the second child born in his father's family.

The eldest child in the family of Daniel and Anna Mariah Smith was George H., who was a farmer in Vernon township, who was elected sheriff of Clinton county and who died in office. George H. was also a soldier in the same company and regiment as his brother, Joseph, and was in the same engagements. John C. Smith, who died on July 12, 1913, while living in Wilmington, had also served two terms as sheriff of Clinton county and had later served as postmaster. John C. was also a soldier, enlisting in 1863 and serving till the close of the war in the same company and regiment with his brothers. His widow is still living. James E., the fourth child, is the subject of this sketch. Mary E., who was born in 1854, died in 1863.

James E. Smith attended the public schools of Adams township and helped his father on the farm during his boyhood and youth. He also learned the carpenter's trade, remaining at home until his marriage, renting the home farm.

Mr. Smith was appointed superintendent of the Clinton county children's home, September 1, 1896, nearly twenty years ago, and has been continually at the head of this home since that time. The public generally is aware of the responsibility which attaches to a position of this sort. No greater evidence of the standing of James E. Smith in the community where he lives, in Clinton county, could be given than his long tenure in this responsible and delicate position.

In 1909 Mr. Smith purchased fifty-eight acres of land, which he sold in 1914, and he then purchased ninety-six acres in Chester township.

On November 29, 1877, James E. Smith was married to Mary E. Osborn, a native of Adams township, born in 1856, the daughter of Peter and Eliza Ann Osborn, both of whom are deceased. He was a farmer and a minister in the society of Friends. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were married on Thanksgiving Day. They have had two children, both of whom are living; Ella, born in 1879, who married Robert White, a resident of Union township; and Lena, born in 1882, who married Levi M. Hawkins, and lives on her father's farm in Chester township.

Aside from his present position of trust and responsibility, Mr. Smith at one time served for six years as township trustee of Union township. He is identified with the Republican party and he and his family are members of the Friends church. Mr. Smith is an elder in the church.

HENRY MOLYNEAUX BROWN, M. D.

Dr. Henry Molyneaux Brown, a well-equipped and popular young physician of New Vienna, this county, is the son of a distinguished physician of Clinton county, who has been in the practice of medicine at New Vienna since his graduation from the Hahnemann Medical College at Philadelphia in March, 1879. Henry Molyneaux Brown, after being graduated from the New Vienna high school, took a preparatory medical course at the University of Cincinnati and was graduated from the Ohio Miami Medical College in 1913. Afterwards he spent one year as an interne in the Jewish hospital at Cincinnati and on July 1, 1914, established himself in the practice of medicine in his home town, where he has already acquired a flourishing practice. He is a member of the Clinton County Medical Society, the Ohio State Medical Society and the American Medical Association, and is popular in Clinton county, a young man for whom a fine future is predicted. He is a member of the Masonic lodge at New Vienna.

Henry M. Brown was born on March 13, 1890, in New Vienna and reared in that city. He is the son of Dr. Edward W. and Olive (Spear) Brown, the former of whom was born at Oxford, in Butler county, Ohio, October 21, 1856, and the latter, near Snow Hill, in Clinton county, the daughter of Washington and Lydia (Roush) Spear. Washington Spear was the son of Zephaniah Spear, a pioneer in this county. Mrs. Lydia Spear is deceased but Washington Spear is still living.

Zephaniah Spear, the grandfather of Mrs. Brown and the great-grandfather of Dr. Henry M. Brown, was born in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, August 12, 1807, the son of Robinson and Elizabeth (Bryan) Spear, natives of Pennsylvania. Robinson Spear was the son of John and Mary Spear, the former of whom immigrated to America when a mere lad and settled in Pennsylvania, where he married a woman of German descent. He lived and died in Pennsylvania, but his widow subsequently came to Ohio with her son, Robinson, and died in Brown county. Robinson Spear grew to manhood and married in Pennsylvania. In 1817 he and his family moved to Ohio and settled first in Ross county. In 1821 they moved to Brown county and in 1827 to Guernsey county, Ohio, where he died in 1850. His wife survived him, passing away in 1873 at the age of ninety-two years. Robinson and Elizabeth (Bryan) Spear were the parents of eleven children, all of whom, except one, grew to maturity, married and settled in life, among these being Zephaniah, Mrs .Elizabeth Oliver, Mrs. Ellen Stewart, Mrs. Jane Ann Willis and Mrs. Prudence Willis. Zephaniah was the third child born to his parents. He followed the blacksmith's trade for ten years and afterwards engaged in farming. He was married on September 20, 1829, to Lovina Matthews, a daughter of Joel and Phoebe Matthews, natives of North Carolina. Nine children were born to this union, of whom six grew to maturity: Mary Jane, the wife of M. L. Turner; Washington; Margaret, the wife of William Boatwright; Thompson; James A. and Jefferson D. Washington Spear became the father of Mrs. Olive Brown. Starting in life without a dollar of capital, Zephaniah Spear became the owner of four hundred acres of land and was one of the substantial farmers of Clinton county. He served as trustee and treasurer of Green township for several years and was a member of the Christian church. Mrs. Lovina (Matthews) Spear died on March 14, 1875, in her sixty-fourth year. Washington Spear and Lydia Roush, daughter of George and Rachel Roush, of Highland county, were married on December 1, 1859, and were the parents of three children, Ivy, Olive and Ellsworth.

Dr. Edward W. Brown is the son of Samuel R. and Sarah (Duval) Brown, the former of whom was a native of County Antrim, Ireland, and the latter of Highland county, Ohio. Dr. Edward W. Brown's grandparents were Allen and Margaret Brown, natives of Ireland, the former of Scotch-Irish descent and the latter of French Huguenot descent. In the days of the French persecution, there was a family of Huguenots by the name of Molyneaux, all of whom were killed except two sons, John and William, who hung out of the windows by their hands and by that means were unobserved by the soldiers. Subsequently, they escaped to the sea coast and secreted themselves in a vessel that was about to set sail, they knew not where; but they were landed in Ireland, probably at Belfast. From one of these brothers, Mrs. Margaret Brown was descended. She was a lady of splendid education and attainments and possessed a remarkably strong and active mind. About 1824 Allen Brown, with his family, immigrated to America and located at Point Pleasant, Clermont county, Ohio. After a few years of residence there, they moved to Highland county, Ohio, where Buford now stands, on the old Cincinnati and Chillicothe stage route. There Allen Brown erected a large two-story log house in which he kept a tavern, where he resided until his death at the age of eighty-four years. His wife survived him several years and died in her eighty-fifth year. Allen Brown was a man of great energy and did a prosperous business in his tavern. He also had a farm of three hundred acres of fine land. He and his wife were the parents of five sons and one daughter. Four sons were living in 1882, Judge Thomas, John, who lived on the old home place, James and William. Samuel R., the father of Dr. Edward W. Brown, was about seven years old when the family moved to Ohio, and, being the eldest in the family, grew up under the sturdy influences of pioneer life. He was a playmate in the Brown county home of General Grant. Later he entered the mercantile business at Buford, where he acquired a prosperous business. He married Sarah Duval, the daughter of Judge John Duval and, after continuing in business at Buford for several years, exchanged his store and stock of goods for three hundred acres of land. After one year's residence on his farm, he moved to Oxford, Ohio, where he again entered the mercantile business in partnership with a Mr. Newton, under the firm name of Newton & Brown this partnership continuing until 1864, when Mr. Brown moved to Hillsboro, having sold out his interest in the store to Mr. Newton, and resided there till 1869, when he returned to his farm. He owned a farm of six hundred acres, having added three hundred acres by purchase while at Oxford. He erected one of the largest and finest barns in the county and a fine, commodious house. He died suddenly of heart disease on December 22, 1881, in his sixty-fifth year and, at his death, there passed away one of the substantial and honorable business men of Brown county; one whose character and integrity stood untarnished. His wife died on December 13, 1880. They were the parents of eight children, seven of whom grew to maturity, namely: Mrs. Maggie Sinks, John A., Anna, who married Dr. S. S. Salisbury, of Los Angeles, California; Charles E., Edward W., James D. and Mary Belle.

Edward W. Brown assisted his father in business until sixteen years of age, receiving a limited common-school education. He attended the high school at Hillsboro for two years and then worked on the farm until nineteen years of age, after which he began the study of medicine in the office of Dr. S. S. Salisbury, at Washington C. H., later entering Hahnemann Medical College at Philadelphia, from which he was graduated, after which he began the practice of his profession at New Vienna, where he has continued ever since. To Dr. Edward W. and Olive (Spear) Brown four children have been born, namely: Bernice L., born on April 3, 1883, who died in August, 1913; Howard E., June 20, 1885, who was graduated from the New Vienna high school and is now located at Frankfort, in Ross county, this state, where he is the manager of the telephone plant; Helen Duval, who is now a student at Ohio University at Athens, and Dr. Henry M., the immediate subject of this sketch.

JOHN J. GEORGE.

John J. George, joint owner of a farm of one hundred and twenty acres in Adams township, this county, is another one of the successful sons of Nicholas George, and was born February 25, 1879, in Perry county, Indiana. He has succedeed in accumulating a most satisfactory competence by his own toil and his own frugal living.

Mr. George's parents were Nicholas and Catherine (Lawrence) George, the former of whom was born in 1836, at Hachy, Belgium, and who died on July 12, 1890. The mother was born in Belgium ni 1840, and was a daughter of Lewis Joseph and Antonetta (Spewizer) Lawrence, who came with their family to America in 1855 and located in Perry county, Indiana.

Educated in the common schools of Belgium, Nicholas George left his native land for America when a young man, and after arriving in this country, settled in Iowa, from which state he enlisted as a soldier in the Union army during the Civil War, serving a little more than three years. At the close of the war he located in Perry county, Indiana, where his marriage occurred. Eight children were born to Nicholas George and wife, of whom John J. was the sixth in order of birth, the others being, Peter, Lewis, Sarah, Edward, Jane, Mary and August. Sarah became the wife of Paul Clements. Edward is a farmer of Adams township. Jane is the wife of Frank Kibler. Mary died at the age of eight years, and August married Ethel Tuttle.

The paternal grandparents of John J. George were Peter and Margaret (Devillez) George, both of whom were natives of Belgium, the former born at Hachy in 1804, and the latter born at Nobresart, June 2, 1804. The grandfather died in 1882, the grandmother dying four years later in 1886. The latter was a daughter of Henry Devillez, who married a Miss Hannen. Peter George was a son of Henry and Mary (Adam) George, the former of whom was a native of Nobresart, Belgium. Henry and Mary (Adam) George never left their native land.

John J. George, who has achieved a definite and satisfactory measure of success in agricultural lines, received his early education in the common schools of Perry county, Indiana, and after his removal to Clinton county, he attended the township schools of Wayne township. He began life on his own responsibility as a farmer in Wayne township, where he remained until 1906, when he and his brother, Peter, purchased a farm in Adams township, Clinton county, comprising one hundred and twenty acres, where John J. now lives, and where he is engaged in general farming and stock raising.

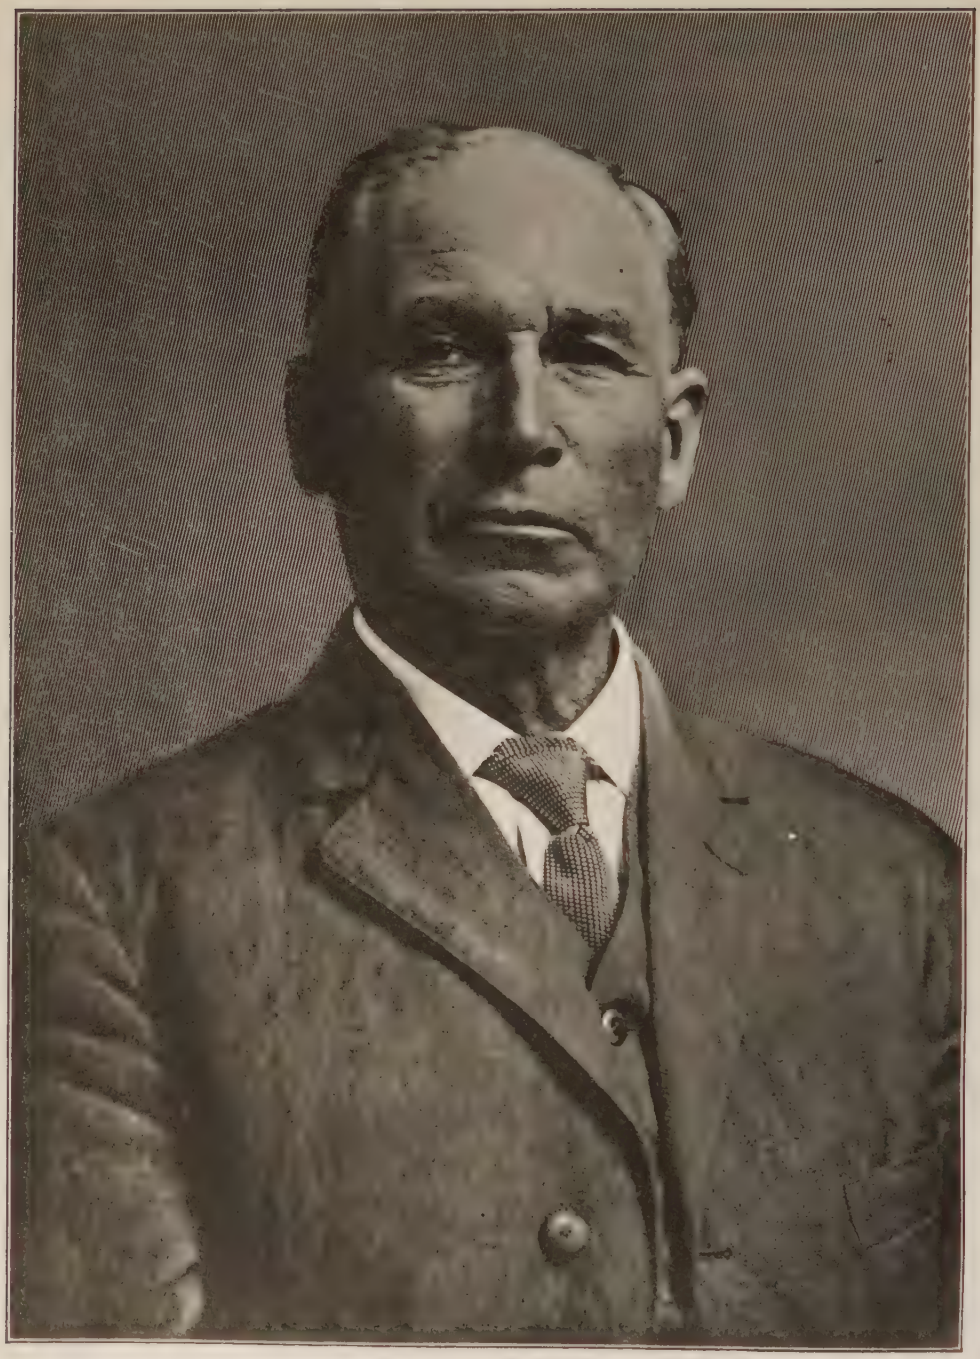
On November 25, 1903, John J. George was married to Magdalena Mahoney, who was born on October 26, 1878, daughter of Cornelius and Margaret Mahoney, and to this union have been born five children, Dorothy, Matthew, Mary E., Elizabeth and Lauretta. The George family are earnest and devout members of the Catholic church, in whose faith they are deeply interested. Politically, Mr. George is a Democrat.

PETER D. LEAMING.

No product of agriculture has ever come from Clinton county which has had more to do with the revolution in corn growing in the state of Ohio and, in fact, in the Middle West, than Leaming's corn, which was originated by the late Jacob Spicer Leaming, father of Peter D. Leaming, the subject of this sketch. The tremendous influence of this splendid variety is realized when the claim is considered that practically all of the yellow corn grown in the United States today has been developed from the variety known as Leaming. Whether this is true or not, it is a fact that the corn bearing this name is more widely distributed than any other variety. Careful inquiry through agricultural colleges and experiment stations and through farmers, warrants the statement that from twenty to thirty per cent. of the yellow corn grown in the corn belt is of the Leaming variety, while if that grown under local names, but which is undoubtedly of Leaming origin, is considered, the per cent. would be even larger.

The history of the origin of this variety is an interesting story. One autumn in 1855 the father of Peter D. Leaming was driving in his wagon along Bullskin run, in Hamilton county, and, having neglected to bring feed with him for his horses, stopped at a wayside corn field and asked the men husking in the field to sell sufficient corn for this purpose. He was so much impressed with the beautiful yellow color of the corn and also with the maturity, as indicated by its sound, hard condition, that when leaving he took with him a bushel of this corn for seed. The following year he moved with his family to Clinton county, purchasing a farm two miles from Wilmington, where he lived until his retirement in 1884. The corn which he had brought with him from Hamilton county was planted in the spring of 1856. As the consequence of a favorable season and painstaking cultivation it yielded an excess of one hundred bushels to the acre. This was a phenomenal yield for that day and the fame of "Leaming's corn" was spread broadcast.

In a large measure Peter D. Leaming, who was born on November 18, 1856, on the farm where he now lives, on the Martinsville pike, in Union township, has inherited the fame which his father richly earned as a corn grower. His father was born on April 2,



PETER D. LEAMING.

RESIDENCE OF PETER D. LEAMING.

1815, and died on May 12, 1885. His mother, who, before her marriage, was Lydia Ann Van Middlesworth, was a native of New Jersey, born on November 1, 1817. She died on March 21, 1890.

The parents of Jacob Spicer Leaming were Christopher and Margaret Leaming, who came to Ohio from Cape May county, New Jersey, early in the last century. The family is of English origin. The first of the name to arrive in America was a Christopher Leaming, who came to Boston in 1670. Later the family moved to Long Island and still later to New Jersey, where it became prominent in provincial history. Christopher Leaming, II, the father of Christopher Leaming, who immigrated to Ohio, and grandfather of J. S. Leaming, served for twenty years as a member of the provincial assembly. Christopher Leaming, III, was much more than an average farmer, and as early as 1825 his son, Jacob, a lad of ten years, was acquiring corn inspiration through the medium of a hoe handle in the Langdon bottoms along the Little Miami river in Hamilton county.

The parents of Jacob Spicer Leaming's wife were Tunis and Ellen Van Middlesworth, both natives of New Jersey, and of Dutch descent. About 1825 they removed by wagon to Hamilton county, Ohio, purchasing a farm at the edge of Cincinnati. Tunis Van Middlesworth owned a large farm between what is now East Norwood and Oakley, suburbs of Cincinnati. They had ten children.

Jacob Spicer Leaming attended the district schools and obtained a good education, after which he taught school for a time. He became a great reader and an able writer. At the beginning of his active career he rented a farm and operated a bus line between Madison and Cincinnati. In the spring of 1856, as heretofore noted, he removed to Clinton county and rented a farm from his elder half-brother, Christopher Leaming, in Union township. Later he purchased the farm of one hundred and twenty-five acres from his brother and still later added to the farm until he owned one hundred and sixty-five acres. Subsequently, he purchased fifty-three acres additional on the edge of Wilmington, and there spent the last years of his life. He was prominent in the politics of his day and generation and served as township trustee for some time. Both he and his wife were members of the Methodist church.

The name of Jacob Spicer Leaming will go down in the history of Clinton county as the most noted corn producer in the United States. He soon began shipping seed corn to all parts of the United States. His son, Peter D., and the latter's brother, J. S. Leaming, Jr., still continue this industry. In 1884 Jacob S. Leaming received a large silver medal as first prize for seed corn awarded at the Paris corn show. In 1900 Peter D. Leaming received a fine bronze medal at the Paris Exposition for his seed corn.

Peter D. Leaming, early in life, learned the principles of the proper selection of seed corn from his father, and has been able to carry on the industry successfully since his father's death. Jacob S. built the second pike ever constructed in Clinton county. In 1869 he contracted for and built three miles of the Martinsville pike and in 1870 he built five miles of the Cuba pike. He was considered a nexcellent road builder.

Jacob and Lydia Ann (Van Middlesworth) Leaming had nine children, namely: Tunis, lives in Ft. Wayne, Indiana, where he is a farmer; Christopher, lives in East Norwood, Ohio, and is also a farmer; Eli, is a resident of Columbus, Ohio, and is a carpenter; Ella, married Thomas M. Babb, and is deceased; Jacob, lives in Denison, Texas, where he is a gardener and truck farmer; Joseph, lives at New Burlington, Ohio; Jennie, lives in Dayton, Ohio; Peter D., was the eighth child; George S., is a resident of Albuquerque, New Mexico, where he is in the dairy business and engaged in truck gardening.

Peter D. Leaming attended the Burtonville district school and grew up on the farm. After his father moved to Wilmington he worked the farm on the shares and after his father's death he purchased the home place, going heavily into debt, but he has paid the indebtedness off and is now financially independent. He is a genial, business-like, up-to-date farmer.

In 1899 Mr. Leaming built his present splendid home. It is an attractive place and one of which he has every reason to be very proud. He set out the pretty trees that decorate the place. He carries on general farming, but still makes a specialty of raising and selling Leaming seed corn.

On December 2, 1890, Peter D. Leaming was married to Emma Skimming, who was born near Burtonville, in Union township, Clinton county, and who is the daughter of Robert and Mary E. Skimming, whose complete family history is contained in the sketch of S. H. Skimming, a brother of Mrs. Leaming, presented elsewhere in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Leaming have had two children, Grace Anna and Robert Russell.

Mr. and Mrs. Leaming are members of the Baptist church of Wilmington. Mr. Leaming is a Republican. In a very large measure Peter D. Leaming has carried forward the work of his worthy father, whose name was presented "as the first candidate for Ohio Farmers' Hall of Fame."

ISAAC R. SUMMERS.

Isaac R. Summers, a native of Green township, this county, and a prosperous farmer and stockman, was born on January 28, 1875, a son of John Jackson and Hannah (Hoskins) Summers, natives of Hampshire county, Virginia, and Clinton county, Ohio, respectively, the former born on November 21, 1825, and the latter in October, 1827.

Mr. Summers' paternal grandparents were John Wesley and Mary (Parks) Summers, both natives of the Old Dominion state. In 1837 they migrated to Franklin county, Ohio, and eighteen months later removed to Leesburg, in Highland county, where they lived until about 1845, when they removed to Green township, this county. John Wesley Summers died in Henry county, Ohio, while his wife died on the old home farm in Green township. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Summers were George and Mary (Hodgson) Hoskins, pioneers of this county, who spent most of their lives here.

The late John Jackson Summers was a farmer and carpenter by occupation, and also a minister in the Methodist Protestant church. In the early forties he bought one hundred acres of land in Green township, for twelve hundred dollars. He lived on that farm for about fifteen years, and then traded it for a farm near Wilmington. He never lived on the latter farm, however, trading it for a farm in Green township, consisting of two hundred acres. Later he sold fifty acres of the third farm, and died on that place in April, 1907. His wife had died previously, August 25, 1900. Politically, John J. Summers was a Republican, and took an active interest in local public affairs. John J. Summers and wife were the parents of fourteen children, namely: Wesley, a resident of California; Mary Elizabeth, living at Sedgwick City, Harvey county, Kansas; Samantha, a resident of Wayne township; Caroline, Eliza and Ella, deceased; Ruth, living in Kansas; Lewis and John, deceased; Joseph, a resident of Green township; Ida, of Washington township; Margaret, living in Trumbull county, Ohio; David E., living on the home farm, and Isaac R.

Isaac R. Summers was reared on the old home farm in Green township, and received a good education in the common schools of his home neighborhood. Mr. Summers owns one hundred acres of land which he purchased on February 5, 1904, and where he has lived since that date. Not only is he engaged in general farming, but he is an extensive stock breeder, and has specialized in Shorthorn cattle.

On June 21, 1894, Isaac R. Summers was married to Sophronia Jarrells, who was born in Wayne township, this county, on May 5, 1877, a daughter of Benjamin and Sally (Massey) Jarrells, natives of Orange county, Virginia, and Highland county, Ohio, respectively. The former came from the Old Dominion state and was married after coming to Ohio. He and his wife settled in Richland township, this county, but later moved to Wayne township, where Benjamin Jarrells died on April 12, 1900. His widow is now living at Lee's Creek, this county.

To Isaac E. and Sophronia (Jarrells) Summers three children have been born, Lottie, born on March 12, 1897, who died on January 3, 1900; Winnie Ellen, January 23, 1902, and Martha Hannah, November 21, 1904.

Mr. Summers is a Republican but has never taken a very active part in politics, his agricultural interests demanding all his time and attention. He and his wife are earnest and devoted members of the Christian church.

JOHN W. MATTHEWS.

John W. Matthews, a retired farmer of New Vienna, this county, a former mayor of New Vienna and at present a justice of the peace in that township, is descended from pioneer stock. He is prominent in the fraternal circles of this county and, more than all else, he and his wife have reared a family of eight children to honorable and useful lives; young men and women who have been well educated and who are already started on successful careers. Three of Mr. Matthews' sons are attorneys in Cincinnati, one is a dentist in that city and still another is a practicing physician at New Vienna.

John W. Matthews was born in this county on December 27, 1850, the son of Elijah H. and Ellen (Elliott) Matthews, the former of whom was born in Highland county, Ohio, on October 20, 1826, and the latter, in Clinton county, on November 28, 1832. Elijah H. Matthews died in Clinton county on December 13, 1904, and his wife many years previously, December 9, 1890.

Elijah H. Matthews was the son of John and Mary Matthews, the former of whom was a native of North Carolina and the latter of Tennessee. John Matthews was the son of John and Rebecca Matthews, natives of North Carolina, of Scotch descent. They emigrated from North Carolina to Ohio and settled near New Market, in Highland county, in 1807. One year later they located four miles north of Hillsboro, on Clear creek, and there spent the rest of their lives. John Matthews, the father of Elijah H., was born in March, 1774, and after his marriage in Highland county, located on his father's farm, where he remained through life. He and his wife were the parents of ten children, seven sons and three daughters, among whom John, Albert G., Christopher, Elijah, Joel, Susan, who married a Mr. Brown, Mrs. Mary Chapman and Mrs. Eliza Jane Hicks, of Kansas, all long since deceased. John Matthews was a prominent man in Highland county. He served as county commissioner two terms and as associate judge of the county for twenty-one years, having been elected three consecutive terms of seven years each. He died in August, 1848, at the age of seventy-four years and his wife in April, 1864, at the age of seventy-four. Elijah H. Matthews was married on January 25, 1849, to Ellen Elliott, daughter of William and Susan Elliott, early settlers of Clinton county, who were married, lived and died in this county. They were the parents of four children, Thomas G., who resides in Mercer county, Ohio; William; Ellen; and Eliza Jane, who married Valentine Cox, of Van Wert county. Mr. and Mrs. Elijah H. Matthews had ten children: John W., the subject of this sketch; Susan, who was born on May 29, 1853, and married Levi West, both now deceased; Mary Elizabeth, June 20, 1857, married David Matthews; Sarah E., October 7, 1859, married Lafayette West; Kate G., February 10, 1862, married Abraham Frazier, both now deceased; Rachel Ann, April 13, 1864, married W. B. Steele; Ollie M., June 10, 1869, married William Hardy; Clara E., December 25, 1870, deceased, and Oscar L., December 28, 1874, married Lucy Curtis. Until 1850 Elijah H. Matthews resided in Highland county and then moved to Clinton county, locating four miles northeast of Wilmington, where he lived a few years, then moved several times and finally died at New Vienna. He had lived about twenty years near Centerville, where he owned a farm of three hundred acres. When a young man, Elijah H. Matthews and his brother, Christopher, had managed a general store in Buford, Highland county. At the time of his death, he owned several hundred acres of land. He was mayor of New Vienna two years, justice of the peace ten years, township trustee, assessor of the third division of Clinton county, and a member of the Masonic fraternity. Mr. and Mrs. Elijah H. Matthews were members of the Christian church.

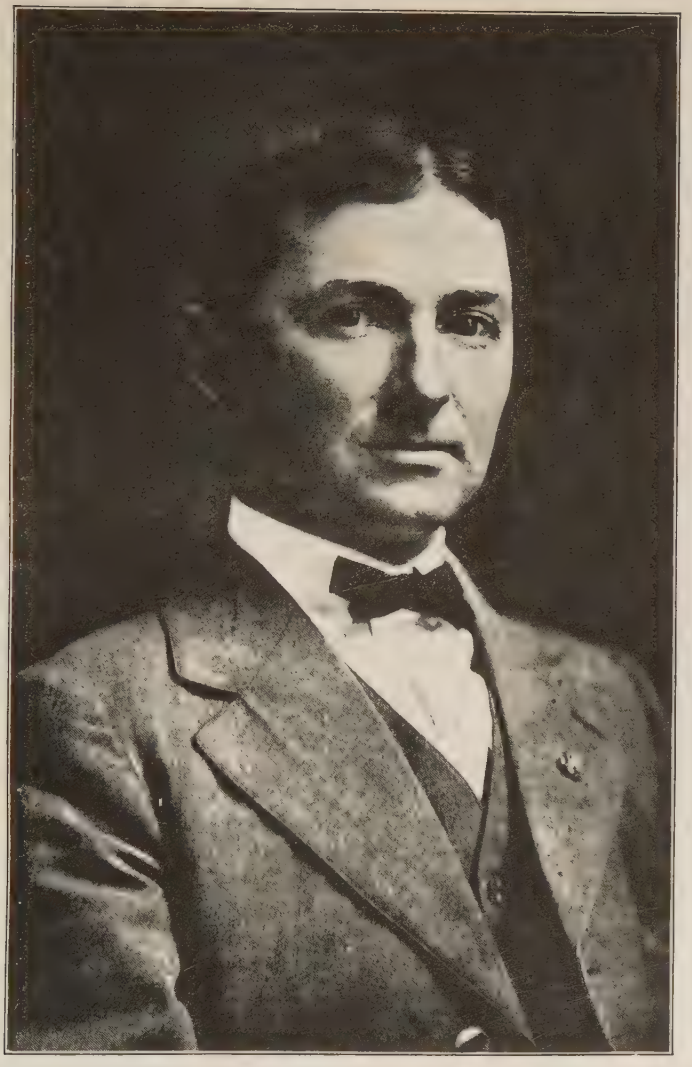
John W. Matthews was reared on a farm and educated in the public schools. For twenty-four years he was a resident of Wayne township, where he was engaged in farming and contracting, during which time he served as trustee and justice of the peace, having been elected as a Democrat. In 1903 he moved to New Vienna, where he has since lived. Mr. Matthews owns one hundred and forty-six acres of land, one and one-half miles from New Vienna. He was married in 1870 to Olive Pierce, a native of Clinton county and the daughter of Thomas and Eliza J. (McFadden) Pierce, both now deceased. Thomas Pierce was a well-known attorney at Wilmington, this county. To this union eight children have been born, Dr. W. T., Emma, Sylvia, Edna, Stanley, Elijah H., John W. and Albert. Dr. W. T. Matthews was born on August 7, 1871, was graduated from the Cincinnati Medical College of Ohio in 1901 and has been in the active practice of medicine since that time. After spending two years at Millidgeville, in Fayette county, he located at New Vienna, this county. He married Blanche Miller and they have one son, Charles. Emma Matthews, born on September 30, 1872, married J. E. Bernard, of Wilmington, and has six children. Sylvia Matthews, born on June 23, 1874, married Henry Rhonemus, of Wayne township. Edna Matthews, born on June 24, 1877, is the widow of L. C. Driscoll and has two children, Edith and John W. Stanley Matthews, born on December 14, 1878, was graduated from the Cincinnati Law School, while President Taft was dean of the college of law. After graduating with honors he entered upon the practice of his profession in Cincinnati. He married Mary Dunham. Elijah Matthews, born on October 16, 1884, was graduated from the law department of Yale University and is a practicing attorney in Cincinnati. He married Lida Dunham. John W. Matthews, born on August 23, 1886, was graduated from the law school of the Cincinnati Young Men's Christian Asociation and is also a practicing attorney in Cincinnati. Albert Matthews, born on September 13, 1889, was graduated from the Ohio Dental College and is a practicing dentist in Cincinnati. Mr. Matthews is a member of the Masonic order, the blue lodge at New Vienna, and a member of the chapter at Hillsboro, Ohio.

There is no family in all Clinton county that is better known, perhaps, than the Matthews family and certainly none is more highly respected.

JOHN B. McKENZIE, M. D.

The life of the distinguished physician and the public-spirited man of affairs presents a striking example of well-defined purpose. Dr. John B. McKenzie, of Oakland, Chester township, Clinton county, Ohio, not only is possessed of well-defined purpose, but also of ability with which he has been able to make that purpose count for the good of his fellow men. Since beginning his practice in Chester township, fifteen years ago, he has acquired a large patronage and a good name, not only in a professional way, but in a private way as well. Endowed with sound mentality and intellectual discipline of a high order which he has supplemented by rigid professional training and thorough mastery of the technique of medicine, he well deserves the substantial practice which has come to him. As a poultry fancier, Doctor McKenzie is also well known, having won many prizes at different shows held in the Middle West.

John B. McKenzie was born on January 18, 1874, at New Antioch, Green township, Clinton county, the son of James and Rebecca (Truitt) McKenzie. His father was born in Green township in 1840 and died in 1876, and his mother was also born in that township. She was the daughter of George W. and Abigail (Applegate) Truitt.



JOHN B. McKENZIE, M. D.

The paternal grandparents of Doctor McKenzie were William and Lucinda (Morton) McKenzie, both natives of Clinton county. He was a farmer in Green township and owned a farm of one hundred and twenty-four acres, to which he devoted his attention. They had six children: Elizabeth Jane, Ellen, James, Charles D., William B. and Mary Emily.

James McKenzie was educated in the common schools of Green township and was a young man when the Civil War broke out. He enlisted in the One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and, after coming back from the war, took up farming in Green township, where he remained the balance of his life. James and Rebecca McKenzie had two children, Frank, who died at the age of two years, and John B., the subject of this sketch. After the father's death, in 1876, his widow married, secondly, Thomas J. Blood, and they now live in New Antioch. James McKenzie was a member of the Christian church. He was a Democrat.

John B. McKenzie began his education in the common schools of Union township and later he attended the schools at New Antioch. In 1896 he entered the Starling Medical College at Columbus, Ohio, and was graduated with the class of 1900. Immediately after his graduation, he began his practice in Chester township. Before going to college, however, he had read medicine with Doctor Whisler, of New Antioch, and had driven with him on his practice for one year. He also spent his summer vacations in Doctor Whisler's office. Doctor McKenzie's hospital experience was received in the St. Francis, St. Anthony and Mt. Carmel hospitals at Columbus, Ohio.

As a breeder of fancy poultry, Doctor McKenzie is well known, both in Ohio and Indiana, having exhibited fowls at the poultry shows at Cincinnati, Columbus, Toledo and Indianapolis. At Cincinnati, Toledo and Indianapolis he has taken several first prizes. Doctor and Mrs. McKenzie have a beautiful country home at Oakland and enjoy all of the comforts of life.

On February 28, 1898, John B. McKenzie was married to Hattie L. Armstrong, a daughter of James K. and Amanda (Bowser) Armstrong, the former of whom was born on November 10, 1845, at the Snow Hill house in Green township, and the latter born on November 20, 1840, in Lockland, Ohio. Mr. Armstrong was a farmer in Green township. He and his wife had two children: Ida V., who married Joseph Summers; and Hattie L., the wife of Doctor McKenzie. Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong now live in New Antioch. To Doctor and Mrs. McKenzie has been born one daughter, Cleo A., who is now deceased. She was born on February 3, 1899, and died on November 27, 1901.

Dr. John B. McKenzie is a member of the Clinton County and Ohio State Medical societies, a life member of the American Poultry Association and a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

ALLEN ALBERT CURTIS.

Allen Albert Curtis, now a well-known farmer and stockman in Green township, this county, where he owns a farm of one hundred and twenty-five acres, was born on January 28, 1855, in the township where he lives, a son of David and Martha J. (Truitt) Curtis, both natives of Virginia, the former born in 1827 and the latter in 1837.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Curtis were Christopher and Sarah Curtis, pioneers in Highland county, Ohio, who later moved to Clinton county, where both spent most of their lives, and where both died. Upon coming to Clinton county, they settled on what is now known as the Higgins farm. Mr. Curtis's maternal grandparents were George and Abigail (Applegate) Truitt, the former of whom was a son of William Truitt, a pioneer of Clinton county, who died at the age of about ninety years. George and Abigail (Applegate) Truitt were pioneer farmers in Clinton county, where both spent most of their lives, and where both died, the latter dying in the house where her grandson, Allen Albert Curtis, now lives, in 1906, at the age of eighty-four years.

The late David Curtis was a farmer by occupation, a Democrat in politics, and a member of the Baptist church. He and his wife were the parents of nine children, of whom Allen Albert is the eldest, the others, in the order of their birth being as follow: William, Sarah, James E., Jennie, Frank, Lula, George and Lucy. Of these children Sarah, Jennie and Lula are deceased. Lula, who was the wife of Frank Steele, died in March, 1908. Lucy is the wife of Oscar Matthews. David Curtis died in 1898, and his widow is still living. Allen Albert Curtis was reared on his father's farm and was educated in the public schools. For many years he has lived on the farm of one hundred and twenty-five acres which he owns in Green township.

On January 2, 1879, Allen Curtis was married to Ollie West, a native of Clinton county, who was born in Wayne township on March 17, 1861, daughter of Edmond and Jane (Bernard) West, the latter of whom was the daughter of George Washington Bernard, mentioned elsewhere in this work. Edmond West was born in Wayne township, the son of a pioneer farmer of that township. To Mr. and Mrs. Curtis twelve children have been born, Winnie, William, Edna, Harley, Jennie, Howard, Carrie, Jessie, Fred, Mary, Mabel and Stanley, all of whom are living save William.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis are members of the Christian church at Centerville and are regular attendants and active workers in that church. Mr. Curtis votes the Democratic ticket.

HON. ELIAS DAKIN HARLAN.

On the memorial roll of Clinton county, there is no name more worthy of respectful consideration than that of the late Hon. Elias Dakin Harlan, former member of the lower house of the Ohio General Assembly from this district, and for many years one of the most prominent factors in the agricultural, social and civic life of this county. Honored by the electors of this district by the election for two successive terms as member of the state Legislature, he performed his duties to his district and his state, in that important capacity, in such a manner as to give his name a high place on the roster of Ohio's constructive statesmen and his memory long will be cherished hereabout. One of the leading farmers of the county, he for years was regarded as one of the most intelligent exponents of the modern methods of agriculture in this part of the state, and in 1893 was appointed as a delegate to the national farmers congress held at the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago, in that year, on the recommendation of his warm friend and close associate, the Hon. John Sherman. For many years he was chairman of the Clinton county Republican committee and in this position wielded a powerful influence in political affairs throughout this section of Ohio. He was known as an effective organizer and in district and state conventions of his party his counsel and advice were eargerly sought by the leaders of the party in the state, his political labors and influence thus extending to all parts of the state. In the purely local field, he had served his township faithfully and well for years as a justice of the peace, his judgments ever being regarded as just and true by his neighbors, and he had performed equally faithful and effective service as a member of the board of education, his strong interest in the schools giving to this service an unusual value, which the community was not slow to appreciate. Faithful in all the relations of life, an honored veteran of the Civil War, an indefatigable worker and a true and public-spirited citizen, he was a man well worthy of praise and it is but fitting and proper that in this history of the county in which the best efforts of his life were so unselfishly expended there should appear a brief and modest review of his useful career.

Elias Dakin Harlan was born on a farm in Adams township, this county, on April 1, 1837, son of Nathaniel and Lydia (Dakin) Harlan, pioneers of this county and leaders in the community life of their neighborhood. Nathaniel Harlan was one of the most influential factors in the development of the Adams township section of the county. A large farmer and an intelligent and public-spirited citizen, he for many years exerted a most wholesome influence in that community. In earlier days he was a Whig and was one of the leading anti-slavery men in this county. Upon the organization of the Republican party he threw his influence on the side of that organization and ever afterward was regarded as one of the leaders in the Republican party hereabout. His wife, who was one of the daughters of Elias Dakin, a pioneer Quaker and Whig, of this county, was equally vigorous in her efforts in behalf of better things in the community of which she and her husband were such prominent integral parts and her memory, as well as his, is held in the most grateful remembrance throughout that community, even to this day. They were the parents of six children, three sons and three daughters, namely: Elias D., subject of this sketch; William; Edwin, deceased; Mrs. Harriet Hale; Mary A., deceased, and Mrs. Eva Mullen, of Long Beach, California.

Elias Dakin Harlan spent his boyhood days on the parental farm in Chester township, assisting in the cultivation and development of the same, at the same time receiving his elementary education in the district schools of that neighborhood. This he supplemented by a course at Antioch College and at the excellent old school at Yellow Springs, this state, and on September 16, 1861, enlisted in Company B, Fortieth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, in which he served for three years without a furlough, receiving his honorable discharge on September 20, 1864, with the rank of corporal. During this service, Corporal Harlan encountered the dreadful experiences of war in such notable battles as those of Chickamauga, Stone's River and Peach Tree Creek. His regiment was attached to the Army of the Cumberland, under General Rosecrans, and was in the thick of that great army's campaigns, including the campaign from Chattanooga to Atlanta. He also was engaged in the West Virginia campaign in the early part of the war and, with five others, at the battle of Franklin, barely escaped capture. He and his companions were surrounded and were about to give up their arms, when the Confederates shot and killed two of his comrades. Thinking he would just as soon be shot while running as while standing, Comrade Harlan made a run for it and, by the exercise of extraordinary wit, threw himself in the dooryard of a house in the town of Franklin, as though shot, and his pursuers rode on past, apparently satisfied that they had slain him. In his whole army career, Comrade Harlan proved himself a brave and loyal soldier, and after the war became one of the leaders in the organization of the Grand Army of the Republic in this section of the state. He was one of the organizers of Morris McMillan Post, Grand Army of the Republic, and was elected first post commander of the same, which position he held for two terms, and was three times appointed on the staff of the Ohio department commander.

From the days of his earliest manhood, Mr. Harlan gave close attention to political affairs, being a close student of civics and devoutly interested in good government. Casting his first vote for Abraham Lincoln, his interest in and zeal for the Republican party never wavered and in time he became a powerful factor in the political life of this county, his influence extending far beyond the confines of the county, as noted above, by reason of his long service as chairman of the Clinton county Republican committee. As a justice of the peace and as a member of the board of education, he performed excellent public service of a local character and long before his election to the Legislature was regarded as one of the leading men in the public life of the county. The people of Clinton county, recognizing his ability and his worth, elected him as a representative from this district to the lower house of the seventieth General Assembly of the state of Ohio, his service in that capacity being so well received that he was re-elected, serving his second term in 1893-94. His interest in the advancement of agricultural methods in Ohio was so well known and so pronounced that he was appointed, as noted above, a delegate to the farmers congress at the great world's fair held in Chicago in 1893, in which position he was able to perform signal service in behalf of the country's agricultural interests. In various other ways, Mr. Harlan had been enabled to perform excellent service on behalf of the public, in all the relations of life being true, until his useful career on earth came to an end on October 22, 1914.

On July 4, 1865, Elias Dakin Harlan was united in marriage to Sarah A. Morris, who was born in Chester township, this county, on May 4, 1845, daughter of John and Mary Morris, natives, respectively, of Virginia and Ohio, and who survives him. To this union there was no issue.

John Morris, a pioneer settler of this county, was born on Neuse river, North Carolina, the son of Isaac and Millicent (Bundy) Morris. Early in life, attracted by the possibilities of pioneering in this section of Ohio, he walked from his home in Virginia to this section, "spying out the land." Before making his definite location in this county, he repeated this trip four times, walking each time. On one of these trips he shot and killed a bear, the skin of which he sold to Governor Trimble for three dollars. John Morris married Mary Stanley, daughter of Robert and Edith (Mason) Stanley, natives of the eastern shore of Maryland, and to this union eight children were born, Isaiah, Lydia, Eliza, Sarah (Mrs. Harlan), Isabelle and Jeremiah (twins), Martha (who died in infancy) and Susanna. John Morris died on August 29, 1886. His wife had preceded him to the grave about five years, her death having occurred on August 6, 1881. Mr. Morris was a farmer until 1871, in which year he retired from the farm and moved to Harveysburg, where his last days were spent.

Hon. Elias D. Harlan was a birthright Quaker and his widow is devoted to the affairs of the Methodist church. He was a master Mason and ever took an earnest interest in the affairs of that ancient organization.

ELIZABETH SHRIEVES, M. D.

Elizabeth Shrieves, M. D., the subject of this sketch, is an Ohioan by adoption, having been born at North Hoosic, New York. Her parents, William Randolph and Esther Ann (Barnett) Shrieves, were born and reared in Rensselaer county, New York, in the vicinity of the battlefields of Bennington, Vermont, the main engagement of that famous battle having been fought on her great-grandfather's farm. In 1872 the Shrieves family moved from New York to Wilmington, this county, and Elizabeth Shrieves received her education in the public schools of that city and in Wilmington College, graduating from the latter in 1884. Following her graduation she taught for one year in the Melvin school and for several years substituted in the public schools and taught one year in the primary grade of the Main street building, which latter position she resigned to enter the Posse Normal School of Gymnastics, at Boston, Massachusetts.

While attending the Chautauqua Summer School of Gymnastics, Miss Shrieves came under the influence of Dr. Eliza Mosher, of Brooklyn, and the following fall matriculated with the Laura Memorial Medical College, of Cincinnati, which has since been merged with the Ohio-Miami Medical College. After graduating from this institution with the class of 1899, Doctor Shrieves served as interne in the Presbyterian hospital at Cincinnati and in March, 1901, began the practice of her profession at Wilmington, this county. To the usual professional training secured at the colleges, Doctor Shrieves has had the added advantage of an interneship in the Woman's hospital, at Chicago; post-graduate work, both in Chicago and in New York, and has had the inestimable advantage of a comprehensive tour of visitation in the better hospitals of Europe and attendance on clinics during a year abroad, spent in Spain, Portugal, Italy, France, Germany and England. Strong Christian principles, established in childhood and later supplemented by college training and travel, in the case of Doctor Shrieves, has brought to the medical profession a woman of splendid qualities of heart and mind, with a breadth of view and purpose which daily enlarges her usefulness to all who are fortunate enough to come under her influence and care.

Doctor Shrieves is a member of the American Medical Association, the Ohio State Medical Society and the Clinton County Medical Society; the Greek-letter fraternity, Alpha Epsilon Iota, composed of medical women of America; is examining physician for the Daughters of America and for the Ladies of the Maccabees, is trustee and treasurer of the Wilmington Carnegie library board and is also a member of the Order of the Eastern Star, the Six and Twenty Club and of the Methodist church at Wilmington.

In August, 1909, the Shrieves home circle was broken by the death of Doctor Shrieves' mother and on January 1, 1910, the father passed on. In the following fall, Doctor Shrieves and her sister, Miss Emma, closed the home and spent a year abroad. Doctor Shrieves and her sister, Miss Emma, who reside together, own several dwellings and apartments in Wilmington. They have a widowed sister, Mrs. Frances S. Mills, now living in Los Angeles, California, and a brother, Dr. Edwin B. Shrieves, a successful dental surgeon, who is married and lives at Sioux City, Iowa.

FRANK HUNNICUTT.

Frank Hunnicutt, a well-known business man of Wilmington and an extensive dealer in horses, is a native of Liberty township, this county, born near Port William, April 28, 1872, the son of Wilson and Mary M. (Gallimore) Hunnicutt, both of whom are still living. Wilson Hunnicutt was born on August 18, 1847, in Port William, in Liberty township, this county, and his wife was born on November 8, 1850, in Wilson township.

Frank Hunnicutt's paternal grandparents were Thomas and Susanna (Bailey) Hunnicutt, the former of whom, born on July 10, 1811, in Prince George's county, Virginia, died on April 10, 1876, and the latter, born on February 9, 1810, died on October 15, 1896. Thomas Hunnicutt was the son of Thomas and Elizabeth Hunnicutt, both of Scotch-Irish descent, who were born in Prince George's county, Virginia. He was a planter and farmer in Virginia and died there on February 15, 1823. His widow lived a few years longer, passing away in 1845. They were members of the Friends church and were ardently opposed to slavery. Susanna Hunnicutt was the daughter of Daniel and Mary (Haworth) Bailey, the former of whom was born in Prince George's county, Virginia, and the latter, in Union township, this county. Daniel Bailey came to Clinton county in 1804, when a young man, and purchased a farm four miles north of Wilmington. He and his wife were stanch Quakers. He died in 1844.

Thomas Hunnicutt, grandfather of Frank Hunnicutt, had little chance to obtain an education. He arrived in Clinton county at the age of sixteen years, June 10, 1827, with his mother, brother and sisters and a small colony of settlers, his mother purchasing a farm of one hundred acres in Liberty township. After he was grown, he purchased what was then a swamp, one mile north of his mother's farm and became a wealthy man, owning about one thousand acres of land, in his later years retaining four hundred acres for himself, after giving farms to his elder children. He served as township trustee and was a Republican in politics. He and his wife were active members of the Friends church and he was an elder of the Dover monthly meetings. He was a successful hog breeder and was so well known for his ability that be became a judge at exhibitions and fairs.

Wilson Hunnicutt grew up in Liberty township and when a young man purchased a farm of one hundred and fifty-two acres adjoining that of his father. He lived on this farm until 1903 when he retired and moved to Wilmington, where he is living on South street. All of the members of the family are identified with the Friends church. To Wilson Huunnicutt and his wife three children were born, of whom Frank is the eldest, the other two being Nora, who married Dennis Stephens and lives on the old Hunnicutt farm in Liberty township, and Bertha, who married Alton Haworth and lived on a farm in Liberty township until her death in 1912.

Frank Hunnicutt attended the public schools of Liberty township and was a pupil at the Hunnicutt school house for years. Later he became a student at Wilmington College and upon leaving college, worked on his father's farms for twelve years, at the end of which time he purchased the Starbuck farm of ninety-four acres in Union township, where he lived for four years. After that he lived in Sabina for one year. In 1911 Mr. Hunnicutt located at Wilmington, this county, and three years later, in 1914, built a magnificent new home at the corner of Spring and Locust streets. Since locating at Wilmington he has been engaged in buying and selling horses by the carload.

On August 3, 1893, Frank Hunnicutt was married to Lura Turner, who was born in Greene county, Ohio, daughter of John and Margaret Turner, both of whom are living near Lumberton, Ohio, and granddaughter of Eber and Mary Haines. Mr. and Mrs. Hunnicutt have three children: Mary Pauline, born on June 4, 1898, who is a student in the Wilmington high school; Leslie Thomas, January 9, 1901, and Priscilla M., June 15, 1906.

Mr. and Mrs. Hunnicutt and their family are members of the Friends church. Mr. Hunnicutt is identified with the Republican party. He is a man of genial personality and one in whom the public is accustomed to confide and upon whom they are accustomed to depend, since his word is known to be as good as his bond. The Hunnicutt family have many friends in Wilmington and it may be truly said that they are popular in that city.

WILLIAM I. STEWART.

Among the prominent and influential citizens of Wilmington, the county seat of Clinton county, perhaps none has a wider acquaintance in that city or throughout the county than William I. Stewart, one of the leading real-estate agents and attorneys of this section of the state, and former mayor of the city of Wilmington.

William I. Stewart was born on a farm near the village of Bowersville, in Jefferson township, Greene county, this state, on January 17, 1855, son of Robert and Lucinda (Oxley) Stewart, both natives of the same county, the former born in 1828 and the latter in 1835. Robert Stewart was the son of Christopher Stewart, whose father was a native of Scotland, one of the earliest settlers in Greene county, this state. He learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed at Bowersville until his marriage, at which time he bought a farm in Greene county, on which he lived for some years, at the end of which time, in 1875, he sold that farm and bought a farm in this county, on which he lived until his wife's death, after which he made his home with his several children until the time of his death, in 1908. Robert Stewart was a man of large influence in his community and had served the public very acceptably as township trustee. He was an unusually well-informed man, having been a constant reader of standard books and well versed in history. He was a Republican and gave his intelligent and thoughtful attention to the political affairs of the community, his counsels having much weight in the deliberations of the party managers, both in this county and in Greene county. Mr. Stewart was a man of strong religious feeling, an earnest Methodist, and helped to build several churches during his long residence at Bowersville.

On January 25, 1849, in Bowersville, Robert Stewart was united in marriage to Lucinda Oxley, daughter of the Rev. William Oxley, a well-known Baptist minister of that place, and to this union eight children were born, Nancy Elizabeth, Arminta Jane, Sarah Alice, William I., Charles Oscar, Alfred Franklin, Francis Marion and John M. The mother of these children died in March, 1898, and the father died on December 31, 1908. Both were devoted members of the Methodist church and their children were reared in that faith.

William I. Stewart received his early education in the public schools of Bowersville and in the Storey high school. At the age of twenty-one, he began farming "on his own hook," and for three years was thus engaged, cultivating a rented farm, at the end of which time he engaged in the mercantile business, operating a country store for about one year. He then returned to the farm, but after one more year of agricultural experience decided to take up the study of law, and with this end in view, moved to Wilmington, where, on Thanksgiving Day, 1886, he began his law studies in the office of Hon. R. E. Doan and pursued these studies with such diligence that in June, 1888, he was admitted to practice at the bar of the Clinton circuit court and at once entered actively upon the practice of his profession in Wilmington, where he ever since has been located, in this time having gained a name as a practitioner which is known far outside the limits of this county. In addition to his general practice as an attorney-at-law, Mr. Stewart for years has been engaged in the real-estate business and has been quite successful. He owns a pleasant home in Wilmington, besides land in the east end of that town and has laid off lots in the new addition. He is also largely interested in the Geiger-Jones Stock Security Company and takes an active interest in the affairs of the city generally. Mr. Stewart for years has taken an active and intelligent interest in the political affairs of Wilmington and Clinton county. In 1890 he was elected mayor of Wilmington, and in this important capacity performed excellent public service. For fifteen years he has been a justice of the peace and bears a high reputation as a just judge in such matters as come before him for adjudication.

In 1882 William I. Stewart was united in marriage to Emma Diffenbaugh, daughter of Adam and Ann (Gallimore) Diffenbaugh, members of old and honorable families in this county, and to this union one child has been born, M. Pearl, who is living at home. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart have many friends in Wilmington and throughout Clinton county, all of whom hold them in the highest esteem.

JOHN L. RANNELLS.

When the successful farmer is spoken of, the inclination is to view his success simply from the standpoint of finance and accomplishment; but aside from this, there are many farmers who have accomplished good in a community by improvement, by careful selection and by the study of farm products and improved stock. These men are not alone a success in themselves, but they are a real benefit to a community. Of such as these is John L. Rannells, the subject of this sketch.

John L. Rannells was born on March 24, 1857, on the farm on which he now lives, in Union township, this county, the son of Thomas G. and Massie Jane (Wiley) Rannells. Thomas G. Rannells was born at Uniontown, Fayette county, Pennsylvania, on November 9, 1810, and died on September 11, 1886. He was the son of William and Leah (Gaddis) Rannells, both of whom were born in Fayette county, Pennsylvania. In 1814 they came by wagon and horseback to Clinton county and located near New Vienna. There they purchased a tract of one hundred and twenty acres of what is now the W. D. Moorman farm, in Union township. Later they bought one hundred acres on the Prairie road in Union township, where they both died. They were members of the Christian church.

Massie Jane (Wiley) Rannells was born in 1821 and died in 1890. She was the daughter of Allen and Sarah Wiley, who came from Belmont county, Ohio, about 1825 and settled on what is now the Conrad farm, on the Prairie road, in Union township, where they died. They were members of the Friends church.

Thomas G. Rannells was only four years old when he settled with his parents in Clinton county. He attended the primary schools of that day and was always a faithful as well as a helpful attendant at all old-fashioned "log-rollings" in his neighborhood. After his marriage he bought an eighty-eight-acre tract of land, which is a part of the farm which John L. Rannells now owns, and there he went to housekeeping in a log cabin. In 1849 he built the comfortable brick house in which John L. Rannells now lives and lived there until his death, in 1886. He was a Republican. His wife, who was reared a Quaker, joined the Christian church and they became active members. Thomas G. Rannells was a great stock raiser and had the best improved breeds of Shorthorn cattle, Merino sheep and Poland China hogs. He has seven children, six of whom are still living, as follow: William H., who is in the insurance business and who lives in Wilmington; Sarah E., who married Henry Hilderbrant, and who died in 1907; Mary E., Leah L. and L. Etta, who live in Wilmington; John L., the subject of this sketch, and C. A., whose history will be found elsewhere in this volume.

John L. Rannells attended the "Dutch" district school in Union township. During his youth and early manhood he stayed with his father on the farm and helped in the cultivation and management of the same. After his marriage he continued to live on the farm and after his father's death acquired all the interests of the estate and now has an excellent farm of two hundred and thirty-eight acres.

John L. Rannells was married on February 24, 1887, to Leulla Bentley, who was born in Wilson township, this county, on September 21, 1860, the daughter of E. V. and Nancy (Custis) Bentley, retired farming people now living at Wilmington, this county, and to this union the following children have been born: Thomas E., born on January 1, 1888, and who helps his father run the farm, married Daisy D. Wright and has one child, John Elwood, who was born on April 6, 1915; William Bentley, September 20, 1890, a student of osteopathy at Kirksville, Missouri, married Mae George, and has one child, Matilda Jane, born on July 18, 1912; and Louise, October 19, 1900, who is attending high school at Wilmington.

John L. Rannells as a Republican and he and his wife are active members of the Walnut Street Christian church. Aside from the exemplary farmer and stock raiser that he is, he was one of the promoters of the Clinton County Mutual Insurance Association, which has proved a great benefit to the county. He was for years one of the most active workers in that association and was a director in this association for years.

JUNIUS A. HENRY.

It matters much less where a man comes into the world than how he comes into life, as a living force and what he does and becomes in it. Heredity and environment have much to do in conditioning character and power, and fortunate indeed is the man who has been well born and whose surroundings have made possible his very best development. Junius A. Henry, a successful farmer of Union township, now in the prime of life, is peculiarly blessed not only by heredity, but by environment as well. He comes from a distinguished family of Clinton county and was reared under excellent home influences. Naturally he is a fine specimen of manhood and citizenship, well balanced, well poised, broad-minded and liberal. Junius A. Henry was born on December 20, 1871, in Greene county, Ohio, and is the son of the late William and Julia (Pidgeon) Henry. The former was born near Harveysburg, in Warren county, Ohio, January 31, 1838, and died on September 10, 1906, while the latter was born on May 7, 1838, in Guilford county, North Carolina, near High Point, and fifteen miles from Greensboro, and is still living in this county.

Of the more remote ancestry of Mr. Henry it may be said that his grandparents on his paternal side were John and Catherine (Stump) Henry, the former of whom was born in the Shenandoah valley of Virginia in 1798 and died in 1870, and the latter of whom was born in Frederick county, Virginia, in 1805, and died in 1887. John Henry came from Virginia to Ohio when a young man. His father having been killed when he was a baby he was reared by his aunt. He settled in Warren county and finally owned a good farm near Harveysburg, but in 1854 sold out and purchased land in Union township, where he lived until his death. He and his wife were devout members of the Christian church. They had ten children, of whom seven are deceased, as follow: Daniel, lives in Wilmington; William, was the father of Junius A.; Jonas and John are deceased; Matilda, married William Fisher, of near Port William; Retta, deceased, married Quincy Harris; Lydia, died unmarried; Frances, married James Fisher, of Wilmington; Reese, died unmarried; and Joshua, who was twice married, is deceased. Mrs. William Henry had a birthright in the Friends church. Fifteen years after their marriage, Mr. Henry joined the church. He was a Democrat early in life and later years voted the Prohibition ticket.

On his maternal side, Junius A. Henry is descended from Charles and Catherine (Horney) Pidgeon, his maternal grandparents, the former of whom was born on March 1, 1806, and died on July 26, 1898, and the latter of whom was born on September 23, 1810, and died on December 27, 1886. They were natives of Stokes county, North Carolina. Isaac Pidgeon, the paternal great-great-grandfather of Junius A. Henry, was a strict Quaker, who emigrated from Ireland to Chowan county, North Carolina, about 1740, and who, although he lived in America during the Revolutionary War, was not called upon to serve, since he was a member of the Quaker church. His son, Charles Pidgeon, Sr., a blacksmith, mechanic, carpenter and home physician, married Elizabeth Crews on November 11, 1789. She was a native of Virginia, and died in the early forties, after giving birth to a family of twelve children. The father died in 1854. Charles Pidgeon, Jr., who grew up in Stokes county, North Carolina, later located in Guilford county, and at the breaking out of the Civil War, being a northern sympathizer, emigrated to Ohio. He had married Catherine Horney on October 8, 1829. They had twelve children: Emily, married John Briggs, and died at the age of thirty-nine; Mary, married Wallace Mack, and they live in Virginia; John, married Caroline Thompson, and is a Quaker minister at Orchard Grove, Ohio; Hannah, married William Charles, and they are both deceased; Julia A., is the widow of William Henry and the mother of Junius A.; Samuel, is a school teacher and farmer at Jamestown, Ohio; David, is a resident of California; Jeffrey, died in infancy; Charles Addison, a school teacher, died unmarried, at the age of twenty-six; Henry, is a farmer in Union township; Cornelia, married Bruce Sprague, of Union township, and Louisa, married Aden Starbuck.

Junius A. Henry is one of three children born to his parents. His elder brother, Charles Addison, was born on January 22, 1870, and is a farmer of Union township. He married Margaret Vandervort. Junius Avery was the second born. William A., born on November 9, 1876, died on September 20, 1909.

Junius A. Henry attended the district schools of Clinton county, in Union township, and assisted his father on the home farm until his marriage, after which he located on a part of his father's home farm. Upon his father's death he inherited one hundred and twenty acres of land and in 1911 added sixty acres from the Wade farm adjoining the home farm. In 1909 he bought a residence on West Locust street, Wilmington, which he still owns. For several years he has kept thoroughbred trotting horses of the Wilkes and Electioneer strains. He raises all the cattle and hogs necessary to consume the grain raised on the farm and, in fact, buys grain for his stock. In 1900 Mr. Henry built a comfortable country home, where he and his wife and family now live.

On August 10, 1892, Junius A. Henry was married to Augusta Estell Fisher, a native of Green township, Clinton county, and the daughter of James and Eliza Fisher, the former of whom was born on April 30, 1829, in Clinton county, and the latter of whom was born on March 16, 1853, in Tennessee.

Of the paternal ancestry of Mrs. Henry, it may be said that her grandparents, David and Hannah Fisher, were natives of Virginia. David and Hannah Fisher had thirteen children: Samuel, John, Andrew J., William, George W., James, Thomas, Eliza Ann, Maria and Elizabeth were ten of these children. The father lived in Clinton county until 1858, when he removed to Illinois and died of cholera in 1863, at the age of sixty-seven. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and one of the troops surrendered by General Hull at Detroit.

George W. Fisher, an uncle of Mrs. Henry's, after working at various places as a brickmaker, began farming in 1857 and before his death came to own two hundred and thirty-five acres of land. His wife, before her marriage, was Martha Fife, who was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, August 20, 1828, and who came with her parents, David and Nancy Fife, to Philadelphia, in 1840, and a few years later to Clinton county, Ohio, where her mother died. Her father removed to the state of Illinois and died there. George W. Fisher and Martha Fife were married on February 15, 1850. They had eight children, as follow: Jennie, born on June 21, 1852; David F., July 18, 1854; John, September 11, 1856; George L., November 8, 1858; Thomas, December 29, 1860; Matthew, January 17, 1865, and died on December 29, 1881; Maggie L., April 23, 1869; and James, July 25, 1873. Mr. Fisher was a member of Company K, One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, during the Civil War.

Mr. and Mrs. Junius Avery Henry are the parents of three children: Eva Catherine, born on January 11, 1893, married Earl West, and they live on the farm owned by Mrs. William Henry, Mrs. West's grandmother; Ray, March 1, 1894; and Fay, April 20, 1896, are at home.

Mr. Henry is a Democrat. He has a birthright membership in the Quaker church at Wilmington. Mrs. Henry is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. They are well-known and highly-respected citizens and farmers of Union township, popular in the community where they reside and where they have a host of friends.

HENRY STIERITZ'S SONS.

Coming to Clinton county as a German immigrant when twenty-seven years of age, working for the first few years of his life here under conditions that would have proved disheartening to one of less plucky disposition, surmounting obstacles that to others might have seemed well nigh insuperable, Henry Stieritz came to be a man of large substance, well circumstanced and prosperous and at the time of his death left to his sons, Jacob, Godfrey and David, not merely a legacy of world's goods that provided handsomely for their material state, but the far more enduring and valuable legacy of a good name, the name of a man who had done well his part in life, who had cherished his family and had walked uprightly before his fellowmen. These three sons well have taken care of the legacy thus left them, not only having increased the considerable land holdings bequeathed them by their father, but have cherished the greater legacy of his good name, and in their own lives have so conducted themselves before men as to leave unsullied the fine trust their father reposed in them.

Henry Stieritz was born in the kingdom of Wurttemberg, in southwestern Germany, the son of John Stieritz and wife, peasant farmers, and remained in his native land until he was twenty-seven years of age, at which time he decided to try his fortune in the great land of fuller opportunities across the water. With this end in view he came to America, almost immediately locating in this county, where he engaged to work for a Clark township farmer for two years at the wage rate of eight dollars the month. Desiring to save his earnings in order that he early might accumulate a fund by which te start himself as a farmer in his own right, Henry Stieritz allowed all but a mere pittance of his earnings during this period to remain in the hands of his employer, thinking to draw the whole amount at the end of his service. Just about the time of the termination of his two years of faithful service, his employer failed and he lost almost the whole of his accumulated wages. Not a whit discouraged, however, he started over again and presently found himself able to purchase thirty acres of land. This small tract was situated just over the county line in Highland county, and there Henry Stieritz laid the foundation of his fortune. Industry and perseverance found their just reward, and in due time, with the diligent and faithful aid of his growing sons, Mr. Stieritz became the owner of a fine, well-cultivated farm of three hundred and eighty-one acres on the dividing line between Clinton and Highland counties, one hundred and twenty-five acres of which was situated in the latter county.

Upon seeing his way clear to assume the responsibilities of married life, Henry Stieritz was united in marriage to Sophia Trautwein, also a native of Wurttemberg, who came to Clinton county with her parents, Barnhart and Mary (Gates) Trautwein, when she was thirteen years of age, and grew to womanhood on the farm which her father cleared from the forest wilderness in the southern part of Clark township. The Trautweins came to this county about the year 1841, locating on a farm of thirty-five acres in the deep woods, where they built a log cabin and proceeded to make a new home. Barnhart Trautwein gradually added to his original tract until he became a quite substantial farmer and was able to give his two sons considerable material aid when they later moved to Illinois to establish homes of their own. He and his wife also were the parents of one other daughter, besides Mrs. Stieritz, who married and remained in Clark township.

To Henry and Sophia (Trautwein) Stieritz were born three sons, Jacob, Godfrey and David, who grew up side by side and have remained close neighbors all their lives, cultivating and enlarging the home farm and creating valuable and comfortable homes of their own. Henry Stieritz and his wife were faithful adherents of the Lutheran church and their sons were reared in that faith and have not departed therefrom, being valuable supporters of the faith of their fathers in this community. Henry Stieritz died in the year 1883 and his wife died in 1907. Both were highly regarded in the community in which they had risen from humble conditions to positions of influence in their neighborhood and they were sincerely mourned by many friends.

Jacob Stieritz, eldest son of Henry and Sophia (Trautwein) Stieritz, was born in Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, on January 12, 1859, and has continued to live in that neighborhood. Upon the division of his father's estate, he inherited one hundred and twenty-five acres, to which he added a small farm which he previously had acquired adjoining and there he lived until 1908, in which year he bought the well-appointed farm which he now occupies. On this place he has a fine brick residence and the farm buildings are in full keeping with the same, the farm being well equipped for the profitable pursuit of modern agricultural methods. In February, 1894, Jacob Stieritz was united in marriage to Alexenia F. Abernathy, daughter of John Abernathy, of Highland county, this state, and to this union two children have been born, both sons, Harry Lee and Howard Edwin, both of whom are at home, valuable aids to their father in his agricultural pursuits.

Godfrey Stieritz, second son of his pioneer parents, was born on June 17, 1863, receiving, as did his brothers, such education as the district schools of Clark township provided in those days, and has always been a farmer. Upon the division of his father's estate he received the home section of the farm and has continued to live in the old home. He is quite successfully engaged in general farming and has made important additions to his original holdings, now being the owner of two hundred and eighteen acres, all of which is in an excellent state of cultivation.

David Stieritz, youngest of the three sons of Henry Stieritz, was born on the old home place in Clark township, on July 10, 1869. He received one hundred and twenty-five acres in the division of the home farm and continued to make his home there, having erected a comfortable residence upon the occasion of his marriage and has prospered, he, as well as his brothers, being regarded as among the substantial farmers of Clark township. On May 14, 1900, David Stieritz was united in marriage to Rosa Rost, who was born in Hamilton county, this state, the daughter of Henry Rost, but a resident of Highland county at the time of her marriage. David Stieritz, as well as his brothers, takes a warm interest in local affairs and is highly concerned in the advancement of the common good thereabout. He formerly was director of schools in his district, an office which he filled faithfully and well.

The Stieritz brothers are excellent citizens, straightforward, industrious and honorable before men and are held in the highest regard throughout that whole community.

WELDEN N. McKAY.

Welden N. McKay, who belongs to one of the leading families of Clinton county, a family which has every reason to take just pride in its ancestry, is himself an educated and intelligent young farmer of Chester township, who has enjoyed advantages which fall to few men born and reared on the farm. As a matter of fact, he is a practical farmer with the theoretical knowledge of agriculture, since he has made the modern theories of agriculture pay him handsome returns for his pains, and, in addition to this, for the past three years he has been interested in road and bridge building under contract. The founder of the McKay family in Ohio was Moses McKay, the great-grandfather of Welden N. McKay, who, accompanied by his wife and children, about 1814 immigrated from Virginia, by way of Pittsburgh and thence by flat-boat to Cincinnati and finally to Lebanon, this state. Still later they settled at Waynesville and a short time later purchased the large tract of land east of the Little Miami river, but a short distance west of Caesars creek, in what is now Massie township, Warren county. From Warren county the family gradually moved over into Clinton county.

Welden N. McKay was born on the farm where he now lives, in Chester township, this county, on November 21, 1874, the son of Robert F. and Mary F. (Nickerson) McKay, the former of whom was born on the same farm on February 9, 1838, and the latter born on July 21, 1843, the daughter of Clark and Martha (Ashbey) Nickerson. Robert F. McKay and Mary F. Nickerson were married on December 28, 1861. Robert F. McKay was the son of Francis and Mary (Collett) McKay, the former of whom was born in January, 1802, the son of Moses McKay, and died on March 26, 1871. He was a native of Frederick county, Virginia, and on October 7, 1830, was married to Mary Collett, daughter of Moses and Rebecca Collett.

Various records show that the founder of the McKay family in America was Andrew McKay, who was born in Scotland, the son of Robert McKay. Prior to 1766, Andrew McKay, who was a member of the Society of Friends, married Jane Ridgeway and they settled in Frederick county, Virginia. They were the parents of five children, Moses, Enos, Jacob, Margaret and Patience. Moses McKay, who was born on September 17, 1766, was united in marriage in 1793, according to the discipline of the Friends church, to Abigail Shinn, daughter of George and Rachel (Wright) Shinn, who was born on May 3, 1776, in Stafford county, Virginia, to which union were born thirteen children, namely: Rachel, who was born on January 19, 1794; Robert, December 17, 1795; Sarah, November 11, 1797; George, March 11, 1800; Francis, January 9, 1802; Margaret, January 16, 1804; Jonas, September 9, 1806; Virginia, August 22, 1808; Maria, May 23, 1811; Jonas T., May 10, 1813; Levi D., February 29, 1816; Jacob F., July 3, 1819; and Mary E., July 27, 1822. It was Moses, the father of this family, who settled in Warren county, Ohio. Francis McKay, the grandfather of Welden N., was the fifth child born to his parents. Moses McKay died on January 28, 1828, and his wife in July, of the same year.

The Nickerson family, of which Weldon N. McKay's mother, Mary Frances (Nickerson) McKay, is a member, has an even longer record in America than that of the McKays. William Nickerson, the ancestor in America of this remarkable family, with his wife, Anna, four children and the family of his father-in-law, Nicholas Busby, sailed from Norwich, England, on the ship, "Anne," landing in Boston, Massachusetts, on June 20,

Robert F. McKay

Mrs Robert F. McKay

1637. William Nickerson served as representative from Yarmouth, Massachusetts, in 1655, and he and his sons figure largely in colonial records from Yarmouth.

William Nickerson, Jr., married Nancy Williams and settled in North Chatham. He served as a soldier in King Philip's War and died in 1719. His son, Thomas Nickerson, married Mary Bangs, a daughter of Capt. Jonathan and Mary (Mayo) Bangs and granddaughter of Edward and Lydia (Hicks) Bangs. Edward Bangs came to America from Chichester, England, and had wealth, honor and influence. His descendants intermarried with many of the leading Pilgrim and Puritan families and appear always to have maintained an honorable position and to have been useful citizens in their day and generation. The Bangs coat-of-arms was emblazoned with a Moor's head.

Mary (Bangs) Nickerson was also a lineal descendant of Sir Ellis Hicks, who was knighted by the Black Prince at the battle of Poictiers, September 19, 1356. Ebenezer, son of Thomas and Mary (Bangs) Nickerson, and his wife, Constance, also were residents of Chatham, Massachusetts. Their son, Seth, and his wife, Mary, emigrated from Massachusetts to New York state and were the parents of Joshua Nickerson. Joshua and Abigail (Waring) Nickerson came from Poughkeepsie, New York, to Ohio, in 1804, and settled in Adams township, Clinton county. They had three sons and one daughter. Their son, Clark, married Martha Ashby, a daughter of Silas and Sarah (Collett) Ashby, to which union seven children were born, two daughters, Sarah and Elizabeth Ann, who died at an early age, and James, Joshua, David, Mary Frances, who married Robert F. McKay, and Susanna, the wife of Evan Hadley.

Francis McKay was reared on a farm and received the rudiments of an education. On October 7, 1830, he married Mary Collett, who was born on November 7, 1808, and to this union eleven children were born, seven of whom lived to maturity. In the spring of 1832 the family settled in the northern part of what is now Chester township, Clinton county. Francis McKay inherited several hundred acres of land, which was partially cleared. He was a man of industrious habits, sterling integrity and unblemished character. He died on March 26, 1871. It has been said of him that in his death "Clinton county lost one of her most worthy and respected citizens." Not only was his presence missed by the loved ones of his own family but by the poor and needy, to whom he ever extended a helping hand. His widow lived to a very advanced age.

The late Robert F. McKay received his education in the schools of Chester township and was a farmer all his life. In the beginning he had one hundred and fifty acres, to which he added from time to time until he owned four hundred acres of land. He and his wife were good citizens and for many years maintained a hospitable home in this county. They were the parents of four children, namely: Martha M., who married Charles Skimming; Welden N., the subject of this sketch; Sarah M., who married Harley H. Smith, and Susannah M., who married Everett Terrell. Robert F. McKay was a trustee and class leader for many years in the Methodist church. He voted the Republican ticket and was a man of large influence in his community.

Due to the careful management of his father, Welden N. McKay received a good start in life. He received his elementary education in the schools of Chester township, supplementing the same by a course in Wilmington College, after which, during 1897, 1898 and 1899, he was a student at Ohio State University, where he took a thorough course in agriculture. Upon completing his studies, he took up farming in Clinton county and now owns ninety-five acres of land in Chester township. He and his mother live together on the home farm and are held in the highest esteem throughout that whole neighborhood.

Welden N. McKay has never married. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and is now serving as trustee. Fraternally, he is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons. Mr. McKay votes the Republican ticket. Such families as those of the McKays are the bone and sinew of the great Hawkeye state, the families to whom is due much of the credit for the present high state of progress in this great commonwealth.

DAVID F. FISHER.

The Fisher family in Clinton county had its origin in the early days of the settlement of this section of the state, its founder, David Fisher, having come here as a "bound boy" with the family of Thomas Thatcher, who emigrated from Virginia and located in this county when there was little hereabout to which the name of civilization might be applied. David Fisher was an orphan and was reared in the home of the Thatchers, who had settled in the Cuba neighborhood, where the "bound boy" grew to useful manhood. He married and he and his wife, Hannah, became the parents of thirteen children. David Fisher lived in this county until about the year 1858, when he moved to Illinois, where his death occurred in 1863, he being then about sixty-seven years of age. David Fisher was a soldier in the War of 1812, and was one of the company of troops surrendered by General Hull, at Detroit, and shared with many others their hatred of Hull for his uncalled-for surrender.

George W. Fisher, son of David and Hannah Fisher, was reared amid the primitive conditions which surrounded his father's home in this county and upon reaching manhood was thrown upon his own resources, without means, other than his courage and determination, and was thus compelled to fight his own way through life. He entered upon the trade of brickmaking, which business he followed for fifteen years at Cincinnati, Shelbyville, Indiana; in this county and in other places, and in the spring of 1857 he engaged in farming, buying seventy-five acres of land in Green township, this county, where he spent the rest of his life. He was successful in his farming operations and gradually increased his holdings until he was in possession of two hundred and thirty-five acres of excellent land surrounding his home, all under fine cultivation, with good buildings and improvements. During the Civil War, George W. Fisher was a member of the Ohio National Guard and, in the spring of 1864, when the services of this body were deemed necessary at the front, he left his plow in the furrow and went to the front, serving under Captain Wilson, in Company K, One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regiment, Ohio National Guard.

On February 15, 1850, George W. Fisher was united in marriage to Martha Fife, who was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, on August 20, 1828, the daughter of David and Nancy Fife, who came to America in 1840, locating in Philadelphia, a few years later coming to this county. Following the death of his wife here, a few years later, David Fife moved to Illinois, where he spent his last days. George W. Fisher and his wife were the parents of eight children, namely: Jennie, born on June 21, 1852; David F., the immediate subject of this sketch; John W., September 11, 1856; George L., November 8, 1858; Thomas, December 29, 1860; Matthew, January 17, 1865; Maggie L., April 23, 1869, and James, July 25, 1873.

David F. Fisher, son of George W. and Martha (Fife) Fisher, was born in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, on July 18, 1854, and was reared on the farm, receiving his education in the schools at New Antioch, and has been a farmer all his life. He began as a tenant farmer, but his industry and energy soon gave him a start sufficient to enable him to see his way ahead, and in 1907 he bought his present fine farm of one hundred and three acres in Washington township, where he since has lived, and where he has prospered, as becomes the diligence with which he has applied himself to his extensive farming operations.

On January 29, 1879, David F. Fisher was united in marriage to Nora Haynie, who was born at New Antioch, this county, daughter of George S. and Elizabeth Ellen (Rannells) Haynie, both natives of this county, the former of whom was born in Union township and the latter in the village of New Antioch. George S. Haynie was the son of Thomas and Charlotte (Thatcher) Haynie, the former of whom was born in Clinton county, Virginia, and the latter near the village of Cuba, in this county.

Thomas Haynie was the son of Charles Haynie, a soldier of the War of 1812, and came to this county from Virginia at an early day in the settlement of the county, engaging in mercantile business at West Woodville, later moving his store to Burtonville and still later to New Antioch, in which latter village he and his son, George S., were for many years regarded as among the leading merchants of the place. Thomas finally sold out his store and retired to a farm which he had bought and there spent the remainder of his life. Thomas Haynie's wife, Charlotte Thatcher, was a daughter of Thomas Thatcher, who was well known as a land agent in this part of Ohio in the early days, he having been a descendant of Col. Peter Thatcher, of Colonial fame, who came from England. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Fisher were Harvey and Elizabeth (Flemming) Rannells, he of Scottish descent, and she a native of Pennsylvania, who came from Pennsylvania to this county about the year 1825, locating on a farm of one hundred and thirty-five acres at the edge of the village of New Antioch, entering the land direct from a government grant. On this homestead they erected a log cabin and created a home, where the remainder of their lives were spent. Harvey Rannells and his wife were among the most influential people of that neighborhood and their memory will long endure in that region. They contributed a portion of their land to the uses of the church and school at New Antioch, the first school and church in that neighborhood having been erected on land that they gave.

To David F. and Nora (Haynie) Fisher eight children have been born, namely: Ethel May, Harry Ethelbert, Walter Matthew, Mary Elizabeth, Emmet Hanie, Benjamin Herman Lee, Ernest Evelyn and Dorothy May. Mrs. Fisher is a member of the Christian church and the several members of the family take an active part in the good works of their community, all being held in the very highest esteem thereabout. Mr. Fisher is a Republican and has served as a member of the school board. He is a member of the Republican committee and is a member of the Martinsville Protective Association. He is a great temperance worker, few men in his neighborhood being more active in the anti-liquor fight than he.

W. P. RUNK.

W. P. Runk, one of the successful farmers of Clark township, this county, where he owns one hundred and twenty-five acres of land, was born on December 14, 1853, in that township, the son of George W. and Rachel (Ratcliff) Runk, natives of Berkeley county, Virginia, and Highland county, Ohio, respectively, the former of whom was born in 1819, son of John and Elizabeth (Miller) Runk, natives of Pennsylvania and Maryland, respectively, who were married in Pennsylvania and in 1835 located on the farm now owned by their grandson, W. P. Runk. John Runk first purchased one hundred acres, later sold twenty-five acres, and then added sixty acres to the farm, and both he and his wife spent their last days on the farm. He was a soldier during the War of 1812 and drew a pension for his services in that war. During the Civil War, he was a member of the famous "squirrel hunters" organization, which resisted Morgan's raid. Mr. Runk's maternal grandfather, Jacob Ratcliff, was a native of North Carolina, who came with his parents to Ohio, locating in Highland county. The family was of Quaker descent, and the parents died in Highland county. Jacob Ratcliff was proprietor of a grist-mill at Sharpsville and, later in life, a farmer. His wife, who was a Smith, was a native of Highland county.

The late George W. Runk was educated in the subscription schools of the Old Dominion state, and learned the cabinet-maker's trade at Martinsville after coming to this country. He worked at his trade in Dayton, Ohio, but later took up farming in his home community, and still later removed to his home farm. George W. and Rachel (Ratcliff) Runk, who had five children, died on the farm that their son, W. P., now owns. The family were members of the Lutheran church.

W. P. Runk was educated in the public schools of Clark township, and owns one hundred and twenty-five acres of land in that township, where he has been farming all his life. On March 1, 1885, he was married to Ida Ent, a native of Sligo, Ohio, and the daughter of George and Lydia (Lambright) Ent, both natives of Frederick City, Maryland. Mrs. Runk's paternal grandfather was George Ent, who was a well-known carriage painter and who came to Ohio in 1855. He died in this state while visiting his son, George. His wife, however, died in Maryland. He was a soldier in the War of 1812 and the founder of the college at Fredericks City, Maryland. Mrs. Runk's maternal grandfather, who married a Miss Scheli, spent all his life in the state of Maryland. Her father was a student at the college at Fredericks City and lacked but one year of graduating. He became a carriage painter, and, after coming to Ohio, located at Clarksville, where he followed his trade for some time. Later he moved to Sligo, thence to Upper Sandusky, thence to New Vienna and finally settled at Martinsville. He and his wife were the parents of nine children. Three of their sons, William, George and Milton, were soldiers in the Union army during the Civil War. For ten years Mrs. Runk was a teacher in the public schools, she having completed her education in the high school at Martinsville.

To W. P. and Ida (Ent) Runk have been born four children, Viola, Leslie, Stella and Blanche. Mr. Runk is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

ROBERT D. WALL.

In contemplating the many estimable qualities of the late Robert D. Wall, integrity and industry appear as prominent characteristics. He possessed an integrity which no personal or material consideration could swerve, and an industry which knew no rest while a personal duty remained unperformed. When given a task to accomplish he was accustomed to devote himself to its completion with indefatigable energy, and when the task was done, he threw off all cares to devote himself to the interests of his home and family. His temper was calm and equable, and his manners emphatically those of a gentleman, plain, simple and dignified. He despised sham and pretense of all kinds. His devotion to every duty was intense, while his perception of truth and worth was almost intuitive. Although his life was a busy one, he never allowed the demands of business to interfere with his Christian obligations or with the faithful performance of his church duties. He commanded the respect of all classes by his exemplary life, and his memory will long be cherished by his friends and acquaintances, and especially by the members of his own immediate family.

Robert D. Wall was born on February 28, 1839, in Chester township, Clinton county, Ohio, and died on May 30, 1910. He was a son of Mahlon and Mary (Vanderburgh) Wall, the former of whom was born on May 31, 1810, in the Steward cabin, in Chester township, this county, and the latter on March 20, 1818, in the state of New York. Mahlon Wall was the son of John and Mary (Mills) Wall, the former of whom was a native of York county, Pennsylvania, born on September 9, 1778, and died on January 5, 1857, and the latter of whom was born on February 10, 1777. They were married in York county, Pennsylvania, in 1802 and came to Clinton county in 1809, locating on a farm on Dutch creek, where they spent the remainder of their lives. The farm which Grandfather Wall owned consisted of about one hundred and four acres, which was a wilderness when he purchased it, but in true pioneer fashion he and his wife set about to cultivate and develop their farm. John Wall and wife were the parents of five children, Eli, Anna, Thomas, Mahlon and David. John Wall was a son of Absalom and Margaret Wall, the former of whom was a native of Center county, Pennsylvania, who sold out to the Dutch, and removed to Bedford county, in that state, in an early day.

Mahlon Wall was an infant when his parents came to this county in 1811. He was reared on the farm in Chester township and lived there all his life, receiving his education in the primitive schools of his home township. At the time of his death he owned about one hundred and twenty-seven acres of land. Mahlon and Mary (Vanderburg) Wall were the parents of eight children, Edwin, Robert D., Esther R., Absalom, Lydia E., Clarence, Rachel and Lucy Alice. Being a member of the Friends church, Mahlon Wall was bitterly opposed to slavery, and in the days before the Civil War assisted in the maintenance of the "underground railway," an institution by which slaves were helped to escape from the Southland to Canada. He was a member of the Whig party. He was also bitterly opposed to the whiskey traffic and was a very active worker in the temperance cause.

Robert D. Wall was educated in the common schools of Chester township, and there spent his boyhood and youth. He was twenty-two years old in 1861, when he enlisted for service in the Union army, in Company H, Thirty-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Enlisting as a private he was promoted to the rank of corporal on September 24, 1862, and served altogether three years, participating in many of the hardest-fought battles of that terrible struggle. Among the engagements in which he took part were the battles of Iuka, Corinth and Atlanta, besides many others, and his company was detailed to take a train load of prisoners to Philadelphia during the war. During his entire service he was neither wounded nor taken prisoner. He was honorably discharged from the service on August 12, 1864, at Chattanooga, Tennessee, and immediately afterwards returned to his home in Clinton county, where he purchased a small tract of land and engaged in farming. He owned seventy-one acres of land, on which he made many improvements, erecting all the buildings on the farm. In later years he delighted to attend old soldiers' meetings, taking an active part in the reunions of his old comrades. He made a specialty during his later years of planting and raising fruit trees.

On March 13, 1867, Robert D. Wall was married to Ann C. McMillan, who was born on March 14, 1840, a daughter of Josiah and Susannah (Cox) McMillan. Mrs. Wall's father was born on May 10, 1798, in York county, Pennsylvania, a son of David and Hannah McMillan, who emigrated from Pennsylvania to Ohio when Josiah was seven years old. Mrs. Wall's mother was born on July 12, 1801, the daughter of William and Emma Cox, and was married to Josiah McMillan on September 22, 1824, to which union seven children were born, David, Hannah, Mary, Clarkson, Thomas, Susannah and Ann C. Mrs. Wall's mother died in 1843 and her father married, secondly, in September, 1851, Mary Crew, the daughter of Obadiah Crew. She died on April 9, 1854, and Josiah McMillan was married the third time, in September, 1860, to Rebecca Ann Whinnery, the daughter of Robert and Phoebe Whinnery, to which union two children were born, Joseph, born in 1861, and Jane, 1863. Josiah McMillan was a man of industrious and energetic habits, a member of the Society of Friends. His death occurred in 1879.

To Robert D. and Ann C. (McMillan) Wall six children were born, namely: Bayard T., born on January 23, 1868, died on January 12, 1871; Henry, March 2, 1871, married Hannah Johnson, and has two children, Margaret and George: Thomas Leaton, November 5, 1872, lives with his mother on the home farm; Albert J., August 15, 1880, who died on April 26, 1912, and two daughters, who died in infancy.

Robert D. Wall was an earnest and devoted member of the Friends church, taking an active and interested part in the affairs of that denomination. He was a Republican in politics early in life, but later identified himself with the Republican party. For fifteen years he was a school director, and during the latter years of his life was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Thomas L. Wall, the third child of Robert D. and Ann C. (McMillan) Wall, who lives at home with his mother, is an intelligent, highly-educated young farmer, who operates the farm of one hundred acres where he and his mother live, and where his mother was born, also the seventy-one acres of the farm his father brought to an excellent state of cultivation. He is engaged in general farming and stock raising, making a specialty of breeding and raising Duroc-Jersey hogs, in which he is very successful. He is well prepared for the proper direction of his affairs, having spent three years in Wilmington College, and later two years in a business college at Cincinnati, Ohio. Fraternally, he is a member of the Knights of Pythias. He votes the Democratic ticket, and is one of the school directors of Chester township. He is held in high esteem throughout that entire neighborhood and is regarded as a high-minded, industrious and worthy young man.

PROF. HUGH J. WRIGHT.

Prof. Hugh J. Wright, who is well-known as the principal of the Martinsville high school, a position which he has held for two years, was born on October 10, 1875, in Highland county, Ohio, the son of Elwood and Rebecca (Johnson) Wright, both natives of that county, and both of whom are now deceased. Mr. Wright's father was a farmer and a machinist.

Hugh J. Wright was educated in Highland county, where he attended the public schools, and in Wilmington College. For some time he taught in the district schools in the vicinity of Wilmington, and afterwards in Fairfield township, Highland county, where he was principal of a graded school. Afterwards he became principal of the Leesburg public schools, but in 1908 removed to Martinsville, where he entered the lumber and builders' supply business and was thus engaged for three years. He then sold out and accepted the position of superintendent of the Martinsville high school, later becoming principal, under the new law. Professor Wright is well known in Clinton county as one of its leading educators. Not only is he a capable instructor, well-informed and skillful in teaching, but he is possesed of exceptional executive ability, and is particularly well adapted to supervisory educational work. During the years he has been engaged in teaching school, he has also dealt to some extent in real estate.

In 1900 Professor Wright was married to Miss Julia Denney, of Highland county, this state, who has borne him two children, Robert Elwood and Rebecca.

Being the grandson of Joseph Wright, one of the early ministers in the Friends church, of Clinton county, Professor Wright is himself a member of that church and during the past two years has been superintendent of the Friends Sunday school in Martinsville. He served one term as township clerk of Clark township and is prominent in the fraternal circles of Clinton county, being a member of the Masonic lodge, Knights of Pythias, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Junior Order of United American Mechanics and the Modern Woodmen of America. The Wrights are prominent socially in Martinsville and Clark township and are held in the highest esteem thereabout.

DANA C. BOND.

Dana C. Bond, whose father was a well-known farmer and local minister in the Christian church and who himself has become a successful farmer in Clinton county, was born in Union township, this county, on December 30, 1861. His father, John E. Bond, was born in Maryland on May 18, 1824, and was married to Elizabeth Custis on October 18, 1846. She was born on August 3, 1825, in Union township, the daughter of Thomas and Catherine (Smith) Custis. John E. Bond was the son of George and Margaret (Matlock) Bond, natives of Maryland, born on May 1, 1802, and the latter, October 12, 1801. They were married in 1824 and came to Clinton county about 1835, locating on a farm in Washington township, where they spent the remainder of their lives. They were the parents of seven children, of whom John E., the eldest, was the father of Dana C. The other children were George W., Elisha T., Sarah J., Margaret C., Martha and William B. The family were members of the Christian church and the father was a Democrat in politics.

John E. Bond was educated in the common schools of Washington township and when a young man began farming in Union township, where he spent the rest of his life, owning at the time of his death seven hundred acres of land, being considered one of the most extensive farmers of Clinton county. He was a local minister in the Christian church and for many years served the congregation at Bethel. He was a man of great natural eloquence and was possessed of unusual persuasive powers, his influence on the early religious life of this community having been widely exerted. John E. and Elizabeth (Custis) Bond were the parents of eight children, of whom Dana C., the subject of this sketch, was the sixth. The two eldest, Catherine and Charles E., died early in life, the former at the age of five and the latter at the age of three. The other children were Margaret, Thomas, Stephen, John and Sarah J.

Dana C. Bond was educated in the common schools of Union township and, like his father before him, engaged in farming early in life. After farming in Union township for about four years, he moved to Washington township in 1886 and purchased the farm where he now lives, comprising one hundred acres. He is engaged in general farming and stock raising and has made a reasonable success in his vocation.

By two marriages, Mr. Bond has had five children. He was first married on September 28, 1881, to Elva Roush, the daughter of William Roush, to which union there were born two children, Harley, who married Pearl Biggs, and has one son, Delbert, and Orval G., who married Catherine Conway, and has two children, Robert and Lunie. Mrs. Elva Bond died on January 28, 1888, and on February 3, 1889, Mr. Bond married, secondly, Luthera Williams, the daughter of John D. Williams, to which second union there have been born three children, Ramona, Hazel and Charles.

Mr. and Mrs. Bond are members of the Christian church and he is an elder in the local congregation. Mr. Bond votes the Democratic ticket, as did his father before him

LEO WELTZ.

Leo Weltz belongs to that class of men who win life's battles by sheer force of personality and determination rather than by influence of friends or fortune. In whatever he has undertaken he has shown himself to be a man of ability and honor, true to whatever trust has been reposed in him and, as the county clerk of Clinton county, he has played an important part in the public affairs of the community.

Mr. Weltz's ancestry is peculiar as regards its nationality, as will be noted in the following lines. Mr. Weltz's father, Leo Weltz, Sr., was born in Prussia, January 27, 1825, the son of Frederick Weltz, who was a professor of botany and eventually in the employ of the German government as geologist. Mr. Weltz's great-grandfather was a native of England and in the eighteenth century was sent to Prussia as a minister to the German court. Leo Weltz, Sr., received his elementary education under the instructions of his father, who himself was a man of high attainments, and attended the colleges of Osterwick and Magdeburg. While taking a special course in botany at the University of Heidelburg, in which he became very proficient, he assisted in laying out the botanical garden there. He made a specialty of landscape gardening and was graduated from the government botanical garden at Berlin. He entered the employ of the government, where he remained for several years and then accepted a position as head gardener to the czar of Russia, Alexander III, a splendid recommendation of his unusual ability. After remaining at the Russian court for three years and nine months, he was recalled to Germany and served five years in the army, fighting during the Revolution of 1847, and because of gallantry and meritorious conduct on the field of battle he received four medals. He was lieutenant of infantry, and one of the medals was given him as recognition of his bravery in capturing a battery of guns. This medal entitled him to a pension, which, however, was never claimed by him. After the conclusion of his military service, Mr. Weltz took charge of the park at Magdeburg and subsequently visited the different botanical gardens of southern Europe. During this period, Mr. Weltz was also a student under Alexander Humboldt, the noted explorer and naturalist, and for a period of two or three years served as his examinator. In 1851, Mr. Weltz resigned that situation and came to the United States, locating at Huntington, now in West Virginia, where he remained for about a year. In 1852 he went to Cincinnati and secured employment as a foreman in the nursery of William E. Mears, of Mt. Washington. Three years later, seeing the possibilities of the nursery business, he engaged in this line on his own account at Mt. Washington and met with success. His unusual ability as a landscape gardener being quickly recognized after he came to this country, he was engaged to lay out the grounds at the homes of Gov. Salmon P. Chase, Governor Buchanan, George H. Pendleton and other gentlemen of large estates. In 1857 Mr. Weltz was called to Wilmington, this county, to lay out Sugar Grove cemetery, and the following year laid out cemeteries at London, Springfield and Martinsville. In 1859 he purchased the land and residence at Wilmington formerly owned by William Adams, who, during anti-slavery times, was so well known throughout this country, and in the following year moved his family there from Mt. Washington. To this tract he added thirty-eight acres, which he devoted to nursery purposes and also bought two hundred and thirty-eight acres on the old Cincinnati pike adjoining Wilmington. At the latter point he instituted a nursery, which business became the largest of its kind in the county and one of the best equipped in the state of Ohio. Mr. Weltz took a deep interest in everything pertaining to agriculture and horticulture and in 1875 was made a member of the state board of agriculture. Five years later he was elected president of the Clinton County Horticultural Association and for five years also served as the president of the farmers institute of Clinton county, serving also as president of the Sugar Grove cemetery commission. In 1882 Mr. Weltz was chosen to lay out the grounds and superintend the erection of the exposition building at the state fair grounds at Columbus. Natural aptitude and special training made him one of the best-equipped men in his line in the Middle West, and he was widely recognized as an authority in anything pertaining to horticulture or landscape gardening. He took a deep interest in public affairs after coming to this country and in 1856 allied himself with the new Republican party, stumping the state for John C. Fremont. In religion, he was a Lutheran. He was married on March 27, 1853, to Anna Elizabeth Schwalenberger, a native of Alsace-Lorraine, who, in 1841, accompanied her parents to America. To this union were born seven sons, namely: Fedor, deceased; Trebor, a nursery dealer; Otto H., a salesman for the Leo Weltz Sons nursery; Fred W., owner of the Leo Weltz Sons nursery at Wilmington; Fremont L., a salesman for the same institution; Leo, Jr., the subject of this sketch; and Charles W., who died in infancy. The honored father of these children died on December 31, 1890, and their mother died in 1891.

Leo Weltz, Jr., was born on July 19, 1866, at Wilmington, and received his education in the public schools there, being graduated from the high school in 1886. Immediately after the completion of his studies, he went to Columbus, Ohio, and was employed in a wholesale dry-goods store for three years. At the end of that period, he engaged in the nursery business with his father until the latter's death, in 1890, after which he engaged in this business alone until 1900, when he was appointed bailiff of the common pleas court of Clinton county. He held this position with credit to himself for nine years, and during the following three years was deputy county clerk under Clerk Lawhead. In 1912 Mr. Weltz was elected county clerk and is still the incumbent in that position. He is discharging his official duties in a manner highly creditable to himself and to the entire satisfaction of his fellow citizens. Prompt in the discharge of his official duties, affable and courteous to all who have business in his office and a man of unquestionable integrity, he is justly deserving of representation in the annals of his county.

Politically, Mr. Weltz is a loyal adherent of the Republican party, in the campaigns of which he has taken an active part for years and served as precinct committeeman for several years. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Knights of Pythias, the Fraternal Order of Eagles and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

Leo Weltz was married in November, 1892, to Sarah L. Miars, who was born in Clinton county, the daughter of David and Eliza Hiars, both of whom are deceased. David Miars was a farmer and blacksmith by vocation and stood high in the esteem of his fellow citizens. To Mr. and Mrs. Weltz have been born two children, Fred, born in 1893, who is now a clerk in the offices of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad Company at Lima, and Ruth, in 1896, who is a graduate of the Wilmington high school. Mr. and Mrs. Weltz move in the best social circles of the community and, because of their genial dispositions and genuine worth, they have endeared themselves to all who know them. Mr. Weltz takes a deep and abiding interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of the community and county and gives his support to all worthy movements for the advancement of his fellow citizens.

GEORGE A. BOBBITT.

Among the highly-respected citizens of Washington township and the retired farmers now living in the pleasant village of Cuba is George A. Bobbitt, who owns a magnificent farm of one hundred and seventy-two acres in Washington township.

George A. Bobbitt was born in Highland county, Ohio, near Lynchburg, on November 2, 1851, the son of James W. and Margaret (Mann) Bobbitt, the former of whom was a native of Virginia, born near Lynchburg, and the latter a native of Kentucky. Educated in the common schools of Virginia, the late James W. Bobbitt went, when a lad of sixteen years, from Virginia to Cincinnati, helping to drive a large number of horses. He paid his fare back to Virginia by firing on a boat. Subsequently, he brought his mother to Clinton county on horseback. Having learned the carpenter's trade when a young man, he worked at this trade practically all of his life. After his marriage he purchased a farm of about one hundred acres in Highland county, near Lynchburg, where he reared his family, engaging in farming in connection with his trade. He also built a saw-mill in Lynchburg and engaged in custom sawing. Later he became connected with the railroad at Lynchburg as the agent, at which time he began buying and shipping live stock and dealing in coal and lumber and became a very well-known and successful man.

To James W. and Margaret (Mann) Bobbitt three children were born, namely: Mary C., who married Daniel Sharp, who is now deceased; Henry, who married Mary Brown, and George A., the subject of this sketch. The Bobbitt family were members of the Christian church, and Mr. Bobbitt was a Democrat in politics.

George A. Bobbitt was educated in the common schools, receiving a good education in the schools of Lynchburg. Until 1892 he was engaged with his father in various business enterprises to which he had devoted himself. In 1892, however, he moved to a farm near Cuba, in Washington township, Clinton county, and now owns the farm, "Sunny Slope," containing one hundred and seventy-two acres. He was engaged in general farming and stock raising until the fall of 1911, when he retired and moved to Cuba, where he now lives.

Mr. Bobbitt has been twice married, his first wife having been Nancy E. Kibby, the daughter of Ephraim and Ruth Kibby, to which union were born seven children, two of whom, William F., the first born, and Charles K., the third, are deceased, both dying early in life. The living children are: Cleo P., who is at home; Clarence, who married Veda J. Mitchell; Winchester; Mary D., who is the wife of Joseph Kelley and has one child, Mary F., and Ruth, who married Frank Burnett and has two children, Margaret and Morine. After the death of Mrs. Nancy E. Bobbitt, Mr. Bobbitt married, secondly, Katie E. Spilker, the daughter of Charles Spilker, to which second union there have been born three children, Paul James, Catherine and George E.

Mr. Bobbitt has always occupied a position of prominence in local politics and was elected on the Democratic ticket to the office of trustee, a position in which he served two terms. He also served on the school board for six or seven years. Fraternally, Mr. Bobbitt is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

GEORGE S. HODGSON.

Born and reared in Green township, this county, the late George S. Hodgson, who was the son of Isaiah Morris and Mary Jane (Armstrong) Hodgson, first saw the light of day on March 31, 1864.

Mr. Hodgson's father, also a native of Green township, was born on March 24, 1834, in Kentucky. Mr. Hodgson's paternal grandparents, Eleazar and Mary Ann (Wilhelm) Hodgson, were natives of North Carolina and Pennsylvania, respectively. Eleazar Hodgson was the son of Richard Hodgson, who married Hannah Irwin. They lived in North Carolina for a time but later immigrated to Virginia, from which state they moved to Clinton county, being well-known pioneers in this county. From Clinton county they moved to Indiana, where Richard Hodgson died. After his death, his widow returned to Clinton county, where she spent the rest of her life, passing away at an advanced age. Eleazar Hodgson was but a lad when he came to Clinton county with his parents. He was reared to manhood here and was married in this county on September 25, 1825, to Mary Ann Wilhelm, to which union there were born nine children, Catherine, Sarah Ann, Eliza Jane, Isaiah Morris, Hannah, Rebecca, George, Margaret Emily and Eleazar. The parents of these children spent their last days in Clinton county.

Mary Jane Armstrong, the mother of George S. Hodgson, was a daughter of Britton B. and Maria (Harris) Armstrong, the former of whom was born in Scotland in 1815, and the latter, a native of Kentucky, daughter of Capt. George Harris, who died in the state of Kentucky. Britton B. Armstrong was the son of Walter and Mary Ann Armstrong. Walter Armstrong died in Kentucky, and after his death his widow moved to Cincinnati, where she died at the age of one hundred and fifteen years. Britton B. Armstrong and wife came to Clinton county about 1840 and spent the remainder of their lives in this county, the latter dying in 1857 and the former in 1903, at the age of eighty-eight years. Their remains were buried in the cemetery at Snow Hill, in Green township. They were the parents of ten children, of whom John, William, Elizabeth Ann, Walter, Ruth, Nancy and Britton are deceased, the living children being Mary Jane, Missouri and James.

Isaiah Morris and Mary Jane (Armstrong) Hodgson were the parents of four children, of whom Francis M. died at the age of seven years. Those who grew to maturity were John, Maria and George S., the latter the subject of this sketch. John Hodgson married Amanda Edwards, to which union were born five children, namely: Eva, who married Carl Conner and has two children, Ada Belle and Bert; Willie, who married Pearl Simpson and has three children, Kenneth, Hazel and Lola; Ollie, who died when a young woman; Charles (deceased), who married a Miss Burk and had three children; and Catherine, who married Victor Burk. Maria Hodgson (deceased) married Lafayette Dailey and had five children, as follow: Morris; Addie, who married Willbur Rhonemus and has three children: Mrs. Catherine Fletcher; Carrie and Basil.

George S. Hodgson was reared on a farm in Green township, this county, and for twenty-five years operated a tile factory. After abandoning the tile business, he took up farming and became the owner of one hundred acres of land, which is now owned by his widow.

On January 15, 1886, George S. Hodgson was married to Mary Rolston, who was born on April 18, 1869, in Ireland, the daughter of Robert and Anna (Wallace) Rolston, who came to Clinton county in 1870. Mrs. Hodgson's father is a Republican in politics. Both he and his wife were members of the Christian church at Antioch, but were formerly members of the Presbyterian church. Mrs. Hodgson's father was born in 1831 and died on August 16, 1915. His widow, who was born on November 22, 1839, is still living in Green township. They reared a family of seven children, John, James, Ellen, Mary, Lina, Elizabeth and Emma.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE S. HODGSON.

To George S. and Mary (Rolston) Hodgson were born six children, namely: Cora; Vadah, who married Robert McDermott and has one child, Harold Chester, born on June 8, 1915; Clarence Dewey, Leo Frances, Pearl Elizabeth and Hilda Bernice.

Mr. and Mrs. Hodgson were members of the Christian church and Mrs. Hodgson is still identified with that church. The late George S. Hodgson was identified with the Republican party and, for four years, served as school director. He was a well-known and highly-respected citizen of Clinton county, and his death, on March 16, 1914, was widely mourned.

CARLETON L. BAUGH.

The subject of this sketch is one of the prominent business men of this county, being not only interested in farming, but also in manufacturing. His people have long been residents of this county, and his family is therefore prominently identified with the county's history. Carleton L. Baugh was born in Vernon township, this county, on August 9, 1878, the son of John C. and Emma D. (Lawrence) Baugh, the former born at Clarksville in 1851, and the latter in Vernon township in 1855. John C. Baugh was the son of Dr. Hugh W. and Elizabeth (Wilkerson) Baugh, the former born in Carthage, Tennessee, in 1817, and the latter in Washington township, Warren county, Ohio, in 1821. It was about the year 1845 that Dr. Hugh W. Baugh came to this county and began the practice of his profession in Clarksville, where he spent the rest of his life, his death occurring in 1892. His wife had passed away the preceding year. Emma D. Lawrence was the daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Marshall) Lawrence, both natives of Vernon township, this county, Jonathan Lawrence having been a son of Jonathan and Elizabeth (Mulford) Lawrence, pioneers of this county. John C. Baugh was a prominent farmer and stock raiser in this county and also an extensive dealer in live stock. Besides his agricultural enterprises, he was a stockholder and director of the Farmers National Bank. He was a Republican, a Free Mason and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He died in 1908, being survived by his widow, who is still living in Clarksville, and three children, Mamie F., Carleton L. and Hugh W.

Carleton L. Baugh received his education in the Clarksville schools. As a young man he engaged in the mercantile business at Clarksville and accumulated some property in the town, his possessions including the building now occupied by L. L. White. Besides being one of the owners of the Baugh, Batten & Baugh canning factory, he is the president and general manager of the same and also has farming interests in Vernon township.

In 1897 Carleton L. Baugh was united in marriage to Clarice Murrell, of Warren county, daughter of William Murrell, of Clarksville, and to this union five children have been born, J. Murrell, Elizabeth, Virginia, who died in 1908, John C. and Florence.

Mr. Baugh is a Republican and a member of the Masonic order at Clarksville, a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Fraternal Order of Eagles at Wilmington. He has always taken an active interest in public affairs and, like his father and grandfather before him, is a man whose influence is felt in the community in which he lives, for his interests are broad and his activities many. Honest and upright, forceful and kind, loyal and true, public spirited and patriotic, he is widely known and highly esteemed as a citizen and as a neighbor.

JAMES F. BENNETT.

James F. Bennett, a well-known farmer and quarryman of Union township, this county, as well as a successful dealer in feed, wool and live stock, has not been extensively favored by inheritance and wealth, or the assistance of influential friends. Nevertheless, by industry and the economical management of his business, he has obtained a comfortable station in life, and has made his influence felt in the community life of Clinton county, where he was born about sixty years ago. Because of his honorable career and his steady progress as a farmer and business man, he is eminently entitled to rank as one of the representative men of this county.

James F. Bennett was born on July 22, 1855, in Union township, this county, at a point one hundred yards from the home in which he is now living, the son of Levi T. and Sarah (Wilson) Bennett, both of whom are now deceased. The paternal grandparents of Mr. Bennett, Thomas Bennett and wife, were separated by the death of the grandmother when their son, Levi T., was a mere lad. After his first wife's death, Thomas Bennett married the second time and by his second marriage was the father of a numerous family. In pioneer times he had come to Ohio from Maryland and located in the village of Deserted Camp. He was a cabinet-maker by trade, and he and all of his family were devout and loyal members of the Friends church. Late in life he removed to Springboro, in Warren county, this state, where he died at the age of ninety-five years. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Bennett were Alexander and Sarah Wilson, who came from Pennsylvania to Ohio in pioneer times and settled in Union township, this county. Alexander Wilson owned several farms and conducted a large general store, a short distance from Wilmington, where he handled all the produce which the farmers had to sell and bought live stock extensively. He also lived to the age of ninety-five years. His wife, who was an earnest member of the Christian church, passed away at the age of seventy-five.

The late Levi T. Bennett was an infant when he was brought to Clinton county by his parents. Later the family lived for a time in Clark county, Ohio, and after his mother's death, he made his home near Dover, this county, with the Moses Frazier family, who reared him to manhood. He lived with this family until his marriage, after which event he purchased one hundred acres of land in Union township, where his son, James F., now lives. Later he made the following additions to his farm: ninety acres from the George Haworth estate; twenty-five acres from the Wilson estate, and fifty-seven acres, which he bought from Jefferson Fritz, a total of two hundred and seventy-seven acres, all of which James F. Bennett now owns. The late Levi T. Bennett was a Republican in politics, and took an active part in local public affairs, in which he exerted considerable influence. He took an especial pride in raising and feeding hogs for the market, and was very successful in that line. Both he and his wife were earnest and faithful members of the Christian church. They were the parents of three sons: Alexander, who lives on a farm in Fayette county, Ohio; Thomas, a farmer of Union township, this county, who died in 1913, and James F., the immediate subject of this review.

James F. Bennett attended the public schools of his home township, and after finishing his common-school education took a course at the normal school at Lebanon, Ohio. Afterwards he remained at home on his father's farm until his marriage, after which he purchased a farm west of Wilmington, where he lived for two years, at the expiration of which time he disposed of this farm and returned to his father's farm to manage the estate and take care of his parents, who were becoming feeble. Upon the death of his parents he inherited his share of the home farm and later purchased the interests of the other heirs. Mr. Bennett still manages his farm and makes his home there, but about 1885 he started in to buy and sell live stock, and has been extensively engaged in that business since that time. About 1890 he opened an office in Wilmington, and added wool-buying to his business. Later he entered into a partnership with a Mr. Thompson, and this arrangement still continues, the firm maintaining an office on West Main street, in Wilmington, where they handle seeds and wool and buy and sell live stock. Mr. Bennett is also developing a large stone quarry along the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, east of Wilmington, where he has installed a pulverizer for manufacturing lime to be used as fertilizer. This is a large industry in this section of the state, and promises soon to develop into an even greater business than it is now. Mr. Bennett also produces large quantities of cracked stone, which is used in road building.

JAMES F. BENNETT.

On June 6, 1877, James F. Bennett was married to Ida B. Pendry, who was born in Liberty township, this county, a daughter of John and Myra (Jenkins) Pendry, both of whom are deceased. They were natives of this county, and were prominent residents of Union township.

To James F. and Ida B. (Pendry) Bennett five children have been born, namely: Effie, the wife of Lester F. Thatcher, a farmer of Union township; Jessie L., the wife of Oliver Vandervort, a farmer of Green township; Roy P., who married Elma Fife, and lives on a farm owned by Mr. Bennett; Harry R., who married Cleona Bowers, and lives at home with his father, and Earl T., who married Ruth Rhonemus, and lives on a farm in Union township.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett and family are all earnest and devoted members of the Walnut Street Christian church at Wilmington. Politically, Mr. Bennett is identified with the Republican party, and has been more or less active in the councils of his party in this county. James F. Bennett is a man of more than ordinary business ability, and is not only possessed of a high order of business ability, but is an influential and honorable citizen, one of those men who have done so much to develop the resources of this splendid region, and is well known and popular throughout Clinton county.

JAMES W. BAUGHMAN.

James W. Baughman was born in this county on September 18, 1859, his parents being Henry and Catherine Baughman, who came to this country and settled in Clinton county in the fifties, beginning their life in the New World on the forty-eight-acre homestead on which the subject is still living. Henry Baughman was a Republican, and he and his wife were members of the Catholic church. They were the parents of eight children, as follow: Kate (deceased), who was the wife of William Cook; Maggie, Mrs. George Ingersoll, Caroline (deceased), Minnie (deceased), Samuel, James W. and Lizzie, wife of J. W. Stanfield, of Clarksville, this county. Henry Baughman died in March, 1891, he being then seventy-five years of age. His widow's death followed two years later, she being then seventy-five years of age.

James W. Baughman attended the local schools near his boyhood home, working meantime on the farm of his father. He now owns this farm, together with forty-three additional acres, all of which has been improved by him, the land being located one and one-half miles from Clarksville. He and his wife have been hard-working people, and are now being rewarded for their years of toil and self-denial. Mrs. Baughman was, prior to her marriage, which occurred on December 2, 1884, Elvia Stanfield, a daughter of James and Mahala (Turner) Stanfield, who are mentioned elsewhere in this publication. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Baughman has been blessed by five children, namely: Clara, who married Horace Kearns and has one child, a son, Burdette; Edith (deceased), and Kate, James Mearl and Clarence Emmet, who are still at home.

While recognizing the fact that Mr. Baughman's life has been spent in comparative seclusion, away from the strife and turmoil of the great world, yet it has not been without interest and value. He has done each day's task with faithful and painstaking care and has not complained; in devotion to his immediate and necessary work, he has not forgotten the needs and claims of others. He expresses his convictions along political lines by allegiance to the Republican party, and as a member of the school board is true to the best interests of the public. As a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, he co-operates with Mrs. Baughman in working for its welfare, and as a resident of Clinton county, he is included among its well-known and popular men.

ZIMRI H. CAREY.

The Carey family of Clinton county are believed to have been related to Queen Elizabeth, of England, the daughter of King Henry VIII, who reigned from 1649 to 1660. The farthest traces of the Carey family in America date from the coming of John and Mary Carey with three or more sons and perhaps some daughters, about 1681, at the time of the establishment of Penn's colony. They settled in Bucks county, Pennsylvania. Of these sons, John Carey, whose wife's name was Elizabeth, had a son, Samuel, who was born on April 2, 1752. Samuel Carey married Rachel Doane, who was born on February 11, 1754. They moved to Loudoun county, Virginia, and from there to Grayson county, Virginia. About 1818 they moved from Grayson county to Highland county, Ohio. Later, Samuel Carey returned to Virginia and on his way back to Highland county was taken suddenly ill and died at Salt Creek, east of Chillicothe, Ohio. This grave is now marked by a stone wall, put there by Gershom Perdue, and is located on the farm of Martha Colwell.

Zimri H. Carey, a retired farmer of New Vienna, this county, who was born in Penn township, Highland county, Ohio, on May 3, 1847, is a grandson of Samuel and Rachel (Doane) Carey. He is a son of Elias and Margaret (Hussey) Carey, the former of whom was born in Grayson county, Virginia, on December 3, 1783, and the latter in Randolph county, North Carolina, August 19, 1801. She came to Ohio in 1805 with her parents, Stephen and Mary (Underwood) Hussey, who located in Highland county, where they spent the rest of their lives, the father dying in 1853 and the mother in 1841.

Elias Carey was the youngest of nine children born to Samuel and Rachel (Doane) Carey, the others being as follow: Cynthia, born on January 11, 1777, who married Joseph Bradfield; Sarah, July 7, 1778, married Elias Knight; Jonathan, February 28, 1781, married Ruth Bond; John, June 22, 1783, married Margaret Green; Samuel, December 2, 1785, married Anna McPherson; Rachel, October 12, 1787, married John Green; Elizabeth, September 19, 1789, died unmarried, and Thomas, January 13, 1791, who married Rhoda Ballard. Elias Carey died in Penn township, Highland county, in 1872, and his widow on July 2, 1883. He was a farmer by occupation, a Republican in politics and a member of the Friends church.

To Elias and Margaret (Hussey) Carey were born thirteen children, as follow: Asenath, born on January 3, 1820, who married Samuel Michael on January 11, 1838; Sarah, February 28, 1821, married Dr. M. M. Buffington on December 8, 1841; Mary, November 26, 1822, married Evan R. Jones on October 7, 1847; Martha, July 24, 1824, died unmarried on March 6, 1842; Stephen, February 28, 1826, married Anner Margaret Lane on October 6, 1847; Eunice, December 8, 1827, married Albert W. Holmes on October 7, 1847; William, January 5, 1829, married Almira Conard on November 23, 1854; Joshua, July 2, 1831, died on March 4, 1842; Eliza, March 31, 1833, died on May 11, 1859; Preston, September 3, 1834, married Margaret M. Ross on December 30, 1860; Elizabeth, February 24, 1837, married F. Perry Naylor on December 28, 1882; Joseph, January 1, 1841, married Rebecca Kerr on September 29, 1869; and Zimri, the subject of this sketch. Of these children only Elizabeth, Joseph and Zimri are now living. Joseph lives in Cass county, Indiana.

Zimri H. Carey was reared on a farm in Highland county, Ohio, and was educated principally in the schools of Penn township. For fifteen years, Mr. Carey taught school and afterward took up farming. He now owns one hundred and ninety-five acres in Penn township and his son, Harry Lee, owns sixty acres adjoining the home farm. In August, 1911, Mr. Carey moved to New Vienna, this county, where he now lives retired. He owns a good residence on South street and Highland avenue and the business building occupied by the Harry Custis furniture store. Mr. Carey has acquired all of his property and accumulated all of his wealth by his own individual exertions.

On January 31, 1884, Zimri H. Carey was married to Ida B. Fenner, to which union four children were born, Charles H., Leslie E., Harry Lee and Lillian. Charles H. Carey, who was born on January 31, 1885, was educated in the public schools and was graduated from the New Vienna high school and from the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, with the degrees of Bachelor of Science and Master of Science. He is now district superintendent of the Germantown schools of German township, Montgomery county, Ohio, and for four years was superintendent of the schools at West Alexandria, Preble county. On July 31, 1907, Charles H. Carey was married to Florence C. Bratten, to which union three children have been born, Marjorie, Dorothy and Rolland. Leslie E. Carey was born on January 30, 1887, and was educated in the public schools, being graduated from the New Vienna high school. He later was graduated from the Ohio Northern University at Ada, Ohio, with the degree of Bachelor of Science and for several years taught school. He was also superintendent for three years of the Lyle schools of Warren county, Ohio. Later he went to Chicago as assistant paymaster of the Pullman Palace Car Company, but, after being in Chicago for one year, came back to Ohio, accepting a position as teacher of science in the Greenfield high school in Highland county, later being called to the superintendency of the schools at Somerville, this state. On July 29, 1915, he married Mabel E. Strait, of Dayton, Ohio. Harry Lee Carey was born on October 27, 1888, and attended the New Vienna high school. He is a farmer and lives on the old homestead in Penn township, Highland county. In September, 1911, he married Estella McCoy, to which union have been born two children, Floyd Leslie and Thelma. Lillian Carey was born on March 10, 1899, and is a student in the New Vienna high school. The mother of these children died on February 21, 1910.

Mr. Carey is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and his wife was also a member of that church. He is a Republican in politics and was, for a long time, a member of the school board in Penn township.

JOHN W. BERNARD.

John W. Bernard, a well-known retired farmer of Green township, this county, was born on October 6, 1838, the son of George Washington and Harriet (McConnell) Bernard. The complete history of the Bernard family is given in the biographical sketch of James E. Bernard, presented elsewhere in this volume.

John W. Bernard, like his brothers and sisters, was reared on the farm and was educated in the neighborhood schools, spending his boyhood on the farm now occupied by Elijah Q. Bernard. At one time Mr. Bernard owned three hundred and sixty acres of land, but he has given all of it to his children, except one hundred and thirty-eight acres, which he still owns.

In January, 1868, John W. Bernard was married to Louisa Kier, who was born in Highland county in 1844, the daughter of Mathias and Jane (Bell) Kier, now deceased. To this union eight children were born, as follow: William, a farmer in Green township, this county; Mary, the wife of Dr. Lorenzo Ayers, of Green township; Rosa, who married John Cox, of near Centerville, Ohio; Albert, who is unmarried and lives at home with his parents; Clara, who died at the age of sixteen, and Amy H., John F. and Abbie, who died in childhood.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Bernard are members of the Friends church. Mr. Bernard votes the Democratic ticket. Theirs have been lives full of good works, and in "the sunset time" of their lives they enjoy many and continuous evidences of the respect and esteem of the entire community in which they have lived so long and so usefully.

HENRY H. PIDGEON.

The twentieth-century farmer suffers few of the handicaps which surrounded the pioneer farmer in Ohio. He is no longer compelled to rise early in the morning and continue his labors far into the evening. Today he can do as much work in half a day as his father could do fifty years ago in a whole day. The free mail delivery leaves the daily paper on his doorstep each morning; the telephone puts him into communication with his neighbors and in many places the interurban car and the automobile enable him to participate in all of the features of city life. The present generation of farmers have few forests to clear and few swamps to drain, while hundreds of inventions have lightened their labors. Moreover, many farmers have developed profitable departments of stock raising and their revenue is no longer confined to the sale of corn and wheat and oats. Fine herds of thoroughbred cattle and hogs have made it possible for the farm to equal the gross revenue of many of the large factories in the city. Henry H. Pidgeon, an enterprising farmer of Union township, has taken advantage of all the modern opportunities of farming and has made all of them count in his battle for success.

Henry H. Pidgeon was born in Guilford county, North Carolina, on July 26, 1851, the son of Charles and Catherine (Horney) Pilgeon, both natives of Stokes county, that state, the former born on March 1, 1806, and died on July 26, 1898, and the latter born on September 23, 1810, and died on December 27, 1886.

Isaac Pidgeon, the paternal great-grandfather of Henry H. Pidgeon, was a strict Quaker, who about 1740 emigrated from Ireland because of religious persecution, to Chowan county, North Carolina. He was a millwright by trade and owned three different mills during his life, the last on Rich fork. Although he lived in America during the Revolutionary War he was not called upon to serve, since he was a member of the Quaker church, which opposes military service. His son, Charles Pidgeon, Sr., grandfather of Henry H., was a blacksmith, mechanic, carpenter and home physician. In fact, he was an all-around good neighbor and owned a splendid farm. He also was a strict Quaker. His wife, Elizabeth Crews, to whom he was married on November 11, 1789, was a native of Virginia and died in the early forties. He died in 1854. They were the parents of twelve children. The father of Henry H., Charles Pidgeon, Jr., grew up in Stokes county, North Carolina, and early in life located in Guilford county, same state, where, at the breaking out of the Civil War, he owned five hundred acres of land on Deep river. He was an industrious man and, with the able assistance of his good wife, a successful financier. There were many tenant houses on his farm, but he kept no slaves and was opposed to slavery. Charles Pidgeon, Jr., and Catherine Horney were married on October 8, 1829. They made a great deal of money, before railroads were built, hauling merchandise from the region where they lived to distant markets, such as Fayetteville, North Carolina, and Camden, South Carolina. They had a six-horse wagon and hauled dry-goods and groceries on return trips.

At the beginning of the Civil War, Charles Pidgeon, Jr., was a Northern sympathizer. He was strongly opposed to slavery and was anxious to get his sons away, so they could avoid service in the Confederate army. In the spring of 1861 he had a sale and sold all of his stock and farm implements, with the intention of moving to Ohio. The Southerners objected to his leaving and sent a troop of soldiers to attend the sale, but they were treated to a splendid chicken dinner and did not interfere. The trip to Ohio, however, was delayed until the fall of 1861, when, after the success of the Confederates at the first battle of Bull Run, it was thought the war would soon end victoriously for the South and the departure of the Pidgeons would make little difference. They came in three wagons, bringing with them a carriage and a buggy and some live stock, with them coming two other families. A son, John Pidgeon, and his family and his sister, Emily, and her family, made the trip north by the railroad, the remainder of the family coming by wagon. On the way the other families fell behind because the Pidgeon horses were faster. Charles Pidgeon, Jr., had sold his whole five hundred acres in North Carolina for less than would be required today to buy a small farm in Ohio. On the way north the family encountered a horse trader, who engaged in buying horses in Ohio for the Southern army. He told Mr. Pidgeon it would be impossible to get out through the Cumberland Gap, since it was guarded and the armies would let no one pass. However, it was pointed out that it might be made by the way of the Big Sandy river. Eventually, the family escaped to Ohio by this perilous route and settled in Clinton county. The first year they rented a farm, which later Charles Pidgeon purchased, and upon which Henry H. Pidgeon now lives. The next year they rented land in the Dover neighborhood and then rented a farm for the next five years near New Vienna, at the end of which time Charles Pidgeon purchased the farm in Union township, which he had first rented on coming to Ohio, and on this two-hnudred-acre farm he spent the rest of his life, his sons working hard in the meantime to pay for it. He and his wife were regular attendants at the meetings of the Friends church, and rather strict in their views. Charles Pidgeon was a pronounced Abolitionist and not afraid to speak his mind, even when living in the South, where it was considered almost treason to oppose slavery. Although a Republican at that time of life he later became a Prohibitionist.

Charles and Catherine (Horney) Pidgeon were the parents of twelve children, namely: Emily (deceased), who married John Briggs; Mary, who married Walter Cammack, of Virginia; John, a Quaker minister at Orchard Grove, Ohio, who married Caroline Thompson; Hannah, who married William Charles, both now deceased; Julia A., widow of William Henry; Samuel, a school teacher and farmer of Jamestown, Ohio; David, who lives in California; Jeffrey, who died in infancy; Charles Addison, a school teacher, who died at the age of twenty-six; Henry H., the subject of this sketch; Cornelia, who married Bruce Sprague, of Union township, and Louisa, who married Aden Starbuck.

Mr. Pidgeon's maternal grandparents were Jeffrey and Hannah Horney, who lived and died in North Carolina, where they were farmers and strict Quakers of the old style.

Henry H. Pidgeon attended the public schools of North Carolina and was ten years old when the family removed to Ohio. After coming to this state he attended the old Dutch district school and the Dover district school. He worked at home on his father's farm until twenty-five years old and then purchased fifty acres of his father's farm. After his mother's death he moved to the homestead, renting it from his father for a few years. When his father died, in 1898, he purchased one hundred acres of the homestead, including the home buildings, upon which he borrowed six thousand dollars, payable in ten years. Previously, he had sold his first fifty acres of land and had used the proceeds to apply to the second farm. In 1905 Mr. Pidgeon purchased fifty-two acres out of the Alexander Jenkins farm, adjoining the home farm, and now has one hundred and fifty-two acres in all. He makes a specialty of thoroughbred Shorthorn cattle and sells young cattle for breeding purposes. He is also an extensive hog breeder and very frequently feeds a carload of cattle.

On August 28, 1876, Henry H. Pidgeon was married to Hannah Carter, who was born at Grassy Run, in this county, on September 2, 1858, the daughter of George Carter, a devout Quaker. To this union there were born three children, namely: Ethel, born on April 3, 1880, married, November 14, 1900, Elza Hughes, a Green township farmer; Lillian, June 18, 1883, who, on August 3, 1905, married Morris Painter, of Wilmington, and Homer, March 7, 1885, married Mayme Huffman on February 27, 1907, and is the manager of a six-hundred-acre farm in Union township. The mother of these children died in September, 1888, and on January 1, 1890, Mr. Pidgeon married, secondly, Ella F. McKay, who was born on June 8, 1861, in Liberty township this county, the daughter of Tilghman and Sarah McKay, of that township, the former of whom is deceased, but whose widow is still living. Tilghman McKay was a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Lumberton. To this second union there have been two children born, Oscar, born on July 15, 1891, a member of the Wilmington Auto Company, and Willard, November 8, 1895, who lives at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Pidgeon are members of the Friends church at Dover. Both are elders in the church and active in its various beneficences. Mr. Pidgeon is independent in politics. He has served as school director in Union township and he and his family are held in high regard throughout that community.

ORVILLE B. MOORE.

Orville B. Moore, the proprietor of a splendid farm of one hundred and fifty-five acres in Green township, this county, is a native of Union township, this county, where he was born on November 29, 1860, the son of Huston and Martha (Wilson) Moore, the former of whom was born in 1831, in Virginia, and the latter in this county, the daughter of John and Nellie Wilson, pioneers of Clinton county. Mrs. Nellie Wilson died a few years ago, at the age of ninety-eight years.

Huston Moore came to Clinton county when he was a young man and was married in this county, first to a Miss Bentley, by whom he had one child, John. By his second marriage, to Martha Wilson, there were born three children, Orville B., the subject of this sketch, Thomas and Nellie. Mrs. Martha (Wilson) Moore died in 1912. Huston Moore is identified with the Democratic party and is a member of the Christian church. He is now living retired in Wilmington, this county, in his eighty-fourth year.

Orville B. Moore was born and reared on the farm and was educated in the public schools of this county. In 1883 he was married to Lida Sprague, who was born in Clinton county, the daughter of William Henry and Caroline Sprague, who came to this county from Staten Island, New York, and both of whom are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Orville B. Moore have five children, all of whom are living, William, Edith, Raymond, Mary and Nellie.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore and family are members of the Christian church at New Antioch. In politics, Mr. Moore is a Democrat.

REUBEN B. PEELLE.

Among the strong and influential citizens of Clinton county, the record of whose lives have become an essential part of the history of this county, Reuben B. Peelle occupies a prominent place. For years he has exerted a beneficial influence in the locality where he resides, his chief characteristics being keenness of perception, tireless energy, honesty of purpose and motive and every-day common sense. These qualities have enabled him not only to advance his own interests, but also largely to contribute to the moral and material advancement of the community as a whole.

Reuben B. Peelle was born on August 1, 1845, in Wilson township, this county, the son of William and Clarissa (Starbuck) Peelle, the former of whom was born in August, 1808, in Highland county, Ohio, and died in 1884, and the latter in 1814 in Union township, this county, and died in October, 1864. William Peelle was the son of John and Lydia (Bundy) Peelle, both natives of North Carolina, who were married in Belmont county, Ohio, at the Concord monthly meeting of the Friends church. In 1805 John Peelle went from North Carolina to Richmond, Indiana, on a trip and then located in Grayson county, Virginia. In 1807 he went to Belmont county, Ohio, where Lydia Bundy's parents lived, and there he was married. Subsequently, he and his wife moved to Highland county, Ohio, where they engaged in farming until 1810, when they moved to Greene county, Ohio, where they lived until 1818, in which year they came to Clinton county and purchased fifty acres of land in Wilson township. Later they added to this land until they owned a large tract, and there they reared a family of seven children. An elder in the Friends church, for years John Peelle was head of the meetings of Grassy Run and was a very influential citizen in the community. In politics, he was a strong anti-slavery Whig. His principal diversion was fishing and he spent many hours in this pleasant pastime. John Peelle was the son of Reuben and Rhoda Peelle, the former born in 1750 and the latter in 1760, in North Carolina. They reared a large family of children, several of whom came to Ohio, and about 1830 they followed their children to this state and spent the rest of their lives in this county, their remains being buried in the Grassy Run Friends meeting burying ground in Wilson township. Originally of English origin, the present generation of the Peelle family has the family history which dates back to Robert Peelle, who lived in North Carolina in 1707, the grandfather of Reuben Peelle, the latter's father having been Josiah Peelle. From the earliest history of the family in America, the Peelles have been members of the Quaker church.

The maternal grandparents of Reuben B. Peelle were Gayer and Susanna (Dillon) Starbuck, the former of whom was born on Nantucket Island, and the latter in Guilford county, North Carolina, where they were married about 1807 and who came to Clinton county and settled in Union township in 1810, at which time Clinton county was being organized. Gayer Starbuck was a Whig in politics and was an active member of the Friends church, being devoted to the orthodox branch of the church. He was a successful farmer and he and his children cleared up large tracts of land. He owned the first steam saw-mill in the county and also operated a grist-mill. He and his wife were the parents of ten children.

From the time he was seven years old, William Peelle lived in this county. He was a well-educated and well-informed man, having supplemented his education in the subscription schools of the period by home study. Always a strong Abolitionist, he was first a Whig and later a Republican. An elder in the Quaker church, he succeeded his father as head of the Grassy Run meetings and became very active in church work. Incidentally, he held several township offices, all of which he filled with credit. He owned several farms, one of which, a farm of one hundred and seventy acres, situated in Wilson township, is now owned by Reuben B. Peelle, the subject of this sketch.

To William and Clarissa (Starbuck) Pelle thirteen children were born, eleven of whom are deceased, the two living children being Reuben B., the subject of this sketch, and Louisa, who is the wife of Elwood Moon, a manufacturer of pumps at Sabina, Ohio. The deceased children are: Susanna, who married Elihu Carter; John, who was a farmer in Wilson township; Isaiah, Jesse, Wilson, Asa, Elihu, Lydia, Moses, Aaron and Josiah.

After attending the district schools of Clinton county, Reuben B. Peelle became a student at Earlham College at Richmond, Indiana, and later at the Lebanon Normal College at Lebanon, Ohio. Subsequently, he taught school for five years, and in 1877 went to California, where he remained for two years in Colusa county. Upon his return from California, Mr. Peelle married and took charge of the home place for his father. In 1884 he bought this farm, consisting of one hundred and seventy acres, and in 1896 purchased ten acres near Wilmington, where he built a magnificent home, where he has lived ever since. Still later he purchased the Tim Bennett farm of one hundred and sixteen acres. For many years he has specialized in raising thoroughbred Durham cattle and is well known in this section as a successful breeder.

On January 20, 1879, Reuben B. Peelle married Emma Elliott, daughter of Solomon and Penelope Elliott, residents of Henry county, Indiana, who died in 1889. Three years later Mr. Peelle married, secondly, Mrs. Rosaline (Cryder) Cline, a widow, who was born in Ross county, Ohio, the daughter of Andrew Cryder, who was a farmer of that county, and to this second union has been born one child, Effie Olive, who was born on August 10, 1895, and is now a student at Wilmington College.

Mr. and Mrs. Peelle are devoted birthright members of the Friends church. Politically, Mr. Peelle is a Republican. He undoubtedly has exerted a wholesome influence on the social and commercial life of Clinton county and is one of the most highly respected citizens of this county.

DANIEL WEBSTER HAINES.

Daniel Webster Haines, one of the leading members of the Chester township school board for the past decade, is a man of pleasing personality, well known and highly respected, as well as a successful farmer, who owns one hundred and fifty-five acres of land in that township and one hundred and sixty acres in Vernon township. By marriage, Mr. Haines is connected with the famous McKay family, whose ancestry goes back to the first settlement made in Clinton county. The Haines family maintain a home in Wilmington, where they live a part of the time.

Daniel Weebster Haines was born in Greene county, Ohio, on April 22, 1863, a son of Eber and Mary (Mendenhall) Haines, the former born in Caesars Creek township, Greene county, on January 20, 1825, and the latter born at West Milton, Miami county, this state, daughter of Thaddeus and Priscilla (Sturgeon) Mendenhall. Eber Haines was a son of Zimri and Elizabeth (Compton) Haines, natives of New Jersey and North Carolina, respectively. The latter came with her parents in a wagon from North Carolina to New Burlington, Ohio, when only four years of age. Zimri Haines emigrated from New Jersey to Pennsylvania, where he learned the trade of a cabinet-maker. Later he emigrated to Greene county, Ohio, where he spent the remainder of his life. He and his wife were the parents of ten children, Samuel, Elizabeth, Sarah, Maria, Elwood, Eber, Eli, Clapton, Asaph and Phoebe. The family were earnest members of the Friends church, while politically, Zimri Haines was an old-time Whig.

The sixth child of Zimri and Elizabeth (Compton) Haines was Eber, the father of Daniel Webster Haines. Eber Haines was a farmer all his life. After removing to Clinton county, in 1882, he began preaching, at the age of forty-five, and continued as a local minister in the Friends church until his death, on December 19, 1911. Daniel Webster Haines is one of ten children born to his parents, the others being as follow: Lydia Ellen, who died when young; Margaret, who married John Turner; Zimri D., who married Alice McKay; Thaddeus A., who married Eliza Mary Hiatt; Priscilla, who married Jacob B. McKay; Daniel W., twin brother of Wilomena, the latter of whom died early in life; Mary, who was the wife of William Hiatt, died at the age of twenty-eight, and Eber W., a well-known farmer of Chester township.

Daniel Webster Haines, who received his elementary education in the common schools of Paintersville, Greene county, later pursued his educational training in Chester township, this county, and when a young man began farming in that township. He continued farming there until 1903, at which time he purchased the old Mahlon Wall farm, consisting of ninety-six acres, and to this tract he has added from time to time until he is now the owner of one hundred and forty-five acres in Chester township and one hundred and sixty acres in Vernon township. He is an extensive breeder of Duroc-Jersey hogs, as well as a feeder of cattle.

On October 15, 1891, Daniel W. Haines was married to Estella McKay, who was born on July 5, 1865, the daughter of Alfred and Sarah L. (Miars) McKay. Mrs. Haines' father was a farmer in Liberty township and served as county commissioner of Clinton county for several years. He also served as county surveyor. Mrs. Haines was one of two children born to her parents. Her brother, Ray, is deceased.

To Daniel W. and Estella (McKay) Haines one son has been born, Eldon R., born on June 10, 1893, who is a graduate of Wilmington College, and is living at home with his parents.

MR. AND MRS. EBER HAINES.

Mr. and Mrs. Haines are members of the Friends church, and Mr. Haines votes the Republican ticket. They take an earnest interest in all good works in their neighborhood and are held in high regard throughout that vicinity.

ENOCH HOLADAY.

Enoch Holaday, now a successful and well-known farmer of Jefferson township, Clinton county, was born at Ogden, this county, on July 17, 1836, one of the eight children born to William and Ann (Carter) Holaday, both natives of the same village. William Holaday was the son of John and Susanna (Falkner) Holaday, both natives of the same neighborhood in Virginia. John Holaday fell in love with Susanna Falkner, and her people, who were opposed to his attentions, left Virginia for Ohio. He followed, however, to Greene county, where he married the girl of his choice. Later, Susanna Falkner's parents came to Clinton county, where they spent the rest of their lives. John Holaday erected a saw and grist-mill at Ogden, but later sold out and moved to Jefferson township, where he purchased over nine hundred acres of land and he and his wife died on their farm a little east of Westboro. They were the parents of eight children. John Holaday was a member of the Society of Friends and it took all his personal property except an ax to pay for his substitute to fight in the War of 1812. The government would have taken the ax, but his wife hid it. John Holaday, after taking some hogs to Westboro, was attacked by cholera. He spent the night at his daughter's home and died before morning. The maternal grandparents of Enoch Holaday were Nathaniel and Nancy (Baker) Carter, natives of Virginia and early settlers in Clinton county. Nathaniel Carter was a farmer and Quaker minister, who had a farm which adjoined that of Mr. Holaday's paternal grandparents. Both Nathaniel and Nancy Carter died on this farm. William Holaday received a limited education in the schools of Clinton county and was a farmer on the land now owned by his son, Enoch, all his life. He owned one hundred and eighty acres of land and was a member of the Quaker church.

Enoch Holaday was educated in the public schools of Jefferson township. He was a successful huckster for some time, but later went into the dry-goods business at Midland and lost everything he had saved. Afterward, about 1869, he moved to his present farm, and has since lived there, he and his wife being the owners of one hundred and twenty acres.

On October 18, 1866, Enoch Holaday was married to Sarah J. West, who was born in Clark township, this county, the daughter of Owen and Mary (Carey) West, the former a minister in the Friends church, who was born north of Martinsville, in this county, and the latter of whom was born near Hillsboro, in Highland county. The Rev. Owen West was the son of William and Sarah (Hamrick) West, natives probably of Virginia and early settlers in Clinton county. William West first located in Chester county, Pennsylvania, but later came to Clinton county and engaged in farming. His wife, Sarah Hamrick, was the daughter of Lockie Hamrick, who was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. Mary Carey was the daughter of John and Margaret (Greene) Carey, natives of Grayson county, Virginia, who moved to North Carolina and still later to Highland county, Ohio. Subsequently, they settled in Indiana, where they both died. They were Quakers and had ten children, of whom eight grew to maturity. Mrs. Holaday's father did not attend school a day in his life. His wife taught him his letters and he later became a minister in the Friends church. He was also a farmer and owned one hundred and sixty acres of land in Liberty township, Highland county, having moved there when his daughter, Sarah J., who later became Mrs. Holaday, was eight years old. His wife died in Highland county, but he died later at Martinsville, this county.

To Enoch and Sarah J. (West) Holaday five children have been born, of whom two, Lindley, the eldest, and Mary, the third born, died at the age of sixteen, the living children being Eva, Margaret and Elizabeth.

Mr. Holaday was drafted for service during the Civil War, but, as a member of the Friends church, his religious scruples would not permit military service and he paid three hundred dollars for a substitute, thus escaping service. He is a Republican and has served his township very efficiently as a road supervisor and as a school director.

WILLARD KLINE.

Willard Kline, a native of Stark county, Ohio, is at present one of the best-known farmers of Jefferson township, this county. He was born on October 28, 1862, the son of Philip and Magdelina (Bortz) Kline, natives of Germany and Stark county, Ohio, respectively. His paternal grandparents were residents of Philadelphia after emigrating to this country from Germany. His maternal grandfather, Michael Bortz, was a native of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, of German descent, who moved to Stark county, Ohio, purchased a farm and died in that county.

Philip Kline had completed his education in the German schools before coming to this country with his parents. He was a cabinet-maker and undertaker, trades which he had begun to learn in Germany, and for a time followed those vocations in Philadelphia. After his marriage, he removed to Malvern, Ohio, and followed his trade there for some time, after which he removed to a farm nearby and was engaged in agriculture the rest of his life, having been the owner of sixty acres of land. He and his wife were the parents of twelve children.

Willard Kline, one of the twelve children born to Philip and Magdelina (Bortz) Kline, was educated in the common schools of Stark county and of Malvern, under John Baxter. He also attended school at Mount Union and later attended a business college in Canton, under Griffith and Paterson, this latter school having been one of the first of its kind opened in the state of Ohio. Mr. Kline taught school for twelve years, and then became an interurban railway conductor out of Akron, a position which he held for six years. Afterwards he was in the coal business for two years in Akron, but sold out in 1910 and removed to Jefferson township, this county, where Mrs. Kline owned a farm. They now have three farms, comprising, in all, three hundred acres, and are engaged in general farming and stock raising.

On Thanksgiving Day, 1905, Willard Kline was married to Mrs. Ellen (Sliffe) Moon, a native of Tuscarawas county, Ohio, daughter of Jacob and Susanna (Longnecker) Sliffe, natives of Tuscarawas county, Ohio, and Fayette county, Pennsylvania, respectively, and widow of Jason Moon, for many years a teacher in Clinton county and a son of Thomas Moon, an early settler in Jefferson township, this county. Jason Moon, who died in 1903, was also a farmer, and served as principal of the Westboro and Blanchester schools for some time. He had been educated in the public schools and at the Lebanon Normal School.

Mrs. Kline's paternal grandparents were Henry and Magdelina (Biddle) Sliffe, of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, and of German descent, who settled on a half section of land in Tuscarawas county, Ohio. Her paternal great-grandparents were Henry and Elizabeth (Houk) Sliffe, of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, who also entered land in Tuscarawas county. Mrs. Kline's paternal grandmother was the daughter of Fred and Barbara (Bidler) Biddle, natives of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, and early settlers in Tuscarawas county, Ohio. The father of her paternal great-grandfather, Henry Sliffe, came to America from Germany and settled in Westmoreland county. Mrs. Kline's maternal grandparents were Peter and Elizabeth (Shank) Longnecker, of Fayette county, Pennsylvania, who were farmers in Holmes county, Ohio. Her maternal great-grandparents were Peter and Elizabeth (Noftsinger) Longnecker, of Fayette county, Pennsylvania, who migrated with the remainder of the family to Holmes county, Ohio. Mrs. Kline's mother, who, before her marriage, was Susana Longnecker, had four brothers, David, Joseph, John and Henry, who were soldiers in the Civil War. Mrs. Kline's father, Jacob Sliffe, was a farmer in Tuscarawas county, Ohio, all his life, and died in that county. He and his wife were the parents of thirteen children, of whom ten grew to maturity.

Mr. and Mrs. Kline are members of the Methodist Episcopal church at Westboro, and take an active part in the affairs of that congregation. They are highly-respected citizens of Jefferson township and are well known and widely admired.

CHARLES CALEB HIXSON.

The late Charles Caleb Hixson, well known as a farmer of Washington and Jefferson townships, this county, was born in Jefferson township in 1855, son of John A. and Nancy (Hull) Hixson, who came from Highland county, this state, to Clinton county.

Charles Caleb Hixson was educated in the public schools of Jefferson township, and was reared to the life of a farmer, which occupation he followed all his life. After reaching maturity, he engaged in farming for his father for a time, and also carried the mail for a period of six years, from Westboro to Wilmington, before the construction of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. At the time of his death he was the owner of one hundred acres of land, sixty acres of which is in Washington township and forty acres in Jefferson township, practically all in one body.

In 1879 Mr. Hixson was married to Minnie James, a native of Lumberton, this county, daughter of Isaac Newton and Isabelle (Miller) James, the former a native of Lumberton and the latter of Campbell county, Virginia. Isaac N. James was the son of Joshua and Maria (Burr) James, very early settlers of Wilmington. Isabelle Miller was the daughter of Ephraim and Esther (Keiter) Miller, the former born in Washington county, Pennsylvania, and the latter in Hampshire county, Virginia. Ephraim Miller was a soldier in the War of 1812, and after his marriage, in the Old Dominion state, in 1849, located in Clinton county, settling one mile west of Lumberton, where he was engaged in farming the rest of his life. The Millers are of Pennsylvania Quaker descent. Esther (Keiter) Miller was a daughter of George Keiter, a native of Virginia, of German descent.

To Mr. and Mrs. Hixson were born five children, Zella, Joseph Eugene, Walter Leroy, Charles Caleb, Jr., and Hallie Hazel. Of these children Zella, the first born, and Charles C., Jr., the fourth born, are deceased.

The late Charles Caleb Hixson was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and his widow is still an active and interested worker in that denomination.

WILLIAM A. POND.

Success generally comes as a consequence of closely applied energy, unfailing determination and perseverance. Seldom is success known to smile upon the idler and the dreamer rarely is courted; only those who diligently seek the favors of success receiving her blessing. William A. Pond, a resident of Antioch, this county, is one of the well-known residents of this section, and his present high standing may be attributed to his large personal worth, which has gained for him the esteem of the people with whom he has had business and social relations.

William A. Pond was born on March 20, 1852, in Green township, this county, the son of William and Mary (Lieurance) Pond, the former of whom, born on June 2, 1812, in Green township, died on January 10, 1912, and the latter, born on March 21, 1815, died on August 25, 1906.

In 1802 four brothers, Griffen, Henry, John and Jonathan Pond, started from Wilkes county, North Carolina, for Ohio. Later the four brothers scattered over different parts of Ohio and in the respective communities where they lived, they became prominent citizens. Griffen Pond, the grandfather of William A., came to Clinton county in 1802, locating on what is now known as the old Faren farm. He cleared one hundred acres of land and received fifty acres of the same in payment for his work. He lived in this section of the state the rest of his life, buying and selling several farms. He was a member of the Baptist church. He and his wife were the parents of nine children, all of whom are now deceased, these children having been as follow: Griffen, Jr., who moved to Mercer county, Ohio, and died at the age of one hundred years and six months; John, who died in Miami county, Indiana, where he was a farmer; Jonathan, who died in Wabash county, Indiana; Mary, who married Messer Green, and died at Cuba, this county, at the age of ninety; Priscilla, who married John Wire, and was the mother of Doctor Wire, of Wilmington; Sarah, who married Samuel Hamilton, of Jamestown, Greene county, Ohio; William, who was the father of William A.; George W., who died in Mercer county, Ohio, where he was a farmer, and David, who died in Clarksville, this county, where he was a preacher in the Baptist church and a farmer.

The late William Pond, father of William A. Pond, started in life with very little money. He built a log house for himself on what is now known as the Clark place, in Green township, which is still standing. It was in this log house that William A. Pond was born. There were two slabs pinned together for a table and the bed was made by putting pins in the log wall. William Pond finally came to own three hundred acres of land and died on his farm. His wife, Mary Lieurance, was the daughter of John and Rebecca (Brown) Lieurance, both natives of Wilkes county, North Carolina, who were married in that county and in 1802 came with the Ponds and Browns to Clinton county. The Lieurances settled in Washington township, where they became the owners of a large farm. John Lieurance was a deacon in the Cowans Creek Baptist church. He died at the age of eighty-five, after rearing a large family. William and Mary Pond were members of the Christian church at New Antioch and were ardent church workers all their lives. William Pond was a stock buyer of considerable note and drove stock overland to Cincinnati. In his younger days he had been engaged in hauling produce to and from the cities in this section. He served as township trustee, having been elected as a Republican. Before becoming a Republican, he was a Whig.

To William and Mary (Lieurance) Pond eight children were born, five of whom are still living, the names of the children, in the order of their birth, being as follow: John, born in 1835, who is a retired farmer at Columbus; Jesse W., born in 1837, died in March, 1909, at Morgan Hill, California, where he was a stock dealer and farmer; Mary J., born in 1840, married Thomas J. Bloom, and died in 1892; Anna, born in 1843, first married W. H. Lieurance and later Campbell Wright, and died in September, 1901; Tillie, born in 1847, first married a Mr. Anson, later Henry Arnold, and now lives at Port William, Ohio; William A., the subject of this sketch; Martha E., a resident of Montgomery, Alabama, who is the widow of R. E. Hunt, and Lina, who married C. B. Murphy, a merchant of New Antioch, this county.

William A. Pond grew up on the farm and received his education in the public schools of that neighborhood. He lived at home until his marriage, on September 10, 1874, after which he lived on a part of the home farm, subsequently building a home on a tract of land which he purchased and where he lived until March, 1902, at which time he moved to New Antioch, where he now lives. When a young man, Mr. Pond engaged in buying and shipping live stock and wool, and has ever since been engaged in that business. About seven years ago, he became a partner with Bennett & Thompson, of Wilmington, and is a member of that firm now. For the past twelve years he has been a justice of the peace in New Antioch, and in 1914 was re-elected to a term of four years, as a Republican.

Mr. Pond's wife, before her marriage, was Alice Tener, a native of Adams county, Ohio, born at Locust Grove, the daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Weaver) Tener, both of whom are deceased. Mrs. Pond's father was a harness-maker and also a native of Adams county. Her mother, however, was a native of Highland county, and died when Mrs. Pond was a small girl. After her death the father married again and moved to New Antioch.

To William A. and Alice (Tener) Pond have been born twelve children, four of whom are deceased, the names of the children, in the order of their birth, being as follow: Verdie, born on July 18, 1875, died on July 30, 1876; Frank B., March 21, 1877, a well-known farmer of this county; Naomi, April 14, 1879, who died on October 11, 1880; Fred, April 26, 1881, who married Oval West, and is a resident of Wilmington; Mary, March 27, 1883, who married Edwin S. Thatcher, and died on December 23, 1910; Edna, July 27, 1885, who is unmarried, and lives in Columbus, Ohio; Vada, March 16, 1887, who married Charles Sevérs, and lives at Sabina, Ohio; Chloe, November 10, 1888, who died on January 18, 1890; Cliff, who married a Miss Stotler; Zella, February 8, 1891, who died on August 6, of the same year; Charlotte, July 21, 1892, who married Fred Arnold, of St. Paul, Minnesota, and Guy, October 17, 1894, who married Mary Oglesbee, of Lumberton, Ohio.

William A. Pond is a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He has been a delegate to the grand lodge of Odd Fellows for eight successive years and is a trustee of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows home at Springfield, Ohio. Mr. Pond is a well-known citizen of this county, honest and upright in all of the relations of life and admired and respected by his fellow citizens, he and all the members of his family being held in high esteem hereabout.

JESSE G. BATSON.

Jesse G. Batson is a prominent citizen and farmer of Jefferson township, this county, who was born in Washington township, this county, on November 2, 1861, the son of Ephraim and Louisa (Wright) Batson, both natives of Clinton county, the former born in Washington township and the latter near Martinsville. Ephraim Batson was the son of Samuel Batson, a native of Pennsylvania, who came to Ohio when a young man and located in what is now Clark township, entering between eighty and one hundred acres of land, which he cleared. He married a Thornhill and he and his wife died in that township. Louisa Wright was the daughter of James and Sarah Jane (West) Wright, also pioneers of Clinton county, who owned nearly one hundred acres of land just north of Martinsville.

Ephraim Batson received a common school education in the schools of Clinton county and spent his life as a farmer in Washington township, having been the owner of one hundred and twenty-one acres, upon which he lived for many years. The last six years of his life were spent with his son, Jesse G. His wife died at the comparatively early age of forty-nine, but he lived to be eighty-two. They were the parents of six children, four of whom, Christopher, George, Sarah Ann and Jesse G., grew to maturity. Ephraim Batson was an influential and useful citizen and had served as school director and road supervisor in Washington township.

Jesse G. Batson was educated in the public schools of Washington township and, with the exception of ten years, which he spent in Newport, Kentucky, as a street railway motorman, has been a farmer all his life. He moved to the farm upon which he now lives in 1903, and now owns sixty acres of land in Jefferson township. He has cleared the farm and erected good buildings and is rated as a prosperous farmer.

On December 31, 1882, Jesse G. Batson was married to Clara Hodson, who was born and reared at Westboro, this county, the daughter of Edwin Hodson, to which union two children were born, Laura and Harry. Mr. Batson married, secondly, on October 8, 1913, to Josephine McClearin, of Highland county, Ohio, who was born at Hillsboro and reared at Samantha, and to this second marriage there was born one child, Margaret, who died in infancy.

Mr. Batson is a member of the Christian church, and his wife is a member of the Friends church. Mr. Batson has served as township trustee and has filled other local offices. He is prominent in the political councils of Jefferson township and popular in the neighborhood in which he resides.

WALTER S. OSBORN.

Walter S. Osborn, now a successful and well-known farmer of Jefferson township, this county, was born in Beech Grove, in this county, on July 12, 1866, a son of Alfred and Martha (Stanton) Osborn, both natives of Beech Grove. Martha Stanton was the daughter of William and Theodosia (Thatcher) Stanton, early settlers in Clinton county. The Thatcher family history is set out at length elsewhere in this volume.

The late Alfred Osborn, who was a well-known farmer of Clinton county, was educated in the public schools of this county, and after leaving school, farmed at Beech Grove and at Midland City. He died in the latter village. Walter S. Osborn was one of six children born to his parents, Alfred and Martha (Stanton) Osborn, the others being Lettie, Sarah T., Ollie, Rena and Frank.

Walter S. Osborn received his education in the Osborn district school, and in the fall of 1888 removed to Midland and for ten years operated a livery stable at that place. Subsequently, he purchased forty-five acres of land, a part of which lies within the corporation limits of Midland. He farmed this land for one or two years, or until about 1905, when he moved to the Isaac Hixson farm, one mile north of Midland City. This place comprises one hundred and seventy acres, which Mr. Osborn rents, and in addition to this he also operates his own land, being well known as a successful farmer and stock raiser of that vicinity.

In November, 1895, Walter S. Osborn was married to Alice Foster, and to this union were born four children, Hazel M., Russell T., Bernice and Alfred Franklin. Mrs. Osborn died on May 7, 1913.

Mr. Osborn is a devout member of the Friends church. He is a Republican and has been treasurer of Jefferson township for the past fourteen years, and still holds that important office. Fraternally, he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

JACOB FREY.

Jacob Frey, who was formerly a competent bookkeeper in Cincinnati, but who, for several years, has been a successful farmer in Jefferson township, this county, was born on December 12, 1853, in Cincinnati, the son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Hess) Frey, both natives of Bavaria, Germany, and both of whom are deceased. Jacob Frey, Sr., was an officer in the German army. Neither the paternal nor the maternal grandparents of Jacob Frey, Jr., ever came to America.

Jacob and Elizabeth (Hess) Frey were married in Germany and came to America in a sailing vessel, locating at New Orleans, after a voyage lasting fifty-two days. In 1847 they proceeded by boat to Cincinnati, where they made their home. Jacob Frey had learned the barber's trade in Germany and followed this trade in Cincinnati until his death. To Jacob and Elizabeth Frey were born five children: George, Jacob (who died in infancy), Margaret, Fred and Jacob. After the senior Jacob Frey's death, his widow married August Goetze, and to them were born four children, Augusta, George, Elizabeth and Lena. The family were members of the Evangelical Protestant church.

Jacob Frey, the subject of this sketch, was educated in the public schools of Cincinnati and early in life was employed as an apprentice in the Lackman brewery, learning the trade as brewer. He later became connected with the Schmid Brothers' brewery as a bookkeeper, a position he held for twenty-six years. In 1902 he moved to the farm of one hundred and thirty-one acres in Jefferson township, this county, which he had previously bought in 1896, and where he is engaged in general farming.

On November 29, 1876, Jacob Frey was married to Anna Marie Ferkel, a native of Bavaria, Germany, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Frank) Ferkel, both natives of Bavaria. Mrs. Frey's paternal grandparents were Andres and Elizabeth Ferkel, both of whom died in Bavaria. Her maternal grandfather served in the Napoleonic Wars. Mrs. Frey's parents were married in Germany and in March, 1865, came to America, locating at Cincinnati. He was a farmer, grocer and baker. He and his wife retired to the farm, upon which Jacob Frey now lives, in 1896 and both spent their last days on that farm. Their remains are buried in the Odd Fellows cemetery at Westboro.

To Jacob and Anna Marie (Ferkel) Frey have been born ten children, one of whom, Edward, the eighth born, is deceased, the others being Jacob, August, Frederick Jacob, Elizabeth, Harry, George, Albert, Florence and Stella Marie.

Mr. and Mrs. Frey and family are members of the Evangelical Protestant church and Mr. Frey served as treasurer of the church of that denomination for fifteen years during his residence in Cincinnati.

FRANCIS M. HIATT.

Francis M. Hiatt, now an enterprising and well-known farmer of Clark township, this county, was born on January 10, 1851, in Clinton county, the son of Clarkson and Jane (Hollingsworth) Hiatt, the former a native of Clark township, this county, and the latter born near Rochester, in Warren county.

Mr. Hiatt's paternal grandparents were Christopher and Jemima (Hunt) Hiatt, the former born near Greensboro, North Carolina, and the latter in Grayson county, Virginia. The paternal great-grandfather, Christopher Hiatt, Sr., died in North Carolina when his son, Christopher, was a young man. Christopher Hiatt, Jr., was educated by his mother, who was a well-informed woman. He married in Virginia, and, about the year 1810, emigrated to Ohio and located in Clark township, this county, where he purchased a farm upon which his grandson, Francis M., now lives, and gradually became the owner of several hundred acres of land in this county. Mr. Hiatt's maternal grandparents were James and Esther (Cadwallader) Hollingsworth, the former born in South Carolina and the latter near Lynchburg, Virginia, who located in Warren county, this state, where both spent the remainder of their lives. James Hollingsworth was the proprietor of a nursery.

Clarkson Hiatt was educated in the common schools of Clark township, this county, and was engaged in farming all his life. He owned a part of the old home tract of land, where his son, Francis M., now lives and erected most of the buildings now standing on the farm and cleared most of the place. Five sons and two daughters were born to Clarkson and Jane (Hollingsworth) Hiatt, as follow: Lorenzo D., who was a soldier in the Union army during the Civil War, a member of Company M, Second Ohio Cavalry, and who, during his service, was struck on the head by a spent musket ball, but survived the wound; Francis M., the subject of this sketch; Evelyn, Albert and Warren, who are deceased, and Lora and James Edwin.

Francis M. Hiatt was educated in the common schools of Clark township, and, upon attaining his majority, began farming for himself. He bought a small tract of twelve acres adjoining his home and lived there from 1890 to 1908, when he removed to the home place. He now owns one hundred and one acres and is successfully engaged in general farming.

In November, 1889, Francis M. Hiatt was married to Nellie McLaughlin, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Hill) McLaughlin, the former a native of Clermont county, Ohio, who died in Clinton county. Joseph McLaughlin was born in Clermont county in 1815, the son of Charles and Nancy (Bundle) McLaughlin, of Virginia, who were early settlers in Clermont county and farmers by occupation, the owners of seventy-five acres of land. Joseph McLaughlin first married Agelina Hill, a native of Clermont county and a daughter of Jesse and Elizabeth (Burton) Hill, of North Carolina, who emigrated to Clermont county, where they were farmers by occupation. Jesse Hill's son, Hezekiah, was a soldier in the Civil War, and lived until recently. He was a minister in the Methodist Episcopal church. By the first marriage, Joseph McLaughlin had seven children, Charles, James, Milton, Jesse, Jane, Martha and Belle. Of these children, Charles, James and Milton were soldiers in the Civil War, Milton dying in the service. After the death of his first wife, Mr. McLaughlin married, in 1860, Elizabeth Hill, who was born in 1832, a sister of his first wife. Of this second family of children, Mrs. Hiatt was the youngest, the other children being Alfred N., Florence, Ulysses and Bergen. Joseph McLaughlin emigrated to Clinton county about 1882 and here died. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

To Francis M. and Nellie (McLaughlin) Hiatt eight children have been born, Alma, Chester, Grace, Stella, Mildred, Howard, Clarkson and Esther, all of whom are living.

Mr. Hiatt is a member of the Quaker church, and Mrs. Hiatt is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. They are well known throughout Clark township and adjoining neighborhoods and enjoy the respect and esteem of many friends.

THOMAS HENRY McMILLAN.

Thomas Henry McMillan, who owns a farm of two hundred and fifty acres in Chester township, this county, is descended from two of the very oldest families in this county. His father, Thomas McMillan, was the grandson of William and Deborah McMillan, who immigrated from York county, Pennsylvania, to Clinton county, some time after 1805, and his mother was the daughter of Seth and Sarah Ann (Moore) Linton. Thomas Henry McMillan is the only son born to his father's second marriage.

Born on January 5, 1884, Thomas Henry McMillan, an enterprising citizen of Chester township, has been a farmer all his life. He received his education in the common schools of Chester township and later attended Wilmington College for about four years. After finishing his college education, he began farming on the old home place and has made an exceptional success in his chosen vocation. He is intelligent, widely informed and popular and enjoys the confidence and respect of that entire neighborhood.

Mr. McMillan's father, Thomas McMillan, the son of David and Hannah (Huzzey) McMillan, was first married to Elizabeth N. Adsit, who bore him six children: Isabel, Mary Ann, Debber T., Eliza Jane, Horace G. and Palmer, of whom Horace G. is the only present survivor. Following the death of the mother of the above children, Thomas McMillan married, secondly, Mrs. Nancy (Linton) McMillan, widow of Isaac McMillan, and daughter of Seth and Sarah Ann (Moore) Linton, to which union there was born one child, a son, Thomas H., subject of this biographical sketch. Thomas McMillan's family were members of the Friends church, and he voted the Republican ticket. David and Hannah (Huzzey) McMillan were the parents of ten children, five of whom were born in Pennsylvania and five in Ohio. David McMillan immigrated to Clinton county in 1805 and settled on Turkey Run creek, where he purchased three hundred acres of land. He was a member of the Society of Friends. He departed this life on Decmeber 20, 1844, his widow living less than two years thereafter, her death occurring on September 18, 1846. David McMillan's parents, William and Deborah McMillan, who came to this county from York county, Pennsylvania, were natives of Scotland and Wales, respectively. They were the parents of eight children.

On October 26, 1904, Thomas Henry McMillan was married to Mary Probasco, the daughter of C. A. and Anna Probasco, to which union there has been no issue. Mr. and Mrs. McMillan are members of the Friends church and devoted to all good works in their neighborhood. Mr. McMillan votes the Republican ticket and is a man of considerable influence in local politics, as well as in the general affairs of the community.

RAY O. BOULWARE.

Ray O. Boulware, the proprietor of a popular grocery at Midland, this county, and the son of a prominent Clinton county physician, was born in 1872 in Clermont county, Ohio, the son of Dr. L. and Margaret (Monjar) Boulware, both of whom were born near Williamsburg, Ohio. Doctor Boulware was the son of Abram and Nancy (Chatterton) Boulware, both natives of the northern part of Pennsylvania, who located in Clermont county, Ohio, early in life. Abram Boulware was a cabinet-maker and undertaker for many years, but in later life was engaged in farming. He located in Clermont county, near Emilia, and later lived near Williamsburg, where he was engaged in the occupation of farming and there both he and his wife died, after having reared a large family of children.

The late Dr. L. Boulware, who was a member of a company of Zouaves connected with the Thirty-fourth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, during the Civil War, survived the war and lived until 1912. He was educated for the medical profession in Pittsburgh, and took up the active practice of his profession at Nicklesville, Ohio. He also practiced his profession at Williamsburg, Bowersville and Midland City, in Clinton county. Doctor Boulware and wife were the parents of eight children, five of whom grew to maturity.

Ray O. Boulware was educated in the public schools at Williamsburg and Midland City. After leaving school he followed the trade of house painter and was engaged in that occupation for a period of nineteen years, working mostly in Midland. In 1911 Mr. Boulware opened a grocery store in Midland and is still the proprietor of that store, having been quite successful. He is also interested in the Centennial Laxative Company, of Covington, Kentucky.

In 1900 R. O. Boulware was married to Halsie Wickersham, the daughter of J. C. Wickersham, and to this union one child has been born, Beatrice.

Mr. and Mrs. Boulware are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and take an active interest in the affairs of the local denomination. Fraternally, Mr. Boulware is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Modern Woodmen of America.

JOHN EDWIN HOCKETT.

John Edwin Hockett, a well-known merchant of Westboro, this county, who conducts a general store known as the J. D. Hudson & Company store at Westboro, was born near Westboro on July 11, 1853, the son of Thomas and Sarah (Newby) Hockett, natives of Clinton and Highland counties, Ohio, respectively. Thomas Hockett was the son of John and Mary (Cox) Hockett, both natives of North Carolina and members of the Society of Friends, who settled near New Vienna, this county, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Sarah Newby was the daughter of William and Sarah (Overman) Newby, natives of North Carolina and also members of the Society of Friends. After their marriage, at Buck Creek, North Carolina, the Newbys located in Highland county, this state, later moving to Clinton county. William Newby was a farmer by occupation.

The late Thomas Hockett died in 1906, at the age of eighty-eight. He was the father of three sons and three daughters.

John Edwin Hockett was educated in the common schools of Clinton county and, for some time, was a teacher. He was appointed deputy county surveyor under the administration of John Harvey, about 1870, and was thus engaged for some time. Afterward Mr. Hockett studied telegraphy at Martinsville and held several positions with the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company. From telegraphy he turned his attention to the telephone business, and for eight years was superintendent of the Bell Telephone Company of Indiana. While thus employed he accepted the managership of the Western Union telegraph office at Dayton, Ohio, and after the death of his brother-in-law moved to Westboro. Before engaging in the telephone business, he was wire chief and chief clerk for the superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph Company at Cincinnati. He was a pioneer in establishing exchanges, and worked extensively in Cincinnati. In 1894 Mr. Hockett located at Westboro and has ever since been engaged in the general mercantile business there.

On December 9, 1879, John Edwin Hockett was married to Emma Anderson, of Cincinnati, to which union two children have been born, Edith and Thomas Walter. Mr. and Mrs. Hockett and family are members of the Friends church. Fraternally, Mr. Hockett is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Masonic lodge. He has taken a considerable part in Republican politics and is well known throughout Clinton county in that connection.

WILLIAM A. HUDSON.

William A. Hudson, now an enterprising and well-known farmer and successful business man of Westboro, this county, was born on September 15, 1857, in Brown county, Ohio, the son of Charles and Sarah (Lear) Hudson, both natives of that county. Charles Hudson was the son of Shelby and Polly Hudson, natives of Indiana, and early settlers in Brown county, Ohio, where they were farmers. Sarah Lear was the daughter of Joshua Lear, also an early settler in Brown county.

Charles Hudson received his education in the pioneer schools of Brown county, and some years after his marriage came to Clinton county, where he purchased a farm in Marion township, comprising sixty-eight acres, upon which he spent the remainder of his life. The Hudson family at that time were all members of the Methodist Episcopal church. To Charles and Sarah (Lear) Hudson were born seven children, of whom William A. was the second in order of birth, the other children being Mollie, George, Lillie, Wilford, John and Luella.

William A. Hudson, who was brought to Clinton county by his parents when about five years of age, was reared on a farm in Marion township, and received his education in the public schools of that township. Upon reaching manhood he engaged in farming in Jefferson township, where he lived for some time. Although Mr. Hudson is still interested in farming and owns thirty-three acres near the village of Westboro, he has been engaged in recent years in dealing in white-oak timber, and in 1913 established a coal, cement-post and drain-tile business in the village of Westboro, where he enjoys a flourishing business, which is a distinct recognition of his standing as an honorable citizen in the community.

On March 11, 1883, William A. Hudson was married to Ella Garner, a sister of Jesse Garner, whose biographical sketch, presented elsewhere in this volume, sets out the family history of the Garners in full. To Mr. Hudson and wife two children have been born, Howard and Elbridge, the former of whom is the cashier of the Merchants and Farmers Bank, of Blanchester, this county, and the latter a rural mail carrier out of Westboro. Mrs. Hudson is a member of the Friends church.

WILLIAM HALEY.

No more substantial and moral citizens have ever come to this country from foreign lands than the sons of Ireland. Wherever they have settled they have become honored and respected citizens. As a race they are characterized by industry and patience which overcomes obstacles, and which insures success in most any undertaking they choose to follow. Clinton county has been honored by having several sons of the Emerald Isle as citizens, among whom was the late William Haley, of Wilson township.

William Haley was born on April 9, 1841, in County Cork, Ireland, the son of Dennis and Julia (Creedon) Haley, both natives of Ireland, who died in their native land. They were the parents of three children, William, John and Abbie. Of these children William and John came to America. Dennis Haley, who was a farmer by occupation, was a devout member of the Catholic church. His death occurred about 1845, his widow surviving him many years. William Haley came to America in 1868, at the age of twenty-seven. He had been married in his native country, and after arriving in America, first located in Wilmington, this county, where for some time he worked as a section hand on the railroad. Later he took up farming on the Leo Wells farm, being employed by Mr. Wells until 1873, when he moved to Wilson township, where he rented land until 1889. In that year he bought a farm of one hundred and seven acres, to which he later added sixty acres, and still later eighty acres, and upon which his children now live. He made many improvements on this place and was known in his community as a thrifty farmer. He was a member of the Catholic church at Wilmington and active in local public affairs until his death, which occurred on October 9, 1912. His good wife had died ten years previously, on September 27, 1902. William Haley and wife were the parents of ten children, Dennis, John, Jeremiah, Julia, Thomas, Mary, William, Hanora, Michael and Charles. Of these children, Dennis died at the age of twenty-one, unmarried, and Thomas died at the age of twelve. John married Mary Dehan, and they have three children, Katherine, Anna Marie and Rose. Jeremiah married Mary Keegan, and they are the parents of six children, William, Eugene, Agnes, Helen, Frank and Paul. The remainder of the children are unmarried. Michael is a physician at Piqua, Ohio. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus. Hanora is a teacher in the schools at Wilmington, this county, and Charles, Julia, William and Mary live on the old home place.

Charles Haley is a hustling young farmer, who attended the public schools, supplementing this with a course at Wilmington College for two years, during 1905 and 1906. He played on the basketball and baseball teams of that institution, and won his letter in both branches of athletics. Not only is Charles Haley a skillful farmer, but he is one of the most popular young men in the section of Clinton county in which he resides.

JOHN BRACKNEY.

John Brackney, a highly-respected farmer of Liberty township, who owns one hundred and three acres of land and who has held various positions of trust and responsibility in that township, was born on March 9, 1871, in Union township, this county, the son of George and Judith Ann (Haines) Brackney. George Brackney was born on the Port William pike, near Todd's fork, on January 6, 1833, and Judith Ann Haines was born in what is now the Country Club house, of Wilmington, December 30, 1837. Her father, Stacy Haines, was a pioneer settler in Clinton county and operated a grist-mill near the present Wilmington Country Club. He was a member of the Friends church. George Brackney was the son of Marmaduke and Susannah (Hayworth) Brackney, the former a native of Virginia, who located in Clinton county in 1806 or 1808. He was a farmer and followed that occupation until his death, in 1856. Susannah Hayworth was a native of Tennessee, who died in 1865 or 1866. Marmaduke Brickney and wife were members of the Friends church and occupied the farm where their grandson, John, the subject of this sketch, now lives. They were the parents of five children, Eli, Mahlon, Mary, Rachel and George, of whom Eli, Mahlon and Rachel are now deceased.

George Brackney was born in Union township, on the Port William road, on January 6, 1832, and was married in 1853 to Julia Ann Haines, a native of Greene county, this state, daughter of Stacy and Judith (Terrell) Haines, both natives of Virginia, who located in Greene county, this state, at an early day and in 1838 came to Clinton county, locating on Todd's fork. George Brackney and wife were the parents of eight children, Stacy, Mahlon, Edwin, George, Lewis, Mable, John and Anna, all of whom are living. George and Julia Ann (Haines) Brackney are both still living, and have celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary. George Brackney has been a life-long member of the Republican party.

John Brackney was educated in the common schools and in Wilmington College, where he spent three years, and has spent his life on the farm. On October 29, 1896, he was married to Lillian Peelle, who was born in Greene county, this state, the daughter of W. C. and Sarah (Bevan) Peelle, farmers of Greene county, members of the Quaker church and owners of one hundred and sixty acres of land. To this union six children have been born, Charlotte, Lauren, Charles, Ruth, George and Richard.

Mr. and Mrs. Brackney and family are members of the Friends church. Mr. Brackney served six years as trustee of Liberty township, having been elected as a Republican, and also served for some time as a member of the school board.

WILLIAM A. STINGLEY.

One of the prominent old families of Chester township, this county, is that of William A. Stingley, an enterprising and prosperous farmer, who owns two hundred and seventy acres of land, and who, like his father and grandfather before him, has been very successful in agricultural pursuits. The Stingley family was established in America by George Stingley, the great-grandfather of William A., who was born in Germany on September 12, 1763.

William A. Stingley, the son of Noah and Sarah (Jones) Stingley, and the cousin of Calvin, Alvin and J. Albert Stingley, referred to elsewhere in this volume, was born on the farm where he now lives, in Chester township, on January 18, 1863. His father was a native of Ross county, Ohio, who died on April 8, 1894, and his mother, the daughter of Lewis Jones, who married a Miss DeMoss, was born on September 8, 1822. Noah Stingley was the eldest of four children born to John and Elizabeth (Bush) Stingley. John Stingley was a native of Virginia, born on August 22, 1792. He came to Ohio in 1800, and located first in Ross county, where, on April 16, 1818, he married Elizabeth Bush, who was born on May 31, 1798. In 1822 they removed to a farm in Chester township, this county, where they spent the remainder of their lives. John Stingley was one of the foremost farmers of Chester township, and he and his wife were the parents of four children, namely: Gilead, born on November 24, 1820; Tabitha, April 27, 1823; Julian, October 7, 1825, and Noah, the father of William A., February 24, 1819. John Stingley died on September 6, 1826, and after his death his widow married Sebastian Stingley, the twin brother of her first husband.

The late Noah Stingley was educated in the common schools of Chester township and was engaged in farming all his life, having been the owner of about six hundred acres of land, and was an extensive breeder of cattle. On January 27, 1848, Noah Stingley was united in marriage to Sarah Jones, to which union nine children were born, as follow: Tabitha, born on December 4, 1848; Martha, December 5, 1849; Elizabeth, January 17, 1851, who died early in life; Arvilla, December 10, 1852; John, March 10, 1854; Lewis, September 19, 1857; Lawson, April 22, 1859; William A., the immediate subject of this review, and Ida, April 17, 1865. Noah Stingley's family were all members of the Methodist church, and he was a Democrat.

William A. Stingley, like his grandfather and father, received most of his education in the district schools of Chester township, but this early education has been supplemented by wide reading and diligent home study. He has been a farmer all his life, and has been very successful because he has paid close attention to modern developments in agriculture.

On March 4, 1896, William A. Stingley was married to Elizabeth Martindale, who was born on October 25, 1863, the daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Roach) Martindale, and to this union two children have been born, Russell N. and Raymond T., the former born on January 11, 1898, and the latter on May 20, 1902. Mr. and Mrs. Stingley are earnest and faithful members of the Friends church, and fraternally, Mr. Stingley is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, the Knights of the Maccabees, the Fraternal Order of Eagles and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In politics, he is an independent voter, casting his ballot for men rather than for party platforms. He and his family are held in high esteem among their neighbors and enjoy the confidence and respect of all.

WILLIAM M. BORING.

William M. Boring, now a prosperous and well-known farmer of Liberty township, this county, was born on August 3, 1862, in Green township, this county, the son of Lafayette and Polly Lieurance (Hall) Boring, the latter of whom was Lafayette Boring's second wife.

Lafayette Boring was born in Harrison county, Virginia, the son of Thomas and Ruth Boring, natives of Maryland, Thomas Boring having been the son of Absalom and Sarah Boring, also natives of Maryland, who subsequently settled in Virginia, where Mrs. Boring died. Absalom Boring then moved to Ohio and died in Clinton county after having attained the age of more than eighty years. Thomas and Ruth Boring were married in Maryland and resided many years in that state, from which they moved to Harrison county, Virginia. In 1830 they moved to Ohio and settled on a farm, where their son, Lafayette, later lived. They were the parents of nine children. Lafayette Boring was a young man when the family came to Clinton county. About 1840 he married Ailsey Collett, who was born in Kentucky, the daughter of John Collett, a native of Pennsylvania, who immigrated to Kentucky in an early day, when the Indians were very troublesome, one of his brothers having been killed by the redskins. To Lafayette Boring and his first wife the following children were born: Elizabeth, Ruth, Ann, John and Absalom. After Mrs. Ailsey Boring's death, Lafayette Boring married, secondly, Mrs. Polly Lieurance, daughter of Tilman and Betsy Hall, natives of North Carolina, to which second union there were four children born, namely: William M., the subject of this sketch; Mary Alice, who married George Skinner, and lives in Wilmington, this county; Eliza Jane, who married Squire Beaty, and lives in Green township, this county, and Susan, who married Elias Morton, of Wilmington. Lafayette Boring and wife were members of the Baptist church, and their children were reared in that faith. He was a Republican in politics and owned one hundred and twenty acres of land in Green township. He died about thirty years ago.

William M. Boring was educated in the common schools of Clinton county and was reared on the farm. He married Cora Early, who was born in this county, the daughter of George Early, a farmer of Liberty township and a prominent member of the Methodist church. After his marriage, Mr. Boring located in Green township, on the home farm, and in 1913 bought one hundred and seventy-five acres of land where he now resides. To him and his wife were born seven children, Ira, Ernest, Zella, Roy, Luella, Harry and Glenn, the latter of whom died at the age of eighteen months. The mother of these children died on Decoration Day, 1915, and was buried at the Antioch burying ground. Ira Boring married Alice Collins, and has two children, Lavonne and Mable Jane. Ernest Boring married Ada Cast, and lives in Wilmington.

Mr. Boring is a member of the Baptist church at Wilmington and is a well-known citizen of this county.

ARTHUR OGLESBEE.

Arthur Oglesbee is a successful farmer of Liberty township, who lives on the Xenia pike, near Lumberton, and who was born on June 17, 1874, in Liberty township. He is the son of Solomon and Sabina (Middleton) Oglesbee, both natives of Clinton county. The latter is the daughter of James Middleton, a native of Greene county, Ohio, a farmer by occupation and a member of the Methodist Protestant church. The paternal grandparents of Arthur Oglesbee were Amos and Anna (Hoffman) Oglesbee, the former of whom, the eldest son of John Oglesbee, was born in Virginia in 1810 and came to Ohio in 1817, three years later, settling in Clinton county. In 1835 Amos Oglesbee was married to Anna Hoffman, who was born in 1814 in Virginia and who came to Ohio with her parents soon after the War of 1812. Soon after their marriage, they settled on a farm in Clinton county, where he died on December 31, 1851. His widow survived him many years, her death not occurring until June 25, 1875. They were the parents of nine children. Solomon Oglesbee, one of these nine children, was educated in the common schools and farmed one hundred and eighty-five acres of land in Liberty township, which he owned. He was a member of the Methodist Protestant church and died on October 29, 1898. His widow is still living. They were the parents of seven children, James, Hattie, Nettie, Allie, Arthur, Lelia and Carrie. James died unmarried, at the age of forty-seven years. Hattie and Carrie are unmarried. Nettie is the wife of Wesley E. Jordan, of Dayton, Ohio. Allie married Edward McKay, a resident of Union township, and Lelia married Charles Linkhart, of Liberty township.

Arthur Oglesbee received a good common school deucation in the schools of Clinton county. On November 15, 1900, he was married to Florence Shook, a native of Greene county, the daughter of David and Lucinda (Devo) Shook, who were farmers in Greene county and members of the Methodist church, and to this union four children have been born, Bernice, Melville, Edith and Dorothy. Mr. and Mrs. Oglesbee are members of the Methodist church and their children are being reared in that faith.

After his marriage, Mr. Oglesbee located on the farm of one hundred and sixty-eight acres, where he now lives, and where he is engaged in general farming and stock raising.

JOHN W. HIATT.

J. W. Hiatt, who is a successful farmer of Liberty township, this county, where he owns a farm of eighty-four acres, was born in Liberty township on July 16, 1862, the son of Isaac and Phoebe (Oglesbee) Hiatt, both natives of this county, the former of whom was born on January 4, 1813, in Union township, and the latter of whom is the daughter of John and Sallie (Stump) Oglesbee, natives of Virginia, who had several children before coming to Ohio. John Oglesbee owned about six hundred acres of land in Liberty township. He was a member of the Baptist church. Isaac Hiatt was the son of Hezekiah and Ann (Perkins) Hiatt, who were farmers in Clinton county and prominent members of the Quaker church. They came to Ohio before their marriage and were prominent in the civic life of the county. To them were born six children, Sallie, Isaac, Allen, Susan, Mary and Pheniah.

The late Isaac Hiatt was educated in the common schools and was engaged in farming practically all of his life. He also assisted his father in the pottery shop before leaving home. In time he came to own about four hundred acres of land in Liberty township. He was a member of the Friends church and died at the age of ninety-eight years. His wife, who was born in 1816, died at the age of sixty-six years. They were the parents of five children, Sarah (deceased) and Lydia Jeffries, Mary E., J. W., and Mrs. Olivia St. John.

Born and reared on the farm and educated in the common schools of Clinton county, Mr. Hiatt has always lived in Liberty township. He has been twice married, the first time to Mayme Haines, a native of Greene county and the daughter of Eber Haines, a prominent farmer and member of the Friends church. By this marriage there were born two children, Truman H. and Phoebe Mary. Truman H. married Grace Rotroff, and has two children, William D. and Phoebe Susanna. Phoebe married Harry Lighthizer, of Liberty township, and has one child, Mary E. Mr. Hiatt married, secondly, Anna Hazard, a native of Clinton county and the daughter of Herbert and Hannah (Jeffers) Hazard, who are farmers of Clinton county, and members of the Friends church. By this second marriage, there have been born four children, Loren E., Veda H., Lenna C. and Hazel L.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiatt are prominent members of the Friends church in Liberty township.

P. B. BLACK.

P. B. Black is a well-to-do farmer of Richland township, this county, who was born on June 22, 1853, in Brown county, Ohio, the son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Workman) Black, the former of whom was born on April 10, 1803, and the latter of whom was the daughter of Samuel Workman. Samuel Black, after his marriage to Elizabeth Workman, emigrated from Kentucky to Brown county, Ohio, where he purchased one hundred acres of land, which he cultivated and improved, and upon which he spent the rest of his life. He and his good wife were active members of the New Light church, and he was prominent in the public affairs of Brown county. In Kentucky he had been known as a "bully," because he was a good fighter. He was a very strong man physically, and remained so until his death, on August 1, 1869. His widow survived him for nearly twenty years, her death occurring on June 1, 1888. They were the parents of twelve children, as follow: John, born on December 15, 1825, died on March 8, 1870; James, November 19, 1827; Sarah Ann, February 9, 1831; Mary E., November 10, 1833; Jacob, April 22, 1835; Thomas, April 3, 1838; William, October 14, 1840; Amelia Ellen, December 28, 1842, died on October 12, 1890; David G., November 18, 1844; Hannah, June 27, 1847; Nancy Catherine, March 14, 1850, died on August 9, 1899; and P. B., June 22, 1853. Three of these sons, John, William and Jacob, were soldiers in the Union army during the Civil War, John serving one year; William, four years, and Jacob, three years.

P. B. Black received his education in the public schools of his home neighborhood, and was reared to the life of a farmer. He was married on December 27, 1877, to Samantha Martin, who was born on September 24, 1859, in Fayette county, this state, the daughter of Jehu and Martha Jane (Thompson) Martin.

Jehu Martin was a native of Clinton county, but a farmer in Fayette county. He was a member of the Friends church, and active in the work of that church until his death, on September 13, 1900. His wife had preceded him to the grave, her death having occurred on January 21, 1894. They were the parents of ten children, of whom Mrs. Black was the eldest, the others being Elmer, Margaret, Eli, Mary Jane (deceased), Grant, Alice, May, Lawson, Quincy and Edna (deceased). The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Black were Stephen and Martha (Curtis) Martin, who were among the early pioneers of Clinton county, they having come here about 1809, at which early date they had entered about one hundred acres of land from the government. They were the parents of nine children, Mary, David, Eli, Charles, Jane, Martha, Alfred, John and Edward.

After Mr. Black's marriage, he and his wife settled in Fayette county, Ohio, where they lived for twelve years, at the end of which time they disposed of their farm of eighty acres there and on January 8, 1903, came to Clinton county, having purchased the farm where they now live, a mile and one-half out of Sabina, three years prior to that date, in 1900.

Mr. and Mrs. Black are the parents of five children, namely: Minnie, born on April 10, 1879, is the wife of Frank Bloom, of Richland township, and has three children, Florence, Raymond and Noel (deceased); John, September 21, 1883, who married May Jacks, to which union three children have been born, Albert D., Helen Elizabeth and one that died in infancy; Alvie, June 28, 1887; Roy, May 30, 1890, and Harold, May 27, 1896, the last three named being unmarried and living with their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Black and family are earnest and devoted members of the Methodist Episcopal church, of Sabina. Politically, Mr. Black is a Prohibitionist, and while living in Fayette county served three years as constable.

JAMES K. BERNARD.

Among the citizens of Clinton county who belong to a past generation and who built up comfortable homes and surrounded themselves with valuable property, few attained a larger measure of success than the late James K. Bernard, one of the largest landowners and one of the most public-spirited citizens of Clinton county. With few opportunities, except what his own efforts were capable of mastering, and with many discouragements to overcome, he achieved a remarkable success in life, and, in the declining years of his life, enjoyed the satisfaction of knowing that the community had been benefitted by his presence. He was regarded as a good business man, who possessed sound judgment and keen foresight: one who was, in every sense of the word, progressive, and always enjoyed the respect, esteem and confidence of those who knew him. His interest in public affairs and his upright life secured for him an enviable place in the life of this great county, in whose advancement he took such a conspicuous part.

James K. Bernard was born on June 19, 1835, in Greene township, this county, and died at New Vienna in the same county, on September 5, 1907, at the age of seventy-two years, two months and seventeen days. He was the son of George Washington and Harriet (McConnell) Bernard, the former of whom was born in Goochland county, Virginia, September 13, 1799, and the latter, in Brown county, Ohio, October 12, 1810. George Washington Bernard was the son of Thomas and Mary Bernard, natives of Virginia. Thomas Bernard was the son of William Bernard, a native of England, who married Mary Fleming and was a prominent resident of the Old Dominion state. He owned three thousand acres of land in Virginia and also was extensively engaged in business at Richmond, that state, where he was a wholesale merchant. During the War of the Revolution, his store was robbed of nearly all of its goods. William and Mary (Fleming) Bernard spent their last days in Virginia. Thomas Bernard was born in March, 1756, grew to manhood in Virginia, and served as a soldier through the War of the Revolution having been engaged in the battles of Brandywine, Germantown Monmouth, Stony Point, and others. In 1807 he married Mary Hicks and removed from Virginia to Ohio, settling in Highland county, near the Clinton county line. In those days wolves and deer were in abundance, and on one occasion he heard a loud bleating near his cabin which he thought was one of his calves in the merciless clutches of a wolf; hurrying to his cabin door, he beheld a wolf holding fast to a deer. The wolf at once loosed its prey and fled and the the deer escaped in an opposite direction. In 1832 Thomas Bernard moved to Leesburg, where he died on June 11, 1833. His widow survived until May 22, 1847, when she died. At that time, she was a resident of Clinton county. They were the parents of three sons and five daughters, of whom two were living as late as 1882—George W. and Nancy, who married Thomas Riley.

George W. Bernard, son of Thomas and Mary (Hicks) Bernard and father of James K. Bernard, the subject of this biographical sketch, was about eight years of age when his parents removed to the Ohio wilderness. Here he grew to manhood and became fully inured to the hardships of pioneer life. On March 28, 1831, he was married to Harriet McConnell, who was born in Brown county, Ohio, October 12, 1810, the daughter of James and Sallie (Downing) McConnell, natives of Pennsylvania, who were early settlers in Brown county, this state, and who removed to Clinton county about 1821. They were the parents of four sons and five daughters, four of whom were living as late as 1882, as follows: Thomas, Betsey, who married Isaac Wilson of Illinois, Harriet and Joseph M., the last named of whom resided in Oregon.

To George W. and Harriet (McConnell) Bernard eleven children were born, nine of whom lived to full maturity, as follow: Thomas F., James K., Mary E., who married Joshua Wilson; John W., Matilda Jane, who married Edmund West, George W., Charles B., Martha H., who married Edward McVey, and Elijah M. In 1832, George W. Bernard located on the farm in this county where he spent practically the rest of his life, living to be the oldest man in Greene township, and to see all of his children married and settled in life. Although he had in his youth little opportunity for an education, he had supplemented his limited opportunities by special study and in later years was known as an unusually well-informed man. By energy, industry and economy, he acquired a large estate, amounting to something over thirteen hundred acres. He died at his home in Greene township in 1894, at the age of ninety-five years.

James K. Bernard, the second child born to his parents, George W. and Harriet (McConnell) Bernard, grew up on the old homestead in Greene township, which is still held by the Bernard family, and received a limited education in the pioneer schools of his neighborhood. On October 19, 1861, he was married to Kezia McVey, who was born in Clinton county on January 19, 1838, a daughter of Christopher and Catharine (West) McVey, natives of Fayette and Brown counties, Ohio, respectively; both of whom were born in 1812.

Christopher McVey was the son of James and Kezia McVey, both of whom were natives of Ireland and pioneer settlers in Clinton county, where both died. They were the parents of five sons and four daughters, William, Edmund, Christopher, Robert, John, Catharine, Josephine, Jane and Kezia. To Christopher and Catharine (West) McVey eight children were born, Henrietta, James, Kezia, Robert, Benson, Edmund, Eliza Jane and Elkana. Christopher McVey was a farmer and owned about one hundred and eighty acres of land in Greene township. He was a Republican and a member of the Christian church. He died in 1895, his wife having preceded him to the grave in 1853. Catharine West was the daughter of Robert and Henrietta West, who came from Pennsylvania to Clinton county in pioneer days and here they spent the rest of their lives. They had eight children, Nancy, Mary, Harrison, Benson, Eliza, Catharine and Sallie.

To James K. and Kezia (McVey) Bernard were born ten children, namely: John R., born on July 23, 1862; George W., August 19, 1863; Harriet C., August 6, 1864; Charles O., October 30, 1865; Martha Ann, February 23, 1867; James Edmund, April 11, 1868; an infant, November 6, 1870; Christopher C., July 2, 1872; Cora E., February 22, 1876; Oscar E., September 13, 1878. Of these children, all are living save the infant.

James K. Bernard located in Wayne township shortly before his marriage, and shortly after his marriage, on March 10, 1862, moved to his farm in Greene township, where he had a fine home and was extensively engaged in farming. He owned at one time about sixteen hundred acres of land, which he divided among his children, leaving his widow one hundred and eighty acres near New Vienna. Altogether, he had received from his father about twenty-five hundred dollars but aside from this help, accumulated the money with which the sixteen hundred acres were purchased, by his own effort and his was regarded as one of the most remarkable examples of success from small beginnings ever witnessed among the farmers of Clinton county.

In 1903 Mr. and Mrs. Bernard removed to New Vienna, where they lived retired until Mr. Bernard's death in 1907. The late James K. Bernard was more than a successful farmer. He was a man of extraordinary vision, of indefatigable industry and possessed a unique ability to concentrate his attention on a given focus or a given end. His mind, once settled on the accomplishment of a definite goal, nothing could divert him from this purpose. Loved by his large family, honored by his neighbors and respected by the people of Clinton county, he died as only the man who has lived to good purpose can die, full of the honors of noble and useful service.

EDGAR CROSLEY.

Edgar Crosley is a prosperous young farmer of Marion township, this county, who was born in the county where he lives in 1884. He is the son of William and Carrie (Wood) Crosley, the former born in Warren county, Ohio, on November 24, 1841, and the latter in Cincinnati in 1850.

William Crosley was the son of Isaac and Rachel (Cook) Crosley, the former a native of Michigan, and the latter born near Lebanon, in Warren county, Ohio, of pioneer parentage. The paternal grandparents of William Crosley died in Michigan. Mr. Crosley's father located in Warren county in the time of his young manhood, and, after his marriage there to Rachel Cook, became a well-known and well-to-do farmer. He and his wife were the parents of four children, Samuel (deceased), Andrew (deceased), William and Huston. The latter served as a Union soldier during the Civil War. Mrs. Isaac Crosley died at Hopkinsville, in Warren county. After her death, Isaac Crosley was married a second time and had five children, four of whom are living: Emma; Thomas, who is on the police force at Columbus, Ohio; John and Bell, the latter of whom lives in Cleveland. Isaac Crosley died in Columbus, Ohio.

William Crosley was reared on the farm and was educated in the public schools at Pleasant Plain, in Warren county. He is a farmer by occupation, who came to Clinton county in 1864, and owns a farm of fifty and one-half acres in Warren township. For many years he has been engaged in threshing. He is more or less independent in politics, but generally votes the Republican ticket. Mrs. William Crosley is the daughter of Charles and Sarah (Wallen) Wood, of Hamilton county, Ohio, who came to America from England. They were early settlers in Cincinnati, where both died, the father at the age of eighty-four years. To William Crosley and wife nine children have been born, Perry, Lenna, Charles, Dolly (deceased), Martha, Mary, Ella (deceased), Edgar and Roy.

Edgar Crosley, the eighth born in the family of his parents, who lives on the home farm of his father, was born in Clinton county in 1884, and was educated in the public schools, for some time attending a school taught by Jerry Fisher, a former auditor of Clinton county. Mr. Crosley is a farmer and thresher.

On February 25, 1909, Edgar Crosley was married to Estella Fox, of Clinton county, but a native of Highland county, Ohio, who was born on August 5, 1884, and the daughter of Ashley Fox, now deceased. To this union two children have been born, Richard Howard, who was born on February 17, 1910, and William Robert, January 21, 1912.

Edgar Crosley votes the Republican ticket. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Blanchester, and he and his wife are members of the United Brethren church.

LEWIS M. RILEY.

The tried and true pioneers of Ohio are often considered the greatest assets in the building up of the state's position in the nation. As a purely native product of Ohio soil, few are found whose ancestry is more wrapped up in the earlier history of Ohio than that of our subject, Lewis M. Riley, for as far back as Mr. Riley can trace his ancestors, both paternal and maternal, they were native Ohioans.

Lewis M. Riley was born in Warren county on December 28, 1849, the son of James and Catherine S. (Kephart) Riley, both natives of that county. James Riley was a son of Richard Riley, a pioneer of Warren county, who died there. Catherine S. (Kephart) Riley was born in 1823 and died in 1912. She was the daughter of Thomas and Mary (Skinner) Kephart, also natives of Warren county, who lived and died there. James Riley was a cooper by trade and followed that vocation the larger part of his life. He was a Whig in politics, and to him and Catherine S. (Kephart) Riley were born the following children: Cornelius B.; Henry C., who was killed in the second battle of Bull Run in 1862, and Lewis M., the subject of this sketch. After the death of James Riley, his widow married Edward Crosson, and to this second union was born one child, a daughter, Addie.

Lewis M. Riley was educated in the public schools of Warren county, and came with his mother and step-father to Clinton county in 1862. For a time he engaged in farming then entered on a position as clerk in a dry-goods store in Blanchester, which position he held for fourteen years, or until he was appointed postmaster of Blanchester by President McKinley, and was reappointed by President Roosevelt, holding the position for eleven years. After he left the postoffice he engaged in the grocery business for three years.

Lewis M. Riley is a Republican, a member of the school board, and an active member of the Masonic order, being a Royal Arch Mason. He was married in 1876 to Carrie M. Aupperle, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and to this union have been born two children, Henry and Julia.

Few men in Clinton county are better known or more highly respected than Lewis M. Riley, a man who has made his way to a position of trust and honor in his neighborhood. Courteous and affable, he always has a smile for everyone, and is held in high regard by his many friends in the Blanchester neighborhood.

ORA M. BRINDLE.

Ora M. Brindle, who is engaged in the operation of the elevator at Reesville, this county, in partnership with W. A. Ewing, was formerly connected with the elevator at Melvin, this county. He is a well-known citizen of Richland township, and a man who thoroughly understands the business with which he is connected.

Ora M. Brindle was born on January 23, 1866, in Clinton county, the son of J. W. and Sarah (Forman) Brindle, the latter of whom was a daughter of Abraham Forman, a farmer of Clinton county, who owned one hundred and fifty acres of land in Washington township. Sarah (Forman) Brindle was the second wife of J. W. Brindle.

The paternal grandparents of Ora M. Brindle were Jacob and Elizabeth (Stone) Brindle, natives of Pennsylvania, and Highland county, Ohio, respectively. Jacob Brindle came to Ohio before his marriage and was a tinner by trade, living in Wilmington. Jacob and Elizabeth (Stone) Brindle were the parents of three children, J. W., Philip and Mary, the last two named now being deceased. Jacob Brindle was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and active in church work.

J. W. Brindle was educated in the Delaware Normal School, and was twice married. By his first marriage there were no children, and to his second marriage there were born four children, T. E., Ora M., W. K. and F. L. Of these children, T. E. married Olive Mann, and is a resident of Wilmington. W. K. and F. L., twin brothers, married Addie and Alma McKee, twin sisters. The mother of these children died on November 16, 1913. J. W. Brindle is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and active in church work. He is also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and during the Civil War was a member of the famous "squirrel hunters" organization.

Ora M. Brindle, who was educated in the local public schools and the Wilmington high school, was married on February 14, 1889, to Cora M. Vermilya, a native of Clinton county, daughter of W. B. Vermilya, a well-known Clinton county farmer, who was a soldier in the Civil War, and saw three years' service in that struggle. From the time he was wounded during the service, he carried a bullet in his back.

After Mr. and Mrs. Brindle's marriage, they settled on a farm near Melvin, this county, where they now own one hundred and sixty-six acres of land. Mr. Brindle, however, soon found that he was unable to stand the hot summer sun in the fields, and shortly afterwards engaged in the elevator business at Melvin. Since December 9, 1914, he has been associated with W. A. Ewing in the elevator business at Reesville.

Mr. and Mrs. Brindle are the parents of three children, Cleo, Raymond and Helen. Helen is the wife of Clarence Chestnut, of Melvin, while the other two children are unmarried and are living at home with their parents. The Brindle family are members of the Methodist Protestant church, and take an active interest in the affairs of that denomination. Mr. Brindle is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

WILLIAM WALTER BURK.

The sturdy Scotch character has always been noted for its honesty and industry. Of hardy disposition and because of cramped opportunity in native Scotland, those emigrating to this country have grasped their new and immense opportunities and, with native hardiness, have plodded on to success. Their descendants almost invariably have been blessed with this progressive spirit and so it is not surprising to know that William Walter Burk, the subject of this sketch, has accomplished what he has when it is considered that his grandfather came direct from Scotland.

William Walter Burk was born in Hamilton county, Ohio, on February 25, 1847, the son of Alexis and Mary (Woolever) Burk. Alexis Burk was born in Hamilton county, Ohio, in 1902, a son of Elisha Burk, a native of Scotland, who worked his way on shipboard to pay his passage to this country and, after arriving, settled in Hamilton county, Ohio, and bought government land close to Dearborn county, Indiana. He afterwards increased his holdings to include land in Dearborn county, as well as in Hamilton county. He lived on this land until the time of his death and was buried in Hamilton county beside the body of his wife. Mary (Woolever) Burk was the daughter of Peter Woolever and wife, pioneers of Hamilton county, and both of whom are buried there.

Alexis Burk was a successful farmer in Hamilton county, Ohio, and Dearborn county, Indiana. He owned a tract of three hundred and twenty acres in Hamilton county and eighty-six acres in Dearborn county. All of this land was very valuable farming land, and Mr. Burk farmed it to the best advantage. He died on January 2, 1861, and was buried in Dearborn county. His widow survived him for more than twenty years, her death occurring on April 15, 1883. They were the parents of the following children: Mary E., who is deceased; Elisha M., who is deceased; Lemuel W., who is deceased; Alexis F.; William Walter, who is the subject of this sketch, and Amanda, who is deceased. Alexis Burk was a Democrat in politics and both he and his wife were active members of the Presbyterian church.

William Walter Burk was educated in the common schools and the high school at Harrison, Hamilton county, and then engaged in the livery business in Harrison for a number of years, until in 1894, when he moved to Blanchester, this county, where he continued in the livery business until 1896, when he went into the undertaking business and later formed a partnership with his grand-nephew, Claud B. Eichelberger, a grandson of Mary E., the eldest sister of W. W. Burk. Claud Eichelberger was born in 1889 and that same year his father died and he lived with his mother until her death, in 1896, since which time he has made his home with Mr. Burk. After graduating from the high school at Blanchester, Claud Eichelberger took a course and was graduated from the Clark School of Embalming at Cincinnati, and then, when he was twenty-one years old, entered into partnership with W. W. Burk.

William Walter Burk is an active worker in the Democratic party. He was elected to the office of mayor of Blanchester on that ticket and served with honor and distinction for a term of six years. He has been president of the school board of Blanchester since 1906. He is a faithful and active member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is a member of the encampment of that order. Claud Eichelberger is a Mason and a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics.

In 1881 William Walter Burk was united in marriage to Addie B. English, of Dearborn county, Indiana. There were no children born to this union, but Mr. and Mrs. Burk have proven father and mother to their grand-nephew since, at the age of eight, he came to live with them. Mr. and Mrs. Burk are members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Blanchester, and are active in all good works thereabout.

In outlining the life of William Walter Burk, the biographer is led back in thought to that early time when Grandfather Burk left his native land of Scotland and braved the sea to seek a new home in a new, almost unexplored country; fighting the fight of the average early pioneer, to leave a heritage in such progeny as the subject of this sketch, who has proved useful and helpful in all forward movements in this county.

HAROLD E. KATZENMEYER.

Harold E. Katzenmeyer, one of the best known and most progressive business men of Blanchester, this county, is the son of Jacob and Rebecca (Foltz) Katzenmeyer, the former of whom was born in Darmstadt, Germany, in 1847, the son of Peter and Barbara (Bickelhaupt) Katzenmeyer. Peter Katzenmeyer, with two brothers, Michael and Adam, came to America in 1848, Michael settling in Toledo, Adam in Upper Sandusky, while Peter located in Wyandot county, Ohio, where he spent the rest of his days, his death occurring in 1907, at the age of about eighty-nine years, while on a visit to the home of his daughter, who resided in Toledo. His wife, Barbara, was born in Germany and died in Wyandot county.

Rebecca (Foltz) Katzenmeyer was the daughter of Philip and Margaret (Hiestand) Foltz, both natives of Germany, who settled in Virginia upon coming to this country, but later came to Ohio, and settled near Basel, where Rebecca Foltz was born. Later they went to Hancock county, where they entered a homestead and there they spent the rest of their lives. Philip Foltz died in 1891, and his wife died several years earlier. He was a very prominent citizen in his locality.

Jacob Katzenmeyer, in his younger days, was in the leather business and later became superintendent of a stave company in Wyandot county until the time of his marriage, after which he went to North Baltimore, Wood county, where he established a grocery business, which he conducted until 1891, in which year he went into the drug business and was thus engaged for a number of years. He is now living retired at Tremont, Ohio. His wife died in 1909, at the age of sixty-three years. They were the parents of the following children: Harold E., the subject of this sketch; Lillian G., George W., Estelle M. and Earl, all of whom are living.

Harold E. Katzenmeyer was reared in North Baltimore, Ohio, and was educated in the public schools of that city, being graduated from the high school of that place in 1890. He later attended the pharmacy school of the University of Michigan, from which he was graduated in 1895. He then took a position with his father in the latter's store until the store was sold, in 1900. In 1901 he went to Blanchester and took a position in the drug store of W. F. Warning, of that place, acting as a clerk in that store until 1910, when he bought the store from Mr. Warning, since which time he has operated the business himself, with much success. In 1908 he was elected a member of the board of public affairs of Blanchester, and has been clerk of that board ever since.

On February 25, 1898, Harold E. Katzenmeyer was united in marriage to Harriet M. Shaffer, of North Baltimore, Ohio, daughter of Norman and Jane M. Shaffer, who now reside in Oklahoma, where Mr. Shaffer has the management of a considerable oil field. To this union has been born one child, Mabel R., who was born on May 2, 1899.

Harold E. Katzenmeyer is a citizen of sterling worth and character, who is active in every movement for the betterment of his community. He is a stanch Democrat, but has never been a seeker after office. He is a faithful and devoted lodge man, a member of the Masonic order, and past master of his local lodge. He is also a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He occupies a prominent position in the business life, not only of Blanchester, but of the county generally, and is held in high regard in commercial circles hereabout, being regarded generally as an enterprising and public-spirited citizen.

WOODSON OGLESBEE.

The venerable Woodson Oglesbee, of Liberty township, who has spent all of his life in Clinton county and who is now afflicted with the infirmities of age, was born in Liberty township, Clinton county, June 21, 1839, the son of Eli Oglesbee and his second wife, who, before her marriage, was Lucinda Fawcett. The former was born in Virginia on October 5, 1896, and died on February 28, 1870, and the latter born in Belmont county, Ohio, on June 4, 1810, and died on September 14, 1877. The paternal grandfather of Woodson Oglesbee was Isaiah Oglesbee, who was born in Frederick county, Virginia, and whose wife was Phoebe Oglesbee. They settled in Clinton county, about one and one-half miles east of Lumberton, where they died, Isaac Oglesbee about the year 1840 and his wife about three years later. Both were members of the Friends church. They had nine children, Elias, Jacob, Jonathan, Isaiah, David, Eli, Phoebe, Ellis, and one whose name is lost to the present chronicler. The Oglesbee family is of Scottish extraction, but it is uncertain at what time the family was established in America.

Eli Oglesbee, the father of Woodson Oglesbee, was born in Virginia on October 5, 1806, and came to Ohio when about eleven years old with his father. He grew to manhood in Liberty township and acquired a limited education. He married Rebecca Mann, a native of Ohio, born in 1807, and who died in 1831. To this marriage there was born one child, Lydia, who married William Cornell, of Spring Valley, Ohio. Eli Oglesbee married, secondly, Lucinda Fawcett, a native of Belmont county, Ohio, to which union three children were born, Hiram, Rebecca (deceased) and Woodson. Hiram Oglesbee was born on August 4, 1834, and grew to manhood on a farm. On August 2, 1858, he married Susan Buser, who was born in 1835, a native of Greene county, Ohio, to which union were born six children, Louie B., Charles H., John W., Horace C., Edward F. and Amos L. Hiram Oglesbee was a farmer early in life, but subsequently engaged in the hardware and implement business at Xenia, Ohio. Still later he was engaged in the furniture business at Xenia, but finally settled on the old home farm, where he still lives. Rebecca, the second child born to Eli and Lucinda (Fawcett) Oglesbee, married A. J. Van Pelt, a resident of Port William, and is now deceased.

Woodson Oglesbee was educated in the common schools. He grew to maturity in Liberty township and has spent all of his life there. At the age of twenty-two years he was united in marriage to Mary Elizabeth Haines, who was born in 1841 and who died in May, 1879. To this union four children were born, namely: Charles A., who married Ella Christy and lives at Spring Valley, Ohio; Alden M., who married Alta Beal, and lives at Jackson, Mississippi; Hiram Jacob, who married Pearl Jessup and lives in Liberty township, and Mary E., who married Thurman Early, and died in Liberty township.

After the death of his first wife, Mr. Oglesbee married, secondly, Lucy M. Fawcett, who was born on May 27, 1860, and to this union two children were born, Blanche, who married Clyde Banghan, and has two children, Lucy Pauline and Ruth Agnes, and Walter, all of whom live on the home place.

Woodson Oglesbee owns one hundred and seventy-four acres of land in Liberty township, this county, and in Greene county. He is a prominent member of the Methodist Protestant church at Port William, Ohio. He has spent all of his life in general farming and stock raising and has a wide acquaintance throughout the county, where he is held in the highest esteem by all.

FRANK O. ALLISON.

Frank O. Allison, who for years has been the popular station agent of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company at Blanchester, this county, was born in New Vienna, Clinton county, on June 27, 1872, a son of Jesse Hunt and Sarah (Miller) Allison, the former of whom was born on December 26, 1839, in Rush county, Indiana, and the latter in Columbiana county, Ohio, in 1844.

Jesse Hunt Allison is the son of John and Eunice (Hunt) Allison, both natives of Highland county, Ohio, the former born in 1807, and the latter in 1811. John Allison was a son of William and Nancy Allison, pioneers of Highland county, where they both died. Eunice Hunt was a daughter of Asa and Marion Hunt, also pioneer settlers of Highland county. John Allison emigrated to Rush county, Indiana, in 1835, and later to the Wabash country, near Lafayette, where he died in 1844. Later his widow and family returned to Rush county, Indiana, and after being there for three years, came to Clinton county, settling near New Vienna. Mrs. John Allison died in Rush county, Indiana, in 1901. She and her husband were the parents of six children, Asa H., Ashaia, Isaac R., Jesse H., Thomas G. and William G. Of these six sons all served in the Civil War, except William, and all are now deceased, except Jesse H., the father of Frank O.

Jesse H. Allison was married in 1869 to Sarah Miller, a daughter of Samuel and Charity P. Miller, who emigrated from Columbiana county, Ohio, to Clermont county, and afterwards to Clinton county, and whose remains are buried in the cemetery at New Vienna. To Jesse H. and Sarah (Miller) Allison the following children were born: Frank O., Veda, Henrietta, William Logan, Mary A., Jesse Augusta, who died at the age of nine years, and Harry J. and Fred D., who died early in life, the former having been drowned. Jesse H. Allison was a soldier in the Civil War, having served in the Forty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, successively as a private, surgeon and lieutenant. He was discharged in 1864, and is now living retired in New Vienna, Ohio. He is a Democrat in politics, and has held various political positions of trust and responsibility, and is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. He and his good wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, in the various beneficences of which they are actively interested.

Frank O. Allison was reared in New Vienna and was educated in the public schools there, finishing his educational training in the high school at New Vienna. He was station agent at New Vienna for several years for the Baltimore & Ohio Railway Company, but in 1908 was transferred to Blanchester and since then has been station agent at the latter place.

In 1905 Frank O. Allison was married to Clara Driscoll, of New Vienna, a daughter of Charles and Mary Jane (Curren) Driscoll. Charles Driscoll traveled overland to California during the time of the "gold fever" in 1849, and had several narrow escapes from capture or death by the Indians. He died in 1912, at the age of eighty-two years, and his widow died in 1914, at the age of sixty-nine years. Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Allison are the parents of two children, Gaylin Dean and Thelma Louise.

Although Mr. Allison is actively identified with the Republican party, he has never aspired to office. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Sons of Veterans. Mr. and Mrs. Allison are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and take an active interest in all good works in and about Blanchester, where they are held in high esteem by many friends.

GEORGE R. CONARD, M. D.

Dr. George R. Conard, a pioneer physician of New Vienna, this county, was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, on January 5, 1842, son of Benjamin and Eliza (Roberts) Conard, the former of whom was born at Valley Forge, Pennsylvania, September 14, 1810, and the latter, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, also in 1810.

Benjamin Conard was a son of Cornelius and Susannah (Chalfont) Conard, both natives of Pennsylvania, the former descended from an immigrant who settled in Pennsylvania, in 1628, after coming to America from Holland. Cornelius Conard was a member of the Society of Friends, and lived at Valley Forge at the time Washington camped there. Eliza Roberts was the daughter of George and Alice (Fell) Roberts, both natives of Chester county, Pennsylvania, the former of Welsh descent. They were farmers by occupation, and, when advanced in years, removed to Wilmington, Delaware, where they died, he at the age of eighty-four years and she at the age of eighty-six.

Benjamin Conard was reared to manhood in his native state. He was a profound student and became a very well-informed man. A farmer by occupation, in 1850, he emigrated to Highland county, Ohio, where he purchased a farm at twenty-four dollars per acre. In 1865 he sold the farm at eighty-five dollars per acre, and moved to Hillsboro, where he was engaged in the mercantile business for several years, conducting a queensware store. He retired from business at the age of eighty years, and died, in November, 1902, at the age of ninety-two years. The late Benjamin Conard was a Republican in politics, and active in temperance work during the latter years of his life. He was a member of the Hicksite branch of the Friends church, and, for a number of years, served as township trustee. He also served as the treasurer of a building and loan association and in other positions of responsibility and trust. Benjamin Conard was married three times. By his marriage to Mary Ann Moore, one child was born, who died in infancy, the mother dying soon afterwards. By his marriage to Eliza Roberts, eleven children were born: Almira Carey, Cornelius, Alice Roberts, George Roberts, Granville, William, Benjamin R., Rachael, Elwood, Mary Mente and Elizabeth. Of these children, Granville, Benjamin R., Rachael and Eliza died in infancy. William and Cornelius served as Union soldiers during the Civil War. The former died on February 18, 1915. Cornelius served three years during the war and was promoted to first lieutenant in the signal service. He died at Carthage, Missouri, about 1907. Elwood, another son, lives in Philadelphia. After the death of Mrs. Eliza Conard, on April 29, 1854, at the age of forty-five years, Benjamin Conard married Mrs. Elizabeth (Hussey) Johnson, by whom he had one child, Emma.

George R. Conard was eight years old when his father's family came to Ohio and he grew to manhood on the farm. Upon completing the course in the public schools he attended the normal school at Lebanon, Ohio, after a course at which he entered Miami University, from which he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Science, with the class of 1863, among the members of this class there having been such well-known men as Calvin Brice, Charles Fisk and Dr. James Whitaker. On September 9, 1861, he had enlisted in Company A, Forty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He was wounded on April 6, 1862, at Shiloh, and on July 11, 1862, was discharged on account of his wound. After completing the course at Miami University, which he had entered in September, 1862, he entered the Medical College of Ohio, at Cincinnati, under W. W. Dawson, and was graduated in 1865, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, after serving one year as acting medical cadet. He was also stationed for four months at the state hospital for the insane at Nashville, Tennessee. Having passed the examination before the army board of medical examiners, Doctor Conard received, on March 14, 1865, an appointment as acting assistant surgeon of the United States army, which position he held until November 14, 1865, his services by that time being no longer needed. During the period of this latter service he was on duty in the hospitals of Knoxville and Chattanooga. In December, 1865, Doctor Conard located at Peru, Indiana, where he practiced his profession until November, 1875, establishing a valuable practice. Because of ill health in his family, he removed to New Vienna, this county, where he has since been actively engaged in practice.

On February 28, 1866, Dr. George R. Conard was married to Martha Good, a native of Highland county, Ohio, daughter of Charles and Betsy (Moore) Good, who came from Pennsylvania in 1854, and who spent their last days in New Vienna, the former dying at the age of eighty-eight years and the latter at the age of ninety. They were members of the Hicksite branch of the Friends church. To Dr. George H. and Martha (Good) Conard five children have been born, namely: Helen, who lives at home; Harvey E., who is professor of higher mathematics at the Columbus high school of commerce; Elma, who died at the age of twelve years, and Robert and William (twins), the former of whom is a physician at Blanchester, this county, and the latter of whom died at the age of three months. Mrs. Conard died on May 1, 1877, and on September 24, 1879, Doctor Conard married, secondly, Augusta Lacy, by whom he had one child, Jane L., of New York City, whose mother died on March 26, 1885.

Dr. George R. Conard is a member of Carey Johnson Post No. 404, Grand Army of the Republic, and has been commander of that post for many years. He is a Republican but has never been an aspirant for office. He is a member of the Clinton County Medical Society, the Ohio State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He is a Mason, member of lodge No. 578, at New Vienna, of the chapter of that order at Hillsboro and of Highland commandery, Knights Templar.

ALONZO OGLESBEE.

Alonzo Oglesbee, who is an excellent farmer of Liberty township, where he owns one hundred and forty acres of land, was born on October 28, 1860, on the farm where he now lives, and is the son of Joshua and Mary (McKay) Oglesbee, the former of whom was born on July 29, 1825, and the latter on September 27, 1837, the daughter of George and Mary (Ferguson) McKay, pioneers of Chester township, this county. George McKay was a native of Virginia, who came to Clinton county when a young man, with his father. Afterward he returned to Virginia and brought back his wife on horseback. George McKay was born in Virginia in 1800 and lived in Ohio from the time he was eighteen years old. He died in 1850 and his widow in 1878. George McKay's father, Moses McKay, who was born in Virginia about 1776, came to Clinton county in 1818 with his wife and eleven children, leaving one son in Virginia.

Joshua Oglesbee was the son of John and Sarah (Stump) Oglesbee, natives of Virginia, who were married in the Old Dominion state on September 4, 1809. Three children were born to them before they came to Ohio. John Oglesbee owned nearly twelve hundred acres of land in Liberty township, this county, a part of which is now owned by his descendant, Granville Oglesbee. John Oglesbee was the son of Isaiah Oglesbee, who settled in Clinton county, one and one-half miles east of Lumberton, where he died in 1840, his widow surviving him three years. They were members of the Friends church.

Joshua Oglesbee spent his entire life in Liberty township. He remained at home with his widowed mother until reaching his majority, or until his marriage, on March 11, 1855, to Mary M. McKay, to which union there were born three children, Alonzo, Sallie M. and Horace. Sallie M. Oglesbee married Charles Conklin, of Greene county, Ohio, and Horace Oglesbee married Jennie Foodie, and now lives in Dayton, Ohio. Joshua Oglesbee and wife were members of the old-school Baptist church and active in church work. They owned four hundred and thirty acres of land in Liberty township. He died on May 28, 1900, and his widow died in 1908.

Born and reared in Liberty township, Alonzo Oglesbee was educated in the common schools there. On October 21, 1898, he was married to Mary E. Turner, who was born in Greene county, this state, the daughter of John and Margaret (Haines) Turner, farmers in that county and members of the Quaker church. Margaret (Haines) Turner was the daughter of Eber Haines, who was a prominent minister in the Quaker church in the early days of Clinton county. He was born in 1825 in Greene county and died in Clinton county in 1911. To Mr. and Mrs. Oglesbee seven children have been born, of whom six are living, Sarah M., Esther, Gladys, Leontine, Frances and Robert J. All of these children are still at home with their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Oglesbee are members of the Friends church at New Hope and are regular attendants at Sunday school. Fraternally, Mr. Oglesbee is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

ROBERT EDWARD WOODS

Robert Edward Woods, who has spent his entire life in Clinton county, needs no introduction to the people who live within its boundaries. His life has been devoted not only to promoting his own interests and welfare, but also to promoting the interests of the public generally. He is an honorable representative of one of the esteemed families of this section and a gentleman of high character and worthy ambitions. He has filled no small place in the public life, as the important official positions which he has capably filled bear witness. He is a splendid type of the intelligent, up-to-date, self-made American farmer and is regarded as one of the best business men of Clinton county, enjoying the unqualified respect and confidence of all the people.

Robert Edward Woods was born on January 11, 1872, in Union township, this county, the son of James F. and Mary Lavinia (Wood) Woods, the former of whom was born in Wilmington, Ohio, on July 2, 1844, the son of Joseph and Rosanna (Fife) Woods, and is still living. The mother was born in Union township, the daughter of Robert and Mary (Hughes) Wood, in 1850, and died in 1909. Joseph Woods was born at Lebanon, Ohio, and his wife, Rosanna Fife, in Wilmington. They were of Irish descent and died when their son, James F., was a mere lad. They were farmers by occupation and early settlers in Clinton county and were members of the Presbyterian church. Rosanna Fife was the daughter of James Fife, who immigrated to America from Tyrone, Ireland, at an early date and settled in Clinton county. He became one of the foremost citizens of the county and founded the first bank in Wilmington, now called the First National Bank. A large picture of him now hangs in the bank and a more extended mention of his life and work will be found in the chapter of this history relating to banks and banking.

James F. Woods, the father of Robert Edward Woods, grew up in the home of his uncle, Silas Woods, and at the home of his grandfather, James Fife. As a boy he did farm work and for several years was a partner with Matt Fife in the dry-goods business in Wilmington. He then taught bookkeeping in Nelson's Business College for a few years, (having been a student in Wilmington College), and subsequently purchased a farm in Union township, which he presently sold and purchased one hundred and seventy acres in Washington township, where he lived until the time of his retirement from the active duties of the farm. Since the death of his wife in 1909, he has made his home with his children. He is a Republican and has been a deacon in the Baptist church for many years and has also been treasurer of the same for thirty years, during all of these years having been a regular attendant. To James F. and Mary L. Woods three children were born, namely: Mary Rosanna, who married O. C. Lacy, of Springfield, Ohio; Robert E., the subject of this sketch, and Joseph S., who is a mechanic and lives at Wilmington.

The maternal grandparents of Robert E. Woods were Robert and Mary (Hughes) Woods, the former of whom was born in Frederick county, Virginia, June 14, 1812, son of Isaac Wood, a Virginian, born in 1779, who lived to be ninety-three years old, and the latter, in Union township, this county, the daughter of Judge Jesse Hughes, a native of Kentucky, who was one of the first judges of the court in Clinton county. They were the parents of six children: Jesse, Nathan S., Lydia (deceased), John William, Isaac and Mary Lavinia. Robert Wood was a farmer of Union township, who retired late in life and moved to Wilmington, where he died in 1902, at the age of ninety, his wife having preceded him to the grave in 1881, in her sixty-sixth year. Both were members of the Baptist church, and for many years were active in good works in the community in which they lived.

Robert Edward Woods received a good education in the public schools of Union township and in the Wilmington high school, from which he was graduated in 1892. Upon returning to his father's farm, he was married and took charge of the farm. In 1908 he purchased his father's Union township farm of one hundred and twelve acres, but four years later sold it to the Buckley brothers and moved to Wilmington, from which place he directed the operations on his father's Washington township farm. In 1913 he purchased the Anna Sharp farm of fifty-one acres in Union township, situated northwest of Wilmington. Upon this farm he built a modern house in 1913 and there he now makes his home. He also farms one hundred and seventy acres for his father in Washington township, and raises large type Poland China hogs and a few cattle, most of his profit coming from raising and feeding hogs.

On September 9, 1896, Robert E. Woods was married to Ada B. McMillan, who was born in Chester township, this county, on December 10, 1877, the daughter of Shipley and Sarah (Lacy) McMillan. Shipley McMillan was the son of Newton McMillan, the second son of William and Deborah McMillan, who immigrated from York county, Pennsylvania, to Clinton county. William McMillan was a native of Scotland and his dife, Deborah, was a native of Wales. On first coming to Clinton county, Newton McMillan, settled on the sixty-acre farm later owned by Duane D. Smith. Sarah Lacy was the daughter of Joshua and Ruth C. (Bankson) Lacy, who were married on March 12, 1850. Joshua Lacy was born on November 24, 1827, in Clinton county, the son of Enos L. and Sarah (Wright) Lacy, the former a native of Virginia and the latter a native of Ohio, both of English descent, who located in Clinton county about 1816. Ruth C. Bankson was a native of Highland county, Ohio, and the daughter of William Bankson, a native of England. Shipley McMillan died on January 11, 1914, at the age of sixty-nine years, and his widow is living with her father, Joshua Lacy, in Wilmington.

To Robert E. and Ada B. (McMillan) Woods three children have been born, Edith, born on May 30, 1900; Harold Edward, May 4, 1905, who died on February 19, 1906, and Mary Ruth, September 9, 1906.

Robert Edward Woods is a Republican and served as township trustee for one term and as school director for fourteen years. Mr. and Mrs. Woods belong to the Baptist church at Wilmington, and he is a member of the Masonic fraternity. Few young men living in Clinton county are more highly respected than Robert E. Woods, and few more thoroughly deserve the confidence of their neighbors and fellow citizens than he.

FRANCIS H. PYLE.

Various members of the Pyle family have long been prominent in the history of Clinton county. The late Francis H. Pyle, who was a successful farmer of Adams township, where he owned one hundred and ninety-four acres of land, was a well-known stockman, whose father was trustee of Adams township for three years; a director of the Goshen, Wilmington & Columbus turnpike and a member of the Clinton county board of agriculture. Francis H. Pyle spent practically all of his life in Clinton county, and was always engaged in farming.

Francis H. Pyle, a native of Wayne township, was born on July 10, 1844, and died on October 28, 1907. He wa the son of Samuel and Isabel W. (Austin) Pyle, the former of whom was born on July 22, 1812, and died on July 1, 1887. The Pyles came originally from North Carolina, Samuel Pyle's father, William, having been born there on March 11, 1788. About 1824 William Pyle built the Clarksville grist-mill, which he operated for about a quarter of a century. In 1869 he went to live with his son, William L. Pyle, at Indianapolis, and about six years afterwards, while on a visit to his old home in Clinton county, was taken severely ill and died on July 20, 1875, in his eighty-eighth year. William Pyle, who was the son of John and Ruth Pyle, was first married to Mary Hadley, who was born on July 17, 1792, and who died on February 7, 1848. Later he married Abigail Hadley, who died in 1853, after which he married Lydia (Hazard) Smith. William and Hary (Hadley) Pyle were the parents of nine children, among whom was Samuel, the father of the late Francis H. Pyle.

Samuel Pyle was married on July 6, 1837, to Isabel W. Austin, who was born on July 1, 1817, and who died on April 25, 1856. She was the daughter of Thomas and Eleanor Ann (McDaniels) Austin, the former of whom was born on August 2, 1777, and the latter on May 13, 1784. Eleanor Ann McDaniels was the daughter of William and Priscilla Ann McDaniels, the former born in June, 1754, and the latter on April 16, 1764. After the death of his first wife, in 1856, Samuel Pyle married, secondly, February 25, 1858, Mrs. Harriet S. McMillan, widow of Milton McMillan, who was born on January 13, 1816, and who died on January 12, 1883. Samuel Pyle was the father of eight children, namely: Anna Eliza, born on April 21, 1838; Emily C., October 14, 1839; Amanda M., July 29, 1842; Francis H., July 10, 1844; Melissa J., September 3, 1846; Thomas William, September 5, 1848; Alfred C., October 12, 1850; and Arthur W., October 23, 1853.

The late Francis H. Pyle received his education in the schools of Adams township and farmed all of his life in the same township, where he owned one hundred and ninety-four acres of land. He was married on December 10, 1867, to Lizzie Hadley, who died on September 22, 1868, less than one year after their marriage. On January 11, 1877, he married, secondly, Lydia E. Osborn, daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Fulghum) Osborn, who was born on October 13, 1854, and who died on May 21, 1913. Francis H. Pyle was the father of four children.

Samuel C. Pyle, the eldest son of Francis H. Pyle, was born on September 7, 1878, and married Bessie J. Winfield on December 31, 1906, to which union three children have been born, Francis H., born on November 21, 1907; Lloyd W., June 4, 1910, and Lawrence D., August 31, 1912. Ethel D. Pyle, the second child of Francis H. Pyle, was born on January 11, 1880, and on February 21, 1906, married Alonzo E. Carson, who was born on August 19, 1871, to which union two children have been born, Eleanor L., born on November 10, 1906, and Joseph P., March 2, 1910. Myrtle E. Pyle, the third child, was born on May 13, 1881. Earl F., the fourth child, was born on August 18, 1884, and on February 28, 1906, married Mildred C. Hooton, who was born on December 6, 1885, to which union five children have been born: Myron O., born on January 18, 1907; Manard T., October 24, 1908; Henry S., August 23, 1910, who died on September 8, 1913; Edwin A., September 17, 1912, and Frank L., June 20, 1915.

MR. AND MRS. FRANCIS H. PYLE

Earl F. and Myrtle E. Pyle live on the old home farm of two hundred and forty-six acres and are engaged in general farming and stock raising. They have a dairy and keep thoroughbred Jersey cattle, making breeding a specialty. This worthy brother and sister are warranted in a just measure of pride which they take in the ancestry of the Pyle family.

J. OSCAR VILLARS.

Among the oldest families in Clinton county, Ohio, are the Villars, whose ancestral home was established in this county early in the last century, when James Villars, the great-grandfather of J. Oscar Villars, the subject of this sketch, emigrated from Greene county, Pennsylvania.

For a little more than a century, therefore, the family has been established in Clinton county, and the late generations of the family, especially, have been prominent in the educational life of this section of Ohio. The healthful growth of this family is due in part, no doubt, to the high standard of morality and of Christian living which the various generations have maintained. Several members of the family have enjoyed a college education. Others have been leading farmers and stockmen, but almost without exception, they have been prominent in the religious life of the county.

J. Oscar Villars, who represents the fourth generation of the Villars family in Clinton county, was born near Clarksville, in this county, July 3, 1873, and is the son of John W. and Kezia (Penquite) Villars, the former of whom was born, October 3, 1833, in Vernon township, Clinton county, Ohio, and died on September 20, 1885, and the latter of whom was born in 1835, in Washington township, Warren county, Ohio, and who died on December 25, 1877.

Mr. Villars' paternal grandparents were James and Frances (Gregg) Villars, the former of whom was born on October 28, 1800, and when six years of age accompanied his father, James Villars, to Ohio, from Greene county, Pennsylvania. The family had come from Virginia originally. In 1813 James Villars came with his family to Clinton county, and purchased a farm in what is now known as Vernon township. His son, James, finally owned sixteen hundred acres of land in Clinton county, and divided his time between farming and preaching. The pioneer preacher was called a circuit rider, and James Villars was a circuit rider, or itinerant preacher, in the Methodist Protestant church, and founded Villars chapel, in Vernon township, in 1868. This church was not essentially sectarian, but was dedicated to the use of any Christian religion. James Villars, before the formation of the Republican party, was a Whig, but afterwards identified himself with the party of Lincoln. He and his wife had twelve children.

Mr. Villars' maternal grandfather, William Penquite, was an early settler in the eastern part of Warren county, Ohio. The Penquites came from Cornwall, England, where they were living as early as 1600. The earliest history of the family, in America, begins with that of Mary Penquite, who was born on October 25, 1719, and died on July 31, 1818. Her son, William, was born on August 16, 1756, and died on March 28, 1839. His son, William, was born on September 30, 1786, and died on September 20, 1865. His daughter, Kezia, was the mother of J. Oscar Villars.

The late John William Villars, son of James Villars, grew up on his father's farm in Vernon township, and attended Yellow Springs College. During the Civil War he was the captain of a company of "squirrel hunters." He was given a farm by his father and later purchased additional acreage, living one mile east of Clarksville, Ohio, where he owned three hundred and thirty-three acres. This was his home at the time of his death. Like his father before him, he was an ardent Republican. His wife was a member of the so-called Campbellite church, better known today as the Christian church. Mrs. Kezia (Penquite) Villars, the mother of J. Oscar, died when he was four years old, leaving four sons and one daughter. The daughter, Jennie, died the following summer, but the four boys are yet living. William, the eldest, lives near Clarksville, in Warren county; Horace Finley, in Little Rock, Arkansas, and Charles Edwin, in Chicago, Illinois.

The father died when J. Oscar was twelve years old, after which he lived with his brother, William, in Warren county, Ohio. During this period he attended the public schools of Clarksville, subsequently entering Wilmington College, where he was a student for four years, graduating in 1894. In Wilmington College he won a fellowship to Haverford College, and the next year after his graduation from Wilmington College was a student at Haverford, where he received his Master degree in 1895.

Mr. Villars, upon his graduation from Haverford, taught in the Wilmington high school for three years, and then taught ten years in the Williamson Free School of Mechanical Trades, near Philadelphia. For six years he was instructor in mechanical drawing and for six years he was assistant superintendent of this school endowed with one million, five hundred thousand dollars by the late Isaiah V. Williamson, of Philadelphia. After this he migrated to Montana, where he remained three years, at Great Falls. After the death of his father-in-law, he returned to Wilmington, since which he has been teaching and attending to business interests. He and his family belong to the Methodist Episcopal church and, fraternally, he is a member of the Masonic lodge and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He lives on Xenia avenue, in Wilmington.

On August 11, 1897, J. Oscar Villars was married to Lula Cecilia Statler, who was born in Vernon township, this county, August 28, 1875, the daughter of George Henry and Mary M. (McCray) Statler, the former of whom is deceased. The latter lives in Wilmington.

Professor and Mrs. Villars have two sons, Donald Statler, born on December 21, 1900, and Roger Merrill, October 3, 1904.

Of Mrs. Villars' parentage, it may be said that her father, George Henry Statler, was born near Little East fork, in Vernon township, this county, on June 10, 1849, and died in Wilmington on September 20, 1912. The Statler family were all members of the Methodist Episcopal church and stanch Republicans.

George Henry Statler was the son of Samuel and Mary (Harris) Statler, the former of whom was born in Loudon county, Virginia, December 25, 1799, and died on April 12, 1868. The latter was born in the same county in Virginia, September 18, 1803, and died on September 15, 1884. John Statler, the father of Samuel, was a native of Germany, who emigrated to Virginia and became a planter and slave-holder. He enlisted and served in the patriot army during the Revolutionary War and, with his two brothers, was discharged where Washington City now stands and afterward purchased one thousand acres of land in Clinton county, Ohio, for the benefit of his three children.

Samuel Statler, grandfather of Mrs. Villars, grew up in Virginia and spoke no language save the German until he was eight years of age. At the age of nineteen he came to Ohio, and made his home with his brother-in-law, Dr. Asael Tribbey. He soon erected a cabin on the land his father had purchased, and, as he was a man of ability and thrift, soon enjoyed great prosperity. He died in 1868, leaving his nine children very well circumstanced.

Mrs. Mary (Harris) Statler, grandmother of Mrs. Villars, was the daughter of James and Mary (Cherry) Harris, both of whom came from Loudoun county, Virginia, and were of Welsh descent. In 1806 James Harris located in Vernon township, where he became a wealthy farmer. As a member of the Whig party, he served in the state Legislature of Ohio. He and his wife came to this county at a time when there were no roads hereabout, but only "blazed" trails.

The late George Henry Statler was the youngest of nine children, of whom only four are living. Of his father's estate, he inherited the homestead house, which was built in 1860, together with about two hundred acres of land, which now belongs to his daughter, Mrs. Villars. He lived upon the farm until 1904, at which time he retired and moved to Wilmington, where his last days were spent. He was a strong Republican, quiet and retiring in his home life; a man of even temperament, good business ability, thrifty and prosperous.

On September 11, 1873, George Henry Statler was married to Mary Melissa McCray, who was born in Warren county, this state, near Clarksville, on February 16, 1853, and who is still living in Wilmington. She is the daughter of Samuel C. and Sarah Elizabeth (Humphreys) McCray, the former of whom was born in Salem township, Warren county, February 14, 1831, and died on June 21, 1909, and the latter of whom was born in the same county on May 28, 1836, and died on September 9, 1906. Samuel C. McCray was the son of Daniel and Harriett (Skinner) McCray, both natives of Loudon county, Virginia, very early settlers of Warren county, this state. They were farmers and members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Harriett (Skinner) McCray was the daughter of a colonel of Virginia troops, who served during the Revolutionary War.

Elizabeth (Humphreys) McCray's parents were James and Elizabeth (Lange) Humphreys, the former of whom was born in New Jersey and the latter, on the ocean en route to America from Germany. James Humphreys was a "bound boy" to Colonel Rose, who lived in New Jersey and was a soldier during the Revolutionary War. He later married Colonel Rose's daughter and after her death, married Elizabeth Lange and came on horseback to Ohio, where he purchased a farm in Warren county and became well to do. He died in 1893 at an advanced age.

Samuel C. McCray was a farmer and respected for his honest dealings. During his latter years, broken in health, he lived with a son in Cincinnati, where he died in 1909. The late George Henry and Melissa (McCray) Statler had only two children, Maude Marie, who was born on June 17, 1874, and Lula Cecilia, the wife of Professor Villars.

The present generation can never repay those old heroes of a past century who blazed the trails through the wilderness, established homes, cleared the forest, and reared children to honorable and useful lives. It was their work which has made this country the richest on earth and the inestimable heritage of the present generation is the result of their labors. The ancestors of both Professor and Mrs. Villars had a large part in the great work of pioneer development, especially in Clinton county.

JAMES W. CHANNEL.

James W. Channel, of Melvin, this county, is one of the best-known citizens of Richland township. He is a prosperous merchant and farmer, and was born on April 15, 1866, at Morrisville, this county, son of John H. and Sarah (Custis) Channel, natives of North Carolina, and of Richland township, this county, respectively. Sarah Custis was a daughter of William H. Custis, a farmer of Clinton county, who owned two hundred acres of land, and who was a prominent member of the Friends church at Sabina. John H. Channel was educated in the common schools of Clinton county, having come to Ohio with his parents when quite young. As a young man he taught schools in different parts of the county, and for many years was active in politics. He was also a leader in the affairs of the Christian church in his community. During the last twenty years of his life he was in business at Sabina, conducting a clothing and drug store. Fraternally, he was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

To John H. and Sarah (Custis) Channel were born six children, Arminda, Mary, James W., Lucy, Emma and Gertrude, all of whom are living save Lucy and Arminda, the last named dying at the age of twenty-one years. Mary is the wife of George Manmeisel, of Sabina. Lucy is the wife of Dr. William Burnett, of Sabina. Emma is the wife of N. B. Tharp, of Columbus, Ohio, and Gertrude, who is unmarried, has been principal of the East End school at Washington C. H. for twelve years. John H. Channel died in March, 1880, and his widow is still living in Washington township.

James W. Channel received his education in the common schools of this county, having attended school principally at Sabina. On January 5, 1888, he was united in marriage to Laura Pavey, who was born in this county, the daughter of John Pavey, a well-known farmer, who was prominent in the affairs of the Methodist Episcopal church. To this union two children have been born, Walter and Roxie, both of whom are living at home with their parents.

After his marriage, Mr. Channel located on his father-in-law's farm, where he remained two years. In 1891 he moved to Melvin and has lived in that pleasant village ever since. He was first engaged in the general mercantile business, but afterward built the elevator there, and is now its proprietor. He also established a tile-mill at Melvin, and operated that mill for five years. When the Baltimore & Ohio railroad was built, Mr. Channel was the telegraph operator at Melvin, and was also station agent for the Pennsylvania Railway Company at that place for twelve years. Mr. Channel is the owner of sixty-two acres of land in Richland township. He is a member of the Methodist Protestant church and a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

CLINTON MADDEN.

Clinton Madden, the present popular cashier of the Farmers National Bank at Clarksville, this county, was born in Wilson township, this county, on July 6, 1867, the son of Cyrus W. and Jane (McCray) Madden, the former a native of the same county, born in Adams township, on Sepember 22, 1822, and the latter in Warren county, this state, on February 25, 1828. Cyrus W. Madden was the son of Solomon and Ruth (Robbins) Madden, natives of North Carolina, and pioneers of Adams township. Solomon Madden was the son of George Madden, who served as a soldier in the patriot army during the Revolutionary War, and who came to North Carolina to this part of Ohio very soon after this region was opened to settlement. Jane McCray was the daughter of Christy and Nancy (Urton) McCray, the former a native of Virginia, who died in Warren county, this state, in 1839, his widow surviving him for thirty-one years, her death occurring in 1870.

Cyrus W. Madden was twice married, his first wife having been Lydia Eleanor Brown, to which union two children were born, Mrs. Mary E. McPherson, of Springfield, Ohio, and Mrs. Lydia E. Crawford, of Marion, Indiana. His second wife, the mother of the subject of this sketch, died in May, 1899. The children born of this second marriage were six in number, namely: A. D. Madden, who was a contractor, builder and lumber dealer at Clarksville, this county, and who died in June, 1914; Nannie, who died in 1902; Addie, a teacher in the public schools of Morrow, Ohio; W. H., of Waynesville, Ohio; Clinton, the subject of this sketch; and T. C., of North Lewisburg, Champaign county, Ohio. Cyrus W. Madden and his wife were members of the Friends church and their children were reared in that faith. He was a blacksmith and farmer, of Adams and Wilson townships, and died in Warren county in 1877.

Clinton Madden attended the public schools of Washington township, Warren county, and upon completing the course there prescribed extended his studies at the Lebanon Normal and at Wilmington College, after which, for nearly eighteen years, he performed excellent service as a teacher in the public schools. In April, 1906, he was made cashier of the Farmers National Bank at Clarksville, a position which he still holds, and which he has filled with credit to himself and to his employers.

On December 10, 1908, Clinton Madden was united in marriage to Nellie Cockerill, of Wilmington, this county, daughter of James Cockerill, deceased, a former resident of Fayette county. No children have been born to this union.

Mr. Madden is a Republican, as was his father. Both he and Mrs. Madden are members of the Friends church, and for years have taken a vital interest in its work and worship. They occupy no small place in the social life of the community, as they have made and retained many warm personal friends. Mr. Madden is genial and friendly, and while he is a good business man, he does not allow business to absorb all of his interest and time. He believes in taking time to live, and in keeping in touch with the questions and movements which are occupying a large share of the world's thought. He is a faithful worker, having at heart the best interests of his employers, and as a business man, it might be said that his life is an exemplification of the words of a recent writer who said that "Those who will work faithfully will put themselves in possession of a glorious and enlarging happiness."

CLINTON MADDEN.

STEPHEN C. BROWN.

Listed among the progressive farmers of Liberty township, this county, Stephen C. Brown operates a splendid farm of ninety-three acres and his home is equipped with all of the conveniences available now in the country. He was born in Lucas county, Ohio, on September 29, 1881, the son of Edmund G. and Jessie (Cowdery,) Brown. Edmund G. Brown was born in Dayton, Ohio, on April 30, 1855, and his wife was born in Union City, Indiana, the daughter of Diah Cowdery, who for many years was a dentist of Union City. The paternal grandfather of Stephen C. Brown was Henry L. Brown, who was a merchant at Dayton, Ohio, and who had a large store in what is now the center of Dayton. He was a leader in the Presbyterian church and a man of considerable wealth.

Edmund G. Brown, the father of Stephen C., is a farmer in Lucas county, Ohio, and owns eighty acres of land. He and his wife are members of the Christian church of Dayton, Ohio, and prominent in its activities. Nine children have been born to Edmund G. and Jessie (Cowdery) Brown, L. E., Eva C., Stephen C., Blossom, Charles, Jessie, Telfair, Henry and Sidney, all of whom are living.

Stephen C. Brown was educated in the public schools of Ohio and on September 19, 1904, was married to Nettie Shrack, who was a student at Wilmington College during 1903 and 1904. She is the daughter of J. H. and Olive (Carroll) Shrack, farmers of Liberty township, this county, and members of the Baptist church. To Mr. and Mrs. Brown five children have been born, Edith M., Stephen, Jr., Olive Carroll, Edmund H. and Pauline S.

Mr. Brown has lately remodeled his house, and in 1914 built a barn. He has equipped the house with bath, furnace and all other modern conveniences, and he and his family are delightfully situated. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are members of the Baptist church at Wilmington, and Mr. Brown is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

ALPHEUS A. HITE.

Alpheus A. Hite, a well-known farmer of Liberty township, this county, was born on June 8, 1866, in Greene county, Ohio, the son of W. M. and Sarah (Dalby) Hite, the former of whom was born in Xenia, Ohio, on January 14, 1840, and the latter in Greene county, the daughter of Jesse Dalby, a prominent farmer and member of the Baptist church, in that county. W. M. Hite was the son of Andrew Hite, a native of Ohio, and the father of six children, John (deceased), Albert A., C. M., Catherine, Elizabeth (deceased) and W. M., the father of Alpheus A. These children located near each other in Greene county and a road in the neighborhood was named the Hite road. Andrew Hite was a pioneer farmer in Greene county and owned one hundred and thirty acres of land. He was a local minister in the Baptist church.

W. M. Hite, who died in November, 1912, was a farmer and stockman and for forty years shipped stock to Pittsburgh, Baltimore and other eastern points. He owned two hundred acres of land and was known as a successful farmer. He served as trustee in Greene county a number of terms before coming to Clinton county, fifteen years before his death. His widow is now living in Port William, this county. They were the parents of six children, Emma (deceased), Alpheus A., Charles, Maude, Oscar and Myrtle L.

Educated in the district schools, Alpheus A. Hite has always been engaged in farming. He was married on July 7, 1887, to Alice Thornhill, who was born in Greene county, the daughter of Malory and Thompsey (Bolden) Thornhill, who were farmers and members of the German Baptist church. To this union two children have been born, Pearl and Lola. Pearl Hite married Alfred Kiphart, a street car conductor of Richmond, Indiana, and has one child, Donald. Lola Hite married James Mason, of Greene county, Ohio, and has one child, Winona E.

Mr. and Mrs. Hite own a farm of eighty-six and one-half acres, which they purchased in March, 1913. They are members of the German Baptist church at Carlisle.

LUTHER G. BAILEY.

Luther G. Bailey, an enterprising farmer of Liberty township, this county, living on rural route No. 2, out of Wilmington, was born on September 3, 1872, in Liberty township, the son of Josiah and Sidnie (McPherson) Bailey, the former of whom was born in 1842 in Liberty township, this county, and the latter in Highland county, Ohio, daughter of John and Mariah (Bonsell) McPherson, who were residents of Highland county and members of the Friends church.

Josiah Bailey was the son of George and Lydia (Shields) Bailey, the former a native of Liberty township, who were the parents of four children, Enos, Anna, William and Josiah. George Bailey was an early farmer in this community and was a prominent member of the Friends church. Josiah Bailey was educated in the common schools and was engaged in farming all his life. He was a prominent member of the Friends church and died in February, 1913. He and his wife were the parents of three children, namely: Luther G., the subject of this sketch; Luella, who married George Mills, of Waynesville, Ohio, and Eva, deceased.

Luther G. Bailey received a common school education in the public schools of Liberty township and early in life took up farming. He now owns a farm of one hundred and twenty-four acres and is profitably engaged in general farming and stock-raising. Mr. Bailey was married to Almira Hunnicutt, who was born in Clinton county, the daughter of David and Martha (Ross) Hunnicutt, farmers of Liberty township, both now deceased, and to this union two children have been born, Atha Virginia and Alson H. Mr. and Mrs. Bailey are members of the Friends church at Dover and regular attendants at the services of the same. They have many friends in their neighborhood and are held in high regard by all.

CHARLES LINKHART.

Charles Linkhart is a progressive farmer of Liberty township, this county, who lives on a well-kept farm with his mother. Mr. Linkhart was born on February 1, 1880, in Liberty township, on the farm where he now lives, the son of George W. and Mary C. (Anderson) Linkhart, the former of whom was born on April 15, 1843, in Liberty township, and the latter in Greene county, Ohio. Mary C. Anderson was first married to James Linkhart, a brother of her second husband, to which union there were born six children, Albert, Louisa, Laura, Frank, Emma and Anna.

George W. Linkhart was the son of Thomas and Ellen (Fisher) Linkhart, natives of Virginia, who were married in that state and had one child, Joseph, before they came to Ohio. Upon locating in Clinton county, where they spent the rest of their lives, they entered one hundred and eighty-five acres of land, of which tract their grandson, Charles, now owns one hundred and five acres. They were members of the Methodist church, and Thomas Linkhart was an active man in his community. He and his wife were the parents of six children, Joseph, Dorothy, Thomas, Eleanor, George W. and James.

George W. Linkhart was educated in the common schools of Liberty township and was engaged in farming during his entire life. He owned about three hundred acres of land in Liberty township and was a general farmer. Although a man active in public affairs, he was a man of strong domestic inclination and spent most of his time in his home. He and his wife were the parents of two children, Katie A. and Charles, the subject of this sketch. Katie A. married H. B. Ellis, a farmer of Liberty township, and has one child, Orville. George W. Linkhart died on September 11, 1908, and his widow is now living on the home farm with her son, Charles.

Educated in the district schools of Liberty township, Charles Linkhart was reared on the farm and was married on November 28, 1910, to Lela Oglesbee, daughter of Solomon and Sabina (Middleton) Oglesbee, the latter of whom was the daughter of James Middleton, a native of Greene county, Ohio, a farmer by occupation and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Solomon Oglesbee was the son of Amos and Anna (Huffman) Oglesbee, the former of whom was born in Virginia in 1810 and came to Ohio in 1817. Three years later he located in Clinton county and here he spent the remainder of his life. His wife was born in 1814 in Virginia and came to Ohio with her parents soon after the War of 1812. Amos Oglesbee died on December 31, 1851, and his widow on June 25, 1875. Besides Mrs. Linkhart, Solomon and Sabina Oglesbee had seven other children, James, who died at the age of forty-seven, Hattie, Nettie, Alice, Allie, Arthur and Carrie.

Mr. and Mrs. Linkhart have no children. Mr. Linkhart owns one hundred and five acres of the old farm, but cultivates in all two hundred and twenty-five acres. He is a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles of Wilmington.

HOWARD F. McKAY.

Howard F. McKay is a prosperous and well-known young farmer and teacher of Liberty township, Clinton county, Ohio. By birth and by marriage, he is connected with several of the very oldest families of this county and, being a young man of far more than ordinary ability, he is expected to take his place as a leader in this community.

Howard F. McKay was born on January 15, 1891, in Liberty township, this county, the son of Jacob B. and Priscilla (Haines) McKay, the former of whom was born on March 14, 1859, in Liberty township, and the latter on July 13, 1860, the daughter of Eber and Mary (Mendenhall) Haines. Eber Haines was a well-known minister in the Friends church for a long period, a farmer by occupation and was born in Greene county, Ohio.

The paternal grandparents of Howard F. McKay were William Franklin and Elizabeth (Peterson) McKay. The former was born on January 12, 1833, in Chester township, and in 1856 was married to Elizabeth Peterson. They located in Liberty township and became the owners of three hundred and fifty acres of land and a desirable country home. They were the parents of six children, Azel P. (deceased), Jacob B., George E., Ulysses G., Arthur F. and Beatrice A. The paternal great-grandparents of Mr. McKay were George Wesley and Mary (Fergueson) McKay, natives of Virginia, who moved to Ohio after their marriage. George Wesley McKay died in 1850, and his widow in 1878. All of their ten children grew to maturity. George Wesley McKay, who was born in 1800, was the son of Moses McKay, who was born in Virginia about 1776. He remained in Virginia until about 1818, when he and his wife and eleven children came to Ohio, leaving one son in Virginia. They settled in Warren county, where he became a land owner and remained until his death, about seven years after locating. His wife died about the same time. George Wesley McKay and wife had eight children, of whom two, George and Lucinda, are living, the deceased children being Tilman, Samuel, William Franklin, Alfred, Mary Massie and Jane.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob B. McKay, the parents of Howard F., are at present living in Wilmington, at 502 North Walnut street. Mrs. Jacob B. McKay is a member of the Friends church. The family owns land in Union township and also property in Wilmington. Jacob B. McKay was formerly a member of the board of education in Liberty township. He moved to Wilmington in December, 1909. To him and his wife have been born four children, E. Harold and Howard F. (twins), Mary Elba and Maynard J. E. Harold McKay married Ila Haworth and lives in the Dover neighborhood of Union township.

Howard F. McKay was born and reared on the farm and was educated in the common schools of Clinton county and at the Port William high school. After graduating from the Port William high school he entered Wilmington College, from which he was graduated in 1910, and having won a scholarship there he attended Haverford College during 1910 and was graduated from this latter institution in 1911. On January 24, 1914, Mr. McKay was united in marriage to Edith Starbuck, who was born in Union township, this county, on November 22, 1890, the daughter of William A. and Mary Anna (Bailey) Starbuck, and who was graduated from Wilmington College with the class of 1911. William A. Starbuck is a farmer of Union township and a member of the Friends church. He is prominent in the Friends yearly meeting and in the Sunday school, of which he is superintendent. For some time he has been an officer and director of the Clinton Mutual Insurance Company. For several years he served as assessor of Union township.

On August 26, 1915, a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Howard McKay, and was named Robert Franklin McKay.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard F. McKay are members of the Friends church and they take a great interest in church work. Mr. McKay was formerly in charge of the teachers' training class in the Chester Sunday school and is now (1915) superintendent. He is also mastre of the Mt. Pleasant Grange in Liberty township. Mr. McKay and his twin brother, E. Harold McKay, have a farm of eighty-one acres in Liberty township, which their father formerly owned. He has taught high school for four years, the first two years at Bradford, Ohio, and the last two years at the Mt. Pleasant school.

HUGH E. TERRELL.

Hugh E. Terrell, a representative of one of Clinton county's prominent families and a well-known stockman of Wayne township, is descended through his grandmother, Eliza (Bernard) Evans, from Pocahontas, daughter of the Indian chief, Powhatan, who married John Rolfe, of Varnia, Virginia, April 5, 1613 or 1614. Grandmother Evans was a representative of the seventh generation in direct descent from Pocahontas and John Rolfe. Hugh E. Terrell not only owns a splendid farm in Wayne township, but he is a well-known stock breeder, who raises standard-bred horses, and who has been raising Shorthorn cattle for twenty years. Prominent in the educational circles of his township, he is a member of the Wayne township school board and has striven earnestly as a member of that board to increase the efficiency of the public schools and to raise their standard of excellence.

Hugh E. Terrell was born on November 19, 1848, on "Woodlawn Farm," in Wayne township, this county, the son of David A. and Mary J. (Evans) Terrell. His father was born about one mile south of Highland in Highland county, Ohio, on December 5, 1820, and died in April, 1909. His mother was born near Hillsboro, in Highland county, the daughter of Hugh and Eliza (Bernard) Evans.

The line of descent from Pocahontas and John Rolfe to Eliza (Bernard) Evans is as follows: Pocahontas and John Rolfe were married in 1613 or 1614, there being some doubt as to the exact date, and they had one son, Thomas Rolfe. (1) Thomas Rolfe married Jane Poythress, and they had one child, a daughter. As is well known to all readers of early colonial history, John Rolfe took his Indian bride to England, where her death occurred a few years later. Her son, Thomas Rolfe was reared in England, but in 1640 returned to Virginia and lived on his property called "Varnia," sixteen miles below Richmond, near Henricopolis. Thomas Rolfe and wife had a daughter, Jane, who married Col. Robert Bolling in 1675, the latter of whom was born in 1646, and who died in 1709. The wife of Colonel Bolling lived but one year after her marriage, her death occurring in 1676. She left one child, a son, (3) John Bolling, who afterwards became a colonel in the American army. Col. John Bolling married Mary Kennon, daughter of Doctor Kennon, and with his family lived in his beautiful home on the Appomattox, called the "Cobbs." Col. John Bolling and wife were the parents of six children, one son and five daughters: (4) Major John Bolling, born in 1700, was the father of nineteen children, died in 1757; (4) Jane, 1703, died, 1766, married Col. Richard Randolph, and was the mother of nine children, and the grandmother of Randolph Roanoke, who was of the sixth generation: (4) Mary, 1711, married Col. John Fleming, of Mount Pleasant, who was born in 1697, the son of Charles Fleming and grandson of Sir Thomas Fleming, who, in turn was the son of Sir John Fleming, first earl of Wighton; (4) Elizabeth, 1709, married Dr. William Gay; (4) Martha, 1713, married Thomas Eldridge, and died October 23, 1749, and Anne, who became the wife of James Murray.

Col. John and Mary (Bolling) Fleming were the parents of the following children: (5) Thomas, who was a captain in the Second Virginia Regiment in 1758, and afterwards colonel in the Ninth Regiment of Virginia in the Revolution, married a Miss Randolph, and was killed in the battle of Princeton, January 12, 1777; (5) John, who was a major in the Revolution, was killed at White Plains; William, born on July 6, 1736, married Elizabeth Champe, and during his life filled a number of important judicial positions in his native state of Virginia, died February 15, 1824; (5) Charles, who was captain of the Seventh Virginia, and lieutenant-colonel of the line, and Mary, who became the wife of William Bernard, and was the mother of ten children. The Fleming family was of Flemish descent, one of whom, of high rank, settled in Scotland in the reign of David I. The connection is direct from Sir Malcolm Fleming, sheriff of Dunbarton under Alexander III. This was a singularly distinguished family, friends of Robert Bruce and favorites of successive kings.

William Bernard and Mary (Fleming) Bernard were the parents of the following children of whom there is record: (6) John, who was the father of several children, who, after the death of their father, moved to Lynchburg, Virginia; (6) William, born in 1750, was a lieutenant during the Revolutionary War; (6) Robert, served as a private in the War of Independence under Morgan; (6) Thomas, 1756, married Mary Hicks, and came to Ohio from Virginia in an early day and settled in Highland and Clinton counties; (6) Richard, 1767, who married Polly Walker and from whom is descended the branch of the family to which H. E. Terrell belongs. William Bernard, with his brother, John, emigrated to America from Ireland some time between 1735 and 1740. Col. Charles Fleming, a brother of Mary (Fleming) Bernard, was reimbursed for military service by being given a grant of land in Kentucky comprising fifty-four thousand acres. Richard and Polly (Walker) Bernard, who came to Ohio in September, 1805, from Rockbridge county, Virginia, were the parents of the following children: William P., Joseph, Richard, Eliza and Caroline. It was this Eliza, who married Hugh Evans, who was the grandmother of H. E. Terrell. The Bernards of Clinton county are all descended from Thomas and Mary (Hicks) Bernard.

The paternal grandparents of Hugh E. Terrell were Pleasant and Esther (Haines) Terrell, the former of whom, born in Virginia, died in 1837, and the latter of whom died in 1846. Pleasant Terrell came to Highland county, Ohio, from Virginia when only a boy, accompanying his parents, who stopped for a time in Cincinnati. While in that city, he learned the brick mason's trade and after reaching Highland county with his parents, built the first saw-mill and the first grist-mill at Highland. He worked at his trade all of his life, passing away in 1854 or 1855 on the farm. Pleasant and Esther (Haines) Terrell were the parents of six children: John, Israel, David, Mary, Narcissa and Ruth. The members of this family were connected with the Society of Friends. Pleasant Terrell was one of a family of eight children, born to his parents, David and Mary (Anthony) Terrell. David Terrell was born near Lynchburg, Virginia, in 1763 and died in 1858. His wife, who before her marriage was Mary Anthony, died in 1858. David and Mary Terrell were the parents of eight children: Pleasant, Christopher, David, Joseph, Mary, Judith, Sarah and Elizabeth. The father of these children served for many years as justice of the peace in Fairfield township and was, therefore, one of the foremost citizens of that section. He was a well-known hunter and spent most of his life in the wilderness. David Terrell, the great-grand-father of Hugh E. Terrell, was the son of David and Sarah (Johnson) Terrell. Sarah Johnson was the first wife of David Terrell but he was subsequently married to Sarah Clark and still later to Martha Johnson. He was the father of nine children. He was the son of David Terrell, who was born in 1675 and died in 1757. The first David Terrell and his wife reared a family of twelve children. He was the son of William Terrell, who was born in 1650 and who came to America at the age of twenty in 1670 with his two brothers. These three brothers were sent to Virginia by King James II as explorers and hunters and, for their services, were granted a large tract of land in Virginia.

David A. Terrell, the father of Hugh E. Terrell, received his education in the common schools of Fairfield township, Highland county, Ohio, but his educational advantages were meager. The only reader used in the schools at that time was the Bible. During his early life, while living at home with his father, he did much hauling. After coming of age, he purchased cattle, with his father-in-law, Hugh Evans, and drove them through to Lancaster, Pennsylvania, a trip requiring forty days. In some instances, they had three hundred cattle and as many as sixteen hundred head of sheep and thirty-five or forty horses, and it required about thirty-five men to take care of the stock while driving them through the woods. Until 1854 David A. Terrell purchased hogs and drove them to Cincinnati, Ohio. He was a stockman all of his life. At the age of twenty-one years, he had come into possession of two hundred acres of land valued at seven dollars an acre, but later increased his land holdings to one thousand acres. In 1868 he moved back near Highland, where he spent the remainder of his life. There he purchased a part of his grandfather's old farm. To David A. and Mary J. (Evans) Terrell were born seven children, of whom Hugh E., the subject of this sketch, was the eldest, the others being as follow: Anna, who is the wife of Frank Rhodes; Martha, who became the wife of Oregon Bonnie; Cora, who married Henry Bailey, a minister at Tampa, Florida; Harry, who married Etta Fenner; Imogene, who is unmarried, and Rutherford, who married Hattie Thornburg. All of the members of this family are still living with the exception of Martha. Mrs. Mary J. (Evans) Terrell was a member of the Methodist church. David A. Terrell voted the Republican ticket.

Educated in the common schools of Wayne township, and at Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio, Hugh E. Terrell was a partner with his father on the farm, where he now lives, until 1874, since which time he has been farming for himself.

On December 23, 1873, Hugh E. Terrell was married to Hattie Finley, who was born on December 29, 1848, and who died on January 28, 1901. She was a daughter of Robert and Jane (Russell) Finley, and at her death left five children: Arthur, who married Mary Seward, and has two children, Hugh and Ruth; Russell, who died at the age of twenty-seven; Frank, who married Dorothy Book, and has one son, Russell; Jane L. and Lillian Esther. The Terrell family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which Mr. Terrell is a trustee.

Politically, Hugh is a Republican, and is at present a member of the school board of Wayne township. For the last few years Mr. Terrell's son, Frank, has been a partner with him in the operation of the home farm.

JOHN CLINTON REARDON.

John Clinton Reardon is a prosperous farmer of Liberty township, who was born in Fayette county, Ohio, October 11, 1863. He is a son of Edward and Catherine (Mitchell) Reardon, both natives of Ireland, the former of whom was born on March 1, 1840. Edward Reardon came to the United States alone and subsequently settled at Washington C. H., Ohio. After his marriage in the latter city, he moved to Clinton county, and now owns six hundred and thirty-six acres of land in this county, located in Wilson, Liberty and Union townships. He lives in Union townhsip and is an active member of the Catholic church at Wilmington. He has also been active in local affairs in his neighborhood, and for many years has been a school director. At one time he served as road superintendent, having been appointed as a Democrat.

To Edward and Catherine (Mitchell) Reardon were born eight chidren, of whom Patrick, Catherine, Michael, Johanna and Beatrice are unmarried. Mary, the wife of James Waldron, is a resident of Dayton, Ohio. Margaret, who lives in this county, is the wife of John Keith. John C. is the eldest.

John C. Reardon was educated in the common schools of this county, principally in the schools of Wilson township. In 1897 he was married to Sarah Shaw, who was born in Butler county, this state, the daughter of William and Catherine (Cline) Shaw, farmers of that county, and earnest and devoted members of the Catholic church. To this union one child has been born, Teresa Louise, who is now a student in the public schools.

John C. Reardon is operating two hundred and thirty acres of land, one hundred and thirty acres of which belongs to his father, but he owns one hundred acres of land just across the road from where he is living. At the present time he is serving as ditch commissioner. He is a Democrat, and he and his family are devout members of the Catholic faith.

ROBERT EDGAR HUNT.

Robert Edgar Hunt, an enterprising farmer of Liberty township, this county, who owns a splendid-looking home on the Xenia pike, was born on April 15, 1856, in Martinsville, the son of Cyrus and Margaret (Donaldson) Hunt, who were married in 1852. The former was a native of Clinton county and the latter of Ireland, who came to Clinton county with her parents. Her father departed to return to Ireland and no member of the famiy has since been able to discover what became of him. Cyrus Hunt was the son of Robert and Ruth (Madden) Hunt, natives of this county, the latter of whom was an aunt of Moses G., Solomon and Rachel Madden, whose biographical sketches, presented elsewhere in this volume, give the history of the Madden family. Robert Hunt was a farmer in Clinton county and was an extensive stock buyer, in an early day having been profitably engaged in driving cattle and hogs to Cincinnati. He was prominent in the pioneer Quaker church of this county and died in 1856 at the age of fifty-five years. Robert and Ruth (Madden) Hunt had ten children, of whom Cyrus, the eldest, was the father of Robert Edgar, the subject of this sketch, the other children being George, Nathan, Henry, Elizabeth, Mary, Edith, Rachel, Ann and Lydia.

Cyrus Hunt received a common school education in the public schools of Clinton county and taught school practically all of his life. He became a well-read man and was a natural leader in the community in which he lived. As a member of the Friends church, he was active in religious work and was also active in civic affairs. In the days before the Civil War, he was prominent in the "underground railroad" movement and was one of the leaders in the local anti-slavery agitation of that period. For four years he taught a territorial Indian school in the west and died in Kansas in February, 1898. Cyrus and Margaret (Donaldson) Hunt were the parents of four children, Oliver, Robert Edgar.

Palmer and Gladys. Oliver is a resident of Oklahoma and has been married twice, the first time to Alice Hiatt, by whom he had three sons, and the second time to Ola Hinshaw. Palmer, who is also a resident of Oklahoma, is unmarried. Gladys is unmarried and lives with her mother.

Robert Edgar Hunt was educated in the common schools and was reared on the farm. On October 24, 1878, he was married to Lavinia Hiatt, who was born on the farm where Mr. and Mrs. Hunt now live, the daughter of Allen and Susan (Folger) Hiatt. Allen Hiatt was a farmer and large landowner in Clinton county, having been the owner, altogether, of about five hundred acres of land.

To Robert E. and Lavinia (Hiatt) Hunt five children have been born, Gladys, Susan, Bernard, Alice and Doris. Gladys married Alvin Hartman, of Clinton county, and has three children, George E., Conard and Alice. Bernard, who lives on the old home place, in Liberty township, married Edith Hurley and has two children, Esther and Elizabeth. The remainder of the children are unmarried.

After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt moved to the farm of one hundred acres in Liberty township, where they now live. They enjoy a comfortable competence and are highly respected citizens of the township.

NATHAN S. GREGORY.

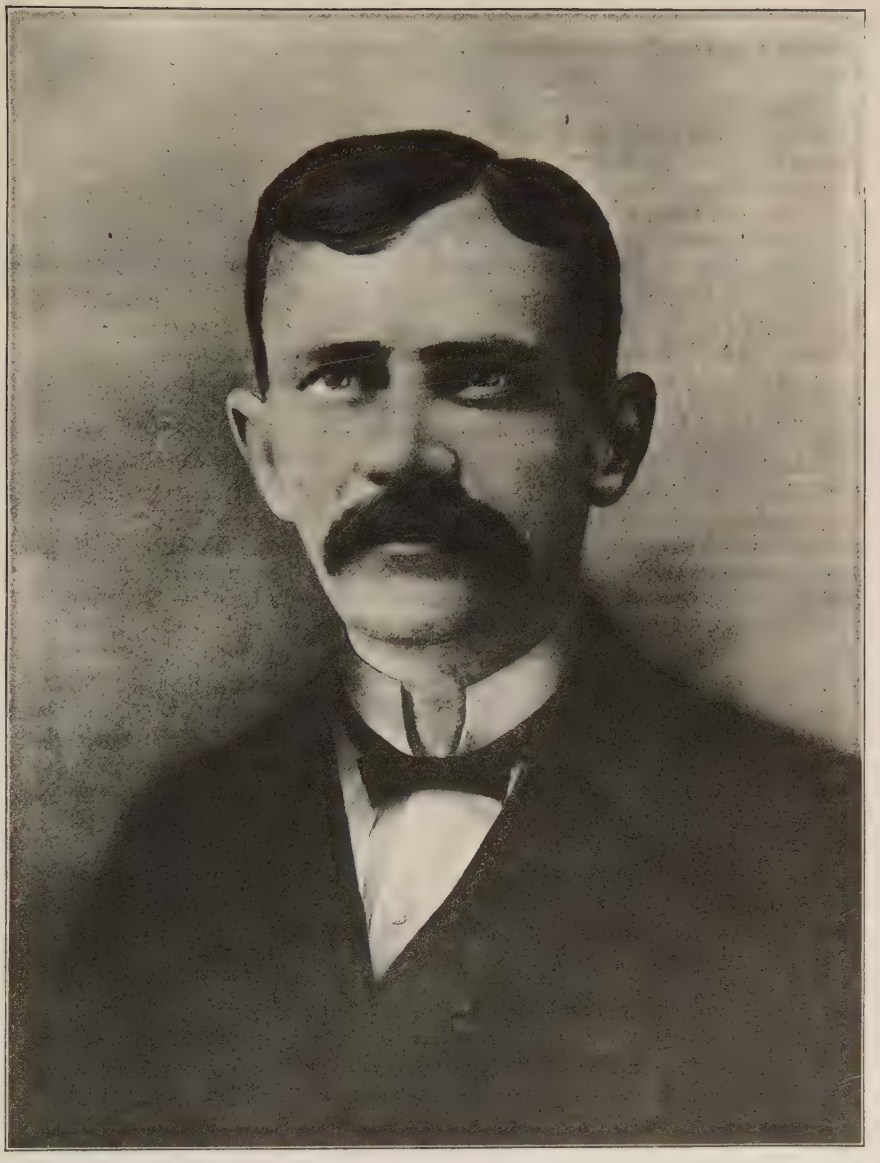
Nathan S. Gregory, a successful farmer and stockman of Green township, by perseverance, industry and wise economy has attained a comfortable station in life, and is well and favorably known throughout Clinton county. As a consequence of his wide and various interests, he is regarded by all who know him as a man of the best type of American citizenship, straightforward, unassuming, genial and obliging. Mr. Gregory is the proprietor of "Maple Grove Stock Farm," where he has made a specialty of raising standard-bred trotting horses.

Nathan S. Gregory was born on December 28, 1856, in Green township, this county, the son of James J. and Nancy (Rix) Gregory, the former of whom also was a native of Green township, born on October 22, 1819, and the latter of whom was born on July 24, 1819. They were married in Green township on December 25, 1839.

Mr. Gregory's paternal grandparents were Levi and Katie (Walker) Gregory, natives of Fayette county, Pennsylvania, and Clark county, Kentucky, respectively. Katie (Walker) Gregory was the daughter of Robert and Nancy (Huls) Walker, pioneers of Clinton county. Mr. Gregory's maternal grandparents were Jordan and Nancy Rix, both natives of North Carolina and early settlers in Clinton county, who died near New Antioch.

The late James J. Gregory grew up in Green township, and attended the public schools of that township. He owned one hundred and seven acres of land. As a Republican, he was elected infirmary director for one term, the same year that the late Addison P. Russell was elected secretary of state. James J. Gregory was a member of the Christian church early in life, but, late in life, became a member of the Universalist church. His wife remained a faithful member of the Christian church until her death on February 2, 1885. James J. Gregory died on December 11, 1907. He and his wife were the parents of eight children, as follow: Sarah C., born on November 30, 1840; Albert F., November 18, 1843; Emily J., March 6, 1847; Samantha E., September 13, 1849; Survetus L., February 28, 1854; Nathan S., December 28, 1856; Laura B., December 13, 1859, and Ulysses S. Grant, August 25, 1865.

Reared on his father's farm and educated in the public schools of Clinton county and in the high school at New Vienna, as well as in the normal schools at Sabina and Wilmington, Nathan S. Gregory, during the first ten years of his active career, was engaged in teaching school. When a very young man, he purchased twenty-five acres of land and kept adding to the tract until he now owns five hundred and sixty acres.



NATHAN S. GREGORY.

Mr. Gregory is proprietor of "Maple Grove Stock Farm," and has acquired a wide reputation as a breeder of standard-bred trotting horses.

On December 25, 1886, Nathan S. Gregory was married to Mrs. Mary E. (Foster) Cantrell, who was born August 23, 1856, the daughter of Joseph and Cynthia Foster, natives of Highland county. Joseph Foster is deceased and his widow is living with the family of Mr. Gregory. Mr. and Mrs. Gregory are the parents of two children. Sherman R., born on October 13, 1887, attended the public schools of the county and the Greenfield Business College and married Della M. Brown, who has borne him four children, Chester, Milton, Lena and Beatrice, and Russell, January 28, 1894, who attended the public schools and married Minnie Campbell, who has borne him one child, a son, Nathan William.

Mr. and Mrs. Gregory were formerly members of the Friends church, but are now, with their family, members of the Christian church. Mr. Gregory votes the Republican ticket and for several years has served as a member of the school board in Green township.

C. ALLEN ATLEY.

C. Allen Atley, a progressive farmer and thresherman of Liberty township, this county, is a man of likeable qualities, who is keenly interested in all local enterprises. He was born in this county on July 5, 1865, the son of John and Eveline (Sanderson) Atley, the former of whom was born in Adams county, Ohio, and the latter in Liberty township, this county, the daughter of Henry N. and Sarah (Earley) Sanderson. Sarah (Earley) Sanderson was a daughter of Solomon Earley, who was one of the early landholders of Liberty township. Henry N. Sanderson was an early settler in Clinton county, a school teacher and farmer by occupation. He owned four hundred acres of land and operated a private bank at his home in the country for the convenience of his neighbors and was otherwise active in local affairs.

John Atley was the son of Henry and Sarah Atley, natives of Kentucky. Henry Atley's grandfather and two of his brothers came from France with Lafayette during the Revolutionary War, and, after the close of the Revolutionary War, settled in Virginia. In earlier times the Atley name was written "De Atley." While Henry Atley was still single, he moved to Adams county, Ohio, where he entered two hundred acres of land, which he held during the remainder of his life. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and died at the age of ninety-four. He and his good wife had seven children, one of whom was John Atley, the father of C. Allen Atley. John Atley left Adams county at the age of twenty years and came to Clinton county one year before the breaking out of the Civil War. He prospered here and was the owner of one hundred and fifty-three acres at the time of his death. The family, however, held over four hundred acres, a part of which had been inherited by Mrs. John Atley from her parents. John Atley died in 1910 and his widow is still living. They were the parents of six children, of whom C. Allen Atley, the subject of this sketch, was the eldest, the others being Nelia, Elie, Ellie, Anna and Effie. Elie married Harvey Garber and lives in Liberty township, this county; Ellie married George Drake, of Wilson township; Anna married E. P. Stotler, of Green township, and Effie married Henry Sprague, of Richland township.

Mr. Atley was educated in the public schools of Clinton county and has always been engaged in farming. In 1913 he remodeled his barn and owns in his home farm one hundred and eighty-two acres. During the past three years he has been engaged, in partnership with two neighbors, in the management of a threshing machine. Mr. Atley married Nettie Rockhill, who was born in this county, the daughter of John G. and Lydia Emily (Green) Rockhill, and to this union four children have been born, John C. (deceased), Earnest Vernon, Earl Russell and Allen Denver, all of whom live at home with their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Atley are members of the Methodist Protestant church at Port William and are regular attendants at Sunday school. Mr. Atley is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, including both the subordinate and encampment branches, and is also a member of the Daughters of Rebekah. He takes an active interest in local affairs and is a member of the board of education. Although Mr. Atley is nominally a Democrat, he is more or less independent in voting.

EDWARD LEWIS JOHNSON.

Edward Lewis Johnson, now the proprietor of one hundred and seven and one-half acres of land in Liberty township, this county, was born on October 31, 1863, in the township where he lives, the son of Isaiah and Deborah (Ferguson) Johnson, both of whom were born in Clinton county, the former on February 29, 1824, and the latter about 1832, the daughter of Anderson and Anna (Fires) Ferguson. Anderson Ferguson was a Virginian, who came to Ohio before his marriage and settled in Clinton county. After a short time, he moved to Fayette county and then to Illinois, settling in Shelby county, where he became a large landowner. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Isaiah Johnson was the son of John Johnson, also a native of Virginia, who, after his marriage, came to Ohio and settled on the present site of Cincinnati. Subsequently, he came to Clinton county and finally purchased the farm now owned by Edward L. Johnson, comprising at that time sixty acres of land. He and his wife were the parents of five sons and four daughters. Isaiah Johnson was educated in the common schools and was a carpenter by trade. He owned one hundred and eight acres of land in Liberty township, comprising the sixty acres of land which his father had owned, and was active in local affairs, especially in the affairs of the Christian church. For some time he served as trustee of Liberty township. To Isaiah and Deborah (Ferguson) Johnson was born six children, Nathan, Anna, Belle, Edward, John, Rufus and Carrie, all of whom are living. The father of these children died about 1900 and the mother in March, 1910.

Educated in the common schools of Liberty township, Edward Lewis Johnson has always been engaged in farming. On January 9, 1890, he was united in marriage to Jerretta Bentley, who was born in this county, a daughter of E. V. Bentley, a farmer of Clinton county, who is now living retired in Wilmington. To Mr. and Mrs. Johnson four children have been born, Ellen, Ethel, Flora and Mary. Of these children, Ellen, the eldest, married Gurney Kersey, who died in August, 1914, leaving two children, Catherine and Mildred.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are members of the Christian church at Wilmington. They are regular attendants at the services and liberal contributors to the support of the church.

FRANK CURTIS.

Among the industrious farmers of Liberty township, this county, is Frank Curtis, who was born in this county on May 6, 1866, the son of David and Martha J. (Truitt) Curtis, the former of whom was born in Virginia and the latter in Clinton county, the daughter of George and Abbie (Applegate) Truitt. George Truitt was a farmer and large landowner in Clinton county. The patrnal grandparents of Frank Curtis were Christopher Curtis and wife, who were natives of Virginia and were married in that state. After their marriage, they came to Ohio and engaged in farming in Clinton county. They were devout members of the Baptist church.

David Curtis, the father of Frank Curtis, was still a young man when he came from Virginia to Clinton county with his parents. In time he came to own six hundred acres of land, having been a very successful farmer. Although not a member of any church, he was an attendant at the Baptist church. He died some years ago, and his widow is still living in Green township, this county. They were the parents of nine children, of whom Frank, the subject of this sketch, was the fourth in order of birth. Three of the children, Sarah, Jennie and Lula, are deceased. The other living children are A. A., William, Elzie, Lucy and George.

Frank Curtis, who was educated in the common schools of Green township and was reared on his father's farm in this county, was married in December, 1886, to Lucinda Morton, who was born in Clinton county, the daughter of Isaiah and Jennie (Lieurance) Morton, farmers in Green township and life-long members of the Baptist church. After his marriage, Mr. Curtis located on the old home farm, where he lived until about seven years ago, at which time he purchased the farm of one hundred and one acres, where he now lives and where he is profitably engaged in general farming.

To Frank and Lucinda (Morton) Curtis twelve children have been born, of whom one, Russell, is deceased, the living children, in the order of their birth, being Lonnie, Roy, Carl, Elzie, Chloe, Sarah, Alice, Lucy, Martha, Opal and Burdsal.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis are popular citizens of Liberty township. Mrs. Curtis is a member of the Baptist church and active in the various works of the church. Mr. Curtis is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

CLARENCE H. McKAY.

Another of the grandsons of the well-known pioneer family of McKay in this county is Clarence H. McKay, of Chester township, the son of Jonathan McKay, and a keen, ambitious and intelligent young farmer and stockman. He is the owner of two hundred and eighty-eight acres of land, and is also an extensive dealer in hogs and cattle, which he buys and sells.

Clarence H. McKay was born on the farm where he now lives in Chester township, this county, on January 2, 1874, a son of Jonathan and Elizabeth J. (Medsker) McKay. Jonathan McKay was born on August 3, 1834, in Chester township, this county, and was reared on a farm. He received a good, common school education and on June 18, 1862, at the age of twenty-eight, was married to Elizabeth J. Medsker, who was born on August 30, 1838, a daughter of Michael and Sarah (Graham) Medsker. Michael Medsker was born in January, 1812, near Hillsboro, Highland county, Ohio, and was reared on a farm. On May 14, 1833, he married Sarah Graham, who was born on March 18, 1811, and to this union nine children were born. The mother of these children died in October, 1862, and in May, 1865, Mr. Medsker married Elizabeth Zink. Jonathan McKay and wife were the parents of five children, two of whom died early in life, the children who survive being Francis M., who married Lucy McClintock; Luella, the wife of Walter Lackey, and Clarence H., the immediate subject of this review. Jonathan McKay owned two hundred and twenty acres of land two miles east of New Burlington, where he was a prosperous farmer and a well-known and influential citizen of his community. He served as a steward in the Methodist church for many years, and politically, was identified with the Republican party.

The founder of the McKay family in America was Andrew McKay, a native of Scotland, and a member of the Society of Friends, who, some time prior to 1766, married Jane Ridgeway, and settled in Frederick county, Virginia. They were the parents of five children, Moses, Enos, Jacob, Margaret and Patience. Moses McKay was born on September 17, 1766, and in 1793 married Abigail Shinn, who was born on May 3, 1776, in Stafford county, Virginia, the daughter of George and Rachel Shinn, and to this union were born thirteen children: Rachel, born on January 19, 1794; Robert, December 17, 1795; Sarah, November 11, 1797; George, March 11, 1800; Francis, January 19, 1802; Margaret, January 16, 1804; Jonas, September 9, 1806; Virginia, August 22, 1808; Maria, May 23, 1811; Jonas T., May 10, 1813; Levi, February 29, 1816; Jacob F., June 3, 1819, and Mary E., July 27, 1822. Moses McKay and family emigrated by way of Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, to Lebanon, Ohio, about 1814, and later settled near Waynesville, in what is now known as Massey township, Warren county, Ohio. Moses McKay died on January 28, 1828, his widow surviving him but six months, her death occurring in July, 1828. Their son, Francis, the fifth child in the family, was educated in the pioneer schools, and on October 7, 1830, married Mary Collett, who was born on November 7, 1808, the daughter of Moses and Rebecca Collett. They were the parents of eleven children. Francis McKay was a man well known in the community where he lived, and was greatly missed when he died, March 26, 1871, not only by the loved ones of his own family, but by the poor and needy, to whom he had been a very great benefactor.

Clarence H. McKay, the grandson of Francis and Mary (Collett) McKay, received his education in the common schools of Chester township. At the age of sixteen years he started life on his own responsibility, on the farm which he now owns, a farm comprising two hundred and eighty-eight acres, where Mr. McKay carries on general farming and stock raising, and is accounted one of the most enterprising and thrifty young farmers of Clinton county. In 1914 he remodeled his house and now has a splendid country home, equipped with all modern conveniences.

On June 3, 1896, Clarence H. McKay was married to Flora Beam, the daughter of Daniel and Susan Beam, and to this union have been born four children, Albert, Eva, Ada and Mary E.

Mr. and Mrs. McKay are prominent members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and he is both recording steward of the congregation and superintendent of the Sunday school. Mr. McKay votes the Republican ticket, and fraternally, is identified with the Free and Accepted Masons.

THOMAS F. BERNARD.

It is a well-attested fact that the greatness of a community or state lies not in the machinery of government, or even in its institutions; but rather in the sterling qualities of the individual citizen, in his capacity for high and unselfish effort and his devotion to the public welfare. In these particulars, the venerable Thomas F. Bernard, of Wayne township, has conferred honor and dignity upon this county, and has been connected with the advancement of one of the most flourishing and progressive sections of the commonwealth. He is descended from distinguished ancestry, his grandfather having been a soldier in the American Revolution, and was with General Washington at the surrender of Cornwallis.

Thomas F. Bernard was born on February 28, 1832, in Fairfield township, Highland county, Ohio, the son of George W. and Harriett (McConnell) Bernard, the former born on September 13, 1799, in Goochland county, Virginia, and the latter in Brown county, Ohio, the daughter of James McConnell.

George W. Bernard was the son of Thomas F. and Mary (Hicks) Bernard, the former of whom was the son of William and Mary (Fleming) Bernard, of Goochland county, Virginia. William Bernard, who was a farmer and carpenter, and an extensive slave owner in the Old Dominion state, was a soldier in the Continental army during the Revolutionary War, serving under General Washington for five years. He participated in the battles of Germantown, Monmouth, Trenton, Stony Point and Yorktown. In 1807 he left Virginia and came to Ohio, having started from Virginia on April 10, 1807, and arriving in Ohio, on June 10, of the same year, having been just two months on the way. He and his wife spent the remainder of their lives in Highland county, this state. Thomas F. and Mary (Hicks) Bernard were the parents of eight children, John, George W., Thomas, Sallie, Bettie, Mary, Susannah and Nancy.

George W. Bernard, the second son of Thomas F. Bernard, received only a limited education. On March 1, 1833, he came to Clinton county from Highland county, locating on a farm in Green township, subsequently becoming the owner of about five hundred acres of land. He did much clearing and draining and lived to a very ripe old age, passing away quietly on July 23, 1895, at the age of nearly ninety-six years. Nine children were born to George W. and Harriett (McConnell) Bernard, Thomas F., James K., Mary, Jane, John, Sallie, George, Charles and Elijah. George was a soldier in the Union army during the Civil War. The late George W. Bernard and his wife were members of the Friends church, while politically, Mr. Bernard was an adherent of the Democratic party.

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS F. BERNARD.

The rudiments of an education were obtained by Thomas F. Bernard in a log-cabin school house in Green township, this county. Having begun when a young man to work on his father's farm, in 1855, one year after his marriage, he purchased a farm of fifty acres in Wayne township. He has added to his land holdings gradually from year to year until he is now the owner of three hundred and fifty-eight acres of excellent land. During his active life Mr. Bernard was an extensive stockman, but retired from active farming in 1913.

On October 15, 1854, Thomas F. Bernard was married to Sophia West, the daughter of Harrison and Jane West. Of the nine children born to this marriage, two, Martha Anna, the eldest, and William C., the eighth born, are deceased, the others being as follow: Harriett Jane, who became the wife of Jehu Steele; Mary E., the wife of Thomas Hagerty; Virginia, the wife of Jackson Fry; Minerva, the wife of William McKay; Charles E., who married Nettie Steele; Elizabeth, who became the wife of Elmer Page; Hugh, who married Bessie Achor, and Thomas J., who married Marley Achor. The mother of these children died on May 18, 1907.

DENNIS STEPHENS.

Dennis Stephens, who now owns a good farm of one hundred and fifty-five acres in Liberty township, and who is prominent in the educational affairs of Clinton county, was born on April 10, 1868, in Greene county, Ohio, the son of Lewis A. and Catherine (McDorman) Stephens, the former of whom was born in 1844, in Highland county, Ohio, and the latter in Clinton county, the daughter of Risdon and Tacy McDorman, natives of Virginia, who settled in Clinton county after their marriage, and here owned a small farm. They were members of the Methodist Protestant church.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Stephens were residents of Highland county, Ohio. John Stephens, the paternal grandfather, was born in Highland county, and lived in that county all his life. He was a large landholder, owning approximately five hundred acres, altogether. By his first wife he had seven children, Lewis A., Casper, Curren, John, Elizabeth, Julia and Mary. By his second wife there were two children, William and Charles. The great-grandfather was John Stephens, a native of Virginia, who came on horseback to Ohio and located in Highland county, where he owned a large tract of land. He had five sons.

The late Lewis A. Stephens was educated in the common schools, and served valiantly as a Union soldier during the Civil War, a member of Company M, Twelfth Ohio Cavalry, serving two years and eight months. Later he became active in public affairs in this county and was a prominent member in the Friends church. He died on June 30, 1885, and his widow survived him until June 12, 1894. They were the parents of seven children, of whom Nellie died at the age of eighteen, Clarence at the age of seven and Roscoe at the age of eighteen months. The living children are W. O., Dennis, the subject of this sketch, Vivie and Webster, all of whom are married except W. O. Vivie, who is a resident of Xenia, Ohio, married Harry Higgins, and had one child, Edward Lewis.

Educated in the common schools of Port William and reared on the farm, Dennis Stephens was married on June 30, 1898, to Nora Hunnicutt, who was born in Liberty township, this county, daughter of Wilson and Mary Hunnicutt, to which union five children have been born, Donald Lewis, Thelma H., Mary Leota, Lorena Catharine and Howard Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephens are members of the Friends church and attend the Sunday school, Mr. Stephens being a teacher of a class and has been assistant superintendent of the Sunday school. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and has served as trustee of Liberty township for three terms, being active in the local councils of the Republican party.

JOHN B. WICAL.

John B. Wical is a successful farmer and public-spirited man of affairs of Wilson township, this county, who was born on April 9, 1860, in Mercer county, Ohio, the son of Jonah and Permelia (Henderson) Wical, the former of whom was born in Greene county, Ohio, and the latter in Mercer county, the daughter of Bushrod Henderson, who was a farmer in that county.

The paternal grandparents of John B. Wical were George and Hattie (Ogden) Wical, natives of Greene county, Ohio, but who lived near the Clinton county line. George and Hattie (Ogden) Wical were pioneer farmers of this section. They had eight children, John, Jonah, Michael, Jane, Ann, Emily, Isabel and Eliza.

Jonah Wical received a common school education and farmed seventy-five acres of land in Wilson township. He and his wife are still living. They are the parents of nine children, of whom John B. is the eldest, the others being Mary, William, Clem, Peter, Elizabeth, S. Milton and Hilton (twins) and Charlotta.

John B. Wical was educated in the common schools and has always been engaged in farming. He owns one hundred and forty-two acres of land and has a farm which presents a splendid appearance. On December 24, 1884, he was married to Ella Spears, the daughter of S. C. Spears, a farmer of this county, to which union have been born three children, Grover, Frank and Thurman. Grover, who lives in Reesville, married Ora Wilson. Frank, a resident of Clinton county, married Clara Morris. Thurman is unmarried and lives at home with his parents.

John B. Wical is a member of the Wilson township school board and, for many years, has taken an active part in the educational affairs of Wilson township. He is widely known in that township and is one of its most highly respected citizens.

LAURENCE GOOD WRIGHT.

Laurence Good Wright, one of the most successful young farmers in Green township, this county, has been well prepared for agriculture, having been graduated from the agricultural department of Ohio State University in 1911.

Laurence Good Wright is the son of James M. and Rachel (Good) Wright and was born in Highland county, Ohio, July 31, 1888. His father was a native of Highland county, born on January 7, 1854, and his mother a native of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, born on August 31, 1852. The father was reared in Highland county and, when a boy, moved to New Vienna, this county, where he began working by the month, then engaged in the mercantile business for a few years and later engaged in farming, in which he was very successful, having been the owner of about three hundred acres of land in Green township, near New Vienna, at the time of his death, on June 15, 1913. He was also a stockholder in the bank at New Vienna. He was a Republican and was a member of the Grange and of the Sons of Veterans. He was a life-long member of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which his widow is also a member.

The late James M. Wright was the son of Thomas McClain and Sarah Ann (Woodmansee) Wright, who were pioneers in Highland county. Thomas McClain Wright was a soldier in the Civil War and died during the service in 1864, at Raymond, Mississippi. He was a wagon-maker by trade. His widow died in Green township, this county, in 1911. Rachel Good was the daughter of Charles and Betsy (Moore) Good, who came from Pennsylvania to Ohio in pioneer times and spent the rest of their lives at New Vienna. They were members of the Hicksite Friends church and Charles Good was one of the organizers of the bank at New Vienna. Laurence Good Wright is one of four children born to his parents, the others being H. Doyle, Edith B. and Alice, all of whom are living.

Laurence Good Wright moved to the farm, which he now owns, with his parents in 1802, and there he has since resided. He was educated in the public schools of New Vienna and was graduated from the New Vienna high school in 1907. In 1911 he completed the agricultural course at Ohio State University. He owns one hundred and twelve acres of land comprising the old homestead, and has made many improvements upon the farm. He has specialized in registered Jersey cattle and has a dairy on the farm, keeping about thirty cows.

On June 12, 1912, Laurence G. Wright was married to Bessie Lewis, of Clermont county, Ohio, the daughter of Charles and Emma Lewis, to which union two daughters have been born, Eleanor Lewis, born on April 1, 1914, and Edith Esther, August 14, 1915.

Mr. Wright is a Republican. He is a member of the Grange and he and his wife are active members of the Methodist Episcopal church, enjoying the friendship and esteem of all in that section of the county.

HARRY NICKERSON.

Fortunate is the young man who has had a worthy father, one who has well understood life in all of its phases and who has been able intelligently to guide and direct the footsteps of his children. Harry Nickerson, a well-known young farmer of Chester township, this county, who owns a magnificent farm of two hundred and ten acres, owes his successful start in life to the wise and sympathetic counsel of his beloved father, who was well known in this and other states for his interest in and understanding of practical educational problems. There is an old saying, "Like father, like son," which, unfortunately, is not always true, but it is true of the Nickersons and is very likely to be true for generations yet unborn, since the cumulative effects of personal integrity, thrift and wide intelligence are quite likely to be handed down through many succeeding generations.

Harry Nickerson, a representative of the third generation of this family in Clinton county, was born on February 14, 1870, on the farm in Chester township, where he now lives. His distinguished father, the late Joshua Nickerson, who was born on July 7, 1837, in Chester township, and who passed away on November 24, 1894, received a liberal education in the schools of Chester township and at Granville and began teaching school at the age of sixteen at Spring Hill, in Warren county. He continued in the school room for ten years and won a lasting reputation for himself by his skillful methods of instruction and his efficient discipline, his influence still being felt in the schools of the neighborhood where he taught for so many years. In 1875 he began the sale of school supplies and in that connection instructed school teachers and school boards how to use improved appliances and improved methods. In this work he was remarkably successful and covered a great deal of territory, selling books and lecturing to teachers. He did much work in the state of Virginia and was working there at the time of his death.

In connection with his other work, the late Joshua Nickerson owned a farm in Chester township and he was not only one of the first farmers in the neighborhood to use fertilizer, but he was one of the most progressive in all respects. He was married on July 30, 1860, to Abigail Collett, a daughter of Daniel H. Collett, of Chester township, and to this union three children were born, Hattie, who married Edward Inwood; Clark, who died early in life, and Harry, the subject of this sketch. The parents were members of the Baptist church of Jonas Run and the father was active in church work, carrying into his daily life and practicing in his daily associations, with men and women, the teachings of the lowly Nazarene.

Mr. Nickerson's paternal grandparents were Clark and Martha (Ashby) Nickerson, the former of whom was a native of the Empire state and the latter a native of Kentucky, born on March 19, 1805, the daughter of Silas and Sarah (Cullott) Ashby. The grandfather was a farmer in Chester township, but, during the early part of his life, he had run a flat-boat on the Ohio river, between Cincinnati and New Orleans, having been employed on the river for about twelve years. He spent the latter part of his life on his farm of one hundred acres. Clark and Martha Nickerson had four other children besides Joshua, who was the second, the others being James, who was born on December 14, 1832; David A., May 6, 1840; Mary Frances, July 21, 1843, and Susannah, July 21, 1846. The grandparents were members of the Baptist church at Jonas Run.

Harry Nickerson was educated in the common schools of Chester township and in the schools at New Burlington. At the beginning of his active career, he took up farming on the farm where he now lives and in 1907 built a commodious country home. Mr. Nickerson owns two hundred and ten acres of land and is considered a wealthy farmer in this county. In 1891 he was married to Clara Colvin, daughter of Marion and Sallie Colvin, and to this union there have been born two children, Edith, born in February, 1896, and Everett Joshua, April 11, 1911.

Mr. and Mrs. Nickerson are members of the Methodist Episcopal church at New Burlington, and he is a member of the official board of that congregation. Mr. Nickerson votes the Republican ticket, but he is not a hide-bound partisan and, in performing his duties as a citizen, exhibits the same discriminating intelligence which characterizes his success as a farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Nickerson are popular residents of Chester township and are held in high esteem by all who know them.

JOHN E. HAWKINS.

John E. Hawkins, who for many years has been a well-known farmer and preacher, of Chester township, this county, was born in that township on December 9, 1843, a son to Amos and Massie (Spray) Hawkins. He was reared in Chester township, and received his early education in the public schools. As a young man, he started farming in the township where he was born, and he has lived there all his life. He purchased sixty-two acres of land in 1875, since which time he has added twenty-six acres more. For the past thirty-five years, Mr. Hawkins has been a local preacher of the Chester church (Friends).

Amos Hawkins, father of John E. Hawkins, was born in Clinton county, on May 23, 1813. He was educated in the public schools of Chester township, and as a young man, started farming on his father's farm, the entire period of his active life being spent in Chester township, where he owned one hundred and eighty acres. He married Massie Spray, who was born on August 29, 1824, daughter of John and Massie Spray, and to this union the following children were born: James, born on January 7, 1841; Jehu, February 22, 1842; John, December 9, 1843; Jesse, March 21, 1846, and Benjamin, December 23, 1848. Amos Hawkins was a member of the Friend's church and in politics, a Republican. He was the son of James and Sarah (Wilson) Hawkins, who came to Clinton county from South Carolina about the year 1806, locating on a farm near the edge of Chester township, where they spent the remaining years of their lives. They were the parents of six children, as follow: Ruth, born on March 14, 1793; Dinah, November 22, 1795; Jehu, October 30, 1796; Benjamin, 1808; Amos, 1813, and James, July 1, 1810. The elder James Hawkins was born in Virginia on January 23, 1756.

In 1869 John E. Hawkins was united in marriage to Deborah T. McMillan, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth McMillan, to which union two children were born, Milton and Bessie (deceased). Milton Hawkins married Anna Lyle, who died in May, 1901, leaving one child, a daughter, Violet Rose. Milton Hawkins married, secondly, Mary Walker, to which union there has been no issue. Upon the death of his wife Deborah, John E. Hawkins married, secondly, on May 10, 1881, Lydia E. Bevan, who was born in 1845, daughter of Abel and Charlotte T. (Fawcett) Bevan, to which second union one child has been born, a daughter, Ethel May, who is a teacher of English in the schools of Kendallville, Indiana. The Bevan family is well known throughout this section of the state, the Bevans having come from Virginia to Ohio at an early day in the settlement of this section, descendants of the founders of the family being now well-known farming people in Greene and Clinton counties. Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins are active in the affairs of the Friends church in their neighborhood and for many years Mr. Hawkins has performed admirable service as a minister of the Chester church. He takes an active interest in local civic affairs, but has never been an office seeker, being quite content to have his influence in governmental matters be manifested in quiet words of admonition among his neighbors. He is an exemplary citizen and he and his family are held in high regard throughout that part of the county.

OSCAR LESLIE MATTHEWS.

Oscar Leslie Matthews, now the proprietor of one hundred acres of land in Green township, this county, was born in this county on December 28, 1874, the son of Elijah H. and Ellen (Elliott) Matthews, the former of whom was born in Highland county, Ohio, October 20, 1826, and the latter in Clinton county, November 28, 1832. Elijah H. Matthews died in Clinton county on December 13, 1904. His wife had preceded him to the grave many years previously, her death occurring on December 9, 1890.

Elijah H. Matthews was the son of John and Mary Matthews, natives of North Carolina and Tennessee, respectively. John Matthews was the son of John and Rebecca Matthews, natives of North Carolina, of Scottish descent. They immigrated from North Carolina to Ohio and settled near New Market, in Highland county, in 1807. One year later they located four miles north of Hillsboro on Clear creek, and there spent the remainder of their lives. John Matthews, the father of Elijah H., was born in March, 1774, and, after his marriage in Highland county, located on his father's farm, where he remained through life. He and his wife were the parents of ten children, seven sons and three daughters, eight of whom lived to maturity, John, Albert G., Christopher, Elijah, Joel, Mrs. Susan Brown, Mrs. Mary Chapman and Mrs. Eliza Jane Hicks, of Kansas. John Matthews was a prominent man in Highland county and served as county commissioner two terms and as associate judge of the county for twenty-one years, having been elected three consecutive terms of seven years each. He died in August, 1848, at the age of seventy-four years and his widow died in April, 1864, at the age of seventy-four.

Elijah H. Matthews was married on January 25, 1849, to Ellen Elliott, the daughter of William and Susan Elliott, early settlers of Clinton county, who were married, lived and died in this county. They were the parents of four children, Thomas G., who resides in Mercer county, Ohio; William, Ellen and Eliza Jane, the latter of whom married Valentine Cox, of Van Wert county. Mr. and Mrs. Elijah H. Matthews had ten children, nine of whom reached the age of maturity, namely: John W., born on December 27, 1850; Susan, May 29, 1853, who married Levi West; Mary Elizabeth, June 20, 1857, who became the wife of David Matthews; Sarah E., October 7, 1859, who married Lafayette West; Kate G., February 10, 1862, who married Abraham Frazier; Rachel Ann, April 13, 1864; Ollie M., June 10, 1869; Clara E., December 25, 1870; and Oscar L., the subject of this sketch. Until 1850 Elijah H. Matthews resided in Highland county. He then moved to Clinton county, locating four miles east of Wilmington, in Union township, where he lived four years, after which he moved to Green township, where he spent the rest of his life. When a young man, Elijah H. Matthews and his brother, Christopher, had managed a general store at Buford, in Highland county. At the time of his death, he owned several hundred acres of land. He was mayor of New Vienna two years, justice of the peace ten years, township trustee and assessor of the third division of Clinton county. Mr. and Mrs. Elijah H. Matthews were members of the Methodist church, and he was a member of the Masonic fraternity.

Oscar L. Matthews was reared on a farm and was educated in the public schools. He lives in Green township, two miles and a half from New Vienna, Ohio, and is a general farmer and stockman.

On August 10, 1898, Oscar L. Matthews was married to Lucy Curtis, who was born in Green township, this county, on April 17, 1876, the daughter of David and Martha J. (Truitt) Curtis, both of whom were born in Virginia, the former in 1827 and the latter in 1836. David Curtis was the son of Christopher and Sarah Curtis, pioneers of this county, and Martha J. Truitt was the daughter of George and Abigail (Applegate) Truitt, also pioneers of Clinton county. David Curtis and wife were the parents of nine children, of whom Mrs. Oscar L. Matthews is the youngest, the others being Allen Albert, William, Sarah (deceased), James E., Jennie (deceased), Frank, Lula, who married Frank Steele, and George. David Curtis died on February 12, 1898, and his widow is still living.

To Oscar Leslie and Lucy (Curtis) Matthews three children have been born, Fred Curtis, born on July 13, 1900; Martha Ellen, December 20, 1902, and William Delbert, December 5, 1908.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthews are members of the Friends church. Mr. Matthews is a member of the Grange, has served as school director and votes the Democratic ticket.

EDWARD GEORGE.

The history of a community is most useful which deals most especially with the lives and activities of its people, especially those who, by industry and good management, forge to the front and outstrip the plodders on the highway of life. Edward George, a native of Perry county, Indiana, but whose father came from the little kingdom of Belgium, has attained a position of marked respect in this county and has acquired a competence, largely by hard work.

Edward George was born on April 24, 1843, in Perry county, Indiana, the son of Nicholas and Catherine (Lawrence) George, the former of whom was born in 1836 at Hachy, Belgium, and who died on July 12, 1890, and the latter born in 1840, near Hachy, Belgium, the daughter of Louis Joseph and Antonetta (Stweizer) Lawrence. The father of Mrs. Nicholas George came with his family to America about 1855 and located in Perry county, Indiana.

Nicholas George was educated in the common schools of Belgium and left his native land for America when still a young man. Settling in the state of Iowa, he enlisted as a soldier in the Civil War and served a little more than three years. After the war, he settled in Perry county, Indiana, where he married and located on a farm, living there the rest of his life. Eight children were born to Nicholas and Catherine George, namely: Peter, Louis, Sarah, who married Paul Clement; Edward, the subject of this sketch; Jane, who married Frank Kibbler; John, Mary, who died at the age of eight years, and August, who married Ethel Tottle.

The late Nicholas George was the son of Peter and Margaret (Devillez) George, the former of whom was born in 1804 at Hachy, Belgium, and died in 1882, and the latter, born at Nobresart, Belgium, June 2, 1804, died in 1886. Margaret Devillez was the daughter of Henry Devillez, who married a Miss Shannen. Peter George was the son of Henry and Mary (Adam) George.

Edward George was educated in the common schools of Perry county, Indiana, and upon attaining young manhood moved to this county, locating in Liberty township. In 1909 he purchased a farm of one hundred and fifty-one acres in Adams township, this county, where he now lives. He makes a specialty of raising thoroughbred Chester White hogs and is well known throughout the county as a breeder and feeder.

On March 2, 1897, Edward George was married to Frances Kuebler, who was born on June 17, 1875, the daughter of Valentine Kuebler, and to this union eight children have been born, as follow: Louis E., born on April 10, 1898; Lawrence P., April 11, 1901; Leo M., May 22, 1903; Ray Augustine, June 3, 1905; Everett F., October 20, 1907; Irwin J., January 31, 1909; Julia C., May 21, 1912; and Marjorie F., January 18, 1915.

Mr. and Mrs. George are members of the Catholic church and Mr. George votes the Democratic ticket. In 1908 he built a comfortable country house and a commodious barn. His farm is well improved and most of the improvements have been placed upon it by Mr. George's own hand. He is an interesting and highly-respected citizen and enjoys the confidence of his fellow citizens.

GEORGE M. COLE.

The history of this county would be incomplete without a record of the family which the above-named gentleman represents, for the reason that his ancestors, by early residence in the county, have helped materially in the making of its history. Coming from pioneer stock, the subject of this sketch is possessed of those enviable characteristics which make for success in whatever path of life their possessor chooses to travel. George M. Cole is the worthy scion of worthy ancestry. He was born in this county on July 3, 1860, the son of Benjamin and Martha (Shields) Cole, the former of whom was born in Indiana in 1833, and the latter, on a farm near Blanchester, this county, in 1837.

On the other side of the family, there also is pioneer stock, for Mr. Cole's paternal grandmother, Delilah (Brandenburg) Cole, was the daughter of William Brandenburg, one of the first to cross the country and pitch his tent in the forests of this county near Wilmington. Thomas Cole, the paternal grandfather, came to this county when a young man, married here, and then went to Indiana, and from there, to Missouri, where he spent the rest of his life. His widow, longing for the friends of her girlhood, returned to Clinton county, but when one of her sons went West, she accompanied him, and lived with his family until called away by death. Benjamin Cole, father of George M. Cole, died on June 4, 1915, and his widow is now living with a daughter near Eaton, Preble county, Ohio. To Benjamin and Martha (Shields) Cole, eight children were born, as follow: Alice, George, Lucinda, Phoebe, Ida, Mart, Samuel and Catherine.

George Cole, after his schooling in Vernon township was completed, gave his entire attention to the problems of farming and stock raising, and after years of experience, is known as a successful breeder. He has now a herd of thoroughbred Jersey cows which he has raised on his farm of two hundred and thirty acres in Marion township. To this farm he came when the land consisted of woods, but he went resolutely to work to clear and improve it, and now after twenty-eight years of residence, is abundantly rewarded for his strenuous labors.

The domestic phase of a man's career is quite as important as his life in the world of occupational activity, for it furnishes the background for that life and for all his social relationships. On February 26, 1883, George M. Cole married Lizzie Wisbey, who was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, on November 4, 1852, the daughter of Lewis and Margaret (Cartwright) Wisbey. Lewis Wisbey was born in Brown county, Ohio, in 1824 and in early manhood, married Margaret Cartwright, who was born in Yorkshire, England, a daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Leard) Cartwright, who came to America, first locating in Baltimore, Maryland. The Cartwrights later lived in Cincinnati for some years and from there went to Tunelton, Indiana, to take charge of a store. The mother died on August 3, 1833, and the father married, secondly, Anna S. Taylor, who had a remarkably long life, being over ninety years of age when she died. Joseph Cartwright died at Olney, Illinois on March 29, 1865. Lewis Wisbey was a son of Joseph and Jane (Ray) Wisbey, who many years ago, came to Ohio, settling near Whiteoak, in Brown county, where Joseph died, leaving a widow and twelve children who moved to Cincinnati, these children being Hannah, Sarah, Frances, Margaret, Rebecca, America, Jane, Edith, Phoebe, Alice, Lewis and Return. Lewis Wisbey was for thirty-eight years attached to the Cincinnati fire department, during six years of which time, he was the chief engineer. His wife passed away in 1854, leaving two children, Charles and Elizabeth. Lewis Wisbey married, some time later, Agnes Clark, who was born in Steubenville, Ohio, in 1832, the daughter of James and Townsey Anna (Maxey) Clark. They went from Stubenville to Missouri, and then returned to Cincinnati, where they spent the rest of their lives. By his second wife, Mr. Wisbey became the father of the following children: George, Clay, Anna, Stella, Thomas, Laura, Agnes, Vinnia, Emma, Lewis and Jane.

To George M. and Lizzie (Wisbey) Cole two children have been born, Stella and Martin, both of whom are married and established in their own homes. Stella is Mrs. Everett Humphreys, her husband being a son of John Humphreys of Vernon township, this county. Their only child, a son, is named George Cole. Martin Cole married Edith Myers, a daughter of John Thomas Myers, of Vernon township, and to this union five children have been born, Clarence, Florence Elizabeth, George Howard, Gladys May and Mary Christine.

Like his father, George M. Cole has been a life-long Republican, but he never has aspired to fill a public office, being content to do his daily task, and to do it well; to be true to his family obligations and to be a good, accommodating neighbor and a friend worthy of friendship.

GRANVILLE M. OGLESBEE.

Among the prominent families of Liberty township, this county, are the Oglesbees, among whom is Granville M. Oglesbee, a representative of the third generation of the family in this county. Mr. Oglesbee is living on the farm once occupied and owned by his grandfather, who married Sarah Stump in Virginia.

Granville M. Oglesbee was born in Clinton county and has spent all of his life in Liberty township. He is the son of William F. and Mary Jane (Miars) Oglesbee, the latter of whom was the daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Haines) Miars. Samuel Miars was a native of Virginia who came to Clinton county with his family early in the settlement of the county and settled in Union township. The paternal grandparents of Granville Oglesbee, John and Sarah (Stump) Oglesbee, were married on September 4, 1809, in Virginia, and, before coming to Clinton county, had three children. They first settled in Greene county, Ohio, but subsequently came to Clinton county, where they purchased two hundred acres of land, a part of that now owned by Granville Oglesbee. John Oglesbee died on July 12, 1840, and his wife on February 5, 1872. They were members of the Baptist church and had eight children, Amos, Daniel, Manley, Phoebe, John, Reese, Joshua and William F. John Oglesbee was the son of Isaiah Oglesbee, who settled in Clinton county, one and one-half miles east of Lumberton, where he and his wife died, the former about 1840 and the latter about three years later. They were members of the Friends church. The Oglesbee family is believed to be of Scottish extraction.

William F. Oglesbee was born on the farm now occupied by his son, on July 22, 1832. He was educated in the common schools of the county and reared on the farm and on November 5, 1857, was united in marriage to Mary Jane Miars. After his marriage, he took charge of the home farm, which in time he came to own and which comprised, at the time of his death, three hundred and thirty-one acres. He and his wife were members of the German Reformed church and were particularly active in church work. He was also more or less active in county affairs and was an influential and useful citizen. He died on October 8, 1903, and his widow survived him for ten years, her death occurring on November 15, 1913. They were the parents of three children, Luella and Emma H., both now deceased, and Granville M., the second born, who is the subject of this sketch. Luella married Orvil Peterson and was the mother of two children, Mary Grace and Herman, the latter of whom is deceased. Emma H., who died on November 28, 1897, was unmarried.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM F. OGLESBEE.

Granville M. Oglesbee has spent his entire life on the home farm and has been prominent in the agricultural activities of Liberty township. He is an active member in the Methodist Episcopal church at Lumberton and particularly active in the work of the Sunday school. Not only is he a member of the board of trustees of the church but he is also steward. Mr. Oglesbee owns three hundred acres of land in Liberty township and is accounted one of Clinton county's most substantial and representative citizens.

WILLIAM McQUILLAN.

William McQuillan, now a well-known farmer of Marion township, this county, was born on September 10, 1841, in Cincinnati, Ohio, a son of Andrew and Elizabeth (Millard) McQuillan, natives of Pennsylvania and of France, respectively, the former born in 1809, and the latter in 1818. Andrew McQuillan was the son of Patrick McQuillan, a native of Scotland, who early in life emigrated to the United States and settled in Pennsylvaina. Elizabeth Millard was the daughter of James Millard and wife, who settled in Brown county, Ohio, in 1832, and there spent the rest of their lives.

Andrew McQuillan emigrated from Pennsylvania to Brown county, Ohio, and after his marriage moved to Cincinnati, where he lived for a short time. It was during this time that William McQuillan, the subject of this sketch, was born, his parents at that time living on Abigail street, in Cincinnati. After a few years the family removed to Fayetteville, Brown county, Ohio, and there purchased ninety-six acres of land. To this original tract the father added from time to time until at the time of his death he owned about four hundred acres of fine farming land. He made a number of improvements on this farm before his death in 1883. His widow survived him a few years, passing away in 1891. They were the parents of ten children, Celestine, William, Caroline, Edward, Andrew and Elizabeth (twins), James, John, Augustus and Charles.

Of these children. William, the second born, was reared on his father's farm, where he lived until twenty-four years of age, when he engaged in operating a threshing-machine and saw-mill, and is still engaged in threshing. In 1890 he purchased the farm which he now owns, and in 1900 erected the present buildings on the place and moved to the farm, where he has since lived.

On January 8, 1867, William McQuillan was married to Laura Ressler, who was born at Tipton, Indiana, September 13, 1846, the daughter of John and Rebecca (Feasel) Ressler, natives of Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and Virginia, respectively, the former born in 1803 and the latter in 1815. John Ressler emigrated to Henry county, Indiana, in pioneer times. There his first wife died and he afterward married Rebecca Feasel. John Ressler's family was the fifth to locate in Tipton county, Indiana, and Mrs. McQuillan was the first white child born in Tipton, the county seat of Tipton county, Indiana, then a small village. John Ressler was a merchant in Tipton for twenty-five years, and also served as postmaster of the town. Both of Mrs. McQuillan's parents died in Indiana, her father in 1863, and her mother in 1859. They were the parents of eight children, James, Viola, Laura, Henley, Cora, William, Buchanan and Charles. John Ressler was a Democrat in politics and a member of the Lutheran church.

To Mr. and Mrs. William McQuillan have been born four sons, Edward, Charles, William and Harry, two of whom, Charles and William, died in infancy.

JAMES P. FISHER.

The late James P. Fisher was a highly respected farmer of Wilson township, this county, born in Frederick county, Virginia, in 1844, who died in this county on October 13, 1907.

James P. Fisher received his education in the common schools of Frederick county, Virginia, and was reared on the farm and early learned the rudiments of that time-honored vocation. He came to Clinton county at the age of twenty-one and lived in the Port William neighborhood the rest of his life. Thirty-five years ago he bought the tract of seventy acres where his widow and son now live, and there he erected a barn and a house which are still standing. He engaged in general farming and stock raising, and was a very active man, not only in his vocation, but in public work, especially in church circles. James P. Fisher was a son of Asa and Frances (Williams) Fisher, natives of Frederick county, Virginia, who were the parents of six children, of whom four, Mary, Delphia, Lucy and James are deceased, the living children being William and Sarah.

Mr. Fisher was married to Ruth Ann Caraway, who was born on August 13, 1855, the daughter of Henry and Nancy (Penn) Caraway, both natives of Ohio, and farmers by occupation. Henry Caraway owned one hundred acres of land, and he and his wife were prominent and influential in the affairs of the early life of their community. Both were active members of the Methodist Episcopal church. To James P. and Ruth Ann (Caraway) Fisher were born four children, Charles S., Effie Ellen, John E. and Hattie F. Of these children Effie and Hattie are married. Effie is the wife of Oscar Kibby, of this county, and has one son, Charles. Hattie became the wife of Stephen Reynolds, a farmer of this county, and has one daughter, Goldie Ellen. Charles lives in Clinton county with his aunt, Sarah Halls.

John E. Fisher, who was born on August 18, 1882, in this county, lives on the old home place with his mother. He is a well-to-do farmer and is popular in the neighborhood where he lives.

H. DOYLE WRIGHT.

H. Doyle Wright, now a well-known and prosperous young farmer of Green township, this county, was born at New Vienna, this county, on June 8, 1880, the son of James M. and Rachel (Good) Wright, the former a native of Highland county, Ohio, born on January 7, 1854, and the latter, a native of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, born on August 1, 1853.

James M. Wright was the son of McClain and Sarah Ann (Woodmansee) Wright, pioneers of Highland county, both of whom are now deceased. McClain Wright was a soldier in the Union army during the Civil War and died during the service. His widow died in Green township, this county, in 1911. Rachel Good was the daughter of Charles and Betsy (Moore) Good, both natives of Pennsylvania, who came from that state to Ohio in pioneer times, locating in Highland county. Later they moved to New Vienna, this county, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Both were devout members of the Hicksite Friends church, and Charles Good was one of the organizers of the New Vienna Bank and otherwise prominent in the early life of this community.

James M. Wright was reared in Highland county and moved to New Vienna with his mother after the death of his father. He worked by the month for some time after coming to Clinton county, but later engaged in farming for himself, and succeeded in accumulating a large farm, owning at the time of his death three hundred acres of excellent land in Green township, near New Vienna. He was also a stockholder in the New Vienna Bank. Politically, he was a Republican, although never an aspirant for office. Fraternally, he was a member of the Grange, and of the Sons of Veterans. He was also an active worker in the church, being identified with the Methodist Episcopal faith.

His death occurred on June 15, 1913. James M. Wright and wife were the parents of four children, H. Doyle, Edith B., Lawrence G. and Alice, all of whom are living.

H. Doyle Wright was reared on his father's farm and received his early education in the public schools of Highland county, later being a student at the New Vienna high school. After leaving school he took up farming on his own account, and now owns eighty-three acres of land where he lives, and one hundred and eight acres elsewhere in Green township. In 1910 he erected a splendid barn, fifty-two by eighty-six feet in size and thoroughly modern. He makes a specialty of raising Jersey cattle and at the present time has fifty head of these fine animals. In 1913 he built a magnificent residence, located one mile from New Vienna.

In 1900 H. Doyle Wright was married to Stella Morris, of Clinton county, the daughter of James and Jennie (Hussey) Morris, both of whom are deceased. To this union three children have been born, Dorothy, James McClain (deceased) and Rachel.

Mr. Wright is a Republican, but is not active in politics, never having aspired to public office. He is a member of the Grange and of the Modern Woodmen of America. Both he and his wife are earnest and devout members of the Methodist Episcopal church and are held in high regard by their many friends throughout the part of the county in which they live.

PETER RUDE.

Listed among the most successful landowners in this county, and among the most prosperous farmers of this section of Ohio is Peter Rude, who was born in Marion township, this county, April 5, 1859, the son of William and Hester Ann (Shull) Rude, the former of whom was born on the farm now owned by his son, in 1836, and died on March 17, 1910, and the latter, born in Marion township, in 1838, died on February 22, 1895.

William Rude was the son of Peter and Nancy (Abbott) Rude, the former a native of Hamilton county, Ohio, and the latter, of Maryland. Peter Rude, Sr., came to Clinton county early in life, and settled in Marion township, where he became the owner of about six hundred acres of land. William Rude was a farmer in Clinton county, and, at the time of his death, owned one hundred and fifty acres of land. He was a Republican in politics and attended the United Brethren church. Of the ten children born to William and Hester Ann (Shull) Rude, eight are now deceased, namely: Eliza James, John, Paul, Emily, Nancy, William and Lillie (twins) and Martha, the living children being Peter and Felix. In 1864, William Rude enlisted at Hillsboro in Company I, One Hundred and Seventy-fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Wolf, of Wilmington, and served eleven months. He served at Nashville and was wounded at the battle of Franklin, while conducting prisoners from the field. He was discharged at Nashville, Tennessee, after which he returned to Marion township. The paternal great-grandfather of Peter Rude, the subject of this sketch, with one of his sons, was killed by the Indians.

Peter Rude was reared on the farm and was educated in the public schools. He has been engaged in farming all his life and owns one hundred and eighty-four acres of land in Marion township, being considered a successful farmer and stockman.

In 1898 Peter Rude was married to Nettie Weaver of Clermont county, Ohio, to which union two children were born, Anna and John F. Nettie (Weaver) Rude died in 1901, and, six years later, Mr. Rude married, secondly, Mary Broderick, who was born at Blanchester, this county, on June 30, 1861, the daughter of William and Bridget Broderick, natives of Ireland, who were married in Cincinnati, Ohio, after coming to America, subsequently, coming to Clinton county, where William Broderick died in 1908. His wife had died twelve years previously, in 1896. To Mr. and Mrs. Rude no children have been born. Mr. Rude votes the Republican ticket and is more or less active in local politics. Mrs. Rude is a member of the Catholic church.

JOHN B. TELFAIR.

Prominent among the farmers of Clinton county, is John B. Telfair, of Wilson township, son of the late William B. Telfair, of the Clinton county bar, and, in his time, one of the most prominent athletes who ever attended Wilmington College. The Telfair family has been prominent in the history of this section and John B. Telfair is a distinguished scion of a worthy family.

John B. Telfair was born on May 1, 1865, at Oak Ridge in Clinton county, the son of William B. and Elizabeth T. (Peyton) Telfair, the former of whom was born at Hillsboro, Highland county, Ohio, June 16, 1828, and the latter, at Stanton, Virginia, the daughter of John Howe and Ann (Lewis) Peyton. John Howe Peyton was a prominent lawyer of Stanton and a member of the Virginia Legislature for two terms. He was an aide to General Porter during the War of 1812.

The parents of the late William B. Telfair were Isaac and Jane A. (Boys) Telfair, the former a native of Georgia, who, early in life, became a midshipman in the United States navy and was with Commodore Decatur during the famous Algerian expedition. He subsequently became an honored member of the medical fraternity and located in Highland county, Ohio, about 1827. Some years later, in 1838, he came to Clinton county, where he was engaged in the practice of his profession until 1872, the year of his death. In the early part of his medical career he served as assistant physician at the Virginia hospital for the insane at Stanton, and while a resident there became acquainted with and married Jane A. Boys, of that city. He was one of the heirs to six thousand acres of land in Clinton county, which had been given to his grandfather, General George Mathews, for service in the Revolutionary War. His wife was the daughter of Dr. Alexander Boys, of Stanton. They were the parents of the following children: William, Charles, Jane, Martha, Maria, Virginia and Rose. Isaac Telfair was the son of David Telfair, a Presbyterian minister, who immigrated from Scotland to the United States and located in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he founded a church.

Reared in Clinton county, William B. Telfair was fourteen years of age when he was sent to Washington College, at Washington, Pennsylvania, where he was a student with the late James G. Blaine. Graduating from the regular course at Washington College in 1848, William B. Telfair returned home and entered upon the study of law. A year later he went to Charlottesville, Virginia, where he entered the law department of the University of Virginia, from which he was graduated in 1851. He returned to Ohio and was admitted to the bar at Chillicothe in the spring of 1852. He commenced the practice of his profession at Cincinnati and soon after became a member of the Cincinnati Literary Club, then numbering among its members such men as Stanley Matthews, Manning F. Force, Rutherford B. Hayes and the late Ainsworth R. Spofford, for many years librarian of Congress. A few months after locating at Cincinnati, Mr. Telfair returned to Clinton county, locating at Wilmington, where he formed a partnership with Judge Hinkson, with whom he remained for two years. He then retired from active practice for a time and later resumed practice in connection with Benjamin Fuller, the law firm being Fuller & Telfair. After his marriage to Elizabeth Peyton, in 1853, he resided in Virginia for some years, but subsequently returned to Clinton county and, after farming for one year, resumed his practice in 1858. From 1869 until 1871 he was in partnership with Judge Barclay Harlan and, subsequently, with Judge James Sloan, of Hillsboro, which relationship continued until the latter's death on September 18, 1873. The firm of Telfair & Hayes (Melville Hayes) was formed on May 18, 1874, and was dissolved on October 11, 1875, for many years thereafter, Mr. Telfair continuing to practice alone. While a resident of Madison county, Ohio, he was a candidate of the Democratic party for Congress against the late Tom Corwin. He also served as a member of the school board and as a member of the Wilmington council. He was an active member of the Presbyterian church and was a trustee of the same during the later years of his life. At one time he served as prosecuting attorney of Clinton county.

To William B. and Elizabeth (Peyton) Telfair four children were born, namely: Ann, who died early in life; William, who married Alice Green and has three children, Anna, William, Jr., and David; Susan, who married Charles M. Dougherty, of Washington, D. C., and has two children, James and Telfair, and John B., the immediate subject of this sketch. Mrs. Elizabeth Telfair died in 1886 and William B. Telfair died in June, 1907.

John B. Telfair, who was reared principally in Wilmington, received his education in Wilmington College, where he was a student for two years. The present gymnasium of Wilmington College, for the most part, is the outcome of his efforts while a student at that institution. While in college, he was captain of the baseball team and, after leaving college, played professional baseball for a time, as a catcher. At one time he had a contract with one of the national league teams, but played most of the time in Stanton and Lynchburg, Virginia. After leaving Wilmington College, Mr. Telfair matriculated, in 1892, at the Ohio Medical College at Cincinnati, where he studied medicine for one year, and received a certificate to attend Bellevue Hospital in New York.

In 1907 John B. Telfair was married to Isadora Haines, who was born in Greene county, Ohio, the daughter of Zimri Haines, a farmer of Greene county, and a prominent member of the Quaker church, to which union has been born one son, John Peyton.

In 1908 Mr. Telfair moved to the farm of one hundred and fifty acres, which was left him by his father, and in recent years has erected a house and barn and improved the farm generally. He and his wife are members of the Grassy Run Friends church. He was twice nominated as the Democratic candidate for sheriff of Clinton county. Fraternally, he is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

JOHN TILTON.

The late John Tilton, a well-known farmer of Green township, this county, where he owned, until his death, on November 2, 1914, one hundred and three acres of land, was born in Warren county, Ohio, September 16, 1845, the son of James H. and Rachael (Hutchinson) Tilton, the former of whom was a native of New Jersey, and the latter of whom was born in Warren county, Ohio, the daughter of Silas Hutchinson, a pioneer of Warren county, where he and his wife both died.

When a young man, James H. Tilton settled in Warren county, Ohio, where he married Rachel Hutchinson and engaged in his occupation as a farmer. He was a Republican in politics, and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He and his first wife were the parents of four children, Silas, James, John and William. Upon the death of the mother of these children, James H. Tilton married, secondly, Hester Keever, by whom he had five children, Sylvester, George, Rachel, Caroline and Ida. At the time of his death, James H. Tilton was ninety-two years old.

The late John Tilton, who was educated in the public schools and reared on the farm, came to Clinton county in 1882, shortly afterward purchasing one hundred and three acres of land in Green township, the farm which his family now owns. In 1862 he had enlisted in Company B, Second Ohio Heavy Artillery, and served until the close of the war.

On October 3, 1866, John Tilton was married to Margaret H. Swink, who was born in Warren county, Ohio, April 6, 1849, the daughter of Enos J. and Eliza (Stickleman) Swink, both natives of Virginia, the latter of whom was born on June 13, 1815, who came to Ohio about the year 1847, locating on a farm near Lebanon, in Warren county. Mrs. Tilton's father died in 1851, and her mother in 1887, at the age of seventy-two.

They had four children, Martha and John, deceased, James and Margaret, the last of whom is the widow of the late John Tilton. To Mr. and Mrs. John Tilton were born eight children, of whom two, Carrie, the second born, and William, the sixth born, are deceased, the living children being Frank, the first born, Robert, May, Nellie, Margaret and Eugene.

John Tilton voted the Republican ticket, and for a number of years served on the school board in Green township. He and his wife were members of the Baptist church, and Mrs. Tilton is still a member of that denomination.

WILLIAM TURNER TEDRICK.

Born in Highland county, Ohio, on November 3, 1881, William Turner Tedrick is the son of Isaiah and Catherine (Hopkins) Tedrick, now residents of Marion township, this county. Mr. Tedrick's father, a native of Highland county and the son of Andrew and Matilda (Smith) Tedrick, was born on May 9, 1849. His mother was the daughter of Alexander and Nancy (Spickard) Smith. His paternal great grandparents were Samuel and Polly Tedrick, who emigrated from Maryland to Highland county in pioneer times. Mr. Tedrick's mother, who before her marriage was Catherine Hopkins, was born on August 1, 1854, in Highland county, and was the daughter of Phillip and Mary Elizabeth (Page) Hopkins. Phillip Hopkins was the son of Reason and Catherine (Ball) Hopkins.

Mr. Tedrick is one of six children born to his parents. The others were Osee M., Alta May (deceased), Harley Emmet, Otis Hopkins and Raymond Oscar (deceased). His father had been previously married to a Miss Jane Baker of Clermont county, Ohio, by whom he had one son, John Andrew.

Reared on the farm and educated in the public schools of Highland county, Mr. Tedrick came to Clinton county with his father's family on March 24, 1897. The parents settled in Marion township, where they are now living. Mr. Tedrick's father was prominent in local politics of Highland county, and has been prominent in the politics of Marion township, since removing to this county.

After living in Clinton county for a number of years, William Turner Tedrick, in October, 1913, purchased a farm of one hundred and eighteen acres, where he now lives. The farm is located three and one-half miles from Blanchester, on the Cuba and Blanchester pike. On November 24, 1906, William Turner Tedrick was married to Esla Hallsted, the daughter of James W. and Sarah (Berger) Hallsted. To this happy union, there have been born three children, Helen Catherine, born on October 18, 1907; Omer Hallsted, September 5, 1909, and Sarah Elizabeth, February 17, 1913.

William Turner Tedrick is an up-to-date, progressive farmer and one of the hustling young men in Marion township. He and his wife are members of the United Brethern church. He is a Republican in politics, and a member of the Masonic lodge at Blanchester.

ISAIAH TEDRICK.

Isaiah Tedrick, now a successful and well-known farmer of Marion township, this county, who owns a splendid farm of one hundred and three and one-half acres on the State road, three miles from Blanchester, was born in Highland county, Ohio, May 9, 1849, the son of Andrew and Matilda (Smith) Tedrick, natives of Maryland and Highland county, Ohio, respectively. Matilda Smith was the daughter of Alexander and Nancy (Spickard) Smith. The paternal grandparents were Samuel and Polly Tedrick, who emigrated from Maryland to Highland county, Ohio, in pioneer times. Samuel Tedrick died in Highland county, but his wife died in the state of Maryland.

Andrew Tedrick was a farmer and teamster in early life. He was identified with the Democratic party, and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He and his wife had eight children, of whom two, William and John, are deceased, the living children being Nancy, Sarah, Ester Jane, Isaiah, Mary and Allie. Andrew Tedrick, who was a Republican in politics and a member of the Protestant Methodist church, died in 1866 at the age of fifty-one. His wife died, in 1861, at the age of twenty-eight years.

Isaiah Tedrick was reared on a farm and was educated in the public schools. On March 24, 1897, Mr. Tedrick came to Clinton county and in 1911 purchased a farm of one hundred and three acres, three miles from Blanchester.

On January 11, 1879, Isaiah Tedrick was married to Catherine Hopkins, who was born in Highland county, August 1, 1864, the daughter of Philip and Mary Elizabeth (Page) Hopkins, both natives of that county. Mrs. Tedrick's paternal grandparents, Reason and Catherine (Ball) Hopkins, were pioneers in Highland county. Mrs. Tedrick's father died, in April, 1889, at the age of seventy-three years, and her mother, in 1894, at the age of seventy-two years. To Mr. and Mrs. Tedrick six children have been born, Osee M., William Turner, Alta May (deceased), Harley Emmet, Otis Hopkins and Raymond Oscar (deceased).

Before his marriage to Catherine Hopkins, Mr. Tedrick was married to Jane Baker, of Clermont county, Ohio, and by this first marriage had one son, John Andrew.

Mr. Tedrick is a Republican and served as trustee in Highland county for six years. He is now serving his sixth year as trustee of Marion township. He was also a school director in Highland county for several years, and has served as a school director in Marion township. Fraternally, Mr. Tedrick is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Knights of Pythias. Mr. and Mrs. Tedrick and family are members of the United Brethern church.

THOMAS H. BLACKBURN.

The man who tries to raise the standard of the live stock of his community helps to raise the standard of that community, and many men should be given especial credit for their service along this line. Thomas H. Blackburn of Blanchester is one of these men.

Thomas H. Blackburn was born in Lebanon, Ohio, on September 5, 1852, the son of William B. and Majorie (Hutchinson) Blackburn. William B. Blackburn was born in Warren county in 1821 and died in Lebanon, Ohio, in 1907. He was the son of Benjamin and Elizabeth Blackburn, who were pioneers of Cincinnati, Ohio, who later located in Warren county, this state, where they both died. Benjamin Blackburn was an attorney by profession, but owned a valuable farm near Lebanon. William B. Blackburn was a manufacturer of harness at Lebanon. He was a Republican in politics, and was a liberal in religious views, although his wife was a member of the Baptist church. His wife, who was born in Warren county in 1832, and died in 1898, was the daughter of Thomas P. and Cynthia Hutchinson, the latter of whom was born in Warren county, near Lebanon.

To William B. and Marjorie (Hutchinson) Blackburn were born the following children: Clara (deceased), Sarah (deceased), Cassius (deceased), Thomas H., Clinton L., Frank, Benjamin, Dora (deceased), Clifford (deceased) and Indiola.

Thomas H. Blackburn was born in Lebanon, Ohio, where he attended the public schools and was graduated from the high school. He also attended a commercial college at Dayton, Ohio, from which he was graduated. He was then employed as a bookkeeper for a few years and was a merchant in the drug business in Lebanon for two years. About the year 1888 he began to buy and sell horses, and later began to deal extensively in fine harness horses. He later became a trainer of running horses and was in the employ of Doctor McClane, of Cincinnati, for eight years, or until the death of Doctor McClane. He then had a stable of his own, with headquarters at Cincinnati, traveling with his horses in the western circuit and in Canada. While in the employ of Doctor McClane, of Cincinnati, he was in races as far south as New Orleans and as far east as New York City. He was an expert trainer and often won the Derby. In June, 1899, Mr. Blackburn located on a farm in Clinton county near Cuba, the farm which his son, Doctor Blackburn, now owns. He also owned another farm, but in 1912 retired from this and moved into Blanchester, where he has a fine residence and five acres of land on Lazenby street. Mr. Blackburn is thoroughly posted on all kinds of live stock, and now, in Blanchester, on his five-acre lot, he has several thoroughbred Holstein cows, some of them highly valuable, he having paid four hundred dollars for one cow. He also has some fine Duroc-Jersey swine and thoroughbred Silver-laced chickens, the best to be found anywhere. His wife is also much interested in stock, especially the cows and chickens.

In 1877 Thomas H. Blackburn was married to Eva Bowers of Warren county, Ohio, a daughter of George W. Bowers, who died in Dayton, Ohio. To Thomas H. and Eva (Bowers) Blackburn was born one child, Dr. Arthur Blackburn. Mrs. Blackburn died on October 26, 1902, and on September 10, 1903, Thomas H. Blackburn married, secondly, Della Schumtz, who was born in Montgomery county, Ohio, on April 3, 1873, a daughter of Calvin J. and Anna Mary (Breniger) Schumtz, of Middletown, Butler county, Ohio.

Dr. Arthur Blackburn is a graduate of Miami Medical College of Cincinnati. He engaged in the practice of medicine after his graduation until about six years ago, when he retired from practice to take up farming. He moved on to his farm in Clinton county and took up the breeding of fine Holstein cattle. He married Bessie Clevinger of Clinton county and they have two children; Dorothy Ellen, and Eva Bell.

Thomas H. Blackburn is inclined to his father's liberal views on religion, but his family attend the Universalist church. Mr. Blackburn is a citizen of sterling qualities, a man of excellent judgment, whose opinion is widely sought in substantial matters of all kinds.

A. E. OREN.

A. E. Oren, a successful young farmer of Liberty township, was born in that township on November 22, 1868, the son of Jesse and Mary (Bennett) Oren, the former of whom is the son of Elihu and Jane (Newcomb) Oren.

Elihu Oren was born in Greene county, Tennessee, on March 3, 1809, and in 1810 came with his parents, John Oren and wife, to Clinton county, where he grew to manhood on his father's farm, and, at the age of twenty years, engaged in teaching. On August 1, 1830, he was married to Jane Newcomb, who bore him six children who grew to maturity, Charles, Elizabeth, Jesse, Mary Jane, Asenath and Clarissa, the last of whom died in 1862, in her eighteenth year. Elihu Oren continued teaching for a number of years after his marriage, but later engaged in farming. He moved to Liberty township in 1835 and there resided until his death, March 7, 1872. He was known as the friend of railroads, free pikes and free schools, the last years of his life having been spent in the work of extending the Chesapeake & Ohio railway. In politics he was a Whig, until 1840, when he voted the Whig ticket for the last time. From that time until Lincoln issued his emancipation proclamation, he was a Garrisonian Abolitionist, after which he allied himself with the Republican party. Reared under the influences of the Society of Friends, he was opposed to war. His sympathies, however, during the Civil War were with the Union, and he desired and prayed for the success of the Union army. His two sons, Charles and Jesse, enlisted in the Union army. Charles was captain of the Fifth United States Colored Troops, and was killed by a sharpshooter in front of Petersburg in August, 1864. Jesse, the father of A. E., served three years in Company B, Fortieth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Elihu Oren's devoted wife survived him, and spent the last years of her life with her son-in-law, B. F. James. Elihu Oren owned the farm which his grandson, the subject of this sketch, now occupies.

A. E. Oren, who was born and reared on the farm, spent three years in Wilmington College, during which time he won distinction as a college baseball player and as a pole vaulter with the track team.

On November 25, 1891, A. E. Oren was united in marriage to Inez Farquhar, who was born in this county, a daughter of Philip Farquhar, a farmer and member of the Friends church. Though Mr. and Mrs. Oren have lived most of their lives in Clinton county, they were for thirteen years residents of Oklahoma, where they own one hundred and seventy acres of land. In 1914 they returned to Ohio, to the home farm, to care for Mr. Oren's parents, who are still living on the farm.

To A. E. and Inez (Farquhar) Oren two children have been born, Leslie and Philip. Fraternally, Mr. Oren is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

FELIX RUDE.

Among the most enterprising and successful farmers of Marion township, this county, is Felix Rude, a native of the township, born on July 15, 1863, the son of William Rude, who is mentioned elsewhere in this volume. Felix Rude was reared on a farm and received a good liberal education in the public schools. He has always been engaged in farming as a vocation, and owns two hundred and sixty-seven acres of land in Marion township, this county, and in Warren cunty, Ohio. He is a general farmer and stockman, but is especially interested in the dairy business. From year to year, Mr. Rude has improved his farm until he now has one of the most productive tracts in this part of the township. Mr. Rude lives two miles from Blanchester.

On June 2, 1895, Felix Rude was married to Catherine Fritz, a native of Brown county, Ohio, born on May 21, 1868, the daughter of Cepher and Catherine (Sefferman) Fritz, both natives of Baden-Baden, Germany, the former born in 1823 and the latter in 1835. Mrs. Rude's paternal grandparents were Joseph and Rosanna Fritz. Joseph Fritz died in Germany and after his death his widow and six sons came to America and settled in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, where they lived for twenty-one years. They then came to Ohio and purchased six hundred acres of land in Brown county, which the mother later divided among her sons. Cepher Fritz was the youngest member of this family and his mother died at his home. Mrs. Rude's maternal grandparents were E. and Justina Sefferman, who went from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, in 1839, to Cincinnati, later removing to Brown county, where they bought a farm and where both died. Mrs. Rude's father died in 1885 and her mother in 1883.

To Mr. and Mrs. Felix Rude have been born eight children, of whom two, Mary Ethel, the first born, and Margaret, the youngest, are deceased, the latter dying in infancy. The living children are Catherine Elizabeth, Martha Luella, Felix Edward, Ester Ann, and Edna Rosanna and Emmet Mathias (twins).

Mrs. Rude is a member of the Catholic church. Mr. Rude votes the Republican ticket, and is more or less prominent in the local councils of the party.

MILTON BERNARD.

Among the enterprising agriculturists of this region must be counted Milton Bernard, a young and thrifty farmer of Richland township and an enterprising stockman, who is well known throughout Clinton county.

Milton Bernard was born on July 31, 1875, at New Vienna, this county, the son of Thomas Jefferson and Almeda (Young) Bernard, the former of whom was born near New Antioch, this county, on October 12, 1832, and the latter of whom was born near Lees creek, in Wayne township, this county.

The late Thomas J. Bernard, Jr., was the son of Thomas J. and Mary Bernard, the former of whom was a native of Virginia, but who emigrated to Ohio with his parents when a child of four years. After growing to manhood in this state, Thomas J. Bernard, Sr., married Mary McConnel, who was probably born in Kentucky. After his marriage, he located on Cowen's creek, and spent the greater part of the remainder of his life in Clinton county, being actively engaged in farming. He lived a few years in Brown county, and from there moved to near Lynchburg, where he died in February, 1868, at the age of sixty-seven years. His wife died in 1838, at the age of thirty-two years. They were the parents of five children: William P.; Sarah, who married William Elliott; Nancy and Thomas J. Following the death of his first wife, Thomas J. Bernard, Sr., married, secondly, Mrs. Eliza Atkinson, by whom he had six children, four of whom grew to maturity, Mary, who married Henry Brown, Caroline, Serelda and Grafton W.

Of Thomas J. Bernard, the father of Milton Bernard, it may be said that he belonged to the Methodist Protestant church, and was active not only in religious work, but in public affairs. He lived to be eighty years old, and kept abreast of the times until his death, on June 25, 1914. His widow is still living at Sabina, and was seventy-eight years old in January, 1915. The late Thomas J. Bernard, who was a farmer by occupation, occupied the farm of C. A. Bosworth, of Cincinnati, as a tenant for twenty-eight years. Thomas J. and Almeda (Young) Bernard were the parents of eleven children, of whom four, Mary, the eldest, William, Ida and Elmer, the sixth, seventh and eighth born, are deceased. The living children are Clara, Laura, Sarah, Jennette, Milton and Eva and Evert (twins).

Born and reared on the farm and educated in the common schools, Milton Bernard remained at home until his marriage, on August 26, 1893, to Alma Shepp, who was born on December 15, 1877, the daughter of John and Mary (Johnson) Shepp. John Shepp, a gardener by occupation, lived in Reesville. He and his wife were active in the local work of the Methodist Protestant church. Mr. Shepp held numerous local public offices and served as a Union soldier during the entire period of the Civil War. During one of the severe battles of that war, he was shot in the neck and carried the bullet to his grave. To Milton and Alma (Shepp) Bernard four children have been born, Esther, Paul, Thomas and Barbara. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Bernard located on the farm where they now live and which Mr. Bernard operates in partnership with his brother, Everett. They manage altogether one thousand and thirty-five acres of land, operating it on a sharing basis.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard are members of the Methodist Protestant church at Reesville, and Mr. Bernard is superintendent of the Sunday school. Fraternally, Mr. Bernard is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

ALFRED JAMES.

The late Alfred James, who, at the time of his death on October 10, 1899, owned a fertile farm of one hundred and forty-eight acres in Marion township this county, was born in Clermont county, Ohio, November 11, 1827, the son of Joseph and Catherine (Kelly) James, natives of Virginia and Clinton county, Ohio, respectively.

Joseph James moved from Virginia to Clermont county, Ohio, in pioneer times, and in 1831 came to Clinton county, settling on a farm of five hundred acres of land in Marion township. He cleared most of this before his death, which occurred in 1862, at the age of seventy-five years. Catherine (Kelly) James, his second wife, died in 1872, at the age of seventy-six years. Joseph and Catherine (Kelly) James had nine children, of whom the late Alfred James was the third born. The others were Elijah, Malinda, Nancy, Sarah, Peter, Rachael, Amanda and Mary. Joseph James had been previously married to Rebecca Garnet, by whom he had two children, Thomas and Mahalla. Early in life he was identified with the Whig party, but at the formation of the Republican party, he became a Republican and voted that ticket until his death.

Born on the farm, the late Alfred James was reared in the country and received his education in the country schools. He lived at home with his parents until his marriage in Clinton county, to Josephine Kelly, who was born October 10, 1859, the daughter of George and Sarah (Stevens) Kelly, pioneers in this part of Ohio. Mrs. Josephine (Kelly) James died on October 18, 1913, a short time after the death of her husband.

They had five children, Pearl, Lester, Goldie, Ray and Charles, all of whom are living. Lester married Bessie Newkirk, who was born near Greenbush, Ohio, and has two children, Ethel and Edna, the former born on November 21, 1909, and the latter, October 1, 1911. Goldie, the third in the family, is the wife of Harry Spencer and has three children, Carl, Erma and Robert. Charles married Flora Folks. Lester James and his brother, Ray, rent the old homestead farm of one hundred and forty-eight acres.

JOHN MATHEW.

In past ages the history of a country was comprised chiefly in the record of its wars and conquest. Today history is largely a record of commercial activity and those whose names are foremost in the annals of the nation are those who have become leaders in business circles. The conquests now made are those of mind over matter and the victor is he who can most successfully establish, control and direct commerial interests. John Mathew, an intelligent, keen and shrewd business man of Sabina, this county, is one of the strong and influential citizens in that section of Clinton county. Tireless energy, keen perception, honesty of purpose and genius for devising and executing the right thing at the right time and place are his chief characteristics.

John Mathew was born on October 16, 1866, at Centerville, in Clinton county, Ohio, the son of James and Abbie (Drake) Mathew, the former of whom, born on December 3, 1832, in Clinton county, Ohio, died in 1890, and the latter of whom, born on Staten Island, New York, was the daughter of Daniel and Ann (Meusreau) Drake. James Mathew was the son of Jonah and Sarah (Stokesberry) Mathew, the former born in Clinton county and the latter in Virginia. The Mathew family originally came from Virginia. Jonah Mathew subsequently became a farmer in Illinois, where he owned a hundred and sixty acres of land. He had eight children, James, Eli, John, Minerva, Elizabeth, Eliza J., Rachel and Emily.

The late James Mathew received a good education and was graduated from the Hillsboro high school. When a young man he taught school in Clinton county for a few years, but later engaged in the mercantile business, first at Texas, Ohio, from which place, after being there for four or five years, he removed to Centerville, Ohio, where he was engaged in the mercantile business for twenty-two years. About 1885 he retired from business, being at that time a resident of Octa, in Fayette county. He owned a small farm near Centerville.

To James and Abbie (Drake) Mathew seven children were born, namely: Alphius A., who married Margaret Massie; Emma, who married Robert Maddux; Mary E., who married David Eliott; Anna, who married Charles Barnes; John, the subject of this sketch; Kittie, who married Claton Thompson, and Rachel, who married Charles Stewart. Mrs. James Mathew was prominent in the affairs of the Methodist Protestant church. Politically, James Mathew was a Republican.

John Mathew was educated in the public schools of Wayne township, this county, and as a young man clerked in his father's store. In 1886 he removed to Octa, in Fayette county, and engaged in the mercantile business there on his own responsibility. Three years later he moved to Sabina, where he conducted a shoe store for a short time. In 1890 he removed to Ohio City, in Vanwert county, and while living there was occupied as a traveling salesman, spending most of the time out of town. Afterwards he engaged in the shoe and clothing business, in which he remained for about four years. About 1895 he engaged in the real-estate business and five years later returned to Sabina, where he engaged with Charles W. Custis in buying and selling stocks of merchandise, being thus engaged for four or five years. About 1905 he resumed the real-estate business and is now thus engaged at Sabina. Mr. Mathew owns a farm of one hundred and eighteen acres in Wayne township and another of one hundred and eleven acres in Washington township, both of which are rented.

John Mathew has been twice married, the first time to Ada J. Sparks, the daughter of Silas and Christine Sparks, of Pierson Station, Fayette county. By this first marriage there were three children, two of whom, Verna C., the eldest, and Myrel, the youngest, died early in life, Mildred B. still living. By the second wife, who, before her marriage, was Edith Plymire, daughter of George and Elizabeth Plymire, there has been born one child, Helen E.

Mr. and Mrs. Mathew are members of the Methodist Protestant church and he is actively identified with the Republican party. He takes a prominent part in the affairs of Sabina and vicinity and enjoys the confidence of all the people. Needless to say he has a host of friends, among whom he is held in the highest esteem.

CHARLES H. CAMMACK.

Charles H. Cammack, now a well-known and popular farmer of Liberty township, this county, was born in Orange county, Virginia, on November 8, 1872, the son of George Walter and Mary (Pidgeon) Cammack, natives of Virginia and North Carolina, respectively, the former having been born about 1835. Mary Pidgeon was a daughter of Charles and Catherine (Horney) Pidgeon, natives of North Carolina, and farmers by occupation, who came to Clinton county about the time of the Civil War, in order that Mr. Pidgeon might avoid service as a soldier in the Confederate army. He was a member of the Friends church and was very active in church work. He was the owner of a hundred-acre farm in this county, which he purchased and paid for after he was sixty years old. George W. Cammack was the son of William and Catherine (Mason) Cammack, Carolinans, who moved to Virginia, where they were the owners of one hundred acres of land and prominent members of the Baptist church in their locality.

The late George Walter Cammack received his education in the common schools of Virginia, and lived in the Old Dominion state all his life, passing away in 1878. After his death his widow brought the family to Clinton county, locating near Wilmington, on a farm. After her family was reared to maturity, Mrs. Cammack returned to Orange county, Virginia, where she is now living.

George Walter and Mary (Pidgeon) Cammack were the parents of six children, of whom Charles H. was the fifth in order of birth, the others being William, Flora, Nellie, Cornelia and J. W. Of these children, Flora and Nellie are deceased; William is a resident of Orange county, Virginia, and J. W. Cammack, who is a Baptist minister, of Richmond, Virginia, is also associate editor of the Religious Herald.

Charles H. Cammack was only seven years old when his mother moved from Virginia to Clinton county, Ohio. He was educated in the country schools and reared on the farm, and in 1905 was married to Anna Oglesbee, who was born in this county, the daughter of Franklin and Ruth (Hadley) Oglesbee, prominent farmers of their community and members of the Friends church. Franklin Oglesbee died on April 16, 1914. One year after his marriage, Mr. Cammack moved to the farm where he now lives in Liberty township. Mr. and Mrs. Cammack have no children. They are active members of the Friends church at Wilmington and fraternally, Mr. Cammack belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He and his wife own the farm of one hundred and twenty acres of fertile land, where they live and where Mr. Cammack carries on a general system of farming and stock raising, with very gratifying success.

The Oglesbee family, of which Mrs. Cammack is a member, is one of the oldest and for many years, one of the most influential in Clinton county. The Oglesbees had their beginning in this county in 1817, in which year Isaiah Oglesbee, a native of Virginia, of Scottish extraction, emigrated with his family to this section of the state, locating one and one-half miles east of Lumberton, where both he and his wife spent the remainder of their lives, proving very influential factors in the early development of that section of the county. Isaiah Oglesbee died about the year 1840, his widow surviving him about three years. Both were devoted members of the Friends church. Their son, John Oglesbee, married Sarah Stump in Virginia on September 4, 1809, to which union three children had been born before the family emigrated to this county, the eldest of whom was Amos, born in 1810, father of the late Franklin Oglesbee, father of Mrs. Cammack. John Oglesbee, upon locating in Clinton county, bought two hundred acres of land in the then wilderness and this he converted into a well-cultivated place, becoming one of the leading landowners as well as one of the most worthy citizens of the county. He died on July 12, 1840, and his widow survived him many years, her death not occurring until on February 5, 1873. They were the parents of eight children and, as members of the Baptist church, reared their children in the same faith.

Amos Oglesbee, as the eldest son in this pioneer family, shared with his father the herculean task of clearing the wilderness in which their home was made and remained at home until 1835, when he married Anna Huffman, sister of Solomon Huffman, an early settler of Chester township, this county. She was born in 1814 and came to this county with her parents when a small girl. Soon after their marriage Amos Oglesbee and his wife settled on the farm later owned by their son, Franklin, where they spent the remainder of their lives. They were members of the Reformed church and were useful in all good works in the neighborhood of their home. Amos Oglesbee died on December 31, 1851, his widow surviving until June 25, 1875. They were the parents of nine children, of whom the late Franklin Oglesbee was the eldest, five of whom are still living.

Franklin Oglesbee was born on the farm mentioned above on September 4, 1836, and as his father's eldest child became his most valued assistant. He remained with his widowed mother until 1863, when he enlisted in Company H, Second Ohio Heavy Artillery, serving until the close of the Civil War. Though he received no wounds in battle, exposure so badly impaired his health that he never afterward was in perfect physicial condition. Upon returning from the war, Franklin Oglesbee resumed farming, which received his attention until December, 1903, at which time, on account of growing physical disability, he disposed of the old homestead, invested otherwise, and with his family moved to Wilmington, where he spent the rest of his days, his death occurring on April 16, 1914.

On January 2, 1873, Franklin Oglesbee was united in marriage to Ruth Hadley, who was born in this county in 1854, the daughter of Eli L. and Theodosia Hadley, prominent pioneers of this county, and to this union but one child was born, a daughter, Anna T., born on December 1, 1873, who married Mr. Cammack. Franklin Oglesbee was an excellent citizen and was held in the highest regard by many friends, who sincerely mourned his death. He was converted and joined the church when a young man, his life ever being an exemplary one. He was a great reader and was well informed on many topics, but his favorite book was the Holy Bible, which he had read, from cover to cover, fifty-five times.

MICHAEL CLEMENT.

The Union soldier, during the great war between the states, builded more wisely than he knew. He offered his life freely as a sacrifice, not only for the union of the states, but for the freedom of the individual, and thousands were killed in this gigantic struggle. Many of the young men who enlisted for service in this great war suffered the horrors of prison pens, wounds from which they never recovered and the ravages of disease, whose traces remained in broken constitutions and impaired health. Michael Clement, whose father was a native of Belgium, was a soldier in that great war.

Michael Clement was born on March 1, 1843, in Wayne township, Clinton county, Ohio, and after completing his education in the schools of Wayne township, enlisted, just after reaching his majority, March 22, 1864, in the Thirteenth Ohio Cavalry. Assigned to Company H, he participated in the battles around Petersburg and the blowing up of the fort, the Weldon railroad fight, the battle of Ream Station, Poplar Grove church, Pegram Farm, Hatcher's Run, Stony Creek, Dinwiddie Court House and Appomattox. His regiment was the last engaged with the army of General Lee before the latter's surrender at Appomattox, and he was at Petersburg when Sherman's army reached that point. He received his honorable discharge on August 9, 1865.

Mr. Clement's parents were Hubert and Victoria (Bigonville) Clement, both natives of Belgium. Hubert Clement came to America before his marriage and lived for a time in Kentucky, where he worked as a road builder. After six years, he returned to his native land, married and brought his bride back with him to Kentucky. After living in Kentucky a few years, he came to Clinton county, locating in Wayne township on a farm about one-half mile east of the farm now owned by his son, Louis, and at the time of his death owned one hundred and seventy-eight acres of land. He and his wife reared a family of eight children, Paul, Michael, Mary Catherine, Mary Jane, Victoria, Hubert, Jr., Louis and Rosa. The father was a Democrat and both he and his wife were members of the Catholic church.

After the close of the Civil War, Michael Clement returned to Wayne township and began farming and there he has lived most all his life. In 1885 he purchased the farm of one hundred acres, where he now lives, at seventy-five dollars an acre. Some years ago he remodeled his house and barn. Most of the improvements have been placed upon the farm by his hand. In 1890, however, Mr. Clement retired from active farming and moved to Dayton, Ohio, where he lived until 1896. He then moved back to the farm and resumed its management until 1905, when his son, Frank, took charge of the land.

Mr. Clement's wife, who, before her marriage, was Mary V. Dabe, died in March, 1903. She was the daughter of Francis and Julia (Luiso) Dabe. She bore Mr. Clement four children: James H., who died at the age of one year; Alvin, whose biographical sketch is presented elsewhere in this volume; Frank, who married May Luiso and has four children, Dona and Donald (twins), Dell and Elnora, and Josephine, who died small. Donald, the son of Frank, is deceased.

The Clements family are members of the Catholic church at Wilmington and Mr. Clement votes the Democratic ticket. He is a citizen of whom Wayne township has every reason to be justly proud, because he has done his full duty to his country, his neighbors, his family and himself.

DANIEL W. HALL.

Among the good farmers of Wilson township is Daniel W. Hall, who was born in Clinton county on January 20, 1855. Mr. Hall's parents were Harrison and Harriett (Custis) Hall, the latter of whom was the second wife of Harrison Hall, and who was born in Clinton county, the daughter of William Custis, a brother of Levi Custis, whose biographical sketch, presented elsewhere in this volume, gives the Custis family history.

Harrison Hall was the son of Richard and Rebecca (Whitsite) Hall, the former of whom was a native of Kentucky and the latter of whom lived to be ninety years old. After the death of Richard Hall, who was a farmer in Kentucky, Mrs. Rebecca Hall came with her children to this county. Richard Hall had been a private in the War of 1812 and his widow drew a pension for his services in that war. They were the parents of nine children, Henry, Richard, Harvey, Harrison, Hiram, Daniel, Huldah, Rebecca and Elizabeth, all of whom are deceased.

The late Harrison Hall was educated in the common schools of Kentucky, and, after removing to Clinton county and attaining maturity, became the owner of one hundred and forty-two acres of land in Richland township. He was an elder in the Christian church and prominent in the activities of that church throughout his life. He also took a prominent part in local affairs. He first married a Miss Leach, but she bore him no children. Afterward he married Harriett Custis, by whom he had seven children, Daniel W., the subject of this sketch, Harriett E. (deceased), Wilbur E., Mariah May, Carrie (deceased), Leota and Harrison. Both the father and mother of these children are deceased.

Daniel W. Hall, who was educated in the common schools of Clinton county, has been a lifelong farmer. He owns ninety-two acres of land in Wilson township, which he purchased in 1896. In 1898 he remodeled his house, and the next year remodeled his barn. The farm is well kept and highly productive.

On January 20, 1877, Daniel W. Hall was married to Sophia Evans, who was born in this county, daughter of Stephen and Mary (Wilson) Evans, to which union five children have been born, Harrison E., Stephen M., Perril W., Stella and Fay Mettil. Harrison E. Hall, who married Cora E. Wade, died, leaving no children. Stephen M. Hall has been married twice, the first time to Audra Lawrence, by whom he had one child, Dorothy May. He married, secondly, Nancy Hoppes. Perril W. Hall was drowned in the river at Columbus, Ohio, at the age of twenty years. The last two children, Stella and Fay Mettie, are unmarried and live at home with their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall are members of the Christian church at Sabina, regular attendants at Sunday school and are prominent in the social and religious life of Wilson township.

THEODORE GIFFIN.

Theodore Giffin, of Wayne township, this county, is not only a keenly intelligent farmer who has been very successful in his chosen vocation, but who occupies a distinctive position as one of the leaders in promoting the advancement of education in Clinton county, especially in Wayne township. The schools of Wayne township are now completely centralized and altogether rank as high as those of any township in the state of Ohio. For the past nine years, Theodore Giffin has been a member of the Wayne township school board, but, more than this, he has been one of the leaders of the board of education and to him as much as to any other man, the people of Wayne township are indebted for the present high standard of education prevailing in that township.

Theodore Giffin was born in Illinois on January 7, 1858, the son of Stewart and Sarah (Reeves) Giffin, the former of whom was born on January 1, 1826, in Virginia, and the latter, at Chillicothe, Ohio, in 1836, the daughter of Jonathan Reeves.

Stewart Giffin, who was educated in the Virginia schools, was about ten years old when his parents started from Virginia to Ross county, Ohio. They rode horseback and the children walked. Having swum the Ohio river on horses and reached Ross county, the famiy settled on a farm. A little later Stewart Giffin's father suffered an injury to his shoulder and for six months that member was out of place. He traveled to Cincinnati by stage, had the shoulder set and was there put into a hot bath to relax the muscles. The shock of the operation killed him. His remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Cincinnati. The large family was left in humble circumstances.

After the death of his father, Stewart Giffin went to Illinois, where he homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres of land. He remained there one year and then returned to Ross county. After a year of sickness, he began working on a farm of five hundred acres as a laborer and later purchased this same farm for thirty thousand dollars and there he spent the remainder of his life. Stewart Giffin made many trips from Bainbridge, Ohio, to Baltimore, Maryland, swimming the Ohio river with cattle and hogs.

Five children were born to Stewart and Sarah Giffin, of whom Albert, the eldest, who never married, is deceased, the others being Theodore, the subject of this sketch; John, who married Carrie Shepherd; Anna, who is the wife of William Ingersoll, and Rosa, who married Ruvello Hughey. The family were members of the Methodist church and active workers therein. Stewart Giffin voted the Democratic ticket.

Theodore Giffin was educated in the common schools of Bainbridge, Ohio, and began his life on a farm in Ross county. After his marriage, he moved to Wellston, Ohio, where he became a contract plasterer and where he worked a force of fourteen men for ten years. Later he moved to a farm near Bainbridge, upon which he lived for one year. In 1896 he moved to the farm in Wayne township, this county, where he now lives. He now owns five hundred acres of land in Ross county and a farm in Louisiana. He rents about seven hundred acres of land in Wayne township and is considered one of the most progressive farmers of Clinton county. He is a large stockman and an extensive cattle feeder and knows how to make these operations pay. For some time he has been enthusiastic in the work of reclaiming land along the gulf coast in Louisiana.

Theodore Giffin married Laura Walley, the daughter of David and Melissa Walley, of Ross county, Ohio, and to this union eight children have been born, namely: Ethel, who married Bernard English, and has one child, Lenore; Clark, who was killed on March 14, 1907, on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad, where he was working as an engineer; Myrl, who is the wife of Charles Hauck, and has two children, Helen and Dorothy J.; Floyd, who married Marie Vioska, and has two children, Clark and Floyd, Jr.; Sarah, who married Fred Smith; Theodore, Jr., who married Imo Leverton, and has one child, Vivian; David and Helen, who live at home with their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Giffin are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and Mr. Giffin votes the Democratic ticket.

HENRY A. WOODS.

Henry A. Woods is a good substantial citizen of Wayne township, this county, a good farmer and an interesting man to know. Although he is firm in his convictions, yet he is not narrow in his attitude towards the opinions of others and has had no small part in the agricultural development of Wayne township, where he has lived for nearly forty-five years.

Henry A. Woods was born on February 14, 1858, in Washington township, Highland county, Ohio, the son of Joseph and Rachel (Stout) Woods, the former a native of Ireland, and the latter of Highland county, Ohio, the daughter of John Stout. Joseph Woods, the grandfather, and his wife, Jane, were married in Ireland and came to America about 1833, locating in Highland county, near Sugar Tree Ridge, in Concord township. The senior Joseph Woods was a school teacher in his native land and after coming to America became a successful farmer, owning a considerable tract of land in Highland county. He and his wife were the parents of four children, Alexander, John, William and Joseph.

Joseph Woods, Jr., was educated in the common schools of Highland county, Ohio, and farmd practically all his life in that county. He owned one hundred and fifty-eight acres of land and he and his wife, who, before her marriage, was Rachel Stout, were the parents of eight children, William, Henry A., Benjamin, James, Frank, Charles, Luvenia and Joseph, Jr. The Woods family were members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and Mr. Woods was a Republican in politics.

Henry A. Woods, the second child in his father's family, received his education in the common schools of Washington township, Highland county, and when a young man began farming in Wayne township. He removed to Clinton county in 1875, and after coming here worked ten years as a farm hand in Wayne and Green townships. He then purchased ninety-two acres of land, to which farm he moved in March, 1887, and has lived there ever since. Mr. Woods is engaged in general farming and stock raising and all of the improvements on the farm he owns he has made and paid for himself.

In 1886, about the time he purchased the Clinton county farm, Harry A. Woods was married to Sarah Lieurance, the daughter of William and Mary (Hall) Lieurance, who were the parents of four children: Avery P., Hiram, David and Sarah. William Lieurance was a well-known farmer in Green township, this county. To Mr. and Mrs. Woods three children have been born, Etta May, who married Oliver Dabe; Eva and Bertha—a splendid family, who were reared to honorable and useful lives and who are well performing their duties as citizens of a great county and state. Mr. Woods is identified with the Republican party, but he has never been an aspirant for office and has never been especially active in political affairs. He is well known in Wayne township and is popular with all his neighbors, all of whom hold him and his family in the highest regard.

JOHN SYMONS.

In the memorial annals of Clinton county there is one name that will long be held in remembrance in that section of the county in which the possessor of the name lived for years and in which he did well his part in life. The late John Symons, for many years one of the best-known residents of Jefferson township, this county, was a veteran of the Civil War and had an honorable record as a soldier in the Union army during that memorable struggle between the states. Though a native of another country, there was no more patriotic American than John Symons. Upon the close of the war, John Symons returned to the peaceful pursuit of farming and became one of the most progressive and prosperous farmers in Clinton county. As an agriculturist he gave more than ordinary attention to the details of his vocation and it is undoubted that his careful and studious methods did very much toward elevating the standards of agriculture in the community in which he lived. Both as a soldier and as a citizen, John Symons had performed faithfully and well all the duties which devolved upon him and at his passing, in 1896, there was wide mourning throughout the Jefferson township section, as well as throughout the county generally, for he was a man whom all his neighbors and all who knew him held in the profoundest respect.

John Symons was born in Devonshire, England, on December 25, 1844, son of William and Mary (Cleve) Symons, both natives of the same shire. He came to this country in his youth and on May 2, 1864, before he was twenty years of age, enlisted in Company H, One Hundred and Forty-sixth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, for service during the Civil War, and was mustered out on September 7, 1864. Politically, Mr. Symons was affiliated with the Republican party and for years was an active counsellor in the affairs of that party in this county. He was greatly interested in the cause of education and was active in advancing in every way possible the interests of the schools in his home neighborhood, he having served for some time very acceptably as a school director for his district. As a farmer, there were few men in Clinton county who were better trained in the science of agriculture than he, and he was generally regarded by his neighbors as being quite far in advance of his day in the practice of scientific farming. Enterprising and energetic, he had brought his fine farm in Jefferson township to an excellent state of cultivation. This farm, which was highly developed and improved, was located on the pike midway between the villages of Westboro and Midland and was widely known for the fine crops raised there. Mr. Symons was the first man in that neighborhood to raise potatoes on a large scale, and his hogs were regarded as the best in the community.

On May 20, 1869, John Symons was united in marriage to Mollie E. Clevenger, of Dayton, Ohio, daughter of William and Lavina (Llewellan) Clevenger, and to this union three children were born, two sons and one daughter, namely: William L., a well-known examiner connected with the United States patent office at Washington, D. C.; Lottie M., who married O. Benton Trovillo, and who since the death of her husband has lived with her mother at Blanchester, this county, and Charles A. The mother of the above children is living at Blanchester, still active in her household duties, the work of her church, the Methodist Episcopal, and the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

LOUIS CLEMENT.

Not a few residents of Clinton county, Ohio, at the present time, either were born in Belgium or are descended from Belgian ancestry. The Clement family, of Wayne township, includes several highly respected citizens who have taken a prominent part in the agricultural life of the county. Louis and Michael Clement, brothers, are among these well-known citizens of Wayne township, whose father was born in Belgium.

Louis Clement was born on the farm he now occupies, in Wayne township, on January 28, 1853. His father, Hubert Clement, a native of Belgium, was educated in the Belgium schools and came to America when still a young man, before his marriage. He first located in Kentucky, where he worked as a road builder but, after six years, he returned to Belgium and married Victoria Bigonville, also a native of that country, and, with his wife, returned to Kentucky. After living there for a few years the Clements came to Clinton county, locating on a farm in Wayne township, about one-half mile east of the farm now owned by Louis Clement, the subject of this sketch. Hubert Clement first bought fifty acres of land, but after a few years purchased one hundred acres, where Louis Clement now lives, and moved to the latter farm. He prospered and at the time of his death, owned altogether one hundred and seventy-eight acres of land and was a well-known stockman. To Hubert and Victoria (Bigonville) Clement eight children were born, Paul, Michael, Mary Catherine, Mary Jane, Victoria, Hubert, Jr., Louis and Rosa.

Louis Clement, after completing his education in the schools of Wayne township, began life on the farm and has never been away from the farm except for one week, which he spent in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He is a general farmer and stockman and owns one hundred and thirty-one acres. Not long ago he built a commodious house and substantial barn.

On January 14, 1891, Louis Clement was married to Elizabeth Jackman, the daughter of John and Mary (Miller) Jackman, and seven children have been born to this marriage, of whom five are living, Louis, Jr., John, Henry, Agnes and Catherine. Mary and Jane are deceased.

Mr. and Mrs. Clement are members of the Catholic church. Mr. Clement votes the Democratic ticket, as did his father before him.

ALVIN CLEMENT.

One of the younger members of the well-known Clement family of Wayne township, this county, is Alvin Clement, who was born in that township on June 17, 1875, the second child born to Michael and Mary V. (Dabe) Clement, a biographical sketch of whom is found elsewhere in this work.

Alvin Clement received a good education in the public schools of Wayne township and in St. Mary's College, at Dayton, Ohio. In the meantime he had engaged in farming to some extent. After leaving St. Mary's College, he operated a grocery store for the next three years in partnership with his father. In 1898 Mr. Clement returned to Wayne township, where he has since lived. In 1905 he bought a farm of one hundred and ten acres, to which he moved in 1907 and there he has lived ever since. The house now standing on the farm was erected in 1914. Mr. Clement is engaged in general farming and stock raising.

In 1904 Alvin Clement was married to Margaret McWilliams, the daughter of Michael and Catherine McWilliams, farmers of Brown county, Ohio, and to this union two children have been born, Frances C., born in 1907, and Alvin, Jr., in 1909.

The Clement family are members of the Catholic church. Mr. Clement is a Democrat in politics. He is a man of genial disposition and is well liked by all who know him.

WILLIAM C. MOORE.

William C. Moore, a farmer of Wayne township, this county, who owns one hundred acres of land where he is living, and a half interest in the old home farm of two hundred and ten acres in Fayette county, Ohio, is a general farmer and stock raiser, who was born on June 7, 1875, in Green township, Fayette county, Ohio. His parents were George and Mary E. (Henderson) Moore, the former of whom, born in Fayette county, Ohio, died in 1908, and the latter of whom was born in Kentucky, a daughter of William Henderson. Mr. Moore's paternal grandparents were William and Nancy (Johnson) Moore, the former a native of Virginia. He was a farmer in Fayette county, Ohio, and reared a family of six children, George, John, William, Sarah, Elizabeth and Jane.

The late George Moore received a common school education, which he received in the schools of Fayette county, Ohio, and lived in that county all his life, being the owner there of two hundred and ten acres of land. Locally, he was prominent in the councils of the Democratic party, and served as trustee of Green township, as well as a member of the school board. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal church. They were the parents of eight children, namely: Jane, the wife of Grover Hagerty; Anna, deceased; Belle, the wife of Alonzo Persinger; William C., the immediate subject of this sketch; James E., who married Ocie Snow; George C., who married Bettie Henderson; Elsie, who became the wife of Charles I. Cope, and Glenn, deceased.

William C. Moore enjoyed the average educational advantages of the country lad, having attended the common schools of Green township, Fayette county. He began farming in Fayette county, but in 1902 purchased fifty acres of land in Clinton county, and eight years later purchased fifty acres of land adjoining his original tract of fifty. In 1915, in partnership with his brother, James C. Moore, he purchased the old home farm in Fayette county and Clinton county, comprising two hundred and ten acres.

On December 16, 1897, William C. Moore was married to Mary Olive Persinger, the daughter of John W. and Mahala (Martin) Persinger, and to this union three children have been born, all of whom are living at home with their parents, as follow: Nellie, born in 1898; Lawrence, 1902, and Virian, 1906.

Mr. Moore votes the Democratic ticket and is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Daughters of Rebekah and the Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. and Mrs. Moore are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. In Wayne township, where he lives, Mr. Moore is known as a successful farmer and a man who is deliberate in all his actions. He is popular in the neighborhood where he resides and is highly respected.

THOMAS REGAN.

Thomas Regan, now a well-known farmer of Wayne township and the owner of one hundred and twenty acres of land, was born on February 22, 1860, in Warren county, Ohio, a son of Bartholomew and Julia (Dowling) Regan, both natives of Ireland, the former of whom was born near Tralee, in County Kerry, and the latter of whom was the daughter of Thomas Dowling. Bartholomew Regan was the son of John and Catherine (Cain) Regan, both natives of the Emerald Isle, and the parents of five children, Timothy, Catherine, John, Bartholomew and Honora.

Bartholomew Regan was educated in the public schools of his native land and began farming when a young man. He was not engaged in this occupation very long until he came to America, and after his marriage, in 1852, located in the little town of Waynesville, in Warren county, Ohio. Fifteen years later he moved to Clinton county, locating on a farm in Liberty township, where he lived four years. He then removed to Wayne township, where he spent the rest of his life. Of the eight children born to Bartholomew and Julia (Dowling) Regan, two, John, the third born, and William, the youngest, are deceased, the living children being Patrick, Johanna, Thomas, Catherine, Timothy C. and Mary.

Educated in the common schools of Wayne township, Thomas Regan began farming in Wayne township on land where he now lives. He is the owner of one hundred and twenty acres of fertile land, comprising a well-kept farm. He raises a considerable amount of live stock, in addition to the crops common to this section of Ohio, and has made a very substantial success of his farming operations. In 1907 Mr. Regan remodeled his barn, and has made many other improvements on his place.

On January 7, 1890, Thomas Regan was married to Rosa Clement, daughter of Hubert and Victoria (Bigonville) Clement, and to this union have been born eight children, namely: Mary J., a graduate of the Centerville high school, who is now teaching in the same school; Leona, a graduate of the Centerville high school, who is now attending the university at Athens, Ohio; Anna, also a graduate of the Centerville high school; Louise, who also attended the Centerville high school and was graduated therefrom; Thomas H., a student in the Centerville high school, and William, Irene and Pauline, students in the school at Centerville. The last two named are twins. The mother of these children died in 1913, keenly mourned by her husband and children.

Like his father before him, Mr. Regan is a member of the Catholic church, and a Democrat in politics. He is a good farmer, a good father and a good citizen, and is held in high esteem throughout the neighborhood of his home.

JOHN T. HEMPSTEAD.

John T. Hempstead, who owns an attractive farm in Liberty township and who is a well-informed man and citizen, was born on October 28, 1847, in Chester township, this county, the son of Thomas and Eliza E. (Moore) Hempstead, both of whom also were born in this county. Eliza E. Moore was the daughter of George B. and Matilda (Kirby) Moore, the former of whom was a native of Ohio and of Scotch-Irish descent. He was engaged in the mercantile business at Wilmington at the time of his death, but had erected many buildings in Wilmington. He was a cabinet-maker by trade and an artist. So proficient was he as an artist that he was able to draw his own likeness by looking into a mirror.

Thomas Hempstead was the son of John Hempstead, who was twice married, the first time to a Miss Howland, to which union five children were born, Thomas, Frank, Myra, Mary and Lucy, all of whom are deceased except Myra, who is at present living at Winchester, Indiana, eighty-six years of age. John Hempstead was a carpenter by trade, who came to Ohio before his marriage. He was a member of the Friends church. Thomas Hempstead was educated in the common schools and engaged in farming on a small tract of land in Chester township, where he lived at the time of his death, on November 20, 1847. He and his wife had only one child, John T., the subject of this sketch. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Thomas Hempstead married Isaac Ellis, of Greene county, Ohio, and to them were born two children, Frank M. and Aaron, the latter of whom is deceased. The mother of these children died about 1890.

Educated in the common schools of Clinton county, John T. Hempstead was reared on the farm and has always been a farmer, now owning ninety-seven acres of land in the home farm and fifty-five acres elsewhere in Liberty township. He was married on December 11, 1873, to Celeste L. Jenkins, who was born near Port William, this county, the daughter of Marshall and Elizabeth (King) Jenkins, prominent members of the Baptist church and farmers of Liberty township. To this union seven children have been born, D. K., Clyde J., Jesse C., Thomas R., Anna L., Vesta and Ellen, the latter of whom is deceased. D. K. Hempstead married Stella West and lives in Wilmington. Clyde J. Hempstead, who lives in Union township, married Bertha St. John. Jesse C. Hempstead, who lives in Liberty township, married Clara Weaver. Thomas R. Hempstead, who lives at home, married Catherine Ford. Anna L. and Vesta also live at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Hempstead are members of the Methodist Protestant church at Port William. Mr. Hempstead has served as assessor of Liberty township and takes an earnest interest in public affairs. For thirty years he has been a breeder of Shorthorn cattle and Poland China hogs, and is recognized as one of the foremost farmers of his neighborhood.

CHARLES PARR.

Though not having been a resident of this county quite ten years, Charles Parr, a well-known farmer of the Westboro neighborhood, in Jefferson township, this county, has made many friends in the community in which he lives and is regarded as among the substantial citizens of that part of the county. Enterprising and energetic, he has made a place for himself in the community and is prospering.

Charles Parr was born at New Richmond, on the Ohio river, in Clermont county, this state, on October 21, 1859, son of John and Anna Mary Parr, both of whom were natives of Germany. John Parr emigrated from Germany during his young manhood, coming to America and locating near Covington, Kentucky, where he married. He was a baker by trade and for some years worked at this trade, later moving to the country, where he engaged in farming for a time. He then crossed the river and was for some time located at New Richmond, where the subject of this sketch was born. John Parr performed faithful and valiant service in behalf of his adopted country as a soldier in the Union army during the Civil War, serving for nearly five years as an enlisted soldier in the Twenty-third Regiment, Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and was veteranized. Though he saw much active service, his regiment having been engaged in some of the most serious battles of the war, John Parr never received a wound and never was taken prisoner. Some time after the war, John Parr and his family moved to Curtisville, Indiana, where the head of the family met his death in a railway accident, he having been run over by a train of cars. John Parr and his wife were the parents of eleven children. Following Mr. Parr's death, his widow continued to live at Curtisville, and the rest of her life was spent there.

Charles Parr, one of the eleven children above referred to, was reared on the farm, where much of his early life was spent. In 1882 he was appointed to a position on the Cincinnati police force and for fifteen years performed the difficult and hazardous duties connected with such service, in that time gaining a reputation as one of the best men on the force. Longing for the wider freedom of the farm, however, he gave up his post on the police force and in 1907 came to Clinton county, buying his present fine farm of one hundred and twelve and one-half acres in Jefferson township, where he since has lived in the quiet enjoyment of rural life, close to the soil and freed from the cares and anxieties of city life.

In 1893 Charles Parr was united in marriage to Emma Elseberg, of Cincinnati, who was born on June 19, 1870, daughter of John H. and Elizabeth (Stall) Elseberg, to which union seven children have been born, namely: Harry, Frederick, Charles, Theodore, Henrietta, Joseph and Lewis. Mr. and Mrs. Parr are devoted members of St. Martin's Catholic church at Westboro, and their children have been reared in the faith of the mother church. Charles Parr and his wife are interested in all good works in the neighborhood and are held in the highest esteem by all who know them.

DANIEL WEBSTER HOGAN.

To share the burdens and honors of office for almost a quarter of a century in one community is, indeed, a mark of distinction, but such is the record of the subject of this sketch, Daniel Webster Hogan, of Blanchester, this county.

Daniel Webster Hogan was born in Wayne township, Clermont county, Ohio, on September 23, 1854, the son of Walter and Anna (Hughes) Hogan, both natives of Wales. Walter Hogan was born in Wales in 1831 and died in Columbus, Ohio, in 1878. He was the son of Daniel and Mary Hogan, who came to this country from Wales and settled in Clermont county in 1840. They both died in Columbus, Ohio. Anna (Hughes) Hogan was the daughter of Edward and Mary Hughes, who also came to Ohio about 1840 and located in Jackson county, at Oak Hill, where they both spent the remainder of their lives.

Walter and Anna (Hughes) Hogan located on a farm of a hundred acres in Clermont county. Mrs. Hogan was born in 1831 and died in 1877. They were the parents of the following children: Mary, Maggie, Emma, Alice, Sarah, Daniel W., the subject of this sketch, and Walter, who was only four years of age when his mother died.

Daniel Webster Hogan lived on a farm until he was eighteen years of age, at which time he entered the employ of a railroad company as a brakeman on a freight train and followed that occupation for two years. He then took up farming again for three years, after which he went into the lumber business and has been thus engaged for the last thirty-five years. He has been a resident of Blanchester for the last thirty-two years. In 1877 he was married to Nannie Templin, who died on January 8, 1899. To this marriage there were born three children: Scott, an attorney in Chicago; Arthur, who is deceased, and Edna, who is the wife of George E. Hunter, of Blanchester. After the death of his first wife, Mr. Hogan, in April of 1899, married Maud Alice Huff, of Martinsville, this county, but no children have been born to this union.

The father of Daniel Webster Hogan was a Democrat in politics, but Daniel Webster Hogan has been a life-long Republican. He served as county commissioner of Clinton county for a term of six years and nine months, was trustee of Marion township for six years, a city councilman for fifteen years and a member of the school board of Blanchester for a period of twelve years.

In all his official capacities as well as in his private business, Daniel Webster Hogan has been of inestimable service to his community. Always a man of resource and judgment, he has conserved the interests of his people, above everything else and is very properly regarded as among the leading citizens of Blanchester.

EDWARD M. GOODWIN.

Edward M. Goodwin, now a well-known, prosperous and self-made farmer, of Marion township, this county, was born on January 3, 1861, in Warren county, Ohio, the son of Levi and Hannah (Runyan) Goodwin, the former born in Virginia in 1837 and the latter in Warren county, Ohio, in 1845. Levi Goodwin died in Clinton county in 1905, two years after moving to the county, and his widow died in 1906.

Mr. Goodwin's paternal grandparents were residents of Warren county, Ohio. His maternal grandfather, David Runyan, came from Pennsylvania to Ohio and for years lived in Warren county, but both he and his wife died in Clinton county. Mr. Goodwin's father was a farmer, a stanch adherent of the Republican party and a member of the Baptist church. He and his wife were the parents of nine children, Edward M., Belle, William, Herman, Allie, Lewis, Ora, Robert and Edith, all of whom are living.

Edward M. Goodwin received his early training on the farm. He received a good education in the common schools and early took up farming. After coming to Clinton county, he located in Marion township, where he has prospered, now owning three hundred and twenty acres of land and is regarded as one of the best farmers in that township. He is a stockman and has made large profits out of raising hogs. Mr. Goodwin's land is well situated, the entire three hundred and twenty acres being made up of three farms, all of which adjoin. His son-in-law, Harry Donohoo, lives on one farm of one hundred and eight acres, and a son, Emmet L., lives on another farm of one hundred and twenty acres, while Mr. Goodwin himself occupies a farm of ninety-two acres, all being mutually helpful in the management and operation of the farms.

On December 24, 1884, Edward M. Goodwin was married to Emma White, who was born in Indiana on March 17, 1863, the daughter of Noah White, a farmer and millwright, who came to Clinton county in 1865. Her father died in 1903 in Clinton county, Ohio, and her mother died in Wayne county, Indiana, in 1864. To Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin three children have been born, Emmet, Edna and Gladys, the latter of whom married Harry Donohoo.

Not only is Mr. Goodwin one of the leading farmers of Marion township, but he is also one of its leading citizens. A Republican in politics, he has served as trustee of the township for nine years and was a member of the school board for about twenty years. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

JAMES W. HALLSTED.

James W. Hallsted is a veteran of the Civil War and a retired farmer of Blanchester, this county. He was born on January 8, 1841, in Brown county, Ohio, the son of Joseph and Sarah (Barr) Hallsted, both natives of Ohio, the former of whom was born in Brown county in 1813.

Joseph Hallsted was the son of Joseph and Juliana (Allison) Hallsted, who emigrated from Pennsylvania to Brown county, Ohio, where the former died. His wife died in Fairmount county, Ohio. They were farmers, and he was identified with the Whig party. They had six children, Nellie, Hannah, Jemima, Alanson, Joseph and Charles. Mr. Hallsted's maternal grandparents were early settlers in Brown county, Ohio, and there both died.

Joseph Hallsted, father of James W., was a miller by occupation and he built a mill on the East fork, in Brown county. In 1851 he went to California, and was killed when a tree fell on his cabin. His wife had died a short time previously, in February, 1850. Joseph Hallsted was identified with the Whig party, and he and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal church. They had six children, three of whom are living and three of whom are deceased. James W. is the subject of this sketch. The other two living children are Elizabeth Jane and Juliana. The deceased children are as follow: Henry A., who died duirng the Civil War; Mary Ellen and William H.

Joseph Hallsted, before his marriage to Sarah Barr, had been previously married to a Miss Dunham, by whom he had six children. All except Alanson, the fourth born, are deceased, the others having been Asa, Joseph, John, Peter, who was killed while fighting for the Union in the Civil War, and a daughter, who died in infancy.

James W. Hallsted was reared on the farm and attended the common schools, where he received his education. In 1883 he came to Clinton county and purchased the farm where William Turner Tedrick, his son-in-law, now lives. Later he sold this farm and purchased another farm of one hundred and two and one-half acres in Marion township, four miles east of Blanchester. After living on that farm until 1908, Mr. Hallsted removed to Blanchester, where he now lives retired.

In 1861, at the age of twenty years, James W. Hallsted enlisted in Company E, Forty-seventh Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. After the expiration of his term of enlistment, he enlisted in the veteran regiment and served four years, seeing much active service throughout the Vicksburg and Atlanta campaigns. At the battle of Jonesboro he was wounded.

A short time after his return from the war, Mr. Hallsted was married, on August 15, 1866, to Nancy Jane Sheldon, the daughter of Benjamin and Louisa (Gustin) Sheldon, and a native of Brown county. Her father is deceased, but her mother is now living in Blanchester and is ninety years old. To this union there was born one daughter, Louise, who is assistant in the First National Bank at Blanchester.

On August 7, 1869, Mr. Hallsted married, secondly, Sarah A. Berger, who was born in Brown county, Ohio, on August 8, 1855, the daughter of Florin and Nancy (Gustin) Berger, natives of Germany and Clinton county, Ohio, respectively. Mrs. Hallsted's paternal grandfather was Lucian Berger, who, after coming to this country from Germany, settled in Brown county, where he and his wife died. Mrs. Hallsted's maternal grandparents were John B. and Eleanor (Marshall) Gustin, who also were early settlers in Brown county, Ohio, but who later removed to Clinton county, where both died. Mrs. Hallsted is the second, in order of birth, of the ten children born to her parents, the other children being Peter, Jemima, Enoch, John L., Andrew, Benajah, Flora, Ella and Fannie, all of whom are living.

Mrs. Nancy (Gustin) Berger died on October 28, 1873, at the age of thirty-nine years, six months and three days. Some time after her death, Florin Berger married, secondly, Mary Welch, by whom he had five children, Joseph, Lucia, Eunice, Mamie and Stanley, all of whom are living. Florin Berger is now living in Brown county, Ohio.

To Mr. and Mrs. James W. Hallsted five children have been born. Asa, Elizabeth, Gula, Isla and Harry, all of whom are living.

James W. Hallsted is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. He votes the Republican ticket. Mr. and Mrs. Hallsted are members of the United Brethren church, and are active in the religious work of the community in which they reside and where they are held in high esteem.

HOWARD McCUNE.

Back in the days when Wilmington, county seat of Clinton county, was a mere village, on the corner of Walnut and Main streets stood a large frame house known as the McCune home. It was occupied by the family of Samuel McCune, a well-known hatter of Wilmington during his generation and a well-educated, cultured and refined gentleman. He was the grandfather of Howard McCune, the subject of this sketch. The McCunes have always been a family of wide and liberal culture and of generous political views.

Howard McCune was born at Harveysburg, in Warren county, Ohio, on November 22, 1852, the son of William and Ann (Collett) McCune, the former of whom was born on November 1, 1824, at Wilmington, and died on June 17, 1870. William McCune was married on October 30, 1849, to Ann Collett, who was born on March 14, 1824, near Harveysburg, in Chester township, Clinton county, the daughter of Jonathan and Sarah (McKay) Collett. Sarah McKay was born on November 11, 1799, in Warren county, Ohio. The McKay family, which had come from Virginia originally, located in Clinton county in what is now Chester township, then a part of Warren county, as early as 1814. Sarah McKay was married to Jonathan Collett on April 30, 1823. Jonathan Collett was the son of Daniel and Mary (Haines) Collett, the former of whom was born on February 2, 1752, and the latter, October 10, 1753, both devout Episcopalians. Daniel Collett entered the army of the Revolution under Captain Wright, of Martinsburg, Virginia, serving at Valley Forge, White Plain and at the defeat of General Gates. He also rendered services when the Virginia volunteers were encamped in Pennsylvania and was at the battle of Monmouth. He resided in Virginia forty years and was, for many years, justice of the peace, appointed for life or during good behavior. He held his courts monthly, and it is said that there was more dignity and decorum in the justices' courts in those days than is to be seen in the higher courts of Ohio today. To Daniel and Mary (Haines) Collett were born eight sons and one daughter, who, with the brother and sister of Daniel Collett, John and Sarah, are the ancestors of all the Colletts in Clinton and Warren counties. Daniel Collett was the son of Stephen and Elizabeth (Armstrong) Collett.

Stephen Collett, who was also the father of Moses, was born on November 17, 1718, and died in 1783. He was born at sea and was of French Huguenot descent. His mother, who was born on August 11, 1725, died on the voyage to America. Stephen and Elizabeth A. Collett were the parents of eight children.

Howard McCune's paternal grandparents, Samuel and Rachel (Sexton) McCune, were both born in Virginia, the former on September 16, 1790, and the latter August 17, 1793, the daughter of Judge Sexton, later one of the best-known and most influential residents of Xenia, Ohio. The Sextons, for several generations back, were members of the Friends church. The McCunes are of Scottish descent and were composed of the strictest Presbyterians. Samuel McCune and Rachel Sexton were united in marriage at Xenia, Ohio, on September 21, 1815, and, in 1819, moved from Clermont county, this state, to Wilmington, this county, where, for many years, they were active in all good works thereabout. Samuel McCune was first a Whig and later a Democrat. He and his wife both were Baptists, and their children were reared in that faith. There were nine of these children, namely: Joseph, born on July 9, 1816, who married Emeline Arbegust on November 2, 1837; Elvira, August 17, 1818, who married Thomas Caruthers on September 18, 1853; Mary Jane, August 1, 1821, who married Thomas Wilson on March 2, 1864; John, May 12, 1823, who married Mary T. Nugent on July 2, 1862; William, the father of the subject of this sketch; James, November 4, 1826; Lucinda, January 25, 1832, who married James Caruthers on September 13, 1855, and Catherine and Caroline, February 17, 1835, the former of whom married Robert Steele on March 17, 1853.

William McCune, the fifth child born to Samuel and Rachel (Sexton) McCune and father of Howard McCune, was educated in the common schools of Wilmington and was well informed for his day and generation. He was an adept at mathematics and was a rapid mental calculator. When a young man he learned the tanner's trade and operated a tan-yard at Harveysburg, in Warren county, Ohio, working at that business until 1861, when he moved to a farm in Adams township, this county, where he spent the rest of his life. To William and Ann (Collett) McCune nine children were born, as follow: Oscar C., born on March 13, 1851, who married Laura Maltbie on September 4, 1879; Howard and Horace (twins), November 22, 1852; William C., February 11, 1856, who married Jennie Smith on February 2, 1887; Sarah and Rachel (twins), who died in infancy; Martha, January 18, 1860, single; Mary, February 3, 1862, who is the wife of Edwin Doster, and George E., January 10, 1864, who married Mattie Elston. Mr. and Mrs. McCune were members of the Baptist church, in which church William McCune was a deacon all of his married life, and their children were reared in that faith. William McCune voted the Republican ticket and served as justice of the peace for twenty years, during all of which time never was a decision of his reversed. Fraternally, he was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Howard McCune received his elementary education in the schools of Harveysburg. He later attended the Hickoryville school and supplemented this course by attendance at the State Normal School at Lebanon, Ohio, for two years. After finishing his course, he returned home and taught school for eight years in Warren and Clinton counties and in 1882 entered Dennison University at Granville, Ohio, where he spent three years. In the year 1886 he was engaged in the real-estate business at Wichita, Kansas, and in 1887 returned to this county, locating on a farm seven miles east of Wilmington, in Richland township, known as the Anderson Woods farm, which had been owned by General Anderson, who surrendered Ft. Sumter at the opening of the Civil War. Mr. McCune has been living on this farm ever since. It was purchased by his brother, W. C. McCune, and now belongs to the latter's widow. It consists of four hundred acres, being one hundred and sixty rods wide and four hundred rods long. Howard McCune has been engaged in general farming and stock raising during late years and ordinarily feeds about eighty head of cattle annually. He owns the old home place of one hundred and thirty-two acres in Adams township and has an interest in land adjoining. He also owns a saw-mill and lumber-yard at Melvin, which he operates during the winter for the employment of his teams and men.

In this county Howard McCune is well known for the skillful methods he employs in farming, and he is frequently engaged as a speaker in farm institute work in different parts of the state. He is vice-president of the State Corn Improvement Association and is a well-known judge of corn at corn shows in this and other states. Politically, Mr. McCune is a member of the Democratic party. He is a member of the Baptist church and has been a deacon since early manhood. At the present time he is a deacon in the First Baptist church at Wilmington and superintendent of the Sunday school. In Clinton county the name McCune stands for honor, integrity and good citizenship, and the subject of this sketch is no exception to this rule.

ALVA RADO DONOHOO.

Alva Rado Donohoo, a farmer of Jefferson township, this county, has been prominent in the educational affairs of Jefferson township and for ten years served as trustee of that township. He was born in Highland county, Ohio, on May 8, 1859, the son of C. P. and Lydia (Baker) Donohoo, both natives of Highland county.

C. P. Donohoo was the son of John and Ann (Malcolm) Donohoo, both probably natives of Pennsylvania, who located in Highland county, Ohio, in pioneer times and there engaged in farming. John Donohoo made several trips to the west, but died in Highland county. Mr. Donohoo's maternal grandparents, Philip and Rachel (Springer) Baker, were natives of Pennsylvania and among the early settlers of Highland county. They first located in Brown county, Ohio, in 1810, but in 1823 settled near Harwood Chapel, in Salem township, Highland county. They reared eleven children and spent the rest of their lives in that community. At the time they settled in Highland county there were only four families on the North fork of White Oak.

Mr. Donohoo's father received a limited education in the schools of Highland county, but was a wide reader. For many years he was a justice of the peace at Pricetown and lived there until his death as did also his wife. They had six sons and six daughters. C. P. Donohoo had offered his services as a soldier during the Civil War, but had a crippled hand and was, therefore, not accepted for service in the Union army.

Alva R. Donohoo was educated in Highland county, Ohio, and, after leaving school, became an efficient stationary engineer. He took up farming, however, in Highland county, and in 1894 moved to Clinton county, where he purchased twenty acres of land in Jefferson township. In 1899 Mr. Donohoo purchased his present farm of sixty-one acres, but has retained the original twenty-acre tract. He has erected excellent buildings on the home farm and makes a specialty of raising potatoes.

On April 5, 1890, Alva R. Donohoo was married to Sydney Cochran, daughter of Jacob B. and Jane (Colvin) Cochran, natives of New Market township and Hamer township, Highland county, respectively. Mrs. Donohoo is one of ten children born to her parents. Her paternal grandparents were Jacob and Mary (Ferris) Cochran, natives probably of Virginia. Her paternal grandfather moved to Kentucky early in his life and in 1816 immigrated to Highland county, where he entered a tract of over one hundred acres of land from the government. Mrs. Donohoo's maternal grandparents, Thomas and Hannah (Ashcraft) Colvin, were natives of the Old Dominion state. They first immigrated from Virginia to Uniontown, Pennsylvania, and in 1803 to Kentucky. Finally, in 1804, they moved to Highland county, Ohio, where they settled on a hill in the woods in Hamer township and there built a cabin. They cleared a little tract of land and subsequently owned over three hundred acres. Mrs. Thomas Colvin died in 1829. Thomas Colvin was the son of James and Fannie (Salisbury) Colvin, natives of England. James Colvin was reared in Dublin, Ireland. He immigrated to America and later became a soldier in the patriot army during the American Revolution. His widow subsequently moved to Highland county, Ohio, and her remains are buried in Hamer township. Hannah Ashcraft was the daughter of a Welshman and a Scotch lady, the latter of whom was born near Glasgow. They came to Virginia from the old country and later moved to Pennsylvania about the time of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Donohoo's father spent all of his life in Highland county, Ohio, where he was a farmer. His aged widow lives with Mrs. Donohoo and is now ninety-four years old. She is possessed of a remarkable memory and is exceptionally well preserved physically.

Mr. and Mrs. Donohoo are the parents of three children, Trueman H., Harry A. and Glenn. Harry A. married Gladys Goodwin, the daughter of Ed Goodwin.

Mr. and Mrs. Donohoo are both church members, he a member of the Christian church and she of the Universalist church.

MICHAEL TURNER.

Among the most extensive farmers of Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, during the past generation, was Michael Turner, a native of Clermont county, Ohio, who was born in 1828, the son of Daniel and Susan Turner, whose family history is given in the biographical sketch of F. P. Pence, contained elsewhere in this volume.

Michael Turner was educated in the schools of Clermont county, and later came to Clinton county and became a farmer on land now ocupied by his widow in Clark township. In the beginning he had only a little frame house at the edge of the woods, but at the time of his death he was the owner of five hundred acres of good farming land. His father had given him one hundred and ten acres, and upon this tract of land he made his home during practically all his life. He erected a large brick house, built a new barn and many outbuildings on his other land. During his entire life he was an extensive stock breeder. He passed away quietly at his home on August 22, 1907.

During the Civil War, the late Michael Turner was a member of the famous "squirrel hunter's" organization, which was recruited to resist Morgan's raid. During his life he gave liberally of his means to the support of religious movements, but was not a member of any church. Fraternally, he was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, from the time he attained his majority.

On October 26, 1854, Michael Turner was married to Mary Philhower, who was born in Clermont county, Ohio, a daughter of William and Lucinda (Snyder) Philhower, natives of New York state and New Jersey, respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Turner's wedding trip consisted of a ten-mile ride on horseback. Mrs. Turner's paternal grandparents were Jacob and Elizabeth (Hart) Philhower, who settled in Clermont county in pioneer times. Jacob Philhower was a farmer and died on his farm in that county. His widow later passed away at the home of her daughter in Indiana. Mrs. Turner's maternal grandfather was Abram Snyder, a native of New Jersey, and a farmer by occupation, who settled in Clermont county in the early days. Mrs. Turner's father was educated in Clermont county, but later emigrated to Illinois. His death occurred while on a visit to Ohio, while his wife died at their home in Illinois. He owned about five hundred acres of land in Richland county, Illinois, and reared a large family of children, only two of whom are now living, Mrs. Turner and Jacob Philhower.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Turner were the parents of five children, two of whom, Anna and Susan, the second and third born, died in infancy; Alvaretta, the eldest, became the wife of D. L. Hogan, of Blanchester, this county; Daniel, the fourth born, is engaged in the lumber business at Lynchburg, Ohio, and William is retired and living in Martinsville, this county.

No citizen of Clark township was more highly respected and esteemed at the time of his death than the late Michael Turner. No man made a more consistent, earnest effort to succeed than he. Broad-minded and liberal in his views and charitable as regards the faults and failings of others, his loss was keenly felt by the people of the community where he had lived so long.

JAMES HADLEY.

Any community takes pride in those citizens who are leaders in worthy public movements and any community is especially ready to honor a man who makes a good fight for better schools. Not only is James Hadley, of Adams township, a representative of one of the very old families of Clinton county and a family of very religious instincts and habits, but for nearly a half century he has been prominent in the public life of the township.

James Hadley was born on July 27, 1846, in Adams township, this county, the son of Samuel L. and Mary J. (Harvey) Hadley, both born in Clinton county, the former on January 30, 1821, in Vernon township, and the latter, January 17, 1825, in Adams township, the daughter of Eli and Sarah (Fallis) Harvey. Eli Harvey, the son of William Harvey, was married twice. His first wife was Sarah Fallis, daughter of John and Mary Fallis, who died in July, 1835, at the age of thirty. His second wife was Ruth Fisher, daughter of Joseph and Hannah Fisher. Eli Harvey, who lived about two miles west of Todd's fork, was born in North Carolina in 1803 and died in April, 1872, at the age of sixty-nine. He was buried at Springfield. The children by his first wife were: Lydia, Mary, William Penn, Esther, Ann and Sarah. The children by his second wife were: Joseph, Isaac, Hannah, John, James and Sina.

The paternal grandparents of James Hadley were Jonathan T. and Rebecca (Harvey) Hadley, both natives of North Carolina, the former born on March 14, 1793, in Chatham county, and the latter, in 1795, in Orange county, the daughter of Isaac and Lydia Harvey. She came with her parents to Clinton county in 1806. Jonathan T. Hadley was the son of Simon and Elizabeth Hadley, of North Carolina. He immigrated to Ohio in 1810 and settled in what is now Adams township, near the line of Warren county. Nine children were born to Jonathan T. and Rebecca Hadley: Elizabeth, Lydia, Samuel L., Ruth, Isaac, Simon, Deborah, Milton and Harlan H. Jonathan T. Hadley died in 1880 and his wife on June 20, 1876, at the age of eighty-one years. Both are buried at Springfield.

The late Samuel L. Hadley received only a limited education. He was a farmer all of his life in Adams township, this county. One hundred and thirty acres of land was given to him by his father, and to this he added one hundred and twenty acres, thus being the owner of a total tract of two hundred and fifty acres. Ten children were born to Samuel L. and Mary J. (Harvey) Hadley, of whom James, the subject of this sketch, was the second born, the other children, in the order of their births, being as follow: Martha, born on February 13, 1845, who died on February 14, 1875; Anselom, August 4, 1848, who died on November 20, 1884; Calvin, August 15, 1850; Emma, December 15, 1853; Anna, November 11, 1855; Esther, October 9, 1860, who died on October 7, 1863; William P., August 24, 1872; Edwin, October 24, 1857, and Mary Etta, April 20, 1865, who died on November 19, 1870. Samuel L. Hadley and wife were members of the Friends church and their children were reared in that faith. He was a Republican and served many years as a member of the school board. Mrs. Mary J. Hadley died in 1885 and Samuel L. Hadley died on May 8, 1897.

James Hadley, who was educated in the common schools of Adams township, spent two years at Spiceland Academy, at Spiceland, Indiana, and later attended a select school at the Springfield meeting house taught by Calvin Pritchard. He has been a farmer all of his life and has erected practically all of the buildings standing on his farm of ninety acres. He also owns another farm of seventy-seven acres.

On September 9, 1869, James Hadley was married to Isabella Moore, who was born on September 23, 1850, the daughter of John H. and Ruth (Lindley) Moore. John H. Moore, a lifelong resident of Clinton county, was born in Adams township on September 8, 1817, and died on September 30, 1908. His father, Joshua Moore, was a native of Pennsylvania, who came to Ohio about 1868, following the vocation of cabinet-maker, carpenter and millwright. He was married in 1814 at the Springfield meeting house to Nancy Strattan, the sister of David Strattan, a pioneer of the county, this having been the first marriage ever celebrated within the walls of that edifice. Later Joshua Moore moved to Lytle's creek, in Adams township, where he spent the rest of his life. He was born on October 17, 1791, and died on February 7, 1875. He and his wife were the parents of twelve children, David, John, Sarah A., Micajah, Joseph, William, Joshua, Harriet, Nancy, Benjamin, Jehu and Seth. Mrs. Moore died in 1881, at the age of eighty-four years. John H. Moore was successively a farmer, weaver, cabinet-maker, miller, merchant and carpenter. On June 25, 1840, he married Ruth Lindley, a native of Salem, Washington county, Indiana, and to this union were born four children, three of whom lived to maturity, namely: Lindley M., a dentist in Chicago, who died on January 20, 1914; Oliver, a druggist in Kansas City, Missouri, and Isabella, who married James Hadley. Mrs. Hadley's mother died on March 31, 1869, and her remains were buried in the Springfield meeting house cemetery. On November 28, 1877, Mrs. Hadley's father married, secondly, at Philadelphia, Mary A. Haines, who lived near that city, to which union one child was born, Joseph H., of Mt. Hamilton, California.

Seven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. James Hadley: Edgar L., of Coffeyville, Kansas, who married Ida Villars and has two children, Irena, who married James Merritt, of Elk City, Kansas, and Harold; Alontie H., of Wilmington, this county, who married Belle Nazard and has six children, Catherine, Mabel, Louise, Seth, Robert and Clarence; Louie May, who is the wife of Charles L. Brown, of Lebanon, Ohio, and has three children, Ruth Isabella, Edith A. and Norman Hadley; Everett M., a farmer of Adams township, this county, who married Ethel Crites and has three children, Howard J., Herbert and Anna E.; Bertha A., Ruth Anna and Mary Edith, who are still at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Hadley are members of the Friends church and he is trustee of the church and clerk of the meeting. As a Republican, he was elected trustee of Adams township and has also served for many years as a member of the board of education.

JESSE GARNER.

Jesse Garner, now a well-known undertaker and farmer of Westboro, this county, was born near Martinsville, in Clark township, this county, February 2, 1853, one of the eleven children born to James and Grace (Moon) Garner, both natives of the southern part of Clinton county.

James Garner was the son of William and Ann (Hockett) Garner, natives of Tennessee and pioneers settlers in Clinton county. William Garner died in Jefferson township. Grace (Moon) Garner was the daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Comber) Moon, who settled near Martinsville, this county, in pioneer times. There they had a large farm and there they spent the remainder of their lives.

The late James Garner was educated in the schools of Clinton county and there began farming. When Jesse was five years old, his parents moved to Grant county, Indiana, where they remained for five years and then returned to Jefferson township, this county, where James Garner again took up farming and also followed carpentering. He was preacher in the Friends church for forty years.

Jesse Garner was educated in this county and has lived practically all of his life in Jefferson township. He owns fifty-five acres near Westboro and seventeen acres elsewhere. In 1892 he moved to Westboro and, after locating there, became accustomed to accompanying his brother-in-law, E. J. Moon, a well-known undertaker of the time, on his business trips. Afterward he purchased Mr. Moon's business, attended the Clarke School of Embalming at Cincinnati and became a practical undertaker. Since that time he has taken post-graduate work under Carl L. Barnes, of Chicago.

On November 7, 1882, Jesse Garner was married to Mary Miranda Haines, daughter of Mordecai Haines, to which union have been born four children, Mont J., Cora, Verda and Carl. On December 17, 1901, Mr. Garner married, secondly, Gula Hallsted, daughter of James W. Hallsted, and to this union have been born four children, Burdett, Grace, Elma May and Thelma Fay (twins).

Elected as a Republican to the office of trustee of Jefferson township, Mr. Garner served one term, twenty-four years ago, in that capacity. He and his wife and family are all members of the Friends church.

TIMOTHY M. MURPHY.

Timothy M. Murphy, one of the more extensive farmers of Jefferson township, this county, was born on July 5, 1863, the son of Daniel and Catherine C. (O'Connell) Murphy, both natives of County Cork, Ireland.

Daniel Murphy was the son of Martin and Catherine Elizabeth (Magner) Murphy, also natives of County Cork. The former was a cabinet-maker by trade. Catherine C. O'Connell was the daughter of Matthew and Johanna (O'Brien) O'Connell, who lived and died in County Cork, where Matthew O'Connell was the overseer of a large estate. Daniel Murphy was educated in Ireland and became a splendid reader and mathematician. He was also a profound student of Latin. He learned the cabinet-maker's trade, and was married in his native land. He came alone to America in 1847, at the time of the famine in Ireland, and about 1849 had saved enough money to pay the passage of his wife and five children to America. After their reunion, the family remained in Lawrence, Massachusetts, until 1857, when they came to Clinton county, locating on the farm now owned by Timothy M. Murphy, Daniel Murphy purchasing fifty-seven acres of land, on which he erected a log house, on the site of his son's present home, and later bought other land until he owned seventy-five acres. After rearing a family of ten children, he and his wife passed away, on this farm. They were members of the Catholic church.

Timothy M. Murphy was educated in the local schools of Clinton county, and has always lived on the home place. He owns about two hundred and eighty-five acres of land, and has excellent buildings on the farm. Mr. Murphy is engaged in general farming and stock raising.

On April 19, 1893, Timothy M. Murphy was married to May Spilker, who was born near Dodsonville, Highland county, Ohio, a daughter of Thomas and Eunice E. (Chase) Spilker, who were born and were married near Bremen, Germany, and several children county, Indiana. Thomas Spilker was the son of Christian and Katherine (Aumun) Spilker, who were born and were married near Bremen, Germany, and several children were born to them in Germany. Christian Spilker was a well-to-do citizen in his own land, being a proprietor of a paper-mill. He was an officer in Napoleon's army at the time of the siege of Moscow, but later fought against him at Waterloo. He once carried an important commission across the Alps. In 1833 he came to America, and, during the winter of 1833-34, had a camp on the present site of Cincinnati. In the spring of 1834 he purchased a farm of three hundred acres near Dodsonville, and there spent the rest of his life.

Mrs. Murphy's maternal grandparents were David C. and Hannah (Hostetler) Chase, natives of Washington county, Indiana, and Orange county, Indiana, respectively. They were married in 1845 in Orange county, Indiana, and remained in Indiana until 1853, when they moved to Lovington, Moultrie county, Illinois. David C. Chase died in Moultrie county in 1894, and his widow died in 1905, at the home of Mrs. Murphy's mother. David C. Chase was a blacksmith and farmer in Indiana, but engaged exclusively in farming in the state of Illinois, where he owned one hundred and thirty-four acres of land, now a part of the town of Lovington. Mrs. Murphy's father, Thomas Spilker, was an apprentice to the harness trade under Doctor Dennison, of Lynchburg. He worked at this trade until twenty-one years old and then engaged in farming. He died on the old home farm near Dodsonville in 1897 and his widow is still living on the old farm. They were the parents of eleven children, eight of whom are still living, the others having died in infancy. The Spilkers were members of the Lutheran church.

Seven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Timothy M. Murphy, as follow: Anna A., John E., Daniel, Mary E., Margaret L., Catherine E. and Timothy, Jr.

Not only is Mr. Murphy a successful farmer, but he is a public-spirited citizen and a man who is popular in the neighborhood of Westboro, where he lives.

JOHN R. ROSS.

For more than thirty years, John R. Ross, of Blanchester, Ohio, resided on the "Level Stock and Poultry Farm," comprising two hundred acres and located near Level, in Warren county, Ohio, an estate of which he is proprietor. In 1912 he took his son, Roy J. Ross, into the business as a partner and, after turning the farm over to the son as manager, purchased a nice home in the little city of Blanchester, where, with his good wife, he now resides. Mr. Ross has been prominent in the agricultural, civic and political life of this community for nearly a half century.

John R. Ross was born on November 24, 1850, at Cozaddale, Warren county, this state, the son of P. W. and Sarah (Frybarger) Ross, both natives of Warren county, the former born in 1812 and the latter in 1814, of Pennsylvania-Dutch extraction. The paternal grandparents of John R. Ross were Benjamin and Lucinda Ross, natives of Pennsylvania, who settled in Warren county in 1804, entering land near Foster. The paternal grandfather, who was a farmer by occupation, served in the War of 1812. The maternal grandparents of John R. Ross were Lewis and Betsy (Custer) Frybarger, natives of Pennsylvania, who located in Warren county, also about 1804 or 1805. They were farmers by occupation and various members of the family had served in the early wars of this country. Lewis Frybarger was a blacksmith, as well as a farmer.

P. W. Ross, the father of John R., was educated in the pioneer schools of Warren county, especially at Cozaddale. He owned one hundred and thirty acres of land and lived on that farm until his death. A Democrat in politics, he was influential in his community and held various offices. The family were members of the Freewill Baptist church and he served as trustee of the church for more than thiry-five years. Four sons and three daughters were born to P. W. and Sarah Ross: Lewis F., Mary Ellen, James W., Nancy Katherine, William P., Eliza J. and John R., the subject of this sketch.

John R. Ross was educated in the common schools and at the Goshen high school under Prof. George E. Hill. He resided on his splendid farm of two hundred acres near Level in Warren county, a farmer known as the "Level Stock and Poultry Farm," and for thirty years was an exhibitor at the state and county fairs, winning many premiums on horses, mules, cattle and sheep. During his active career as a poultry fancier, he won more prizes than any other breeder in southern Ohio and has shipped his poultry and eggs to most every state in the Union. During recent years, he has not engaged in poultry raising, but has given his attention exclusively to raising thoroughbred Holstein cattle and Duroc-Jersey hogs. Mr. Ross operates, in all, more than four hundred acres. He has served as president of the Clinton County Agricultural Association, which has held fairs at Blanchester for the past ten years. During this period, especially, he and his son have been extensive breeders of registered Holstein cattle. Mr. Ross has served two terms as president of the Ohio State Holstein Association and he is a member of the national association. Mr. Ross was a promoter of the Ross pike and the state road from Wesley Chapel, west.

John R. Ross was married on April 3, 1871, to Maria G. Jones, who was born on November 17, 1853, and to this union eight children have been born, Clayton B., born on July 6, 1873; Charles J., December 18, 1875; Clyde W., October 21, 1877; Gertrude, January 13, 1880; Mattie, May 6, 1885; Roy J., June 18, 1887; Cora Belle, February 20, 1891, and Howard F., February 26, 1893.

In 1912, Mr. Ross took his son, Roy J., into his business as a partner and appointed him manager of the farm. The Ross family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Ross has been a member of Fithian Lodge No. 373, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, since 1875, and is also a member of Excelsior Encampment No. 100, at Blanchester. He is also identified with the Citizens Protective Association of Edenton and Blanchester and is otherwise prominent in the public affairs of Warren and Clinton counties.

JAMES B. CLARKE.

James B. Clarke, who, since 1910, has been a member of the well-known mercantile firm of W. P. Hammer & Son, at Westboro, this county, and before that time a well-known contractor, was born at Bangor, Maine, in 1874, the son of John H. Clarke.

Mr. Clarke was educated in the high school at Concord, New Hampshire, and in Dartmouth College, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Laws in 1897. After being graduated from college, he entered construction work with a contracting firm in Ohio and later was engaged in the same business with the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. Altogether he was engaged twelve years in contract building and construction. After his marriage, he located at Westboro, where, since 1910, he has been a member of the firm of W. P. Hammer & Son. This business was established by William P. Hammer and his cousin, John T. Hammer, in 1875. Later John T. Hammer dropped out of the firm and John A., a brother of W. P., became a member of the firm. Still later the firm became W. P. Hammer & Son, which name is still retained, although the present members of the firm are John B. Hammer, a son of William P. and Anna (McCrady) Hammer, James B. Clarke and Mrs. James B. Clarke. Mrs. Anna McCrady Hammer is a sister of Mrs. James B. Clarke's mother, who was Susie McCrady, they being daughters of Samuel and Phoebe (Vandevert) McCrady, of Warren county, who, subsequently, located in Westboro.

On April 29, 1906, James B. Clarke was married to Hallie Hammer, who was born at Westboro, daughter and only child of John A. and Susie (McCrady) Hammer, the former of whom was a native of Westboro and the latter of whom already has been referred to. Mrs. Clarke's paternal grandparents were John T. and Druscilla (Lane) Hammer, both natives of Tennessee, the former of whom built the first house in Westboro. John T. Hammer and his cousin, William Hammer, immigrated from Tennessee to Westboro, and became prominent in that neighborhood. John T. Hammer at one time owned a great deal of land in and near Westboro and William P. Hammer was a soldier in the Eighty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, during the Civil War. He was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and treasurer of Jefferson township for several years.

The Hammer family, for the most part, have been identified with the Christian church. Mr. Clarke, who is a well-known citizen of Clinton county, is the present chairman of the Republican county central committee and is, therefore, well known throughout Clinton county. He was appointed to the office of district assessor of Clinton county by Governor Willis.

GEORGE WIELERT.

George Wielert, now superintendent of the Hershey-Rice Manufacturing Company, of Blanchester, Ohio, who recently retired from the presidency of the Business Men's Club, of Blanchester, was born on November 17, 1863, in Cincinnati, the son of Louis and Christina (Stuebe) Wielert, both natives of Hanover, Germany. Louis Wielert was born in 1833 and located in Cincinnati with his parents in 1848. He died at the age of seventy-five years. His wife, who came to Cincinnati about the same time as her husband, died at the age of seventy-three.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Wielert were Christian Louis and Dorothy Wielert. Mr. Wielert's father was associated with former Mayor Tafel, of Cincinnati, in promoting gymnasium work in the Queen City. Having received a thorough course in gymnastic training in the German schools, Louis Wielert became an instructor in Cincinnati. He was also a tin and brass turner and was an excellent mechanic, having learned these trades in his native land. After being engaged in the tin and stove business for many years, he retired to accept a place as city water-meter inspector. During his entire life, he was a stanch Republican. The Wielert family were members of the German Protestant church and Louis Wielert was a life member of the Turner Society.

Standing six feet and two inches tall, Louis Wielert was a man of powerful build. He served in the Ninth and Fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry from 1862 until 1866 and during this entire period was not wounded nor taken prisoner. The Ninth Ohio Volunteer Infantry was a German regiment, recruited from the Turner Society of Cincinnati. Five sons were born to Louis and Christina Wielert, of whom four grew to maturity.

George Wielert, who was educated in the public schools of Cincinnati and in the Cincinnati high school, was also graduated from the art school of Cincinnati and became an engraver. After finishing his education, he became a designer for a wholesale dry-goods company of Cincinnati and remained with that concern until March 29, 1909, when he became superintendent of the Rice overall factory at Blanchester. Mr. Wielert has built up this excellent business to its present capacity and is still enlarging it.

In 1888 George Wielert was married to Anna B. Schwein, of Cincinnati, who has borne him three children: Amor George, who is auditor for the Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati; Irvin Louis, who is a mechanic at Wilmington, until Russell Jacob, who is with Charles Haworth at Wilmington.

Fraternally, Mr. Wielert is a member of the Knights of Pythias. The Wielert family are members of the German Protestant church and active in the affairs of that denomination.

GEORGE E. HUNTER.

George E. Hunter, the president of the People's Cash Grocery Store, and a well-known business man of Blanchester, Ohio, was born in Hocking county, Ohio, in 1866, the son of Kirts and Susan (Poling) Hunter, the former of whom was a native of Tuscarawas county, Ohio, and the latter a native of Hocking county, same state. Kirts Hunter was a farmer by occupation.

George E. Hunter was educated in the public schools of Hocking county, and was reared on his father's farm in that county. After leaving school he established a general store at Haynes, in his native county, which he operated for sixteen years, being very successful in that line. In 1905 he removed to Blanchester and purchased the interests of Logan S. Lorish, grocer, in his store, and continued the business of that location until 1910, when the store was incorporated as the People's Cash Grocery Store, with George E. Hunter as president, at which time the store was moved to its present location. Mr. Hunter is interested in the Star Hame Company, of which he is now serving as vice-president.

In 1889 Mr. Hunter was married to Ella Mettler, and to this union two children were born, Nellie F. and Porter E. In 1907 Mr. Hunter married, secondly, Edna Hogen, a daughter of D. W. Hogen, and to this union has been born one child, Jeannette Hogen Hunter.

Mrs. Hunter is a member of the Universalist church. Fraternally, George E. Hunter is a member of the Knights of Pythias.

LOGAN S. LORISH.

Logan S. Lorish, a well-known real estate dealer of Blanchester, Ohio, was born on August 21, 1867, a son of Henry and Esther (Lacey) Lorish. Henry Lorish was born on October 26, 1826, in Fairfield county, Ohio, the son of Nicholas Lorish, a native of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. He was a farmer and followed that vocation until his death in 1846. Nicholas Lorish married Magdaline Apt, a native of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, who died at Columbus, Ohio, in 1863. Henry Lorish was reared as a farmer lad, and in 1842, when sixteen years old, began to learn the trade of harness making at Baltimore, in Fairfield county, Ohio. Some years later he moved to Wilmington, in Clinton county, and followed his trade there until his death. He was married on February, 1856, to Martha G. Miller, a native of Warren county, Ohio, but a resident of Clinton county. The one child born to this marriage died early in life, and Mrs. Lorish herself died in 1863. About two years later, on September 20, 1865, Henry Lorish married Esther A. Lacey, a native of Clinton county, and to this union two sons were born, Sherman T. and Logan S. Henry Lorish was prominently identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows for many years, and was a member of Star of Hope Lodge No. 127, and Hiawatha Encampment No. 7. Although born and bred in a hotbed of Democracy, he always voted the Republican ticket. His first wife was a member of the Baptist church, and he and his second wife were members of the Christian church. Both are now deceased.

Logan S. Lorish was graduated from the Wilmington high school in 1884, and during the next twelve years was salesman in a general store in Blanchester. On three different occasions he purchased grocery stores, built up a good trade and then sold them. In 1909 he engaged in the real-estate business, and here in Clinton county enjoys a large patronage.

In 1897 Logan S. Lorish was married to Lizzie Watkins, of Blanchester. In 1906 he married, secondly, Irene Brandenburg, of Westboro, and to this union one child has been born, Lavone S.

Fraternally, Logan S. Lorish is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, a Republican in politics, and active in the councils of his party locally. He served as councilman of Blanchester for eight years, and as a member of the school board for seven years, during which time he was clerk of the board. He was one of the organizers of the Business Men's Club, of Blanchester, and is now its president.

GUY H. IRVIN.

Guy H. Irvin is a well-known grocer of Blanchester, who was born on January 27, 1891, the son of George and Frances (Miller) Irvin, the former of whom was born in Warren county, Ohio, November 22, 1855, and the latter in Clinton county.

George Irvin was the son of Samuel and Martha (Crosley) Irvin, the former a native of Ross county, Ohio. Samuel Irvin was the son of Andrew and Sarah (Shipley) Irvin. Samuel and Martha Irvin moved from Ross county, Ohio, to Hamilton county, Ohio. They had eight children, Nathan, James, Benjamin, Carrie, George, Abram, Emma and Dora. Nathan and Benjamin are deceased. Samuel Irvin died in 1899 at the age of seventy-eight and his wife died in 1908, at the age of eighty-two. George Irvin was educated in the public schools and was a farmer by occupation. He came with his parents to Clinton county when about one year old. He owns a farm in Marion township and has been an extensive stock dealer, but is now living retired. He is a Republican in politics and his wife is a member of the Friends church. By his first marriage, to Frances Miller, there were born six children, Ralph, Marjorie, Edward, Ben, Guy H. and Norman. Mrs. Frances Irvin died in 1896 and in 1897 Mr. Irvin was married to Phoebe Rude, of Clinton county, who was born in 1863, the daughter of Nicholas and Elizabeth Rude, and to this union two children were born, John and Georgiana. Nicholas Rude was a farmer by occupation, a Republican and a member of the Friends church. George Irvin died on May 17, 1915, at Blanchester and his widow is still living.

Guy H. Irvin was educated in the schools of Blanchester and taught school for about four and one-half years, beginning at the age of sixteen years. Later he became a partner in the firm of Lorish & Irvin, grocers, of Blanchester, the store being thus operated until September 14, 1913, when Mr. Irvin took sole charge of the store.

In August, 1912, Mr. Irvin was married to Mabel E. Norman, the daughter of Elroy Norman, of Blanchester, and to this union has been born one child, George E.

Fraternally, Guy H. Irvin is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mrs. Irvin is a member of the Baptist church.

ISAAC C. MILLER.

Isaac C. Miller, a well-to-do farmer of Jefferson township who was born in Clinton county, on June 27, 1878, is the son of C. C. and Electra E. (Kibby) Miller and a brother of Ephraim Kibby Miller, whose biographical sketch is contained elsewhere in this volume.

Mr. Miller's father was born near New Vienna, this county, on March 26, 1837, and his mother was born near Clarksville, in Clinton county. The father farmed all his life in Clinton county with the exception of a short period in which he was engaged in school teaching as a young man. He owned a farm in Washington township, but the last thirty years of his life were spent in Jefferson township. He was a soldier in the Civil War, and after the war was a member of General Sherman Post No. 360, Grand Army of the Republic. To C. C. and Electra E. (Kibby) Miller were born ten children, E. T., L. N., P. V., Malcolm, Cora, Nina, Grace, E. K., Bertha and Isaac C.

Mr. Miller's paternal grandparents were Isaac and Margaret (Hildebrant) Miller, the former of whom was born on July 30, 1812, near Farmers Station, and the latter, November 26, 1820, at Hunterton, in Hunterton county, New Jersey. The paternal great-grandfather was Isaac Miller, Sr., who was born on February 5, 1777, the son of Peter and Catherine (Rhodes) Miller. Peter Miller was a native of Wales, born in 1740, who, after coming to America, served in the Revolutionary War. Isaac Miller, Sr., was the first of the Miller family to settle in Clinton county. He came to the county at the age of twenty years with a party of surveyors. It was his business to keep the company supplied with fresh meat, which he did with his rifle, being a splendid shot. Afterwards he went with the party to Kentucky and thence to Tennessee. In 1801 he returned to the vicinity of Farmers Station. Isaac Miller, Jr., was a farmer by occupation and spent practically all of his work in this community.

Mr. Miller's maternal grandfather was Ephraim Kibby, who was born at Columbia, three miles below the mouth of the Little Miami river, in what is now Hamilton county, Ohio, December 12, 1795, and died on August 14, 1876. Ephraim Kibby's father came to Hamilton county in 1789 and was one of its earliest settlers, about 1800, removing from Columbia to the neighborhood of what is now, Hopkinsville, Warren county, settling on land owned by Capt. Alexander Hamilton, opposite the great bend in the Miami river. The house in which he lived at that time had no chimney. A fire was built in the center of the cabin on the dirt floor. From that place the family moved to Deerfield on the Miami river and from there to the farm owned by Captain Armstrong, located on a road leading from Deerfield to Lebanon. While living on this farm, the father of Ephraim Kibby died, about 1809. Three or four years later the mother died. Ephraim Kibby then lived with his brother John, who was a tanner near Hopkinsville. He learned the trade and continued in the business after his brother had abandoned it, at that time he being about nineteen years old. He was employed as a substitute in the War of 1812, and with the money thus earned began his active career. After his marriage in 1815 to Nancy Vandervort, he and his wife came to Clinton county, locating at Clarksville and there made preparations to establish a tanning business. Ephraim Kibby never drank or used tobacco in all his life. He traded his tanning business for one thousand acres of land in Washington and Vernon townships, in March, 1840, and from 1840 to 1865 or 1866 was engaged in farming. At the latter date he retired to Wilmington, where he spent his last days. He married, secondly, Tamzen Whitmere, but there were no children by this second marriage. By his first marriage twelve children were born, two of whom died in infancy. Two of these children are still living, among whom are Mrs. Nancy Deacon, aged eighty-four years, of Westboro, and Mrs. Electro Miller, who lives near Westboro and who is seventy-eight years old. Paul G. Kibby, one son of Ephraim Kibby was a soldier in the Civil War and served in an Illinois regiment. He died of his wounds in Tennessee. Jonah Kibby, another son of Ephraim, served in the One Hundred and Eighty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, a member of Company D, and after returning from the war, emigrated to Indiana, where he died.

Isaac C. Miller was educated in the public schools, and after leaving school took up farming. He owns seventy acres of land, and is engaged in general farming and stock raising. Mr. Miller was married in 1905 to Estella Hunter, a daughter of Andrew Hunter of Clark township.

Mr. Miller is a member of the Christian church and Mrs. Miller is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Isaac C. Miller is a prominent member of Grange No. 1779, of Westboro.

ANDREW J. JOINER.

Andrew J. Joiner, a prosperous farmer and well-known citizen of Wilson township, this county, was born in that township on January 15, 1842, the son of Joshua and Mary Ann (Stricklin) Joiner. Joshua Joiner was born on August 18, 1806, in North Carolina, and died on January 26, 1854. On January 7, 1830, he married Mary Ann Stricklin, who was born on June 13, 1812, in North Carolina, a daughter of Nathan and Jemima Stricklin, and died on September 4, 1893. Joshua Joiner and wife came to Ohio in 1842, and settled in Clinton county. They were prominent members of the Baptist church and had a family of nine children, as follow: Elizabeth S., born on April 14, 1831; Marion, November 6, 1833; Elisha, November 19, 1834, who died on June 16, 1865; Johnson, October, 1836; Nathan, August 4, 1838; Joshua, May 28, 1840; Andrew J., January 15, 1842; David H., May 16, 1848, and Martha, February 17, 1850. Joshua Joiner was the son of Nelson and Susan (Figurer) Joiner, both natives of the Old Dominion state, who removed from Virginia to North Carolina, settling three miles from Murfreesboro, where Nelson Joiner became a large landowner and an extensive slaveholder.

Andrew J. Joiner was educated in the common schools and has been engaged in farming practically all his life. He married Martha Ann Clemons, who was born on September 2, 1853, the daughter of Robert and Mary (Bishop) Clemons.

Mrs. Joiner's father, Robert M. Clemons, was born on July 4, 1816, in Fluvanna county, Virginia, and died on June 23, 1882. On April 30, 1835, he married Mary Bishop, who was born on June 14, 1815, in Albermarle county, Virginia, and to this union fourteen children were born, namely: Lucy Ann, born on March 24, 1836; Benjamin, January 28, 1838; Mary E., September 30, 1839; Robert, September 13, 1841; Nancy J., March 28, 1843; William W., December 24, 1844; Sarah M., November 4, 1846; Joseph, August 20, 1848; Thomas, August 10, 1850; Charles L., September 10, 1851; Martha A., September 2, 1853; James M., August 12, 1855; Harvey W., October 13, 1857, and Emma B., September 1, 1859. Robert Clemons, the father of these children, who was a farmer by occupation, came to Ohio about 1846, and brought his family with him. They were members of the Presbyterian church. Mrs. Robert Clemons died on August 15, 1891. The father of Robert Clemons was Robert Clemons, Sr., a farmer by occupation, who removed from Virginia to Missouri in an early day and there spent the remainder of his life.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Joiner have no children. Mr. Joiner owns three hundred and twenty-eight acres of land in Wilson township, located three miles from Sabina. In 1904 he built a handsome and commodious house on his farm, and has made many other improvements on his farm. Mr. and Mrs. Joiner are members of the Methodist church and Presbyterian church, respectively.

HARRY HALL.

Harry Hall, a resident of Midland, Ohio, and a well-to-do farmer of Clinton county, is descended from patriotic stock. Mr. Hall was born in 1886, at Pansy, in Clinton county, a son of James Samuel and Dora Jane (Deck) Hall, the former born on June 25, 1860, at Pansy, and the latter, in 1861, near Jeffersonville, in Fayette county, Ohio.

The paternal grandparents of Harry Hall were James and Priscilla (Statler) Hall, the former a native of Muskingum county, Ohio, born near Newark, and the latter, born near Pansy. James Hall was a son of Reuben Hall, a native of Muskingum county, a blacksmith by trade and a pioneer of the Pansy neighborhood in Clinton county, who lived retired after coming to this county. His son, James, the grandfather of Harry Hall, enlisted in Company I, Sixty-sixth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, on October 12, 1864, and served with distinction until July 15, 1865. He died on July 20, 1898. He was a school teacher and farmer by occupation and lived near Pansy the most of his life, the first five or six years of which he spent in Midland City on a small farm, where his grandson, Harry, now lives. He had two brothers, Jonathan and Joseph, the latter of whom was a soldier in the Mexican War, and the former, a soldier in the Civil War. Priscilla Statler, who became the wife of James Hall, was a daughter of Samuel and Mary (Harris) Statler, of Virginia, early settlers at Pansy and large landowners. Their son, Isaac, who was a soldier in the Civil War, survived the war, and is still living.

Mr. Hall's maternal grandparents were Edward and Rebecca (Robison) Deck, natives of Fayette county, Ohio. Edward Deck was a farmer by occupation. He and his wife emigrated to Illinois, where they both died within the same week, leaving Mr. Hall's mother an orphan at the age of six years. Rebecca Robison's parents were natives of Virginia and early settlers of Fayette county, Ohio. Her mother before her marriage was Nancy Allen. Five brothers of Rebecca Robison served in the Union army during the Civil War.

James Samuel Hall, who received the rudiments of an education in the common schools of Pansy and Midland City, farmed with his father for some time and then entered the hotel business about 1889 in Midland City, at the same time managing a farm of seventy-five acres near Midland, and three hundred acres near Pansy after his father's death. About 1905 he retired from the hotel business, but continued to live in Midland until his death. To him and his wife was born but one son, Harry, the subject of this review.

Harry Hall was educated in the schools of Midland City, and after leaving school was engaged as a telegraph operator, having learned that art at Midland City. He not only worked in Midland City, but also at Chillicothe, Ohio, and at Seymour, Indiana, in the latter two places being employed in the dispatcher's office. After six years at the telegrapher's key, he returned to Midland City, and has since been engaged in general farming.

On June 30, 1914, Harry Hall was married to Florence Moon, of Midland, the daughter of B. V. Moon. Mr. and Mrs. Hall are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which they take an active interest, while fraternally, Mr. Hall is a member of the state and national grange. He has served as clerk of the corporation of Midland, and is now a member of the town council of that village.

WILLIAM TURNER RANKIN.

William Turner Rankin, a native of Burtonville and a farmer of Jefferson township, was born in August, 1879, the son of John and Margaret (Stroup) Hunley Rankin, both natives of Ohio.

The paternal grandparents were John and Jane Rankin, natives of Ireland, who located in Clinton county early in life and who were pioneer farmers near Port William. The maternal grandparents were James and Mary (Smith) Stroup, both of whom lived and died in Highland county, Ohio. James Stroup was a farmer by occupation.

Mr. Rankin's father, John Rankin, was educated in the public schools of Clinton county, and farmed near Port William and Burtonville. He died in 1895 in Clinton county, and his widow died ten years later in the same county. They had two children. Mrs. John Rankin was the mother of two children by her previous marriage.

William Turner Rankin was educated in the local schools and engaged in farming upon attaining his majority. In 1909 he purchased fifty-four acres of land in Jefferson township, upon which he now lives. Mr. Rankin is engaged in general farming and has attained a satisfactory measure of success.

On February 10, 1905, Mr. Rankin was married to Nellie McCullum, a native of Clinton county, who has borne him one child, Marjorie Helen.

Mr. and Mrs. Rankin attend the Methodist Episcopal church, and they are members of the local organization of the grange.

LEWIS JEFFERSON SPICKARD, M. D.

Dr. Lewis Jefferson Spickard, for years past a well-known physician in Blanchester, Ohio, was born in Hillsboro, in Highland county, Ohio, September 5, 1860, the son of George and Mary Ann (Tedrick) Spickard, both natives of Highland county. The paternal grandfather of Doctor Spickard, Alex Spickard, who married a Deeds, was a native of Highland county and his wife of Greene county. The paternal great-grandfather of Doctor Spickard was Alex Spickard, a native of Ireland, who came to America early in life and served in the War of 1812. After that war, he located in Highland county, where he became a farmer and where he died. His son, Alex Spickard, was also a farmer by occupation and lived and died in Highland county. The maternal grandfather of Doctor Spickard was John Tedrick, a native of Virginia, who married a Barton and settled in Highland county in pioneer times and became a well-known farmer there.

George Spickard received the rudiments of an education in the schools of Highland county and became a farmer, but died at the age of thirty-three years. To George and Mary Ann Spickard but two children were born, Robert, who died in infancy, and Lewis J., the subject of this sketch.

Lewis Jefferson Spickard received a common-school education in Highland county and, after finishing the common-school course, entered Ohio Medical College at Cincinnati, from which he was graduated in 1897. Immediately afterward he took up the practice of his profession at Russell Station, Ohio, but, after being there for four and one-half years, moved to Highland, where he practiced for two and one-half years. In 1901 he moved to Blanchester and, for the past fourteen or fifteen years, has been continuously engaged in the practice of his profession at that place, during which period he has built up a large and flourishing practice and enjoys the confidence of the public, who believe in his professional ability and who admire him as a man and citizen.

In 1883 Doctor Spickard was married to Frankie Shepherd, who died on March 2, 1890, after having borne him one son, Raymond, who is a dentist at Hyde Park, Cincinnati. In 1897 Doctor Spickard married, secondly, Ethel Bazell, of Lawrence county, Ohio.

Doctor and Mrs. Spickard are members of the Christian and Methodist Episcopal churches, respectively. Fraternally, Doctor Spickard is a member of the Knights of Pythias. He is also a member of the Clinton County Medical Society and the Ohio State Medical Association and is prominent in the affairs of both organizations.

FRANK D. SAVILLE.

Frank D. Saville, formerly a successful motorman and conductor of various street, interurban and electric railway lines and now a successful farmer of Jefferson township, was born on the farm where he now lives in Jefferson township, October 24, 1883, the son of Joseph C. and Sarah A. (Oliver) Saville, natives of Virginia and Marion township, Clinton county, Ohio, respectively. The paternal grandfather of Frank D. Saville was Joseph Saville, who died in Virginia. His maternal grandparents, Benjamin J. and Eliza Jane (Clelland) Oliver, after their marriage settled on the farm, where their daughter Sarah, the mother of Frank D. Saville, was born. Benjamin J. Oliver erected excellent buildings which are still standing. He and his wife died on this farm.

Joseph C. Saville was educated in the schools of Virginia and, after completing his education, came from Virginia to Ohio, settling in Clinton county. He was accompanied by a number of companions and they made the trip from Virginia to Ohio on horseback. He married in Greene county and became a successful farmer there. After the death of his wife, he moved to Clinton county. He began farming in Clinton county on the farm now owned and occupied by Frank D. Saville and owned there ninety-six acres of land, on which he put up excellent buildings. Joseph C. Saville also took a minor part in the Civil War, but was not an enlisted soldier. His horses were commandeered for use in the Union army and he went along to care for them. He and his wife were the parents of three children, Ora B. (deceased), Frank D. and Emmett L., who lives on the old farm.

Frank D. Saville was educated in the public schools of Clinton county and, except for two years, has always lived on the old farm. During these two years, he was a conductor and motorman on an electric railway line in California and on an interurban road running out of Cincinnati. Mr. Saville has added ten acres to the old home farm. He is engaged in general farming, but specializes in thoroughbred Poland-China hogs.

On March 20, 1910, Frank D. Saville was married to Mattie Ross, the daughter of John R. Ross, who is referred to elsewhere in this volume. To this union has been born one son, Homer Francis. Mrs. Saville is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and an active worker in the various church enterprises.

JOHN FRAZEE.

Among the well known business men of Blanchester, this county, is John Frazee, who was born in that city, June 27, 1848, the son of John and Elizabeth (Robinson) Frazee, the former a native of Warren county, Ohio, and the latter, of Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Frazee were Isaac and Elizabeth (Lee) Frazee, both natives of New Jersey. The paternal great-grandparents were John and Elizabeth Frazee, also natives of New Jersey, where they lived all their lives. Isaac Frazee came to Ohio in 1805, settling in Warren county, where he purchased five hundred acres of land from Jonathan Dayton, the original deed for which was signed in 1787. Dayton purchased this land from Scott Sims, who received a patent from the government. Isaac Frazee served in the War of 1812, and moved to Blanchester about 1832 or 1833, where he entered into a partnership with W. H. Baldwin, and with whom he conducted a general store until his death.

The maternal grandparents of Mr. Frazee were John and Sarah (Ryder) Robinson, natives of Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, who, in 1837, moved to Brown county, Ohio. John Robinson was a farmer by occupation, and died in Brown county. His widow later moved to Blanchester, where her death occurred.

Educated in the common schools of Warren county, John Frazee moved to Blanchester with his parents, and during a few years of his early life, was engaged in the mercantile business. He served as justice of the peace until 1857, when his death occurred. He had been active in the councils of the Democratic party, and a member of the blue lodge of the Masonic fraternity. His wife was a widow at the time of his marriage to her, and was the mother of three children by a former marriage, namely: Melissa, who became the wife of Francis Hartman; Martha Williams, unmarried, and Ambrose N. Williams, formerly judge of the probate court of Clinton county. By his marriage to Mrs. Williams John Frazee's father had two children, of whom the subject of this sketch was the elder, the other child having been Sarah Elida, who died at the age of twelve years.

John Frazee was educated in the schools of Blanchester, and learned the trade of a house painter, which occupation he followed for twenty years. Subsequently he became associated with Alex Crosson in the retail lumber business in 1880, and is still engaged in this business.

In 1880 John Frazee was married to Mrs. Martha J. (Sircoulomb) Williams, of Westboro, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Frazee are members of the Universalist church, in whose welfare they are deeply interested, while fraternally, Mr. Frazee is a member of the blue lodge of the Masonic fraternity. Politically, he is an old-line Republican, and served four terms as mayor of Blanchester, as well as several terms as a member of the town council. He is a highly respected citizen of the town and county, where he has lived all his life.

MOSES G. MADDEN.

Two of the best-known citizens of Wilson township and, in fact, of Clinton county, are Moses G. and Solomon Madden, brothers, who, with their sister, Rachel, occupy the old Madden homestead of one hundred acres in Wilson township and which was purchased in 1859.

Moses G. Madden was born in Wilson township, this county, on October 10, 1837. He and his brother, Solomon, are the sons of Solomon, Sr., and Ruth Madden, who were among the early settlers of Clinton county. Solomon Madden, Sr., was born in Chatham county, North Carolina, September 29, 1793, and immigrated to Clinton county in 1811 with his parents. George Madden, the father of Solomon, was born in 1759 in Pennsylvania, near Philadelphia, the son of Barnabas Madden, a native of England, who immigrated to the American colonies before Revolutionary days. Solomon Madden, Sr., married Ruth Robbins, of Wayne county, Indiana, March 11, 1819, and they settled in Adams township, this county, where they lived for seventeen years, at the end of which time they moved to what is now Wilson township, where he spent the rest of his life, his death occurring on October 6, 1849. His widow lived to be more than eighty years old. She was the daughter of Moses Robbins and was born in Randolph county, North Carolina, August 8, 1802, and settled with her parents in Wayne county, Indiana, in 1817. Moses Robbins was born in North Carolina in 1770 and was the son of John Robbins, born in 1734. The latter was a Baptist minister and a chaplain in the American army during the Revolutionary War. He died in 1834, having reached his one hundredth year. George Madden, the father of Solomon Madden, Sr., was twice married. His first wife was a Mrs. Reynolds and to this marriage there were born two children, one of whom was Francis. He married, secondly, Elizabeth Carter.

George Madden was a soldier in the American Revolution. During the war Elizabeth Carter and her father carried him from the battlefield after he had been wounded. Later he and Elizabeth were married, very much to the chagrin of the latter's father, he having opposed the marriage because he did not believe in war and did not want his daughter to marry a soldier.

To Solomon, Sr., and Ruth (Robbins) Madden were born ten children, Elizabeth, Cyrus, Alice, John, Mary Ann, Solomon, Jr., Henry, Moses G., William H. and Rachel. Of these children, Solomon, Jr., born on March 11, 1832, Moses G. and Rachel are the ones referred to in this sketch, and they are the only living members of the family. William H., Moses G. and Solomon, Jr., were soldiers in the Civil War. William H., who enlisted in the Seventy-fourth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, under Colonel Moody, was taken with typhoid fever soon after enlisting and returned home and died. After his death, Moses G. and Solomon enlisted, simultaneously, on May 2, 1864, in the One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regiment, Ohio National Guards, and became a part of the Army of the Cumberland, under Gen. Lew Wallace. Moses G. and Solomon, however, were separated. The latter was taken prisoner at Perryville, Virginia, but escaped in about one hour and rejoined his regiment. Moses G. was engaged in the battle of Monocacy and in several minor skirmishes. He received an honorable discharge on August 30, 1864, at Camp Dennison, his brother, Solomon, receiving his discharge in the same month.

Moses G., Solomon and Rachel Madden are all devout members of the Friends church and none of them has ever married. They all live together on the old home farm in Wilson township. Moses G. Madden was elected trustee of Wilson township in 1876 and held the office for many years. Both he and his brother vote the Republican ticket and have been more or less active in the councils of the party for many years.

EPHRAIM KIBBY MILLER.

Ephraim Kibby Miller is a successful farmer of Jefferson township, where he owns a farm of seventy-eight acres. He was born near Cuba in Washington township, this county, July 20, 1873, the son of C. C. and Electra E. (Kibby) Miller, natives of New Vienna and Clarksville, this county, respectively, the former of whom was born near New Vienna on March 26, 1837.

Mr. Miller's paternal grandparents were Isaac and Margaret (Hildebrant) Miller, the former born on July 30, 1812, near Farmers Station and the latter, November 26, 1820, in Hunterdon county, New Jersey. His paternal great-grandfather was Isaac Miller, who was born on February 5, 1777, the son of Peter Miller, a native of Wales, born about 1740, who came to America and settled near Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he married Catherine Rhodes, a native of America but of Dutch descent. They were members of the Lutheran church. Peter Miller was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, but never returned from that war. Isaac Miller, Sr., was the first of the family to come to Clinton county. He came at the age of twenty years with a party of surveyors to the present site of Farmers Station. It was his work to keep the company in fresh meat. He was a splendid shot and had no difficulty in providing abundant game. From Clinton county, he accompanied the party to Kentucky and thence to Tennessee with John McKibben, the owner of the estate in Clinton county which they had come to survey. In 1801 he returned to the vicinity of Farmers Station. Isaac Miller, Jr., was a farmer during his entire life in the vicinity of Farmers Station.

The maternal grandparents of Ephraim Kibby Miller were Ephraim and Margaret Nancy (Vandervort) Kibby, early settlers on the present site of Clarksville. Ephraim Kibby was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, in 1795 and was a farmer by occupation.

He died on August 14, 1876. Ephraim Kibby's father was an early settler in what is now Hamilton county. Later he moved to what is now the neighborhood of Hopkinsville, Warren county, and settled on land owned by Capt. Alexander Hamilton, opposite the great bend in the Miami river. His history is referred to elsewhere, in the biographical sketch of J. C. Miller, presented elsewhere in this volume.

C. C. Miller, the father of Ephraim Kibby Miller, spent all of his life in Clinton county. He was a farmer by occupation, but had taught school during his young manhood. He owned a farm in Washington township, but spent the last thirty years of his life in Jefferson township. He was a soldier in the Civil War and, after the war, belonged to General Sherman Post No. 360, Grand Army of the Republic. C. C. and Electra Miller were the parents of ten children, E. T., L. N., P. V., Malcolm, Cora, Nina, Grace, Ephraim K., Bertha and I. C.

Ephraim Kibby Miller was educated in the public schools of Jefferson township and has always been a farmer. He owns seventy-eight acres in Jefferson township and is a general farmer and stockman.

On February 27, 1902, Ephraim K. Miller was married to Lillian Pursel, of Adams county, the daughter of Frank Pursel, and to this union has been born one daughter, Marjorie E., born on December 26, 1902.

WILLIAM GARNER.

There are few families living in Clinton county today which have become more numerous than that of the Garners. William Garner, a well-known farmer of Clark township and for twelve years a trustee of Wilmington college, was born just a short distance from Martinsville in Clark township, November 12, 1850, the son of James Garner, who married Grace Moon, born in this county in 1823, a daughter of Joseph Moon.

In 1915 the Garner family held its twenty-fourth annual reunion in Clinton county. The earliest known ancestor of this family was John Fusha Garner, a native of Tennessee or North Carolina, who had a son, James Garner, who was married about 1793 to Mary Moon, and who subsequently located in Clinton county. Mary Moon was the daughter of Joseph Moon, but not the Joseph Moon heretofore referred to. To James and Mary (Moon) Garner were born fifteen children, William, John, Joseph, Riley, Ira, James, Rebecca, Elizabeth, James, Jr., Jane, Polly, Nancy, Matilda, Sarah and Elizabeth. Of these children, William, who was born on April 20, 1794, married Ann Hockett, a native of Clinton county, born on August 1, 1797. They had thirteen children: John, born in 1818; Elizabeth Andrew, 1819; James, 1820; Ruth Andrew, 1822; Jesse and Mary, 1823 and 1825 respectively, who died in childhood; Rebecca Pyle, 1827; Susana Greene, 1829; Jeptha, 1831, who was a physician in Tennessee; Nancy, 1833, who died in childhood; Riley, 1835; Rachel Moore, 1836; Martha Coppock, 1838. John, the second child born to James and Mary (Moon) Garner, married and had six children, Mary, Amos, Irena, Polly, James and Elizabeth. Joseph, the third born, married and had seven children, Silas, James, Mary, Martha, Rebecca, Elizabeth and Nancy. Riley, the fourth born, married and had nine children, Sallie, Joshua, Rebecca, Louisa, Olive, Mary Ellen, William, Susan and Emiline. Ira, the fifth born, married and had ten children, Martha A., Joseph, Milton, Richard, Pleasant, Isabel, Rebecca, James, Asa and Mary Matilda. James, the sixth born, married and had eight children, Rachel, Ellen, John, Elbridge, Jefferson, George, Romeo and Bessie. Rebecca, the seventh born, married and had seven children, Joseph, Riley, John, Sallie, Mary, Ann and James. Rebecca's family lived in Utah. Elizabeth and James, the eighth and ninth born, died in infancy. Jane, the tenth born, married and had seven children, Lydia, William, Asa, Reuben, Mary Jane, Jabez and James. Polly, the eleventh born, although married had no children of her own. She, however, adopted ten children. Nancy, the twelfth born, married and had eight children, Elizabeth, Zimrine, Asa, Mary, Ann, James, John and Pleasant. Matilda, the thirteenth born, married and had five children, Eliza, Jefferson, James, Mary and Martha. Sarah, the fourteenth born, married and had six children, Silas, William, James, Leander, Albert and Mary Ann. Elizabeth, the fifteenth child, married and had four children, Mary, Rachel, Edom and Matilda Ann.

William Garner, the subject of this sketch and the fourth born in a family of eleven children, was educated in the public schools of Clinton county and became a farmer. First, he rented land, but, in 1898, purchased forty-eight acres of land in Jefferson township, where he now lives. In 1910, Mr. Garner erected a comfortable house, and has been engaged in general farming for some time.

On January 1, 1874, William Garner was married to Louisa Hammer, who was born at Westboro, this county, on July 19, 1854, a daughter of John and Drusella (Lane) Hammer, and to this union five children have been born, Hattie, Frank, Ethel, Cecil E. and Velma, all of whom have taught school.

So far as the records are available, the Garner family have all been members of the Friends church. Mr. Garner served for twenty-five years as a member of the school board in this county and for eleven years in the same capacity in Brown county, Ohio, and was a member of the board of trustees of Wilmington College for fourteen years.

PHILIP A. STEWART.

Philip A. Stewart is a well-to-do farmer of Jefferson township, Clinton county, where he owns and farms ninety acres of land. He was born on the farm where he now lives on August 5, 1874, the son of Minor D. and Amanda J. (Mossman) Stewart.

Minor D. Stewart was the son of John and Mart Experience Stewart, the former born in 1793, near Port Elizabeth, New Jersey, and the latter, also born in New Jersey, four years later, in 1797. John Stewart was a farmer in New Jersey who emigrated to Ohio in 1816, locating near where Lebanon is now situated. About 1820, he came to Clinton county and located in Marion township. In 1836, he moved to Jefferson township, Clinton county, and purchased the farm upon which his grandson, Philip A., now lives. The farm was in a virgin state at the time, and John Stewart cleared and drained the land. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and lived until June 19, 1880. His wife had died, many years previously, April 16, 1862. They had eleven children, as follow: Mary Ann, who was born on July 29, 1817; William, August 4, 1819; Jonathan, October 20, 1821; Rebecca, April 27, 1823; Joshua, May 4, 1826; Daniel, May 5, 1828; Abigail, April 4, 1830; John, March 12, 1832; Susannah, February 8, 1834; Elizabeth, August 26, 1836 and Minor D., November 11, 1838. The father of these children was a Democrat in politics.

Minor D. Stewart, who was the youngest of these children and the father of Philip A., was educated in the common schools of Jefferson township. In 1864, when still a young man, he enlisted in Company I, Thirty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He accompanied General Sherman on his march to the sea and took part in all the engagements of that army. He participated in the Grand Review at Washington, and was discharged on June 13, 1865. After the war he came back to Clinton county and farmed the rest of his life in Jefferson township, where he owned one hundred and thirty-six acres of land. On May 13, 1873, he was married to Amanda J. Mossman, who was born on February 1, 1856, daughter of George and Perscilla (Fox) Mossman, of Clinton county, and the eldest of three children born to her parents, the other two being William and Mary. To this union ten children were born, as follow: Phillip A., born on August 5, 1874; Alva, March 21, 1877; Maggie, who died in infancy; Cora, August 30, 1880, died early in life; Nettie, December 13, 1882; John, October 16, 1884, who died on February 26, 1915; James, July 16, 1887; Mabel, April 18, 1891; Howard, May 22, 1896, and Frank, July 27, 1899, who died on March 12, 1912. Minor D. Stewart, the father of these children, was a Democrat and a member of the Friends church. He died on April 28, 1907, and since his death, his widow has joined the Christian church.

Philip A. Stewart, the eldest child in his father's family, was educated in the schools of Clinton county, and worked on the farm until attaining maturity, when he went to Cincinnati and there learned the carpenter's trade. He worked at the carpenter trade in Hamilton county for ten years, and was married in Hamilton on April 10, 1909, to Leona P. Bobbitt, who was born on October 19, 1884, daughter of James and Delia (Williams) Bobbitt, both natives of Kentucky, who emigrated to Ohio, locating in Butler county, where they spent the remainder of their lives, both now being deceased. They were the parents of ten children, William R., Nannie J., Carrie, Clarence E., Elizabeth, Alvin G., Leona P., Ethelyn, Leroy and Letha. At the time of his marriage, Mr. Stewart owned thirty-seven acres of land near the city, but upon returning to the old home place, purchased the same and now farms ninety acres of land. He and his wife are the parents of three children, namely: Gordon A., born on February 15, 1911; Verlin D., July 24, 1912, and Lois A., May 3, 1914. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart are members of the Friends church and are held in high regard throughout the neighborhood in which they reside.

CHARLES E. JENKINS.

Charles E. Jenkins is a well-known and highly respected farmer of Sabina, this county, who manages the W. T. McClintock farm of six hundred and fifty-three acres and who, during the period of twenty years in which he has been in charge of this farm, has become a well-to-do citizen.

Charles E. Jenkins was born on June 13, 1849, in Adams county, Ohio, the son of Josiah and Catherine (Middleton) Jenkins, farmers in various Ohio counties and in the state of Iowa. The father was born in Adams county in 1824 and died on September 10, 1914. The mother was born at Bainbridge, in Ross county, Ohio.

The late Josiah Jenkins was educated in the common schools of Adams county and, when a young man, engaged in farming in that county. He farmed there until 1859 and then lived two years in Bentonville. From Bentonville he removed to Fayette county, Ohio, where he lived from 1864 until 1880, in which latter year he moved to Logan county, where he remained about six years, at the end of which time he moved to the state of Iowa, where he spent the rest of his life. He and his wife were the parents of ten children, whose names, in the order of their birth, are as follow: Lowell G., Charles E., Anna, Josiah, Lydia, Electris E., Martha, William, Jefferson L. and Harry. Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Jenkins were members of the Methodist Episcopal church. He was a Democrat in politics.

The paternal grandparents of Charles E. Jenkins were Electris V. and Lydia Jenkins, the former of whom was born near Harper's Ferry, Virginia. He came from Virginia to Ohio in 1810, making the journey in an ox cart. His family located near Sinking Spring, in Adams county, where they lived until 1850, when they moved to Bentonville, and there he died. They reared a family of twelve children.

Charles E. Jenkins also was educated in the common schools of Adams county and began farming in that county. Later he farmed in Fayette county for about twenty-five years. In 1894 he came to Clinton county and located in Richmond township, on the W. T. McClintock farm of six hundred and fifty-three acres. Although Mr. Jenkins removed to Sabina in 1914, he continues to manage the farm and is engaged somewhat in stock raising in connection with the raising of cereals. He has a beautiful new home in Sabina and has the privilege of enjoying all the comforts of life.

In 1870 Mr. Jenkins was married to Elizabeth Snider, daughter of Alfred L. and Sarah (Kneddler) Snider, the former a native of Highland county, Ohio, and the latter a native of Fayette county, the daughter of George Kneddler. Alfred L. Snider came from Virginia to Fayette county in 1808. He was the son of William Snider, a native of Pennsylvania, a farmer and carpenter by occupation, who migrated to Highland county, this state, in pioneer times. Sometime before the Civil War he emigrated to Iowa, where he spent the remainder of his life. George Kneddler was the son of Peter Kneddler, a soldier in the patriot army during the Revolutionary War.

To Charles E. and Elizabeth (Snider) Jenkins eight children have been born, namely: Anna A., who died in her youth; Una, who also died young; Frederick L., who married Maud Persinger and has three children, Hazel L., Wayne and Elizabeth; Austa, who died at the age of twenty-one; Orval, who married Mary Baker; Crayton Earl, who married May Green; Dow, who married Florence Howard, and Ruth, who is unmarried.

Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins are members of the Methodist Protestant church. He is a Democrat and a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. No resident of Sabina is more highly respected by his fellow townsmen than he and he enjoys the confidence and esteem of all.

DANIEL O. KESTER.

Daniel O. Kester, a well-to-do farmer of Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, was born on October 19, 1870, within one mile of his present home. He is the son of John and Mary M. (Johnson) Kester, the former of whom was born in Clark township, September 24, 1839, and the latter of whom was born on January 8, 1847, in Highland county, Ohio. John Kester was the son of Daniel and Elizabeth Kester and was reared on a farm. He was educated in the Martinsville high school and, having learned the carpenter's trade, worked at it for many years with his father. Afterward, he was engaged in the live stock business and in threshing in Clinton and Highland counties. In December, 1877, he bought a Cooper steam traction engine, the first in Clinton county. His wife was the daughter of C. H. and Sisley Johnson, of Martinsville. They had five children, of whom three, Orland W., Daniel O. and Stanley, grew to maturity. The parents were members of the Friends church and Mr. Kester was a Republican in politics.

Daniel O. Kester was educated in the public schools of Clinton county and in the Martinsville high school. Subsequently, he was a student for some time in a business college at Delaware, Ohio, but has always followed farming in Clark township, where he owns eighty acres of land.

On August 19, 1897, Daniel O. Kester was married to Mary Fisher, the daughter of Eli and Rebecca Jane (McFadden) Fisher, the former of whom was born in Clinton county, Ohio, June 27, 1842, the son of Cephas and Jane (Leech) Fisher, and the latter born in Clinton county, November 28, 1841, the daughter of John and Elizabeth McFadden. Eli Fisher grew to manhood on a farm in Green township and, when twenty years of age, enlisted on August 15, 1862, in Company G, Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, serving until his honorable discharge, June 17, 1865. He was married to Rebecca Jane McFadden on February 1, 1866. They had two children, Charles, born on December 29, 1866, and Mary, December 25, 1871. Eli Fisher was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the encampment.

Of the remote ancestry of Mrs. Kester, her great-grandparents were James and Jane Fisher, natives of Pennsylvania, who immigrated to Tennessee soon after 1800 and about 1804 moved to Highland county, Ohio, settling near Monroe, where he and his wife lived until their death. Cephas Fisher was a young man when his father's family moved to Tennessee. He was twice married, the first time to Rachel Stanfield, who died on May 5, 1844, leaving eight children, among whom were Rebecca, who married Isaac Atkinson, of Story county, Iowa; Cephas, Jr., of Henry county, Iowa; and John. Mr. Fisher later married Mrs. Jane Atkinson, whose maiden name was Leech, and to them were born one child, Eli, the father of Mrs. Kester. Cephas Fisher, Sr., died on December 30, 1862, at the age of eighty-four. Mrs. Cephas Fisher was a member of the Friends church and the Fishers helped to establish a church at Fairview.

The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Kester were John and Elizabeth (Newcomb) McFadden, the former of whom was born in Mason county, Kentucky, September 23, 1808, the son of John and Sophia (Kelly) McFadden, natives of Ireland, who came to America about 1800 and settled at Marietta, Ohio. They later moved to Mason county, Kentucky. On a trip down the Mississippi river, John McFadden, Sr., was taken with yellow fever and died at Natchez, Mississippi. About 1811 the widow and her family moved to Brown county, Ohio, and in 1821 to Clinton county, locating near Centerville. She died in 1830. John McFadden, Jr., was married on May 1, 1834, to Elizabeth Newcomb, a native of Pennsylvania, born on October 26, 1810, the daughter of William and Anna Newcomb, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter a native of New Jersey. Ten children were born to this union, among whom were Jehu, Mary Ann, Harrison W., Rebecca J., William N., John C., Sophia, Thomas N. and Hannah E. Charles, another son, died of wounds received in the battle of Lookout Mountain, December 27, 1863. He was a member of Company B, Fortieth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. John McFadden, Jr., served as school director in Green township for thirty-one years and as township trustee for fourteen years. He was a worthy member of the Christian church and active for more than forty years.

Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Daniel O. Kester, namely: Warren, born on December 1, 1898; Donald, July 14, 1903; and Edith, March 9, 1905, all of whom are living at home.

Mr. Kester is a Republican. The Kester family are all members of the Friends church and active in its work.

LEMUEL A. JOHNSON.

Lemuel A. Johnson, a farmer of Clark township, was born January 31, 1866, the son of Jeptha Jefferson and Rebecca Jane (Drais) Johnson, the former of whom was a native of Clinton county, Ohio, and the latter of whom was a native of Highland county, Ohio.

Jeptha Johnson, who was a son of Anderson and Judith Ann (Vance) Johnson, was educated in the pioneer schools of Clinton county. He was a soldier in the Civil War, and at the close of the war returned to Clark township, Clinton county and now lives retired in Lynchburg. To Jeptha J. and Rebecca J. (Drais) Johnson were born four children, Lemuel, Florence, Angie Elzina and Jesse J.

The paternal grandparents were Anderson and Judith Ann (Vance) Johnson, the former of whom was born in September, 1816, and the latter of whom was born in 1828, in Lynchburg, Virginia. Judith Ann Vance came to Clinton county, Ohio, with her parents, Jacob and Lucy Vance, at the age of six years. Jacob Vance was a native of Wurttemberg, Germany. He was a blacksmith by trade, and worked at his trade in Clinton county after emigrating to this state. Anderson Johnson was a son of Ashley and Sarah (Walker) Johnson, the latter of whom lived to be one hundred and seven years old. Both were early settlers in Clark township and prosperous farmers of Clinton county. Anderson Johnson became a great apiarist in his section of the country, where he owned one hundred and twenty acres of land.

Mr. Johnson's maternal grandparents were J. B. Drais and wife, natives of Bainbridge, Ohio. J. B. Drais was a blacksmith by trade and a carpenter. He was also a veterinary surgeon in the early days. He was a man of most generous impulses, and although he was sole heir to his father's estate of two hundred and forty acres, divided it among his brothers and sisters. He died on the old farm in Highland county at the age of seventy-five years.

Lemuel A. Johnson received his education in the public schools of Clinton county, and has always engaged in farming. In 1910 he purchased the old home farm and has added to it until he now owns eighty-five acres.

Lemuel A. Johnson was united in marriage to Jennie Garner, a daughter of Silas and Julia (Starr) Garner. Mrs. Johnson was born in Clinton county, August 30, 1872, and is a cousin of Jesse Garner, represented elsewhere in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are the parents of one daughter, Pearl Lucile, still at home. Mrs. Johnson is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, while her daughter is affiliated with the Presbyterian church. Mr. Johnson is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons.

HUGH McCOY.

The gentleman whose sketch follows, is one of the successful, well-to-do farmers and stockmen of Union township, this county. His honest dealing and integrity have won for him the admiration and confidence of those with whom he has business transactions, and his host of good, substantial friends bear witness to the fact that he believes in the old maxim of "live and let live."

Hugh McCoy was born on May 23, 1850, on Cowan's creek, Union township, this county, a son of Robert and Sarah (Fife) McCoy. He attended the public schools in Union township, and later attended Wilmington College. As a small lad, he helped his father on the farm, being the eldest son. He remained with his father until he was married, when his father gave him fifty acres, and he bought fifty acres more on the "mud road" in Union township, where he lived until 1896, in which year he moved to a new house on his farm. He later bought two hundred and seven acres, making his land holdings in all, three hundred and seven acres. Mr. McCoy raises and sells, annually, several carloads of cattle, hogs and sheep. He is a Republican, and both he and his wife are members of the Friends church, in which they are both elders. He is a director in the Citizens' National Bank at Wilmington, and also serves as director in the Clinton County Mutual Insurance Company.

Robert McCoy, father of the subject of this sketch, was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, in 1819, and died on February 12, 1883. His wife, who was born also in County Tyrone, Ireland, in May, 1821, died on March 28, 1904. She and her cousin, James Doan, immigrated to Philadelphia about 1840, and it was there she met and married Mr. McCoy. He grew up on a farm in Ireland, and about 1839, immigrated alone to Philadelphia, where he joined his father's sister, who had married Mack Fife, who had prior to that time located in Philadelphia and operated a box factory. As a young man, Mr. McCoy was employed in his uncle's box factory for nine years, and while there, about 1848, he was married. About the year 1849, he emigrated to Ohio and rented a farm for a few years in Union township, Clinton county, and later on, bought one hundred acres in Union and Green townships, to which he subsequently added another farm on the west, and adjoining his home place, on which he lived until the time of his death, which occurred when he was sixty-four years of age. When he died, he owned over five hundred acres of land. He served as school director, and in politics, voted the Republican ticket. He and his wife belonged to the United Presbyterian church. Robert McCoy was a general farmer, and was thrifty and strong. He started with no money, but was wealthy at the time of his death. He and his wife were the parents of seven children, Hugh, Margaret J., David, Robert, William, Charles B., and James. Margaret became the wife of Isaac Wood, and is now dead. They lived on a farm in Union township; David lives at Wilmington, where he runs the "La Mar" theater; Robert M., lives at Wilmington, and is a retired farmer; William lives on a farm in Union township; Charles B. lives at Fayetteville, Arkansas, and is an electrician; James lives on a farm in Union township.

Hugh McCoy's paternal grandparents were Hugh and Margaret McCoy, who lived and died in Ireland, the wife dying when the children were small. They were both Presbyterians. The maternal grandparents were David and Nancy Fife, both born in County Tyrone, Ireland. They were farmers, and belonged to the Presbyterian church in Ireland, the former dying in Ireland, after which the widow joined her children in this county, where she spent her last days.

On October 31, 1877, Hugh McCoy was married to Margaret Ellen Oren, who was born in Clinton county, and by whom he has had five children, as follow: Oliver R., who lives on a farm in Green township, married Elizabeth Barrett and has two children, Richard Hugh and Margaret B.; Ethel, who is still at home; Leo J., who is cashier of a bank at Richwood, Ohio, married Elizabeth King and has two children, Elmore King and Gertrude Ellen; Mary Elsie, a teacher of Latin in Wilmington College, is a graduate of that college, who received her master's degree from Ohio State University and taught in the University of Kansas before taking up her work at Wilmington, and Arthur, unmarried, who is assisting in the operation of the home place.

ALTON L. SNOWDEN.

Clinton county is remarkable for the many old families which reside within its borders; remarkable for the number of worthy citizens whose ancestry is traceable directly back to the earliest colonial days. No class of people have had a greater influence in shaping the destiny of this county, in determining the status of its religious, moral and social life than the members of the Society of Friends, of whom Alton L. Snowden, a well-known resident of Wilmington, is a worthy representative. Both his paternal and maternal ancestors have been prominent Quakers in different parts of the country for centuries. Of the former it may be said that the family was well established in America by his great-grandfather, the proprietor of Snowden manor, near Baltimore. On the maternal side the family goes back to the coming of Samuel Littler, one of the immigrants who accompanied William Penn to America.

Alton L. Snowden was born in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, August 8, 1868, the son of Charles Edward and Rachel (Linton) Snowden, the former of whom, born in October, 1835, in Maryland, died in 1892, and the latter of whom, born in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, in 1850, died in August, 1912.

Mr. Snowden's paternal grandparents, Richard and Mary (West) Snowden, were natives of Anne Arundel county, Maryland, where representatives of the family had been established long before the time of Richard Snowden. He was an iron manufacturer and Snowden manor was a great estate near Baltimore, which Richard Snowden's father owned. His family were Hicksite Quakers. About 1836 Richard Snowden and his family came to Clinton county and first lived on Mr. Wall's farm, Chester township, but he finally purchased a farm in Chester township, and later removed to Union township, where he died. His family also were Quakers.

Of the maternal grandparents, it may be said that Rachel Linton was the daughter of Seth and Sarah Ann (Moore) Linton, orthodox Quakers, the former born on October 10, 1812, in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, and the latter, December 7, 1819, in Clinton county. Seth Linton was the son of Nathan and Rachel (Smith) Linton, the latter of whom, born on January 18, 1790, died on April 4, 1859. Rachel (Smith) Linton was the daughter of Seth and Elizabeth (Littler) Smith, the former of whom, born on May 19, 1761, died on April 1, 1837, and the latter, born on April 9, 1769, died on July 7, 1842. Elizabeth (Littler) Smith's father was Samuel Littler, who emigrated to America with William Penn. Seth Linton grew up in Clinton county, and was well versed in pioneer history. He was educated in the subscription schools of the county and in the school taught by his father in the milk-house on their farm. After finishing his education he assisted his father on the farm, and when still a young man purchased two hundred acres of land for five dollars an acre. This land he improved and afterwards sold for fifty dollars an acre.

Early in life Seth Linton began to familiarize himself with the nursery business and this business occupied a large share of his time. He owned two hundred and thirty-three acres of land, on which was located a nursery consisting of the best varieties of fruit, ornamental trees and shrubbery. He also owned an orange grove of ten acres in Florida. On September 21, 1836, Seth Linton was married to Sarah Ann Moore, at Lytle's Creek meeting. She was the daughter of Joshua and Nancy (Stratton) Moore, the former of whom, born on October 10, 1791, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, died on February 7, 1874, and the latter, born on November 16, 1797, died on December 19, 1881. Joshua and Nancy (Stratton) Moore were married at Springfield meeting and had twelve children, nine sons and three daughters.

By his marriage to Sarah Ann Moore, Seth Linton had six children, namely: Nathan M., who was born on March 18, 1838, is an attorney and a member of the Ohio Legislature; Nancy L., January 3, 1840, is the wife of Thomas McMillan, a farmer; Rachel, October 8, 1841, married C. E. Snowden, a farmer; Joshua, April 2, 1843, married Olive Hadley and had six children; Oliver, August 15, 1845, married Sarah Hiat, and Amanda, November 11, 1848, married Jacob Lewis, a farmer.

Mrs. Seth Linton was an ordained minister of the Society of Friends, the orthodox branch, and attended each yearly meeting held in the United States with the exception of one held in Kansas. She traveled many thousands of miles during her ministry, always paying her own expenses. She was well known throughout Clinton county and the state of Ohio, and was highly respected. Mr. Linton was very liberal with his children, and gave each a large sum of money when they attained their majority. He was strongly opposed to the use of tobacco and all intoxicating liquors and in politics was a Prohibitionist. He and his family were members of the Society of Friends, as had been their ancestors for two centuries.

The late Charles Edward Snowden was an infant when the family came to Clinton county. He grew up in Chester township, and subsequently was married. Two years after his marriage he bought one hundred and twenty acres of land in Union township, two and one-half miles from Wilmington, and lived there until his death. He owned a nice home, but spent a few winters in Florida for the benefit of Mrs. Snowden's health. In 1876 he planted an orange grove in Orange county, Florida, and owned this grove at the time of his death. He was a member of the board of trustees of Wilmington College, and president of the Clinton County Farmers Institute for several years. Early in life he had been identified with the Republican party, but later became a Prohibitionist. He and his wife were members of the Center meeting of the Quaker church, and attended services there regularly. He died on his farm. Charles Edward and Rachel (Linton) Snowden were the parents of four children, of whom Mary, the eldest died at the age of twenty-one in 1885; Alton L. was the second born; Seth lives on a farm in Union township; Sarah married Carl Lukens and they live in Wilmington.

Alton L. Snowden attended the district schools and later entered Wilmington College, where he was a student for some time. After leaving college he worked with his father on the farm for several years, and then traveled for the Globe Carriage Company at Cincinnati, Ohio, for two years. He came home on account of his father's failing health and purchased a small farm near his father's home, and lived with his father until the latter's death. Afterwards Mr. Snowden purchased the interest of the other heirs in the home farm. In October, 1913, he removed to Wilmington, where he is now living on West Main street. Until 1913 he was engaged in farming and since that time has been engaged in traveling for the Pittsburg Plate Glass Company.

On April 8, 1890, Alton L. Snowden was married to Cecelia Kight, who was born at Piedmont, Virginia, the daughter of Enoch and Sarah Kight, who located at Columbus, Ohio, when their children were small and there died. Enoch Kight was a contractor and he and his family were active members of the Third avenue Methodist Episcopal church of Columbus. To Mr. and Mrs. Snowden have been born six children, Sarah, Charles, Myrtle, Arthur, Mary and Thomas. Charles Edward Snowden married Ilo Carroll, and they live on Mr. Snowden's farm in Union township; Myrtle lives with her uncle, John A. Kight, of Columbus, and Arthur is a student in the high school.

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden are members of the Friends church and he is identified with the Republican party.

EVERT BERNARD.

Evert Bernard is a prosperous farmer of Wilson township, this county, who is manager of a farm of one thousand acres of fertile land in Clinton county belonging to C. A. Bosworth, of Cincinnati. He was born in Richland township, this county, November 12, 1878, and is the son of Thomas Bernard.

Reared on the farm and educated in the country schools, Evert Bernard was married to Eva De Long, who was born in Ross county, Ohio, the daughter of William and Eva (Richardson) De Long. William De Long was a well-educated man, and a teacher for some time in his early years. He was surveyor of Ross and Pike counties, Ohio, and owns eighty acres of land, on which he and his wife now live. After his marriage, Mr. Bernard located on the farm he now occupies. It is the farm upon which his father lived for a period of twenty-eight years.

To Evert and Eva (De Long) Bernard four children have been born, Ruth, Russell, Almedia and John. Mr. and Mrs. Bernard are members of the Methodist Protestant church, and are active in the work of the Sunday school, Mr. Bernard at present being superintendent of the Reesville Methodist Protestant Sunday school. He has also served on the school board, and is fraternally a member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

FREDERICK FERKEL.

Frederick Ferkel, farmer and dairyman of Marion township, this county, was born on February 10, 1857, in Germany, a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Frank) Ferkel, both of whom were also natives of Germany, the former born in 1825 and the latter in 1827. They located in Hamilton county, Ohio, in 1865, and came to Clinton county in 1890, and here Jacob Ferkel lived until his death in 1906. His wife had passed away six years previously. They were earnest and devoted members of the Lutheran church. Although a farmer by occupation, Jacob Ferkel, while living in Cincinnati, was engaged in the bakery and grocery business. He was a Republican in politics, but never took a very active part in political affairs.

Frederick Ferkel lived on a farm in his native land and received some of his early educational training in the schools of Germany. After coming to America in 1865, with his parents, who settled first in Cincinnati, he completed his education in the public schools of that city, and afterwards learned silver-and nickel-plating, with the J. R. Kinsley Company, now located on Sixth street, Cincinnati. Mr. Ferkel worked at this occupation from 1870 until he came to Clinton county. After coming here he settled at Wilmington and for a time worked with auger bits and harness snaps, doing all the plating for two years for the Irvin Auger Bit Company, and the National Safety Snap Company. In the meantime Mr. Ferkel removed to the farm where he now lives. He owns fifty-five acres of land and is engaged in general farming and dairying.

Frderick Ferkel is one of seven children born to his parents. The eldest child was Andrew. Jacob was drowned in the Ohio river in 1877, at the age of twenty-five years. Mary is the wife of Jacob Frey, of Clinton county. George is a resident of Clinton county, living near Hales Branch. Henry lives at Canon City, Colorado, and Lizzie is the wife of Edward Mohring, of Cincinnati.

Frederick Ferkel was married in 1879 o Elizabeth Bauer, who is a native of Saxony, Germany, the daughter of John and Margaret Bauer, who came to America from Germany in 1865, and settled in Cincinnati, where Mrs. Ferkel's parents both died, her father in 1886 and her mother in 1884. To this union, six children have been born, Mary M., Christina F., Alice Elizabeth, Charles F., Caroline and Viola M., all of whom are living, with the exception of Charles F., who died at the age of two years. Mr. Ferkel and family are all earnest and devoted members of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which they take an active and interested part. Fraternally, Mr. Ferkel is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and politically, he is an adherent of the Republican party.

MICHAEL TOOHEY.

Michael Toohey is an enterprising farmer of Jefferson township, this county, who was born on the farm where he now lives, November 1, 1867, the son of Hugh and Mariam (Halpim) Toohey, natives of Ireland and Cincinnati, Ohio, respectively.

The paternal grandparents died in Ireland. The paternal grandfather was a farmer by occupation and a soldier in the English army during the Revolution. The maternal grandparents, Nicholas and Sarah (McCarty) Halpim, were both natives of Virginia, who moved to Cincinnati in pioneer times, having been married in Virginia before emigrating to Ohio. The maternal grandfather, Nicholas Halpim, was a grocer, and subsequently he removed to Perry township, Brown county, Ohio, and opened a country store about seventy-five years ago. He owned a farm of two hundred acres, which his son managed. He and his wife remained in Perry township until their death. For many years he was its justice of the peace. His sons, William and Nicholas were soldiers in the Union army during the Civil War and were killed in the service. His son Daniel fought on the Confederate side and was also killed.

Hugh Toohey, father of Michael, was educated in Ireland, and, after receiving a good education, left his native land at the age of eighteen for Australia. He did not like Australia, however, and came to America, spending nine months in the voyage from Australia to America. He had been sent to Australia by the English government, and from Australia he and a friend worked their way to America and landed in New York City, proceeding thence directly to Cincinnati, Ohio, but Hugh Toohey soon settled in Clinton county, where he assisted in building the railroad from Hillsboro to Westboro. After that he became a farm hand, married and engaged in farming on his own responsibility. He at first rented land where Thomas Conner now lives, but afterwards removed to the Joel West farm. Finally, in the spring of 1867, he purchased the farm owned by Charles Dingy, a tract consisting of fifty acres, where his son Michael now lives. Afterwards he added to this tract forty acres of land, which he purchased from James Murphy, and then the Harvey Williams farm of sixty-four acres, making in all one hundred and fifty-four acres. When he was married, he had but one horse and all the furniture which he possessed could have been put in one wagon. He cleared most of the first fifty-acre tract and also the forty-acre tract, and erected the buildings which are now standing on the farm. Hugh and Mariam (Halpim) Toohey were the parents of twelve children.

Michael Toohey has always lived on the old farm in Clinton county, and now owns the entire tract of land which his father had and where he is engaged in general farming. Mr. Toohey was married on September 1, 1904, to Anna Bowman, who was born in Perry township, Brown county, Ohio, a daughter of Peter Bowman, and to this union two children have been born, Hubert and Urusla.

Mr. and Mrs. Toohey are members of the Catholic church and are liberal contributors to its support. They are highly respected citizens of Jefferson township.

NATHAN ROBERTS.

"To live in hearts we leave behind, is not to die," and surely such is true of Nathan Roberts, the subject of this sketch, for he is and will be remembered with deepest affection by all who knew him.

Nathan Roberts was born on March 12, 1824, and died on January 22, 1913. He was the son of Henry and Eleanor (Walker) Roberts, natives of Virginia, who left their home on the Potomac river and emigrated to Kentucky, where they lived for a few years, until, about the year 1820, they came to Clinton county and located where the cemetery now is at Antioch church, in Green township, and on that farm they spent the remainder of their days. They were the parents of the following children besides Nathan, the subject of this memoir: Edward, who died in his early manhood; Cynthia, who married Henry Noble, and who, with her husband is now deceased; Nancy, who married Henry Collins, and who, with her husband, is now deceased, and Elizabeth, who is also deceased.

Nathan Roberts attended the public schools at New Antioch and lived on the home farm until he was grown. He sold his share of his father's estate and his father-in-law, David Hester, gave his wife fifty acres of land in Union township. He then purchased fifty acres more and kept adding to his possessions until he finally owned two hundred and fifteen acres of very profitable land. In 1877 he built a fine brick residence on this place and since his death his daughter, Lida, has lived there. Nathan Roberts was noted for the fine sheep he raised and for his careful, systematic farming.

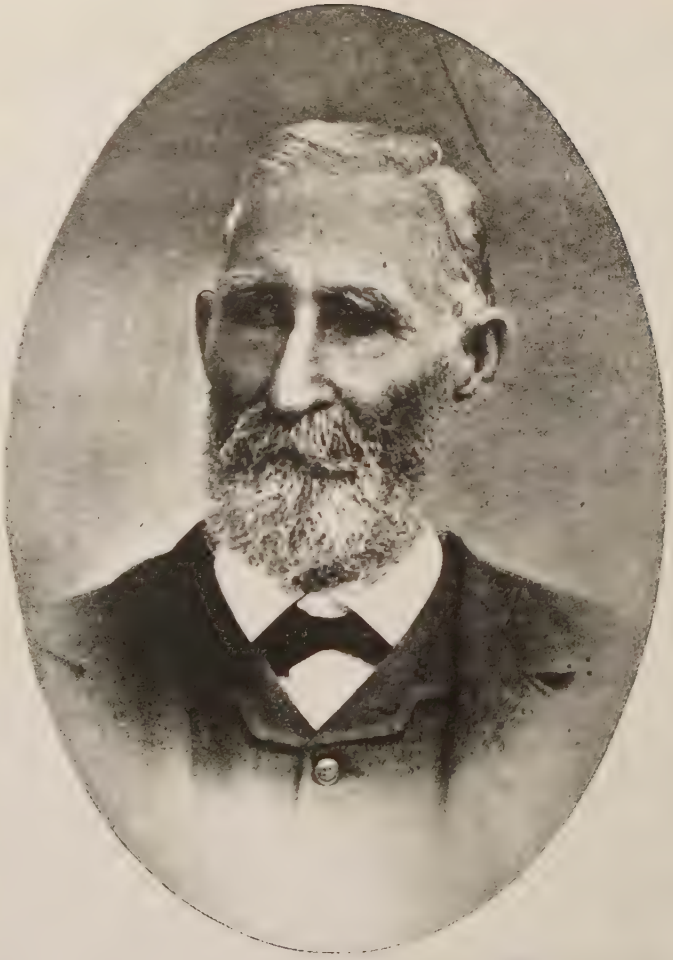
On March 7, 1850, Nathan Roberts was united in marriage to Elizabeth Catherine Hester, who was born in Union township, Clinton county, on July 9, 1830, and died on December 17, 1892. She was a daughter of David and Mary (Vandervort) Hester, among the earliest settlers in Clinton county, whose lives in this county were spent in Union township, on a farm now owned by R. M. McCoy. To this union were born one son and two daughters, namely: Rose, who married William Ludlum; William, who lives in Wilmington, and Lida, who resides on the old home place in Union township. Miss Lida Roberts is unmarried and stayed with her parents until their death. She attended the Wilmington schools and has an excellent education. She is a member of the Christian church of New Antioch and is very devoted to the memory of her parents.

Nathan Roberts had a hard struggle for existence, having been quite young at the time of the death of his father. Nevertheless he proved his worth and left a name that is revered.

JOHN THOMAS MYERS.

John Thomas Myers is a self-made farmer of Vernon township, this county. He was born on July 21, 1859, in Kentucky, the son of Abram and Elizabeth (Myers) Myers, both natives of Kentucky, who died when John Thomas, who was the youngest of four children, was only twelve years of age, at which time he was compelled to shift for himself. He had three sisters, Margaret, Martha and Susan.

Beginning at the age of twelve years, Mr. Myers worked for James Villers, of Clinton county, at seven dollars a month. After working for seven years, his wages had been raised to thirteen dollars a month. Later he worked for Charles Richardson and received sixteen dollars a month. Altogether he worked by the month twelve years, and his largest wage was twenty dollars a month. When he was about twenty-four years old, he rented the James Losh farm for one year and then rented the farm he now owns, comprising one hundred and thirteen acres of land. Mr. Myers did not purchase the farm for some sixteen years after he had first moved to it. In the meantime, he had lived on another farm for three years. He also owns thirty-one acres of land in Vernon township, in another tract, and has a total of one hundred and forty-two acres, upon which he has made many substantial improvements. He is an extensive raiser of hogs, and a general farmer and stockman.



MR. AND MRS. NATHAN ROBERTS.

RESIDENCE OF MISS LIDA ROBERTS.

On January 7, 1883, John T. Myers was married to Mary Elizabeth Hoover, a native of Grant county, Indiana, born on May 4, 1862, the daughter of Levi P. and Christina (Tharp) Hoover. Mrs. Myers' parents were both natives of Ohio, her father having been born in Clinton county in 1836 and her mother in Greene county, October 7, 1835. Levi P. Hoover died in 1862, and his widow died on July 16, 1915, at the age of eighty years. Mrs. Myers' maternal grandparents were John and Matilda (Gerard) Tharp, natives of Virginia and pioneers in Greene county, this state, where the latter died. The former died in Grant county, Indiana. Mrs. Myers was one of four children, born to her parents, the others being Charles Franklin, Rosella Ann and John William.

To John Thomas and Elizabeth (Hoover) Myers ten children have been born, one of whom, Lelia, the sixth born, is deceased, the living children being Clyde C., Edith Orilla, Creola May, Gladys Marie, Mary Christina, Hazel Rosella, Mabel Wilota, Charles Franklin and Harold John.

Mr. and Mrs. Myers are members of the Methodist church. Mr. Myers votes the Republican ticket, but he has never been a candidate for office and has never aspired to office.

ZIMRI F. HAINES.

As early as the seventeenth century the Haines family was well established in England, and in that time spelled their name Hayne. They came from Aynho-on-ye-Hill, Oxon, Northamptonshire, England. The armorial ensigns of the family date back to 607, Richard Haines was a member of the Society of Friends prior to 1676, and with his wife, Margaret, and four children, Richard, Jr., William, Thomas and Mary, sailed for America, April 27, 1682. During the voyage the father died and was buried at sea, and after his death, another son, Joseph, was born in mid-ocean. The mother and her five children landed at Burlington, New Jersey. Of the five children born to Richard Haines and wife, Thomas, who was born in 1675 in England, was married in 1692, to Elizabeth Austin, and died in 1753 in New Jersey. Of the children born to Thomas and Elizabeth (Austin) Haines, George was born about 1709 in New Jersey. He married Margaret Lamb, and they had one child, Isaac, who was born at Mount Holly, New Jersey, and who died on August 26, 1810. Isaac Haines and his wife, Elizabeth, were the parents of one son, Isaac, Jr., who was born on April 20, 1761, and who died on July 10, 1842, in Clinton county, Ohio. Isaac Haines, Jr., married Keziah Woolman, who was born on June 10, 1766, and who died on December 8, 1853, and to this union ten children were born, Isaac, Zimri, Elizabeth, Keziah, Rachel, Israel, Susannah, Granville, Abigail and Mordecai. Of these children, Zimri, the second in order of birth, was born on July 11, 1789, in New Jersey, and died on August 26, 1868, in Ohio. He married Elizabeth Compton, who was born on July 25, 1800, and who died on June 6, 1886. She was a native of North Carolina and came from that state to Ohio in a wagon with her parents when she was but four years of age, the family locating in the New Burlington neighborhood in this county. Zimri Haines emigrated from New Jersey to Pennsylvania, where he learned the trade of a cabinet-maker. Later he emigrated to Greene county, Ohio, where he lived the remainder of his life. He and his wife were the parents of twelve children, Samuel, Elwood, Eber, Clayton, Aseph, Eli, Elizabeth, Zimri, Sarah, Phoebe, Rebecca A. and Mary Ann.

Of the above children, Eli, the father of Zimri F. Haines, was born on August 12, 1827, in Caesar's Creek township, Greene county. He was reared on a farm and received his education in the district schools. On November 24, 1858, he was married by the Friends ceremony in Highland county, to Emily S. McPherson, who was born in Highland county on February 7, 1837, the daughter of Stephen and Mary McPherson. She was a distant relative of General McPherson, who was a prominent figure in the Union army during the Civil War. Eli Haines and wife were the parents of six children, Stephen A. and Mary Elizabeth (both deceased), Jennie M., Zirmi F., Eleanora and Jesse Curtis.

Zimri F. Haines, the subject of this sketch, was born on February 9, 1868, in Chester township, this county. He was educated in the public schools of Chester township, first attending the Buck Run school and later the school at New Burlington. When a young man, he began farming in Wayne township, Warren county, Ohio, and about 1898 moved to Chester township, Clinton county, where he is now living, and where he owns two hundred and thirty-five acres of land. He is engaged in general farming and stock raising.

On February 6, 1890, Zimri F. Haines was married to Ella C. Compton, the daughter of Amos and Anna (Mendenhall) Compton, farmers of Greene county, Ohio. Mrs. Haines is the youngest of a family of nine children born to her parents. Four of these children, Emma, Mary E., Recia A. and Walton, are deceased. Besides Mrs. Haines, the living children are Samuel T., William E., Martha and Lucy A.

Mr. and Mrs. Haines are the parents of three children, Everett E., born on January 24, 1893; Luther G., January 23, 1897, and Homer H., May 16, 1901.

Mr. and Mrs. Haines are members of the Friends church and Mr. Haines is a trustee and an elder in the church, having served in these capacities for several years. He is independent in politics.

DAVID H. JAY.

David H. Jay, a farmer of Clark township, this county, who owns a farm of eighty-four acres north of Martinsville, was born on August 18, 1844, in Chester township, this county, son of John and Lydia (Compton) Jay, and is the eleventh in a family of twelve children, the others being Rebecca, Elizabeth, Amos, Layton, Mary, Samuel, Elijah, Sarah, Lydia Ann, James and Martha.

John Jay, father of David H., was born in North Carolina in 1798 and died in Ohio in 1884. He came to Ohio with his parents in 1802 and was a farmer in Clinton county practically all his life. They were all members of the Friends church. Layton Jay, father of John Jay, was born in North Carolina in 1771, one of a family of six sons and five daughters born to William and Elizabeth Jay, who lived in North Carolina all their lives. William Jay, the father of William Jay, was born in 1720, probably in Maryland. Layton Jay married Elizabeth Mills, to which union were born ten children, five sons and five daughters. Layton Jay died in 1812.

David H. Jay was educated in the public schools of Chester township and in the Friends subscription schools, as well as in a select school taught in his father's house. He has been engaged in farming all his life and now overseers eighty-four acres of land, upon which he resides, and which is located north of Martinsville.

In 1872 David H. Jay was united in marriage to Hattie E. Hunt, daughter of John and Phebe F. (Walker) Hunt, and to this union two children have been born, Josie E. and Adena S. Mr. and Mrs. Jay were members of the board of control of Wilmington College for twenty years.

For many generations Mrs. Jay's family have been members of the Friends church. Jacob Hunt, the founder of her family in this country, came to America from London, England, in 1635, and settled at Concord, Massachusetts. His son, William, removed to Chester county, Pennsylvania, and William's four sons, Abner, Thomas, Eleazar and William, Jr., removed to Guilford county, North Carolina, about 1750, and named their meeting after New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Of these four sons, Thomas had a son, Abner Hunt, who came from Virginia, Highland county, Ohio, about 1813. Abner Hunt had a son, Thomas, who came to Clinton county in 1818. Thomas Hunt's son, John, was the father of Mrs. David H. Jay. John Hunt came to this county when a mere lad, with his father, and located at Martinsville, where he became an efficient cabinet-maker and undertaker, trades which he followed during his entire life. He was also postmaster at Martinsville for many years. He and his wife reared a family of seven children, namely: Martha Jane, Maria Elizabeth, Eliza Ann, Will W., Sue A., J. Milton and Hattie E.

CLAYTON C. HARTMAN.

A thrifty young farmer of Union township, this county, is Clayton C. Hartman, who was born in that township on October 3, 1875, the son of Nathan G. Hartman, who was born on January 3, 1846, in the same township, and who was married on April 3, 1872, to Elizabeth Conard, who was born on February 3, 1846, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, daughter of Enos and Grace (Stacy) Conard.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Hartman were James and Marie (Mendenhall) Hartman, the former of whom was born, January 17, 1795, in Harrison county, Virginia, and the latter, January 18, 1805, in North Carolina, daughter of Nathan and Nancy (Harlan) Mendenhall. James Hartman came to Ohio when a young man and located in Union township, Clinton county, following farming there the remainder of his life. He became the owner of seventy-five acres of land, which he reclaimed from its wilderness state. He served valiantly as a soldier in the War of 1812. James Hartman and wife were the parents of three children: Jonathan H., who married Mary C. Hartman; Hannah Ann, who became the wife of William Hartman, and Nathan G., the father of Clayton C. James Hartman and family were earnest and devoted members of the Friends church, and politically, he voted the Republican ticket.

Mr. Hartman's paternal great-grandfather, George Hartman, was a native of Germany, who came to America when a lad. The vessel on which he made the voyage to this country was lost at sea. When the ship was found the passengers, who had little money, were compelled to sell themselves, or give a number of years' labor, in order to complete the voyage. Mr. Hartman was compelled to bind himself to two years of labor. Later he became a farmer in Virginia and reared a family of five sons and four daughters, namely: Ganer, Joseph, George, John, James, Nancy, Abigail, Margaret and Elizabeth.

Nathan G. Hartman received the rudiments of an education in the common schools of Union township. He inherited twenty-five acres of land and added to this until he is now the owner of six hundred and forty acres of fine farming land. He also has a splendid home in Wilmington, where he lives, and other property in that city. In 1906 he retired from active farm life and moved to Wilmington. By his marriage to Elizabeth Conard, there were nine children, Charles E., Frank C., Clayton C., Blanche, Alvin, Anna Salome, George H., John Clyde and J. Arthur. The mother of these children died on September 27, 1900, and on November 11, 1903, Nathan G. Hartman married, secondly, Sarah E. Thompson, the daughter of James and Ann Maria Thompson. Politically, Mr. Hartman votes the Republican ticket, and fraternally, is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Clayton C. Hartman received his education in the common schools of Union township, and was also a student in Wilmington College for three years. After leaving college he drove a huckster wagon for a few months, and for the next three years sold books through the central part of Indiana. In 1900 he returned to the farm in Union township, living on his father's farm until 1905. In that year he moved to his father-in-law's farm in Greene township, where he lived for one year. In 1906 he purchased a farm in Wayne township of ninety acres, and four years later bought forty acres more. He makes a specialty of feeding and selling hogs, and sells on an average of five hundred head annually. He does his own shipping to Eastern markets. He buys about two-thirds of the feed required. By a certain treatment he keeps his hogs immune from cholera. He ships some live stock on commission for his neighbors. In 1914 he built a commodious house, which is one of the most conveniently arranged and thoroughly equipped country homes in Clinton county. There are electric lights and running water in the house, and all other modern conveniences. All the equipment is operated by an engine in the basement so shut away that the labor of the machinery is practically silenced. The arrangements on the farm for watering and feeding the stock are equally complete.

In 1904 Mr. Hartman was married to Martha Fisher, the daughter of J. W. and Etta (Armstrong) Fisher, and to this union have been born three children, Beatrice C., Elizabeth R. and Walter F.

Mrs. Hartman is a member of the Christian church of New Antioch, in which she takes an active interest. Mr. Hartman is a Republican in politics, while fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

PROF. ABEL C. BRIGGS.

The life of the scholar or professional man seldom presents any striking incidents which seize upon public feeling and attract public attention. When a man has so impressed his individuality upon his fellow men, however, as to gain their confidence and through that confidence to serve them efficiently in many capacities, he becomes a conspicious figure in the life of the community. Prof. Abel C. Briggs, instructor in mathematics at Wilmington College since 1908, is a well-informed and symmetrically developed man, who has not permitted his interests in education to prevent his development along other lines. He has kept abreast of the times, not only in educational methods and affairs, but in the affairs of the business world about him.

Abel C. Briggs, a native of Clinton county, was born near Wilmington, but his family later moved to Washington township, where they lived on a farm. His paternal grandfather was Abel Briggs, a native of New Jersey, who came to Ohio about 1829. His wife, the paternal grandmother of Abel C., had died before that date. His maternal grandparents, Enos and Christina (Crouse) Clevenger, were natives of Virginia, and immigrated to Ohio in 1825. Professor Briggs' father was Samuel Briggs, a native of New Jersey, who was brought to Ohio by his parents at the age of nine years. The mother, Catherine Clevenger, was a native of Clinton county. They were married in 1849 and had five children, four sons and one daughter. Doctor Briggs and Prof. Abel C. are the only members of the family now living. The father died in 1871 and the mother in 1910.

Abel C. Briggs attended the district schools of Clinton county and later the village school at Martinsville. He was always fond of study and preferred mathematics to any other work. When a very young man he engaged in teaching, for which he had a natural aptitude. He received his first certificate and taught his first school at the age of sixteen. His success as a teacher was attained by making himself master of every branch of learning which he attempted to teach, but later he turned his attention to surveying and engineering and in 1880 entered the University of Cincinnati to study for the degree of Civil Engineer. His mathematical attainments were sufficient to entitle him to the degree of Civil Engineer when he left the university but it was necessary to finish those supplementary branches, first, which he abandoned to accept the position with the Champion Bridge Company. At the university he had the good fortune to be under the tuition of the eminent Professor Eddy, since of the University of Minnesota. During this association a strong attachment grew between them, which continued in after years. During his summer vacation in 1883 he was employed in the office of the Cincinnati Southern railroad, then under construction; engineering department under Bouscaren as chief engineer. He left there, however, in 1884 to accept a position as assistant engineer with the Champion Bridge Company, of Wilmington. The next year he was appointed chief engineer and the year after that became a stockholder in the company and was elected secretary of the corporation. He still holds both positions and his connection with the firm has had no small part in its recent growth and development. Professor Briggs has always been interested in educational work and especially the educational progress of Clinton county. During the past seven years he has been an instructor in mathematics in Wilmington College. The department of mathematics of this institution is rising to rank with any in the state under his able tuition.

Abel C. Briggs was married in 1894 to Ethel Cast, the daughter of Simeon S. and Mary (Villars) Cast and a native of Clinton county, born and reared in Washington township. Three children have been born to this union; Mary Estelle, Sara Lucille and Ronald Cast.

The Briggs family are all members of the Friends church of Wilmington and Professor Briggs is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons. He is a worthy citizen; one who has performed well all of the duties of life, both public and private. The secret of this success in his life work was thoroughness and a conscientious devotion to duty.

PATRICK MULVIHILL.

The United States is the most cosmopolitan nation of the earth. Her citizens are drawn from every country and every clime, and a residence of a few years in this country so imbues her alien people with the American spirit that they become among our best citizens. No nation has furnished better or more substantial citizens to this country than has the fair island of Ireland. From the Emerald Isle have come many families which have won honored places in the country. Among the many families of Irish descent who have come to the great Buckeye state there is none more deserving than the Mulvihill family of Clinton county, which family now consists of two brothers and two sisters, sons and daughters of Patrick and Bridget (Welch) Mulvihill, who came here from Ireland.

Patrick Mulvihill was born in Ireland, the son of Jerry Mulvihill, also a native of that island, who never came to America. He was a farmer and a prominent member of the Catholic church. His wife was a Miss Shone before her marriage and they had nine children, Patrick, John, Edward, Michael, Jerry, Margaret, Catherine, Johanna and Mary. Of these children, Patrick, the eldest, received a meager education in the schools of his native land. He married Bridget Welch, who was also a native of the same island, and they afterwards came to America, proceeding to Ohio, locating in Highland county, near Leesburg. They came to this country about 1855 and, after having lived in Highland county until 1867, located in Clinton county, where they rented a farm. During the remainder of Patrick Mulvihill's life, he rented land in Clinton county. He and his wife were members of the Catholic church at Washington C. H., and he voted the Democratic ticket. He died on November 11, 1880, at the age of forty-six years, his widow surviving until August 9, 1907. They were the parents of four children, John, born on February 18, 1856; Mary, March 10, 1861; Michael, April 9, 1865, and Hannah, July 18, 1867.

Since the death of the parents, these four children have been living together and farming in Clinton county. Until 1890 they rented land, but now own two hundred and twenty-one acres in Richland township, about three miles out of Sabina. In 1895 they built a large barn and have since improved the farm in many ways, until it is one of the best farms in the community and they are regarded as among the best farmers. All of the members of the family are identified with the Catholic church at Washington C. H., and the two brothers, John and Michael, vote the Democratic ticket. The Mulvihills are all well known throughout Richland township and are all highly respected.

ELMER THOMAS McPHERSON.

Elmer Thomas McPherson, a native of Liberty township, this county, is a well-known mechanic and inventor connected with the Irwin Auger Bit Company, director in the Union Loan and Savings Company, and vice-president and founder of the Wilmington Automobile Company. He has lived in Clinton county all his life, with the exception of a few years.

Born on July 28, 1876, Elmer Thomas McPherson is the son of Henry C. and Anna (Hunnicutt) McPherson, the former of whom, born near Highland, in Highland county, Ohio, in September, 1845, died in August, 1910, and the latter, born near Port William, Clinton county, in 1852, died in May, 1905.

Mr. McPherson's paternal grandparents were Benjamin and Rachel (Starns) McPherson, both born near Leesburg, in Highland county, who spent all their days in that county. Benjamin McPherson was a farmer by occupation and his family were members of the Quaker church. Mr. McPherson's maternal grandparents were Thomas and Susanna (Bailey) Hunnicutt, natives of Virginia, who came to Clinton county when very young people. Thomas Hunnicutt was a farmer in Liberty township, where he owned about five hundred acres of land. The family were all members of the Friends church.

The late Henry C. McPherson, who grew up on his father's farm in Highland county, was a natural mechanic. Emigrating to Clinton county he was married in this county, and owned one hundred acres of land on the Clinton and Greene county line, in Liberty township. He lived upon this farm until 1889, when he moved to Lancaster, Ohio. In 1891 he moved to Harriman, Tennessee, and in 1893 returned to this county, locating at Wilmington, where he worked as an engineer for the Irwin Auger Bit Company until his death. He was a Republican and the family were members of the Friends church.

Of the eight children born to Henry C. and Anna (Hunnicutt) McPherson, two, Fred, the third born, and Maud, are deceased. The former died in May, 1913, and the latter, who was the fifth born, died at the age of eighteen years. The living children include Elmer Thomas, who is the eldest of the family and the subject of this biographical sketch; Olive, who married Alonzo Curl, a resident of Wilmington; George B., who married Nina Van Tress, lives in Wilmington and who is an auger-bit maker; Vada, who is a teacher of music; Lula, who married Howard Collins, a toolmaker, of Detroit, and Ralph, who married Hazel Doan, of Wilmington, and who is an auger-bit maker in Wilmington.

Elmer Thomas McPherson received his education in the public schools at Bowersville, Orchard Grove, and Lancaster, Ohio. Mr. McPherson is a natural mechanic. He began his mechanical career working for the Harriman Tack Company, then went to the Bailey Bit Company, at Harriman. From 1893 to 1898 he was engaged with the Irwin Auger Bit Company, at Wilmington, as trip-hammer man, and afterward, from 1898 to 1901, was engaged with the Ohio Tool Company, at Columbus. In 1901 he returned to Wilmington and since that time has been foreman of the forge and tool department and power plant of the Irwin Auger Bit Company. He invented a machine for making dies, which is now used by his employers. He has also invented a straightening machine, which is being kept for the use of the Irwin Auger Bit Company. In addition to these inventions he has also invented several small parts of machines. He takes a great deal of interest in this work, and is an invaluable employee to his company, which is the largest enterprise in the city of Wilmington.

On January 1, 1901, Elmer T. McPherson was married to Georgiana Palmer, who was born in Wilmington, Ohio, the daughter of Jonathan and Melinda (Darbyshire) Palmer. Jonathan Palmer died in April, 1903, at the age of seventy-five, and his widow is still living, seventy-four years old. She was born and reared in Wilmington, the daughter of Samuel and Mary Ann (McGruder) Darbyshire, early settlers, who came to this county from Pennsylvania. The late Jonathan Palmer was a carpenter and served as a member of Company D, Ninety-seventh Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, throughout the Civil War. His widow is a member of the Seventh-Day Adventist church. Jonathan Palmer was a contractor and builder and assisted in the erection of the school house at Wilmington. Mr. and Mrs. McPherson have two children, Mildred, born on June 14, 1902, and Edith Aileen, November 20, 1905.

In 1905 Elmer T. McPherson purchased a home at the corner of Mulberry and Burdsall streets in Wilmington, where he and the family still live. Politically, he is identified with the Republican party and was elected as city councilman for the term of 1916-17. The McPherson family are all members of the Friends church except the wife of Elmer Thomas,. who is a member of the Seventh Day Adventist church, and takes a prominent part in the work of this church. They are highly respected citizens, industrious, broad-minded and liberal and are popular in their wide circle of acquaintances.

FRANK BRANDENBURG.

Frank Brandenburg is a well-to-do farmer of Clinton county. He was born in Warren county, this state, north of Lebanon, February 16, 1854, the son of Samuel and Susan (Kinney) Brandenburg, both natives of Warren county, born south of Lebanon.

The paternal grandfather of Frank Brandenburg was Jacob Brandenburg, an early settler in Warren county and very probably a native of Maryland. He was of German descent and a farmer by occupation. The maternal grandfather of Mr. Brandenburg was Daniel Kinney, one of the early settlers of Warren county and probably a native of Virginia.

Of Samuel Brandenburg, the father of Frank, it may be said that he was left an orphan when a mere lad, and that, having been deprived of all educational opportunities, his education was most meager. His wife's mother having died when she was a girl, she also was reared by strangers. They were farmers practically all of their lives, he having come to Clinton county about 1861. His death occurred at his home near Wilmington. A brother of Samuel Brandenburg, Silas by name, was a soldier in the Union army during the Civil War and survived the war. The family were members of the Christian church.

Frank Brandenburg was educated in the schools of Warren, Clinton and Clermont counties. In 1880 he purchased seventeen acres of land near Westboro and moved to that farm from Warren county, where he lived until 1888, when he purchased fifty-five and three-quarters acres, where he now lives, to which he has added until he now has sixty-seven acres. At one time he owned the adjoining farm of one hundred and four acres which is now owned by Allie Goodwin. Mr. Brandenburg's farm was entirely wanting in improvements when he moved to it, but he has erected good buildings, drained the swamps and cleared the land of the thickets and woods. He is engaged specially in the dairy business and keeps a large number of Jersey cattle. He was at one time a stockholder in the creamery at Midland.

On October 4, 1874, Frank Brandenburg was married to Mary Wilson, who was born at Camden, New Jersey, daughter of Eli and Rachel (Atkinson) Wilson, both natives of New Jersey. Her paternal grandparents were James and Louisa Wilson, who lived and died in New Jersey. Her grandfather was employed on a fishing boat and was drowned while at work. Her maternal grandparents were Joseph and Mary (Powell) Atkinson, natives of New Jersey, who immigrated to Warren county in 1855. There they lived until a short time before their deaths, when they moved to Darke county, Ohio. Her maternal grandfather was a woodsman and made clearing his business. Mrs. Brandenburg's father was a gardener and shoemaker. He came West with his father-in-law and located in Warren county and lived there about thirty years, later coming to Clinton county. Subsequently, he remarried and lived in Clinton county until his death. He was a soldier in Company B, Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served over three years during the Civil War.

Of the Brandenburg family it may be said that the first representatives of the family to come to America were Absalom Brandenburg and his brother, who had resided in Berlin, where they held an enormous estate, which was confiscated by the government for ninety-nine years because the government was displeased with their acts as citizens of the empire.

To Mr. and Mrs. Brandenburg six children have been born, of whom three, George, Myrtle and Walter, are deceased. The living children are Raymond and Elmer, both of whom are at home, and Flora, who married Charles Johnson, a farmer of Warren county. Myrtle died after her marriage to Simeon Loyd.

Frank Brandenburg, who was reared a Democrat, is now a Republican and is serving his sixth year as township trustee. Formerly, he was a member of the school board. Mr. Brandenburg is well known and popular in the locality in which he has lived so long.

STANLEY T. McKENZIE.

Stanley T. McKenzie is a well-to-do farmer of Green township, this county, who was born on August 14, 1861, in the state of Iowa, the son of William and Elizabeth (Morton) McKenzie, both of whom were born in Clinton county, Ohio, the former on September 18, 1834, and the latter, July 15, 1838. The father died on January 12, 1867.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. McKenzie were William and Isabel (Kimball) McKenzie, early settlers in Clinton county. The maternal grandparents were also early pioneers of Clinton county. After his marriage William McKenzie, the father of Stanley T., removed to Knoxville, Marion county, Iowa, and later to Nebraska, and died in the latter state, at Nebraska City, in 1867, leaving four children, Wilda, Perry A., Stanley T. and Geneva. An infant child had died previously. Later his widow married Eli Carson, and to this latter union were born three children, Stella, Bert and Carey. Mr. McKenzie's stepfather and mother lived at Martinsville, this county.

Stanley T. McKenzie was reared on the farm and was educated in the schools at New Antioch, Green township. He has always been engaged in farming, and was for four years engaged in that vocation in Kansas. Later he went to California for a year and worked there by the month. At one time he owned a farm in Union and Liberty townships, Clinton county, but he disposed of this farm, removing to the farm now owned by himself and his son, Julian Stephen, in Green township, two miles from New Vienna. Since 1915 Mr. McKenzie and his son have owned one hundred and eighty-four acres of land in Green township.

On December 25, 1887, Stanley T. McKenzie was married to Maggie Leininger, who was born in Germany, January 2, 1864, daughter of John and Kate (Ruch) Leininger, both natives of Germany. Mrs. McKenzie's mother died in 1872, and after her death her husband came to America, proceeding to Ohio, first locating in Highland county and later settling at Burtonville, this county, where he died in December, 1889, at the age of fifty-five years. He was a blacksmith by trade, and he and his wife were the parents of eight children, John, Margaret E., Sarah, Kate, Maggie, Jacob, Michael and an infant (twins), the latter of whom is deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Stanley T. McKenzie two children have been born, Julian Stephen, born at Ottawa, Kansas, on Deember 4, 1889, and Ethel Lucile, May 11, 1897. Julian Stephen McKenzie was educated in the schools of Burtonville. He married Jessie Record, of Wilmington, and has one son, Willard, born on May 11, 1912. Ethel Lucile McKenzie was graduated from the Mt. Pleasant high school with the class of 1915, the first class to graduate from that school, and is now a teacher in the Mt. Pleasant school. Fraternally, Stanley T. McKenzie is a member of the Knights of the Maccabees at Wilmington, while politically, he is a stanch adherent of the Democratic party.

STANLEY T. McKENZIE AND FAMILY

LEO F. KING.

Leo F. King is a successful liveryman, of Blanchester, Clark township, this county. He was born at Farmer's Station, Clinton county, March 28, 1877, the son of G. S. and Nettie A. (West) King, both natives of this county, the former born on April 27, 1848, in Clark township, the son of John R. and Catherine B. (West) King, the former born in 1816, in Virginia, and the latter in Clinton county. John R. King was the son of William and Nancy King, natives of Virginia and early settlers in Clark township. Catherine B. West was the daughter of Henry and Nancy (Terrell) West, pioneers of Clark township and members of old Virginia families.

John R. King owned one hundred and thirty acres of land, which he divided among his children before his death. He died at the home of his son, George S., the father of Leo F. John R. and Catherine B. King had six children, Nancy A., William H., Wyatt C., George S., E. Sanford and Sarah. William H. and Wyatt C. served as soldiers in the Union army during the Civil War.

On December 25, 1871, George S. King was married to Nettie A. West, the daughter of George and Samantha (McMaine) West, the former of whom was born in Clinton county, April 10, 1815, and the latter in Highland county. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. King were Henry and Nancy (Terrell) West. Her maternal grandparents were Enoch and Samantha McMaine, who were born near Hillsboro, but who later moved to Knox county, Illinois, and there died.

Leo F. King was educated in the public schools at Farmers Station and engaged in farming for some time in partnership with his father. He was also in partnership with his father in the grocery business at Farmers Station for three years. In June, 1907, he moved to Blanchester and there engaged in the livery business.

On December 25, 1899, Leo F. King was married to Alta Reeves, the daughter of E. V. Reeves, of Highland county, Ohio, and to this union has been born one son, Horace.

Fraternally, Mr. King is a member of the Junior Order of United Workmen and of the Knights of Pythias. He is a well-known citizen of Clark township and is highly respected by the people of that township.

EMMETT B. WHITACRE.

Emmett B. Whitacre is the proprietor of a hundred-and-forty-acre farm near Pansy, in Marion county, this county. He was born on the old homestead in Marion township, Clinton county, January 17, 1869, the only son of Lewis and Mary (Hall) Whitacre, the former of whom was born on February 5, 1840, in Warren county, this state, and the latter, December 12, 1844, in Marion township, this county.

Mr. Whitacre's paternal grandparents were George and Martha (Baldwin) Whitacre, pioneers of Warren county, who came to this county about 1855. Both are now deceased. Mr. Whitacre's maternal grandparents were James and Pricella (Statler) Hall, the former born in Muskingum county, this state, and the latter in Clinton county. Pricella Statler was the daughter of Samuel Statler, a native of Virginia and a pioneer settler in Clinton county, who died in Vernon township. The maternal grandparents spent their last days in Jefferson township, this county.

Lewis Whitacre was a farmer by occupation and for many years was prominent in the local politics of Jefferson township. He was especially prominent in the councils of the Republican party, and served many years as justice of the peace. He also served as trustee for several terms. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Lewis Whitacre died July 1, 1911, and his wife in 1885. He died in Columbus, where he had lived for two years. His wife died at Midland, in Jefferson township, this county.

Emmett B. Whitacre was reared on the farm and educated in the public schools at Midland and Pansy. As soon as he was old enough to take up a trade, he learned boiler-making and followed that trade for six years. Subsequently, he took up farming, and for many years has lived at Pansy, in Marion township, where he owns a farm of one hundred and forty acres.

In 1895 Mr. Whitacre was married to Alice Heintz, of Columbus, Ohio, to which union there were born three daughters, Naomi Mary, Lucile Alice and Clara Viola. Mrs. Alice (Heintz) Whitacre died in 1909, and three years later Mr. Whitacre married, secondly, Mary Tornof, of Columbus, Ohio, (now deceased), to which union two children were born, Lewis Edward and Charles Benjamin.

Like his father before him, Mr. Whitacre is prominent in the local councils of the Republican party and is a justice of the peace in Marion township, a position which his father held with credit for so many years. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and, fraternally, is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

JAMES F. GASKINS.

It is a well-known fact that public opinion practically rules this country. It was the insistent cry of the public which has effected the wonderful transformation in our political institutions during the past few decades. Public opinion, however, would be useless had it not the opportunity to find expression and there is no way in which public opinion can find its full usefulness except through newspapers. For this reason it is not too much to say that the newspapers of our country really are the rulers; that they have more power in the shaping of the destinies of our nation than Congress itself. It is interesting to note, with the recurrence of large and vital questions how one newspaper will quote the editorial opinion of others in different parts of the country and how this will be accepted as a statement of the opinion of the country as a whole. No more striking example of this fact ever was presented than was noted in the prominence given by the large newspapers of the country to the editorial opinion of other newspapers with regard to the difference between the United States and Germany over the sinking of the "Lusitania" in the summer of 1915. There are few towns in the state of Ohio which do not have a newspaper publication of some kind. Among the leading newspapers of Clinton county is the Sabina News-Record, edited and published by James F. Gaskins.

James F. Gaskins was born at Bentonville, in Adams county, Ohio, on April 28, 1865, the son of Aaron J. Gaskins, M. D., who was born on November 9, 1843, in Clermont county, Ohio, and who in 1864 married Celia A. Johnson, who was born on March 28, 1844, the daughter of the Rev. P. F. Johnson, a minister in the Methodist Protestant church. Mr. Gaskins' paternal grandfather was Dr. John Gaskins, of old Virginia stock, who was twice married, each time to a Miss Woods. The grandfather was a physician of Bentonville, Adams county, Ohio, but during the latter part of his life was engaged in farming, at one time owning about five hundred acres of land near Bentonville. He had five children, Aaron and Sylvester, by his first marriage, and H. A., Fisher and John, by the second wife, who reared the family.

Aaron J. Gaskins, M. D., received his elementary education in the common schools of Adams and Clermont counties, Ohio, and in 1867 was graduated from the Eclectic Medical School of Cincinnati. Prior to this he had served as a soldier in the Union army during the Civil War in the One Hundred and Eighty-second Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, having enlisted in 1864 and having been discharged in 1865. He began the practice of medicine at Milledgeville, Fayette county, and after practicing one year there, moved to Sabina, this county, in December, 1868, and practiced there until 1894, when he sold out his practice to Dr. O. A. West, after which he engaged in the furniture business at Sabina until his death, June 30, 1914. At the time of his death he owned a half interest in the Clinton Manufacturing Company. To Dr. Aaron J. and Celia A. (Johnson) Gaskins three children were born, namely: James F., the subject of this sketch; Lillie M., who married M. E. McGuire, of Sabina, and Essie E., who married Henry L. Lewellen, of Sabina. The family were members of the Friends church and Doctor Gaskins was a Democrat in politics.

James F. Gaskins was educated in the common schools of Sabina and in the Sabina high school, having been the first graduate of the latter institution, finishing the course in 1883. On April 15, 1885, two years later, he began his newspaper experience with a half interest in the Sabina News. Four years later, in December, 1889, he sold his interest in the Sabina News and a month later started the Sabina Record. In 1893 Mr. Gaskins purchased the older paper and consolidated it with the Record, since which time the paper has been known as the Sabina News-Record. Mr. Gaskins now has the latest equipment and machinery for publishing his newspaper and long has been recognized as a distinct force in newspaper circles hereabout.

In July, 1886, James F. Gaskins was married to Almeda Bryant, daughter of W. D. and Sarah J. (Allen) Bryant, who died on October 4, 1910, leaving two children: Ralph A., who married Donna Pumphrey, is engaged in business with his father, and has three children, Rebecca Emily, Esther Louise and Donna L.; Louise, the second born, married J. D. Adams, a stenographer, of Columbus, Ohio.

James F. Gaskins is a Republican in politics. He is a member of the Friends church, and for the past twenty-five years has been superintendent of the Bible school of that church. For fifteen years he has been the financial clerk of the meeting. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and has served as secretary of his home lodge for fifteen or twenty years. He has also been clerk of the Modern Woodmen of America for some fifteen years.

James F. Gaskins is one of the leading and most highly respected citizens of Sabina, one who takes a great interest in church affairs and in public movements. His newspaper well reflects the opinion of the large public among whom it circulates and is a welcome visitor in many homes thereabout.

LUCIUS D. SHANK.

A man's reputation among his neighbors in the community in which he has spent the greater part of his life is a pretty certain index of his worth. We either influence, or are influenced by others, according to our temperament and its reaction upon our environment, and when successful in life's battle, if that success has been won honorably, a study of the individual and the causes which have entered into his success, not only becomes profitable, but becomes likewise an inspiration to similar endeavor on the part of others. In this connection, it is highly appropriate that the life of Lucius D. Shank, whose career in this county has given him prestige as a farmer and stock-raiser, be given consideration here. Mr. Shank, who was born in Marion township, Clinton county, on March 12, 1854, is the son of James H. and Margaret (Crossen) Shank, the former a native of the same township, born on April 20, 1829.

James H. Shank was a son of Henry Shank, mentioned elsewhere in this publication. The maternal grandparents, George and Charlotte (Morrison) Crossen, braved the dangers of pioneer life when they came to this county, in which they spent the remainder of their days. James H. Shank was a farmer, but when the fires of rebellion were raging in the South he was among the first to offer up his life, if need be, to save the Union. And fate decreed that this should be his sacrifice, for, having been taken prisoner by the enemy, he died of starvation in a Confederate prison pen in February, 1865. He was a Republican and a member of the Presbyterian church at Pleasant Grove. He and his wife were the parents of five children, Lucius D., George Henry, Samuel A., Martin Elsworth (who died in infancy), and Florence May. The mother of these children died on March 21, 1906.

Mr. Shank was reared a farmer's boy, receiving his education in the country schools near his home. By hard work and personal sacrifice, he has acquired one hundred and ninety-two acres of land, being ably assisted by the co-operation of his devoted wife. It was on the 8th of February, 1877, that he married Mary Elizabeth Urton, who was born in this county on January 24, 1854, the daughter of Daniel and Nancy Ann (Brown) Urton, pioneers of this county. To this union five children have beeen born, namely: Otis J., Elva May, Veda Maud (deceased), Clarence D., and an infant son, who died.

Mr. Shank is a Republican and served his community well as a member of the school board for four years. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Grange.

While Mr. Shank's life has been comparatively free from stirring adventure, having been spent in the quiet devotion to duty, it has been a life well spent, and its influence has been decidedly for good.

LEWIS C. WILSON.

Among the successful young farmers of Richland township, this county, Lewis C. Wilson, who owns a highly productive farm of one hundred and five acres in that township, should be mentioned.

Lewis C. Wilson was born on August 31, 1880, in the township where he still lives, a son of Martin A. and Mary (Custis) Wilson, the former of whom was born in Martinsburg, Ohio, and the latter of whom was the daughter of Littleton and Amelia Ann (Arnold) Custis. The paternal grandfather of Mr. Wilson, James Wilson, who was born in Fayette county, Ohio, and who afterward became a well-known farmer in Clinton county, married Margaret Plymire, and they were the parents of the following children: Susannah, Catherine, Martin A., James, Ellen, Samuel, Lovina, Lewis and Julia. The great-grandfather, Joshua Wilson, a native of Ohio, was a soldier in the War of 1812.

Martin A. Wilson received some education in the common schools of Clinton county, but had few opportunities for schooling and most of his education was obtained by home study. When a young man he began farming in Clinton county and was engaged in this occupation practically all of his life. He owned one hundred and five acres of land in Richland township. Martin A. and Mary (Custis) Wilson were the parents of three children, of whom Lewis C. was the second in order of birth. The eldest child, Zella, became the wife of Elmer Anderson, and the youngest, Frank E., married Maud Chancelor. The late Martin A. Wilson, a Republican in politics, was a director in the county infirmary at the time of his death. He was a member of the Methodist church and belonged to the Masonic fraternity.

Lewis C. Wilson also received his education in the public schools of Richland township, principally at Sabina. He began life on his own account on a farm in Richland township. In 1908 he removed to Grand Rapids, Michigan, where for two years he was engaged in the ice business. In 1910 he returned to the farm in Clinton county, and has since been continuously engaged in farming. He owns a farm of one hundred and five acres, where he is carrying on a general system of farming and stock raising.

In 1902, at the age of twenty-two years, Lewis C. Wilson was married to Leta Pavey, daughter of G. A. and Elizabeth (Burris) Pavey, and to this union three children have been born, of whom one, Dorothy, the second born, died at the age of five years. The first born is Ralph A. and the youngest is Fred M.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are members of the Methodist church. Like his father before him, Mr. Wilson is a Republican in politics, and is also a member of the Masonic fraternity.

GEORGE H. BENLEHR.

It is the progressive, wideawake man of affairs who makes the real history of a community. His influence as a potent factor in the civic life of the community is hard to estimate. The example which such men furnish of patient purpose and steadfast integrity strongly illustrates what is in the power of each to accomplish, and there is always a large measure of satisfaction in referring, even in a casual way, to their achievements. Such a man is George H. Benlehr, one of the prominent business men and quarrymen of Clinton county, and it is entirely fitting that a review of his life work be accorded a place in this volume.

George H. Benlehr was born on October 16, 1846, in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of Frederick and Lavina Jane (Hawes) Benlehr, the former of whom, born near Berlin, Germany, in 1804, died on December 25, 1890, and the latter, born on April 23, 1824, in Union township, this county, died on April 10, 1849. George H. Benlehr's paternal grandparents were natives of Germany, his grandfather having died in that country and his grandmother, Catherine, having died en route to America on a sailing vessel while on her way here to join her son. They were members of the Lutheran church. Mr. Benlehr's maternal grandparents were John and Sarah (Gibson) Hawes, the former of whom died on November 11, 1826, when he was a young man. His widow married, secondly, George Hartman, who died in 1852. She died in 1867, at the age of eighty years, three months and twenty-two days. Sarah Gibson was of Irish descent and her husband, John Hawes, was one of the first settlers in Starbucktown, in Union township. He and his wife were members of the Presbyterian church. Frederick Benlehr grew up in Germany, where his father owned a flour-mill. Frederick learned the butcher's trade and in 1820 left Germany and came to America. He worked for one year at six dollars a month in an eastern Pennsylvania orchard. As the result of a frost that year, the orchard yielded but one apple. Frederick Benlehr then drove six and eight-horse teams with merchandise over the National road for several years. About 1835 he bought a farm in Union township, this county, and was engaged in butchering on the farm, selling his product on the streets of Wilmington three days in the week. Later he operated a butcher shop in Wilmington, but always lived on the farm, continuing in the business until incapacitated by old age. He was an ardent Democrat.

To Frederick and Lavina Jane (Hawes) Benlehr were born three children, of whom George H. is the youngest, the other two being Louisa, who was born on February 8, 1840, and who married William E. Parker, of Independence, Iowa, ex-superintendent of the Lee county schools, and Sarah, November 5, 1841, who married Jacob Schlotter, a florist at Keokuk, Iowa.

George H. Benlehr attended the public schools of Union township. His mother having died when he was three years old, his father married, secondly, Elizabeth Lynn, to which latter union there were born three children. From the time of his infancy, George H. Benlehr made his home with his Uncle James and Aunt Sarah Hawes and with his Grandmother Hawes, while she lived.

On December 15, 1863, George H. Benlehr enlisted in Company H, One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served until mustered out at the end of the war, July 15, 1865, receiving an honorable discharge. His regiment was stationed in Ohio, guarding prisoners of war.

After the war, Mr. Benlehr assisted his father in butchering and farming until his father's death, in 1890. Before his father's death, however, George H. purchased the home place of one hundred and twenty-four acres and added fifty-two acres to the farm. He then bought the Probasco farm of seventy-one acres and sold the old farm. In 1913 Mr. Benlehr moved to Wilmington and now lives in that city. In 1898 he bought the Babb quarry at Todd's fork and has quarried crushed stone and building stone ever since. Ordinarily he employs from seven to ten men.

On March 15, 1866, George H. Benlehr was married to Hannah Bowermaster, who was born and reared in Greene county, Ohio. She is the daughter of R. A. and Ann (Venard) Bowermaster and was born on March 8, 1846. Her father was born in Cookstown, Pennsylvania, and her mother in this county. Her father came with his parents to Clinton county in 1831, and later moved to Bowersville, Greene county, Ohio, where his father built the first house in that town. He was a carpenter and charter member of the Christian church.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Benlehr are the parents of nine children, all of whom are living, namely: Cleo Lavina, born on May 5, 1868, who married Ed Bean and lives in Highland county; Cora, September 4, 1871, who married Seymour Murphy, deceased, and now lives with her parents; Charles E., February 6, 1874, who is a missionary in India for the Christian church; Sarah L., December 21, 1876, who is the wife of Thomas Pond, of Muncie, Indiana; Catherine, June 26, 1879, who became the wife of John Fleming, a farmer in Mercer county, Ohio; Grace E., May 24, 1882, who married Ralph Duffy and lives at Urbana, Ohio; George A., December 18, 1884, who lives in Lancaster, Ohio, where he is a railroad engineer; Fred A., July 4, 1887, who is quarryman and lives at home, and Earl W., April 13, 1890, who lives on his father's farm in Union township.

Although Mr. Benlehr is actively identified with the Democratic party, he has never been prominent in its councils and takes no especial interest in politics except to cast his vote, the duty of every American citizen. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and belongs to Morris McMillan Post, Grand Army of the Republic.

Mr. Benlehr has been pre-eminent in the agricultural and civic life of this county as an industrious and conscientious citizen. He gave a portion of the best years of his life to the service of his country and he has been no less faithful in the peaceful pursuits of life than he was when he responded to his country's call for service.

WILLIAM DRAKE.

When men succeed, their lives are instructive as guides and incentives to others. They furnish splendid examples of patient purpose and successful endeavor and these examples strongly illustrate what every man may achieve. William Drake, of Richland township, this county, is one of the hustling farmers of Clinton county, an example of one who has lived to good purpose and achieved a large measure of success in agriculture, the special sphere to which his talents have been devoted.

William Drake was born on September 25, 1865, in Union township, this county, the son of Charles and Frances (Wade) Drake, the former, born in 1834, on Staten Island, New York, died in April, 1907, and the latter, born in 1843, the daughter of George and Mary Wade.

Charles Drake was the son of Randolph Drake, a native of Staten Island, New York, who came to Clinton county from New York in 1848, and the family has been established in this county since that date, a period of nearly seventy years. Randolph Drake located on the farm in Richland township, where his grandson now lives, and where he owned seventy-five acres. He was a member of the Methodist Protestant church and was identified with the Whig party until the formation of the Republican party, when he identified himself with the latter. He was the father of eight children: David M., Charles, Caroline, who married William H. Sprague; Daniel, Elizabeth, who married Samuel Bogue; Henry and Cornelius who died early in life, and John S. Charles, the second in the family, was the father of William Drake, the subject of this sketch.

Educated in the common schools of Clinton county, Charles Drake learned the carpenter trade when he was a young man and was engaged in contract building in connection with farming for a period of about fourteen years. Eventually, however, he quit carpentering and spent the remainder of his life in farming. In 1867 he purchased the interest of the heirs of his father's farm and spent the remainder of his life on the estate. He made most of the improvements now on the farm and shortly before his death was arranging to erect a new house, which was completed by the family after his death. He was a Republican and served for many years as school director in this township. Charles and Frances (Wade) Drake were the parents of four children, namely: William, the subject of this sketch; George, who married Ella Atley; Ella, who married A. E. Tysor, and Thomas A., who married Grace McChesney.

William Drake and his brother, Thomas A. Drake, have owned the Richland township farm of two hundred and fifty acres since 1912, and are engaged in general farming and stock raising. They are extensive breeders of the big type Poland China and Duroc-Jersey hogs and both are members of the Duroc-Jersey Association. William and Thomas A. Drake have a beautiful and well improved farm in Richland township. Both were educated in the public schools of Richland township, and both are well informed and intelligent citizens. They are both members of the Modern Woodmen of America.

William Drake, who is an ardent Republican, served as trustee of Richland township from 1909 to 1911. He gave to the people of Richland township a most efficient and able administration. The office is one which has to do with the intimate affairs of a rural community and necessitates a rather complete understanding of the farm and its problems, as well as the problems of education. Mr. Drake gave practically universal satisfaction in the discharge of the duties of this office. He is well known in Richland township and popular among his neighbors.

THOMAS WILLIAM CONNER.

Thomas William Conner needs no introduction to the people of Clinton county, since he is a man whom everybody knows and likes. His life has been devoted not only to promoting his own interests, but also to the welfare of the community in which he has lived for more than a decade. He is an honorable representative of one of the esteemed families of this section, a gentleman of high character and worthy ambitions; a splendid type of the intelligent, up-to-date, self-made American, one of Clinton county's most successful farmers and business men. As a citizen he is progressive in the fullest sense of the word.

Thomas William Conner was born on September 5, 1882, at Buena Vista, in Fayette county, Ohio, the son of William T. and Catherine Jane (Moore) Conner. The father was born in Fayette county, Ohio, August 29, 1844, and the mother was born in Pike county, the daughter of Salisbury and Mary (Eager) Moore. William T. Conner was the son of Thomas William Conner, a large landowner in Fayette county. Grandfather Conner and his wife were the parents of seven children: Melissa, Eli, William T., Clarissa, Jane, Mary and Cinderella.

William T. Conner was educated in the common schools of Fayette county and spent all of his life on the farm. He was very successful as a farmer and owned about twelve hundred acres of land. In addition to farming he bought and sold live stock. To William T. and Catherine Jane Conner six children were born, namely: Loren E., who married Mary Martin; George E., who died while a young man; Iva M., who is the wife of Victor M. Harper; Clarissa J., who became the wife of John B. Tener; Anise, who died young, and Thomas W., the subject of this sketch. William T. Conner and wife were members of the Methodist Protestant church. He was a Democrat and a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Educated in the public schools at Buena Vista, Fayette county, Thomas W. Conner began farming early in life and in 1904 came to Clinton county and was engaged in farming in Richland and Wayne townships. He lived on the farm until 1909, when he rented it out. He and his wife now own four hundred and sixty acres in Richland and Wayne townships. The farm is the old William Pavey homestead and was improved a short time ago by the remodeling of the house.

In 1901 Thomas W. Conner was married to Carrie E. Pavey, the daughter of William and Mary A. (Kirby) Pavey, of Sabina, this county, and to this union two children have been born, William Owen, born on April 21, 1903, and George E., April 21, 1910.

Mr. Conner is a Democrat. Fraternally, he is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. There is no man living in the Sabina section of Clinton county who is better known or who holds a warmer place in the affections of the people than Thomas W. Conner. He is a hale fellow, well-met and, being well situated financially, is in a position to enjoy life, which he does to the utmost degree.

JOHN C. McFADDEN.

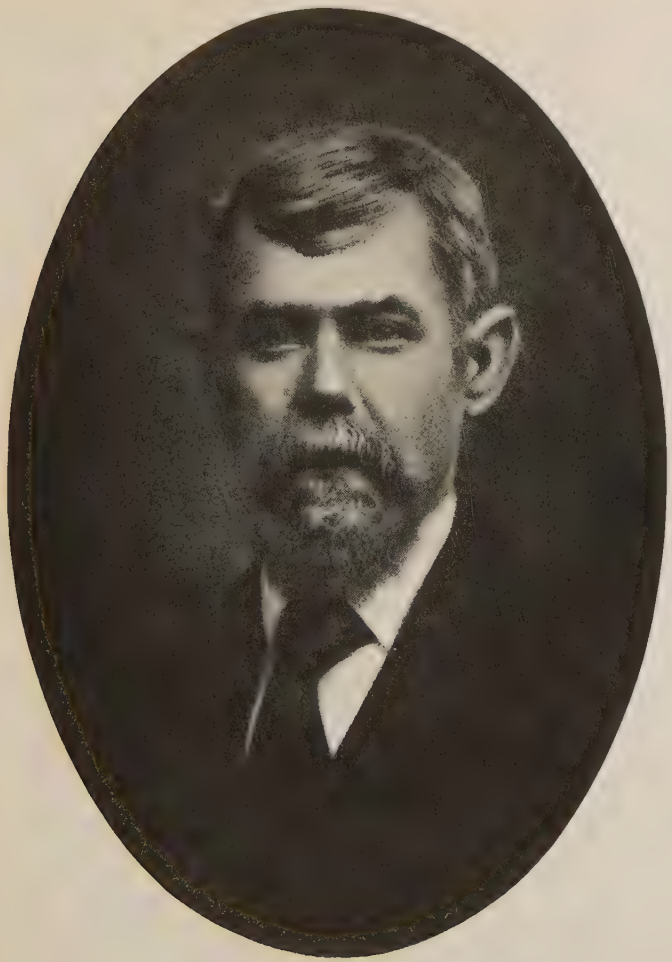
John C. McFadden, now a well-known and a well-to-do farmer of Wayne township, this county, was born on August 18, 1846, in Green township, this county, the son of John and Elizabeth (Newcomb) McFadden, the former a native of Mason county, Kentucky, born in 1808, who died in 1901, and the latter a native of Brown county, Ohio, daughter of William and Anna (Pangburn) Newcomb.

The paternal grandparents of John C. McFadden were John and Sophia (Kelly) McFadden, both natives of Ireland. John McFadden, the father of John C., received very little education, his father having died when he was a mere lad. When a young man, he worked on the Ohio river and a few years after his marriage, moved to a farm of two hundred and fourteen acres in Green township, this county, which he subsequently owned. He cleared most of this land and became quite well-to-do. Earlier in his life, he had been a pumpmaker and was very successful at that trade. John and Elizabeth (Newcomb) McFadden were the parents of ten children, Jehu, Mary Ann, Charles, Harrison W., Rebecca Jane, William N., John C., Sophia, Thomas and Hannah. Of these children, Charles was wounded during the last charge at Lookout Mountain and died as a result of his wound. Harrison W. and William N. were also Union soldiers during the Civil War. John McFadden and wife were members of the Christian church and their children were reared in that faith. He voted the Republican ticket and served as trustee of his township for about twenty years.

John C. McFadden was educated in the common schools of Green township and began life on the farm. After farming in Green township for six years, he moved, in 1880, to the farm which he now occupies in Wayne township. He owns one hundred and twenty acres of land, adjoining the little village of Centerville in Wayne township, and erected all of the buildings now standing on the farm. He has also done a great deal of clearing and ditching.

On October 28, 1870, John C. McFadden was married to Lydia Alice Hodson, who was born on February 22, 1855, and who died on August 18, 1912. She was the daughter of Cyrus and Phoebe (Davis) Hodson. To Mr. and Mrs. McFadden one child was born, Eva, born on September 25, 1872, who married Philip Morton, to which union five children have been born, namely: Albert, who died at the age of two years; Frank, who died at the age of fourteen; Alice; Elizabeth, who died on March 20, 1908, and John. It is doubtful if there are any instances of a more ardent and devoted affection between father and daughter in all Clinton county, than the affection between the venerable John C. McFadden and his daughter, Mrs. Eva Morton.

The McFadden family are members of the Christian church and John C. McFadden has served as a trustee of that church for a number of years. Mr. McFadden votes the Republican ticket.



MR. AND MRS. JOHN C. McFADDEN

EMERSON B. WEST.

Emerson B. West, a well-known farmer of Green township, this county, was born in Clinton county, June 16, 1861, a son of George and Matilda A. (Radcliffe) West, the former of whom was born in Clinton county on April 10, 1815, and the latter, in Highland county, August 18, 1828.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. West were Henry and Nancy (Terrell) West, both natives of Virginia, and pioneers in Clinton county, where both spent the most of their lives, their last days having been spent in Clark township. Mr. West's maternal grandparents were John and Elizabeth (Garner) Radcliffe, early settlers in Highland county, Ohio, who located in that county when Mrs. George West, the mother of Emerson B., was an infant six months old. Mrs. West's mother had come to Clinton county with her parents, James Garner and wife, who had previously lived in North Carolina. In 1811 they left that state and settled near Snow Hill, in this county.

The late George West was a carpenter by trade, but owned a farm of one hundred and fourteen acres, including that where his son, Emerson B., now lives. He died on this farm, October 21, 1888, and his widow survived him a few years, her death occurring on October 30, 1892. He had been an adherent of the Republican party, but during the later years of his life had become independent in his political views. Of the five children born to George and Matilda West, three—Sarah Elizabeth, Mary Jane and Stella May, are deceased. The living children are Emerson B. and Florence Emma. George West had been previously married to Samantha McMain, and to that union there were born three children, two of whom died in infancy, Hortense and an infant son. The third child was a daughter, Annetta.

Emerson B. West spent his boyhood days on the old homestead farm. He attended the public schools of his home neighborhood, and assisted his father with the work of the farm. After leaving school he took up farming on the old home place and there he has lived ever since. Mr. West and his only living sister, Florence, make their home on the old farm. They opened their home to a twelve-year-old child from the children's home, Bessie Kidd, whom they have reared to womanhood.

Mr. West has an excellent farm of ninety-two acres where he lives, and where he carries on a general system of farming and stock raising. He is a Republican in politics, and while living in Clark township, served as trustee of that township for four years. Fraternally, he is a member of Martinsville Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons.

PATRICK REGAN.

Patrick Regan, a pleasant and successful farmer of Wayne township, this county, is recognized as one of the well-known men of that township. By his enterprise and his progressive methods he has contributed in a material way to the general advancement of the locality where he lives. In the course of an honorable career, he has been successful in many lines, and enjoys a peculiar prestige among the representative men of his community.

Born on March 13, 1848, in County Kerry, Ireland, Patrick Regan is the son of Bartholomew and Julia (Dowling) Regan, both natives of the Emerald Isle. His paternal grandparents were John and Catherine (Cain) Regan, also natives of Ireland, who were the parents of five children, Timothy, Catherine, John, Bartholomew and Honora.

Of Mr. Regan's father it may be said that Bartholomew Regan received his education in the schools of his native land, and was married there, and after coming to America when a young man, located in the little town of Waynesville, in Warren county, Ohio. Fifteen years later he came to Clinton county, locating on a farm in Liberty township, where he lived for four years. He then moved to Wayne township, this county, where he spent the remainder of his life. Bartholomew Regan and wife were the parents of eight children, of whom six are living, as follow: Patrick, the subject of this sketch; Johanna, Thomas, referred to elsewhere in this volume; Catherine, Timothy C. and Mary. The deceased children were John and William. Bartholomew Regan and family were devout members of the Catholic church, and in politics Mr. Regan voted the Democratic ticket.

Patrick Regan attended school one year in Ireland, and after coming to America with his parents, pursued his education in the common schools of Warren county, Ohio. He began life on his own responsibility as a farmer in Warren county, but in 1864, went to Cincinnati, where he worked for a transfer company, remaining in that city until 1870. In that year he returned to Wayne township, this county, and after living at home for two years, removed to the farm where he is now living, comprising one hundred and forty-three acres. The house in which Mr. Regan and family are now living was built in 1903, while the barn was erected in 1911. Mr. Regan has a beautiful country home and a splendid and well kept farm.

Mrs. Regan, before her marriage, was Mary Reardon, the daughter of Michael and Mary Reardon. She died in 1880, leaving two children, Thomas N. and Matthew. Thomas N. Regan was graduated from the Indianapolis Law School and is now engaged in managing his father's farm. Matthew is a graduate is Wilmington College, and is now professor of science in the schools at Helena, Montana.

The Regan family are all members of the Catholic church, and politically, Mr. Regan is an adherent of the Democratic party.

ELIJAH VAN PELT.

Reserved and unassuming, Elijah Van Pelt is one of the splendid farmers and pleasant citizens of Wayne township, this county. He not only rents five hundred and forty acres of land, but he owns a farm of one hundred and seventy-five acres in Wayne township and personally supervises the work of all this land. As a member of the board of education of Wayne township, no man has done more than he to raise the standard of the public schools and to provide educational advantages for the children of that township second to none in the state.

Elijah Van Pelt, the son of Ryan and Rebecca (Milner) Van Pelt, was born on March 10, 1858, in the township where he lives. His father was born on August 28, 1822, at Richmond, Indiana, and his mother was born on March 7, 1825, in Highland county, Ohio. His paternal grandparents were Moses and Sallie (Slaughter) Milner, the former a native of Halifax county, Virginia, who immigrated to Highland county, this state, from the old Dominion state, when a young man. A few years later he returned to Virginia, married and then came back to live permanently in Highland county. Moses Milner was the son of Beverly Milner.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Van Pelt were Elijah and Lucy (Bethel) Van Pelt, the former a native of Loudoun county, Virginia, born on September 19, 1794, and the latter, May 14, 1798. In 1849 Elijah Van Pelt came to Clinton county and in time came to own one hundred acres of land. Elijah Van Pelt and wife were the parents of four children: Ryan, the father of Elijah; John, born on June 20, 1829; Lydia, June 14, 1843, and Abigail, August 1, 1825, who died in infancy. The parents of Elijah Van Pelt were Jacob and Sarah (Ryan) Van Pelt, the former of whom, born on August 12, 1759, died on August 3, 1831, and the latter, born on September 22, 1761, died on August 29, 1831.

Ryan and Rebecca (Milner) Van Pelt were the parents of five children, of whom Elijah was the fourth, in order of birth. The others were Albert, born on January 31, 1851; Lydia Ann, April 17, 1853, who died on March 16, 1881; Milner, March 6, 1855, and Lucinda, December 3, 1864, who is unmarried.

Elijah Van Pelt began his education in the common schools of Wayne township and later attended the normal school at Lebanon, Ohio. After finishing his education, he taught school for two years and then spent two years in Kansas in the office of a county surveyor. He then returned to Ohio and began farming in Wayne township, this county, where he has become a well-known farmer and stock raiser. In 1900 he moved to the farm known as the O. B. Savage farm, comprising five hundred and forty acres, which he rents. Besides renting this land, where he lives, he owns one hundred and seventy-five acres in Wayne township. He keeps a tenant upon the farm, but manages it himself.

Mr. Van Pelt is not married. He has always been interested in public affairs and worthy public enterprises. He has taken a special interest in educational matters. The people of Wayne township owe much to Elijah Van Pelt and are very ready to acknowledge their indebtedness to him.

H. B. ELLIS.

Among the prosperous farmers of Liberty township, this county, and among the young men who are most widely known in this township is H. B. Ellis, who has a well-kept, fertile and highly productive farm of three hundred and sixty-four acres, and is engaged in general farming.

H. B. Ellis was born in Greene county, Ohio, on February 7, 1871, son of Joshua and Rachel A. (Murphy) Ellis, both natives of Greene county, the former born in Jefferson township on September 28, 1847, and the latter, in 1848. Reared on his father's farm, and educated in the country schools, H. B. Ellis was married, in 1896, to Katie A. Linkhart, who was born in Clinton county, daughter of George W. and Mary C. Linkhart, and to this union one child has been born, Orville C., who is now sixteen years old. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis are prominent members of the Friends church at Dover and are regular attendants at services.

George W. Linkhart, father of Mrs. Ellis, was born in Greene county, this state, on April 5, 1843. At the age of four years he came to Clinton county with his parents and here he spent the rest of his life, his death occurring on September 1, 1908. He was a son of Thomas and Eleanor Linkhart and was the youngest of a family of eleven children, all of whom are now dead. His widow is still living on the old home place, at the age of seventy-four years, her only son, Charles Linkhart, only brother of Mrs. Ellis, also making his home there.

Reverting to Mr. Ellis's ancestry, it may be said that his father, Joshua Ellis, was a son of Samuel and Keziah (Woolman) Ellis, the former of whom was born in Winchester, Virginia, October 4, 1800, and the latter, June 17, 1817, in Greene county, Ohio. Joshua Ellis was educated in the common schools and at the age of thirteen, in 1859, left home and went to Bowersville, where he entered the employment of J. C. Early. He remained there until 1861, when he enlisted in the Thirty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry. At the time he was only fourteen years old, and his father objected to his enlistment and succeeded in having it cancelled. He again enlisted, in 1863, under Captain Ary of the Sixtieth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served until the end of the war. He was mustered out at Washington, D. C., and received his honorable discharge at Cleveland, Ohio, August 7, 1865. He owns one hundred and nine acres of land in Greene county and seventy acres in Clinton county. He was married on September 23, 1867, to Rachel A. Murphy, who was born in Greene county, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Davis) Murphy, farmers. Jacob Murphy was also a blacksmith by trade. He and his wife were prominent members of the Methodist church and very active in church work. They were the parents of five children, namely: William A., born on February 2 1840; Harvey C., June 18, 1841; Israel A., 1845; Rachel A., 1848, and James L., August 3, 1857. Joshua and Rachel A. (Murphy) Ellis had two children, Harley B., the subject of this sketch and Veturrah, who was born on August 25, 1873. She was married on November 25, 1896, to George Lee Linkhart, who was born on December 5, 1870, and who died on August 28, 1908, leaving one child, Nora A., born on October 31, 1897. Mrs. Veturrah Linkhart lives at home with her parents. Joshua Ellis is a member of the Knights of Pythias at Fort William, and of the Grand Army of the Republic. He is a Republican and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. For some time he has been operating a motion-picture house at Port William.

Mr. Ellis's paternal grandfather, Samuel Ellis, who died on December 11, 1880, at the age of eighty years, two months and seven days, was married three times, first to Elizabeth Oglesbee, a native of Greene county, Ohio, by whom he had the following children: Mary Ann, Silas, Joseph, Almira and Isaiah. By his second wife, Keziah Woolman, Mr. Ellis's father's mother, there were born seven children, as follow: Susan, born on September 1, 1837; Eli, December 19, 1841, was a member of Company B, Fortieth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry and was fatally wounded in Georgia; Sarah J., January 19, 1843; Simon P., March 15, 1845, was a soldier in Company F, Sixtieth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was held eleven months as a prisoner in Libby Prison; Samuel N., a member of Company H, One Hundred and Fiftieth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, served one hundred days; Joshua, H. B. Ellis's father, already referred to, and Martha, who died at the age of thirteen days. The third wife of Samuel Ellis was a Mrs. Providence, of Greene county.

The great grandfather of H. B. Ellis was Christopher Ellis, who was born on January 11, 1763, a native of Pennsylvania and a farmer by occupation, who came to Ohio in 1807, settling in Greene county, where he entered eight hundred acres of land. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. After his marriage in Pennsylvania, he moved to Frederick county, Virginia, and after a few years came to Greene county, this state, where he died in 1836. He had a brother, Abron, who came to Clinton county, in 1806, settling on the Anderson farm. Christopher Ellis married Eliza Carvery, who was born on September 5, 1769, and who died on September 5, 1822. The land owned in Greene county by Joshua Ellis is a part of the land originally owned by Christopher Ellis. By his first wife, Christopher Ellis had the following children: Catherine, Jacob, Abraham, Isaac, John, Samuel, William, George, James, Mary, Joseph, Christopher and Elizabeth. By his second wife, who was Nancy Overly, there were four children, Martha, Tilden, Angeline and Daniel. Christopher Ellis's father was John Ellis, a native of Germany who immigrated from his native land to Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in 1726.

WILLIAM B. STEELE.

William B. Steele, a well-to-do farmer and unassuming Christian gentleman of Wayne township, this county, was born on the farm where he still lives on July 9, 1860, the son of Absalom C. and Mary J. (Moorman) Steele, the former of whom was born in Guilford county, North Carolina, December 28, 1826, and the latter, the daughter of Thomas E. and Sabina Moorman, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Kentucky.

Absalom C. Steele was the son of Jehu and Jane (Brown) Steele, natives of North Carolina. The maternal grandparents of Absalom Steel were James and Hannah (Clark) Brown, also natives of North Carolina. James Brown died in that state and his widow subsequently became a resident of Clinton county, where she died. William B. Steele's great-grandfather, John Brown, was a native of Scotland and his great-grandparents, Clark, were natives of England, who came to America in pre-Revolutionary days. Mrs. Clark was a witness of the battle of Guilford Court House during the war of the Revolution when sixteen years of age. Jehu Steele died in his native state when his son, Absalom, was but a child. Subsequently, about 1832, Mrs. Steele and several of the uncles of Absalom Steele, with others, immigrated to Ohio in wagons and located in Highland county about two miles from New Vienna, there being at that time but one house on the present site of that town. It was in that house that Absalom Steele grew to manhood. About 1846 he and his mother moved to New Vienna, where she died on May 25, 1869. Absalom C. Steele was married on January 9, 1851, to Mary J. Moorman, who was born in this county on February 15, 1833, one of eight children born to her parents. Her mother died in August, 1852, and her father died on October 11, 1866.

WILLIAM B. STEELE AND FAMILY

To Absalom C. Steele and wife were born thirteen children, namely: Sabina Jane, on October 17, 1851; Thomas E., October 5, 1854; Jehu, January 14, 1856; Martha A., February 13, 1858; William B., July 9, 1860; John C., January 9, 1862; Alice E., March 15, 1864; Absalom C., Jr., April 27, 1866; Rosa B., May 5, 1868; Nettie D., May 4, 1870; Frank B., May 9, 1874; Anthon F., January 10, 1877, and one who died as an infant. Mr. Steele was a stone and brick mason by trade. He located in Wayne township on January 9, 1853, and there spent the rest of his life.

William B. Steele was educated in the public schools of Wayne township and when a young man, began farming on land adjoining the home farm. In 1912 he moved to the farm where he now lives. He owns eighty-five acres of land altogether.

To Mr. and Mrs. William B. Steele have been born six children: Harry D., who married Mary L. Rouse; Elijah M., who married Ann Lawrence; Samuel L., who married Edith Rouse; William R., who married Hattie Morris; Mary E. and Fred A., both of whom are at home. Mrs. Steele, before her marriage, was Rachel A. Mathew, the daughter of E. H. Mathew.

Mr. and Mrs. Steele are members of the church of Christ and are devout in the faith of that church. Politically, Mr. Steele is a Democrat and has filled several positions of public trust, including the offices of justice of the peace, road supervisor and member of the school board. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Modern Woodmen of America.

MARK CLARK.

Among the successful farmers of Green township, this county, is Mark Clark, who owns one hundred and thirteen acres of land in that township, two miles from New Vienna.

Mark Clark was born on September 22, 1858, in Union township, Highland county, Ohio, the son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Hildebrant) Clark, the former born in Green township, this county, on May 11, 1830, and the latter born near Snow Hill, in this county, October 28, 1837.

Isaac Clark was reared in Green township and was educated in the public schools. He owned a farm of one hundred and sixteen acres in Union township, Highland county, and also a farm in Green township of one hundred and sixteen acres and a small farm of seventy-five acres, which he bought about two years before his death and which was located near Snow Hill. He also owned property in New Vienna. He was married on March 18, 1855, to Elizabeth Hildebrant, who was the daughter of Christopher and Elizabeth (Crifessteen) Hildebrant, the former born on February 16, 1794, and the latter on March 27, 1796, in New Jersey, who came to this county in pioneer times. Christopher Hildebrant died on August 6, 1868, and his widow on November 1, 1882. He was a farmer by occupation and he and his wife were the parents of eleven children, namely: Ralph, born on December 28, 1816; Catherine, December 2, 1818, who died on July 21, 1858; Margaret, February 25, 1821, who died on May 12, 1868; Jesse, March 3, 1823, who died on August 15, 1905; Hezekiah, December 11, 1824, who died on September 18, 1898; Elisha, March 16, 1827, who died on January 8, 1906; Isaiah, April 15, 1829, who died on September 18, 1884; Jefferson, February 10, 1831, who died on August 9, 1910; Rebecca Jane, May 8, 1833, who died in 1910; Austin W., August 2, 1835, who died on December 24, 1863; and Elizabeth, October 28, 1837, who died on March 15, 1915. Of these children, Austin W. was a soldier in the Civil War. He was appointed sergeant on April 10, 1862, in Company G, Eleventh Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, by Captain P. P. Lane, at Summersville, Virginia.

To Isaac Clark and wife were born nine children, as follows: Columbus H., born on April 21, 1856; Mark, September 22, 1858; Mary Frances, December 24, 1859; Samantha, April 15, 1862, who died on April 30, 1862; Grant, August 23, 1863, who died on May 3, 1889; Marley, November 22, 1865, who died on August 14, 1878; Louie, December 12, 1867, who died on July 14, 1883; Hannah, March 27, 1871, and Austin, October 28, 1878, who died on January 19, 1890. Of these children, Grant was appointed postmaster of New Vienna in November, 1897, and began serving on January 1, 1898. He served in this position until his death on May 3, 1899. His sister, Hannah, was appointed postmistress on May 16, 1899, and held the office until February 28, 1905. The father of these children, Isaac Clark, was a Republican in politics and a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. His wife was a member of the Christian church. He died on February 25, 1903, and his widow on March 15, 1915.

Isaac Clark was the son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Miller) Clark, who were early settlers in Green township, where both died. Elizabeth Miller was the daughter of Isaac and Polly (Stewart) Miller, both natives of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, the former born on February 5, 1777, and the latter in 1787. Isaac Miller was the son of Peter Miller, who married Catherine Rhodes. He was born in Wales in 1740 and his wife in the United States. They were the parents of five children, John, Jacob, Abraham, Isaac and Elizabeth. Peter Miller came to the United States when a young man, and was married near Philadelphia. He and his wife moved to Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, and he served in the Revolutionary War. Although he died in the war, the place of his burial is not known nor is the place of his wife's burial known. Isaac Miller was bound out to John McKibben and, when ten years old, went to Kentucky. In 1801 he came to Clinton county with a son of Mr. McKibben and they kept a bachelor's house. John McKibben was the owner of one thousand acres in Clinton county and he gave one hundred acres to Isaac Miller, who bought one hundred acres from Mr. McKibben. Isaac Miller cleared most of the land and John Fletcher Miller, his son, now owns a part of it. He was a Democrat in politics and he and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal church, joining the first church in the county, at Snow Hill. He married in Warren county, near Morrowtown, about 1803, and lived in Clinton county until his death on January 5, 1857. His widow survived him but twenty-one days, her death occurring on January 26, 1857. They were the parents of eleven children, William, Elizabeth, Polly, Isaac, Jane, Catherine, Hannah, James, John Fletcher, Milton and Margaret. Polly Stewart, the wife of Isaac Miller, was the daughter of William and Jane (Armstrong) Stewart, the former of whom was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, in 1757. He attended the public schools in Dublin, Ireland, and, when a young man, came to America, locating at Philadelphia. He was pressed into the service during the Revolutionary War and was wounded by a bayonet. He was taken to the hospital at Philadelphia, where he met Jane Armstrong, who was his nurse, and whom he later married. They proceeded in a wagon to Fort Pitt, now Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and later to Columbia, a suburb of Cincinnati, in Hamilton county. He bought a farm in Warren county near Morrow and there they both spent their last days. To them were born eight children, Samuel, William, Mary, Elizabeth, Sarah, Anna, Jane and Hannah. William Stewart's wife, soon after their marriage, was captured by the Indians. She was taken to Detroit, Michigan, and there exchanged and returned to her husband after being gone one year.

Mark Clark, the subject of this sketch, was reared on a farm and was educated in the public schools of Union township, this county. He worked in a stone quarry for some time, but his principal business has always been farming. Mr. Clark owns one hundred and thirteen acres in Green township, two miles from New Vienna, and is a general farmer and stock raiser.

On July 30, 1899, Mark Clark was married to Minnie Trenery, who was born in Green township, this county, on May 1, 1867, daughter of Thomas Benton and Emily (Smithson) Trenery, both natives of Clinton county. Thomas Benton Trenery was the son of John and Isabel (Cashatt) Trenery and John Trenery was the son of Thomas and Susie (Achor) Trenery, mentioned elsewhere in this work. Mrs. Clark's maternal grandfather was William Smithson, who married Millie Murle. They were early settlers in Clinton county, having come here from old Virginia. Thomas Benton and Emily (Smithson) Trenery were the parents of seven children, Sarah Frances, Minnie Isabel, William Emerson, John Milton, Eva Jane, Homer Clayton and Arena, the latter of whom died at the age of three years.

Mrs. Clark is a member of the Christian church. Her father died in 1889 and her mother in 1894. Mr. and Mrs. Clark have no children. He votes the Republican ticket.

J. M. SNIDER.

J. M. Snider, who owns a beautiful farm of one hundred and forty-four acres two miles east of Sabina, and who is one of the most capable farmers in that section of Clinton county, was born on December 3, 1853, near Martinsburg, in Fayette county, Ohio, son of A. L. and Sarah (Kneddler) Snider, the former of whom, a native of Highland county, was the son of William Snider, a native of Pennsylvania, and the latter, a native of Fayette county, was the daughter of George Kneddler, a native of Virginia, who came to Ohio in 1808, settling in Fayette county. George Kneddler was the son of Peter Kneddler, a soldier in the patriot army during the Revolutionary War.

Like so many of the early settlers of Ohio, William Snider, the grandfather of J. M., was a native of Pennsylvania, who emigrated to Highland county in an early day and who engaged in farming and carpentry. He owned a farm in Highland county, but about 1850 he moved to Iowa, where he lived on a farm the remainder of his life.

A. L. Snider was educated in the common schools of Highland county and learned the shoemaker's trade early in life, a trade in which he was engaged in Highland and Fayette counties. He died in the latter county. A. L. and Sarah Snider had seven children: George, who died at the age of about six years; Elizabeth, who married C. Edward Jenkins; J. M., the subject of this sketch; Robert, who married Anna Zimmerman; Ellis, who married Anna Higgins; Charles, who married Anna Clark; and Harrison, who died young. The family of A. L. Snider were members of the Methodist church and he was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Educated in the common schools of Fayette county, Ohio, J. M. Snider began farming when a young man in that county, but in 1881 came to Clinton county, where he bought a farm of eighty-two acres in Richland township. He has since added to this farm and now owns altogether one hundred and forty-four acres, upon which he has erected the beautiful house in which he lives, besides two barns and other proper buildings. The house was erected in 1898. Mr. Snider is an extensive breeder of Poland China hogs and Jersey cattle and does general farming.

J. M. Snider was married to Keturah Pavey, daughter of William and Jerdena (Conner) Pavey, and to this union three children have been born: Vernia, who became the wife of Howard Curtis; William H., employed in the National Bank at Sabina, who married Hazel Moore and has one daughter, Rosalie, and C. H., who married Lena McVey and lives with Mr. Snider on the farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Snider and family are members of the Methodist Protestant church. He is a prosperous and highly respected citizen in Richland township and enjoys the esteem of all who know him.

HORACE G. McMILLAN.

The McMillan family in Clinton county is descended from William and Deborah McMillan, residents of York county, Pennsylvania, whose descendants immigrated to the state of Ohio at an early day in the settlement of this section of the state. William McMillan was a native of Scotland and his wife of Wales, and they were the parents of eight children, of whom David, the fifth, married Hannah Huzzey. He settled on a farm later owned by his son, Thomas McMillan, comprising two hundred and fifty acres, situated in Chester township, this county. Jonathan McMillan, Sr., a brother of David, made a trip to Ohio about 1805, but later returned and brought back with him to Clinton county his parents, William and Deborah McMillan. David McMillan was born on March 2, 1772, in Pennsylvania. By his marriage to Hannah Huzzey, there were ten children, five born in Pennsylvania and five in Ohio, of whom Thomas and Jonathan were the last two to pass away. After coming to Clinton county, in 1805, with his family, David McMillan settled on Turkey Run creek, in what is now known as Chester township. He erected a log cabin and, endowed with considerable mechanical skill, made all sorts of farm implements and furniture for his own use. He was a member of the Society of Friends and died in December, 1844, his widow surviving him but two years, her death occurring on September 18, 1846. David and Hannah (Huzzey) McMillan were the parents of Thomas McMillan, who was the father of Horace G., the subject of this sketch.

The entire life of Thomas McMillan was spent on the farm. He owned about two hundred and fifty acres and was a general farmer and stock raiser. He was one of the organizers of the Clinton County Bank at Wilmington and, from the time of the organization of that bank until his death, was a director of the institution. Thomas McMillan married Elizabeth N. Adsit, a native of Union township, this county, to which union there were born six children, namely: Isabel, who died in infancy; Mary Ann (deceased), who married Henry Spray; Deborah T. (deceased), who married John Hawkins; Eliza Jane (deceased), who became the wife of Daniel McKay; Horace G., the subject of this sketch, and Palmer, who died at the age of seventeen. Upon the death of his first wife, Thomas McMillan married Mrs. Nancy McMillan, widow of Isaac McMillan and daughter of Seth and Sarah Ann (Moore) Linton, to which second marriage there was born one child, Thomas Henry, who is referred to elsewhere in this volume. Thomas McMillan was a Republican in politics and a member of the Society of Friends.

Horace G. McMillan was born on December 25, 1853, on the old McMillan farm in Chester township, his father, Thomas McMillan, having been born on the same farm. About 1885 he purchased one hundred and nineteen and three-fourths acres and built a house on the farm. Subsequently he made additional purchases, increasing the farm to two hundred and thirty-three acres. Mr. McMillan succeeded his father as a director in the Clinton County Bank at Wilmington and now holds that position.

On September 11, 1884, Horace G. McMillan was married to Alice M. Peterson, daughter of Jacob S. and Catherine (Ellis) Peterson, to which union have been born three children, Esper J., Thomas W. and Carl P., all of whom are still at home.

Jacob S. Peterson was a native of Clinton county, his father, Jacob Peterson, Sr., having been an early settler in this county. He remained at home during his minority, during which period he attended the log school house of the township. He later supplemented his elementary education by extensive reading and also cultivated a talent for music, in which art he became quite proficient. Following his early religious training, Mr. Peterson united with the German Reformed church at Xenia, still later with the Reformed organization at Caesar's Creek, and subsequently, in 1874, with the Mount Pisgah congregation. On November 23, 1848, Jacob S. Peterson was united in marriage to Sarah Catherine Ellis, a native of Greene county, Ohio, granddaughter of Abraham Ellis, one of the earliest settlers of that section of the state. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson began housekeeping on a portion of the former's father's farm, where they lived for ten years, at the end of which time Mr. Peterson purchased adjoining land comprising two hundred acres. To Mr. and Mrs. Peterson were born the following children: Emma Clare, born on December 22, 1849, who married James W. Middleton; Ida Irene, July 23, 1852, who married George A. McKay; Orville Ellis, November 21, 1854, who married Luella B. Oglesbee, after whose death he married Evelyn Green; Alice Maria, August 16, 1860, who married Horace G. McMillan; Jacob Elmer, September 20, 1862, who married Viola Farquhar, and Eva Grace, February 4, 1869, who married Frank S. Colvin.

The McMillan family are members of the Friends church and for a number of years Horace G. McMillan has been an officer in the church. In politics, Mr. McMillan has always been identified with the Republican party.

OSCAR E. CLINE.

Among those persons who have, by virtue of their strong individual qualities, earned their way to a high standing in the estimation of their fellow citizens, having by sheer force of character and persistency accumulated a competency in life and obtained prominence in the community where they live, Oscar E. Cline, of Sabina, this county, is entitled to special mention. He owns a good farm of a hundred and twenty-one acres in Wayne and Richland townships, which he was actively engaged in operating until 1908, when he moved to the thriving town of Sabina.

Oscar E. Cline was born on May 31, 1874, in Fayette county, Ohio, the son of William S. and Naomi (Glasgow) Cline, the former of whom was born in February, 1837, in Fayette county, Ohio, and the latter, in January, 1836, in Pennsylvania, the daughter of Andrew Glasgow.

William S. Cline was the son of George Washington and Catherine (Feagins) Cline, the former a native of Virginia and the latter a native of Fayette county, Ohio. George W. Cline was a farmer who owned about three hundred and fifty acres in Fayette county and was one of the pioneer citizens there. He and his wife were the parents of six children, Edward, Mary, William, Andrew, Philip and John, the last named of whom died early in life. Educated in the common schools of Fayette county, this state, William S. Cline began farming in Fayette county when a young man. During the early years of his married life he also was engaged in farming in Clinton county for some three or four years, but returned to Fayette county and there spent the rest of his life. He owned three hundred and thirty acres comprising a magnificent farm. The last six or seven years of his life he lived retired at Washington C. H. To William S. and Naomi (Glasgow) Cline were born seven children, namely: Wills A., who married Ella Rice; Emma, who married H. W. Wilson; Arminta, who married J. F. Adams; Mary, unmarried; George W., who married Dora Washington; Oscar E., the subject of this sketch, and Frederick O., who married Viola Darbyshire. Politically, William S. Cline was a Democrat.

Oscar E. Cline was educated in the public schools of Fayette county and while still a young man began working on the farm. The first few years of his active life he was engaged with his father, but later began farming for himself in Fayette county. He came to Clinton county in 1901 and purchased a farm of one hundred and twenty-one acres in Wayne and Richland townships, and from 1901 to 1908 was actively engaged in its cultivation. In the latter year he removed to Sabina and now operates the farm with hired men. He is engaged in general farming and stock raising and is an extensive breeder of Shire horses.

Mr. Cline married Minnie J. Pavey, daughter of William and Mary A. (Kirby) Pavey, of Sabina, and to this union one child has been born, a son, Howard, born in 1900. Mrs. Cline is a member of the Methodist Protestant church. Mr. and Mrs. Cline have a beautiful home in Sabina and are held in high regard by their many friends throughout that part of the county.

Educational progress and development have always been very near to Mr. Cline's heart and for some time he has served as a member of the board of education. Fraternally, he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. He votes the Democratic ticket and takes a warm interest in the county's political affairs.

FRANK R. BAILEY.

Frank R. Bailey was born on February 25, 1877, in Chester township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of Wilson and Ida L. (Lemar) Bailey, both born in the same township, the former on January 25, 1849, and the latter, January 1, 1855, the daughter of Samuel Lemar, a well known farmer of that township.

Samuel Lemar was born on January 1, 1813, the son of Charles and Elizabeth Lemar, the former of whom was born on April 12, 1786, in Virginia, son of Charles and Elizabeth Lemar. When about fourteen years of age, his mother died. In 1802, his father, with the remainder of the family, emigrated to Fairfield county, Ohio, and settled in what is now known as Hocking township, where they remained until 1833. He was reared on a farm, and received the rudiments of an education in a neighborhood school. In 1812 he was married to Miss Elizabeth Rose, by whom he had thirteen children. In 1834, he removed to Chester township, this county, where he lived several years. He died in Greene county in February, 1865. His wife had preceded him to the grave many years, her death having occurred in 1847. Samuel Lemar was reared to farming and received a good education in the schools of his time. When he was about eighteen years old, he began work on the canal, which at that time was in the process of construction from Cincinnati to Cleveland, and for his services received thirteen dollars per month. Later he worked in a brickyard for ten dollars per month. In 1841 he bought a farm of one hundred acres in Chester township, where he lived until 1849. On January 1, 1835, he was married to Electa Barnes, the daughter of Samantha Barnes. The Barnes family emigrated from Dutchess county, New York, to Clinton county, about 1813. Two children were born to this union, both of whom died early in life. Mrs. Samuel Lemar died in December, 1837, and on August 29, 1844, Samuel Lemar married, secondly, Julia Ann Stingley, daughter of John and Elizabeth Stingley, to which union the following children were born: John S., Oliver W., Emma, Alice, Ida, Eva, Ella, Tinna and Samuel. Samuel Lemar served as clerk of Chester township; as trustee for twenty years and as justice of the peace for nearly forty years. He also served six years as county commissioner, having been elected to all of these offices as a Republican or Whig. He owned about five hundred acres of land in Clinton county.

Frank R. Bailey's paternal grandparents were William H. and Rachel Bailey of Chester township, this county. His father was a farmer in Chester township and owned one hundred acres of land. He and his wife had three children, James M., Frank R., the subject of this sketch, and Samuel K. Of these children, James R. married Jessie Murray and lives in Cincinnati; Samuel married Luella Fowler and lives in Athens, Ohio.

Frank R. Bailey was reared to manhood on his father's farm. His father died on April 14, 1897, and his mother, who later married E. B. Howland, is now living in Wilmington. Mr. Bailey married Katie Smith, who was born in Adams township, this county, the daughter of J. H. Smith, a well-known farmer of that township, and to this union three children have been born, Russell W., Bernice May and Carl J.

In 1907 Mr. Bailey and family moved to the farm of sixty-nine acres in Adams township, which they now occupy. They are members of the Friends church, at Springfield, in Adams township, and are held in high esteem by all who know them.

JOHN T. GANO.

Among the successful farmers of Liberty township, this county, is John T. Gano, who owns one hundred and twenty acres of land comprising a productive and highly profitable farm. Mr. Gano was born in Washington county, Iowa, on September 1, 1856, the son of John S. and Rhoda (Beech) Gano, the former of whom was born probably in Virginia. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church. John S. Gano died when his son, John T., was an infant. After the father's death, the mother came with her family to Clinton county, locating near what was then the home of her brother. Of the three children born to Mr. and Mrs. John S. Gano, only one, John T., the subject of this sketch, is now living, Margaret and Martha, his sisters, being deceased. Mrs. John S. Gano never married again.

Educated in the district schools of Clinton county, John T. Gano engaged in farming as soon as he was old enough to be employed in such work. On August 9, 1877, he was united in marriage to Louisa Garman, who was born on the farm where she and Mr. Gano now live, the daughter of Samuel and Alice Garman, farmers of Liberty township and members of the Methodist Episcopal church. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Gano located on their present farm. To their union four children have been born, namely: Blanche, who married Frank Shrack, of Melvin, this county, and has four children, Wilbur, Charles, Mary L. and Frank; Ethel, who married Wilbur Cline of Greene county, Ohio, and has one child, Carl; Granville, who married Emma Stobis and has three children, John L., Ellen and Beulah M., and Earl, who died at the age of three years.

Mr. and Mrs. Gano are members of the Methodist Episcopal church at Lumberton and attend the Sunday school. Mr. Gano is trustee of the church and has served in that capacity for ten years. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Daughters of Rebekah. In 1905, he built a commodious house on his farm and now enjoys all the modern conveniences of country life. No residents of Liberty township are more highly respected than Mr. and Mrs. Gano and their many friends hold them in the highest esteem.

JAMES W. CUSTIS.

James W. Custis, who has been a dry-goods salesman in Sabina, this county, for fourteen years, but who also owns two hundred and fifty acres of land in Fayette and Clinton counties, besides property in Sabina, was born on September 3, 1865, at New Antioch, this county, the son of William and Susan (Drake) Custis, the former of whom was born on September 8, 1837, in Clinton county, and the latter, April 26, 1839, in New York state, daughter of Daniel and Ann (Mersereau) Drake, natives of the Empire state. Daniel Drake came to Ohio about 1850 and purchased eighty acres of land in Clinton county, near Starbuck.

William Custis, father of James W., was engaged in the hardware business for ten years, but the rest of his life he was engaged in the dry goods business. He was a man active in local affairs, especially in religious circles, having been a prominent member of the Methodist church. His death occurred on October 12, 1906, and his widow is still living in Sabina. They were the parents of the following hildren: C. W., who married Flora Johnson, and lives in Sabina; Frank, a resident of Dayton, Ohio, where he is engaged in the grocery business; Ida B., the wife of S. R. McGuire, of Dayton; Anna, the wife of L. A. Wysong of Wilmington; James W., the immediate subject of this review; Levi, a resident of Akron, Ohio; Lula, the wife of Doctor Leightner, of Sabina, and Grace, who is the wife of Marion Kuhn, of Crooksville, Ohio.

James W. Custis was educated in the district school and the Sabina high school, from which latter he was graduated. Early in life he engaged in the dry-goods business as a clerk, and has been continuously engaged in this business since that time.

On June 9, 1891, James W. Custis was married to Rebecca J. Perrell, who was born in Fayette county, Ohio, on January 16, 1867, daughter of John and Margaret (Sparks) Perrell, the former of whom owned about fourteen hundred acres of land in Fayette county, and who was active in the banking business at Washington C. H., Ohio. Although John Perrell is now deceased, the family still retains the interest in the Commercial Bank at Washington C. H.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Custis located in Sabina. They have no children. They are active and earnest members of the Methodist Protestant church, and Mr. Custis has been superintendent of the Sunday school for the past eight years.

CLARENCE TRIMBLE TELFAIR.

Clarence Trimble Telfair, son of Charles and Ann (Barry) Telfair, was born on September 13, 1873, in Madison county, Ohio, but later removed with his father's family to near Hillsboro, Ohio. Charles Telfair, the father of Clarence, was born in Virginia. He was married to Ann Barry, daughter of John and Helena (Woodrow) Barry, of Hillsboro, who owned quite a large tract of land in Highland county. Charles Telfair was a member of the Masonic lodge and rose to the rank of a Scottish Rite Mason.

The children of Charles and Ann Telfair were Jean, George, Clarence, Helen and Elizabeth. Jean resides with her mother in Pittsburgh; George, who is in the wholesale hardware business in Pittsburgh married Edna Correll, of Concord, North Carolina; Helen died in 1912, and Elizabeth married Hugh V. Andrews, of Pittsburgh, formerly of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Clarence Telfair is a progressive, public-spirited citizen and enterprising farmer of Wilson township, his land forming a part of a survey of three thousand acres inherited by his grandfather, Dr. Isaac Telfair, from his maternal grandfather, Gen. George Mathews, of Georgia. This survey of three thousand acres, along with several other thousand acres of land, was granted to General Mathews by President John Adams for his services and heroism during the Revolution.

Clarence Telfair is a member of the Masonic lodge and of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He was married on September 28, 1911, to Florence L. Haines, a native of Greene county, Ohio, and a daughter of Zimri D. and Sarah Alice (McKay) Haines. The children of Clarence and Florence Telfair are Edward Haines, born on August 15, 1912, and Roderick Trimble, February 27, 1914, at "Idyl-Wilde," their home near Bloomington, this county. Florence H. Telfair was born on April 1, 1884, and was the third in the family of eight children, the others being Glennora E., Tilghman, Isadora, Eber, Russell, Elton and Reva Mary. Glennora married Louis Weihe, of Belleview, Florida. Tilghman is superintendent of the schools at Rockland, Massachusetts. Isadora married John B. Telfair, of Wilmington, this county. Eber married Edna O. Peele, of near Sabina. Russell is a graduate pharmacist in Charleston, West Virginia. Elton and Reva Mary are at home. Mrs. Telfair was graduated from the Charlotte Sanatorium, Charlotte, North Carolina, and was a registered nurse of the state of North Carolina, receiving first honor. After her graduation she was superintendent of the sanatorium from which she was graduated. Before entering the profession of nursing, Mrs. Telfair was a teacher of public-school music in Cæsars Creek and Chester township. Her maternal grandparents were Tilghman and Sarah (Medsker) McKay, and her paternal grandparents were the Rev. Eber and Mary (Mendenhall) Haines. Reverend Haines was a minister of the denomination of Friends.

The Telfairs trace their ancestry back to Dr. David Telfair, who was born in Monteith, Scotland, in 1722, on Lake Monteith, Perthshire, and died in Philadelphia in 1789. He was the founder of the first Scots Presbyterian church in Philadelphia. He was married to Elizabeth Duncan, daughter of Isaac and Margaret Duncan, who owned a vast estate around Philadelphia. David and Elizabeth Telfair's children were Isaac, Anne, William and Margaret. Isaac Telfair married Jane Mathews, daughter of Gen. George Mathews, of Georgia, who was a Colonial soldier, commanding a company that assisted in defeating Corn-Stalk, the Indian chief, at the famous battle of "The Point," on the Ohio, and afterward served under General Washington in the Revolutionary War, entering the service as a colonel of a Virginia regiment. Colonel Mathews is referred to in Withers' "Chronicle of Border Warfare" as a distinguished officer, the hero of Brandywine, Germantown and Guilford. Afterward he was severely wounded, taken prisoner by the British and imprisoned on a prison-ship in New York harbor until the close of the Revolution. He was governor of Georgia for three successive terms and a Senator from that state in the Congress of the United States. For his heroism and services during the Revolution he was awarded several thousand acres of land by President John Adams.

The son of Isaac and Jane Mathews Telfair was Dr. Isaac Telfair, grandfather of Clarence Telfair. He was born on October 1, 1798, in Danville, Kentucky. After the death of his father, Doctor Telfair removed with his mother to Staunton, Virginia, where he enlisted in the navy and served as midshipman on the Algerine expedition. He afterward took up the study of medicine and was graduated from the Philadelphia College of Medicine. Doctor Telfair was married to Jane A. Boys, daughter of Dr. William Boys, of Staunton, Virginia. After practicing his profession in Staunton, Virginia, and Hillsboro, Ohio, he finally retired to his lands in Clinton county. The principal part of the survey as originally patented, has been owned by the family ever since the patent was issued. Here Doctor Telfair and wife lived until their death, at the old home, "Oak-Ridge." They were the parents of ten children, Charles, William, Jane, Martha, Maria, Virginia, Rose, Margaret, Timothy and Doctor George. William married Elizabeth Payton, of Staunton, Virginia; Jane married William H. Creighton, of Chillicothe, Ohio; Martha, Maria, Virginia and Margaret died unmarried; Rose married Harrison Denver, of Wilmington; Timothy married Doctor Wilkerson, and Doctor George married Harriet Brown, of Dayton, Ohio.

The Telfairs as a family have always been stanch Presbyterians, while the Haines family, to which Mrs. Telfair belongs, can trace their generations of Quaker ancestry back to England, from whence they came.

ROBERT C. LAWHEAD.

The Lawhead family have been residents of Clinton county for eighty years and during this long period have been prominently identified with every phase of the county's development. Robert C. Lawhead has been in public life in various capacities since 1887 and has always performed his every duty in such a way as to win the commendation of his fellow citizens. He started in public life as a school teacher and later became interested in politics. Serving first as deputy clerk of the Clinton county courts, he was subsequently elected clerk and filled that office three terms. At the present time he is teller in the Clinton County Bank, a position he has filled since 1910.

Robert C. Lawhead, the son of John W. and Cynthia A. (Canny) Lawhead, was born near New Antioch, this county, on August 29, 1860. His parents were both born near the same village and lived there all of their lives. John W. Lawhead and wife were the parents of five children: Robert C., of Wilmington; James W., of Wilmington; Rachael Ann, deceased; Mary Elizabeth, the deceased wife of L. M. Bowman; Althan, the wife of Frank Bashore, a farmer living near Cuba, this county.

Robert C. Lawhead received his elementary education in the schools of New Antioch and Wilmington, and later attended the National Normal School at Lebanon, Ohio, and Wilmington College. After leaving college he lived on the farm until 1887, when he became principal of the New Antioch schools, a position which he held until 1891. In the meantime he had become interested in politics and this led to his appointment as deputy clerk in 1891. He served in this capacity under Charles O. Hildebrant until 1900. In December of that year he entered the Clinton County Bank as bookkeeper and has retained his connection with the bank since that year. However, he found time during this interim to serve three terms as clerk of the county courts. He was first elected to this latter position in 1903 and held the office continuously until 1911. He had no opposition for the office when he made the race the third time, a fact which shows how well his service was appreciated by his fellow citizens. During all the time he was in the clerk's office he retained his position in the bank, doing his public work in the evenings. In 1910 he became the teller of the bank and then employed a deputy in the clerk's office until the expiration of his term in the spring of 1911. From 1891 to 1902 Mr. Lawhead was deputy state supervisor of elections and for three years was chief deputy. Since 1903 he has been a member of the Wilmington school board and has been president of the board every year except one since he became a member of the board. For many years Mr. Lawhead has been a member of the Republican county, central and executive committees.

On March 20, 1898, Robert C. Lawhead was married to Nancy P. Fleming, who was born in Illinois on July 11, 1861, daughter of Isaac B. and Mary (Duskins) Fleming, and to this union has been born one child, a daughter, Harriet, who was born on August 19, 1903.

ALVA C. HENRY.

Alva C. Henry, a splendid young farmer, of Wayne township, this county, was born near Blanchester in Clinton county, on January 6, 1886, the son of William M. and Sarah I. (Martin) Henry, the former of whom was born in Warren county Ohio, and the latter, near Blanchester, Clinton county, the daughter of James Martin.

Michael and Catherine (Doctor) Henry, the paternal grandparents of Alva C. Henry, were natives of the Old Dominion state and came from that state to Ohio about 1831, locating in Harlin township, Warren county, where they spent the remainder of their lives. They were the parents of eleven children: Eliza, John Newton, William M., Amelia, Jane, Marcus, James M., Mahala, Alfred, Charles and Samantha. Michael Henry voted the Democratic ticket and was a prominent figure of the community in which he lived.

William M. Henry was educated in the common schools of Warren county, and after reaching maturity engaged in farming in Highland township, that county, where he lived until 1886. At that time he moved to the farm in Wayne township, this county, now owned by his sons, Alva C. and William M., a fine tract consisting of two hundred and sixty-five acres of fertile land which will produce almost any crop grown in the temperate zone. He erected the buildings now standing on the farm and was a well-known stockman during his career. William M. and Sarah I. (Martin) Henry had three children: Clara, who married Weldon Smith; Alva C., the subject of this sketch, and William M., a veterinary surgeon at New Vienna, this county, who married Myrtle Hoskins.

Alva C. Henry obtained a good common-school education in the schools of Wayne township and, after quitting school, began farming where he now lives. Since 1903 he and his brother, William M., have owned the old home farm and it is managed very much after the same plan followed by their father.

Alva C. Henry married Jennie Kincaid, daughter of H. E. Kincaid, and to this union has been born one child, Willard M., who was born on March 29, 1914. Mr. Henry is a member of the Christian church and his wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Memphis. Politically, he is a Democrat and fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

One would have to search diligently in Clinton county to find a farm in a better state of repair than the Henry farm in Wayne township. Alva C. built the barn in 1910 and many other incidental improvements have been added during the last few years. The Henrys are highly respected people in this community and enjoy the esteem of all who know them.

C. A. GOODWIN.

C. A. Goodwin, a well-to-do farmer of Jefferson township, this county, was born in Warren county, Ohio, May 18, 1867, a son of Levi and Hannah (Runyon) Goodwin, both natives of that county. Hannah Runyon was a daughter of David Runyon.

The late Levi Goodwin was educated in the common schools of Warren county and was reared to the life of a farmer, which occupation he followed in that county. He rented land there most of his life, but in later years moved to Clinton county, and his death occurred at Second Creek, in this county, his wife having passed away previously in Warren county before his removal to this county. The family were all members of the United Brethren church. C. A. Goodwin is one of ten children born to his parents, eight sons and two daughters, all of whom are still living, the other children being Edward, Belle, William, Ora, Hermie, Lewis, Burt, Robert and Edith.

C. A. Goodwin received his education in the public schools of Warren county, and in 1891 moved to Clinton county, and engaged in farming in the Pansy neighborhood. He rented land there until 1909, in which year he purchased one hundred and four acres. Two years later he purchased fifty acres additional, all of which is located in Jefferson township. Mr. Goodwin is engaged in general farming and stock raising, and has made a success of his ventures.

In 1890 C. A. Goodwin was married to Iva Schooley, who was born in Clermont county, Ohio, daughter of Charles Schooley, and to this union two children have been born: Verna, born in 1891, and Artemus, in 1897, the former of whom, a Jefferson township farmer, married Olive Jones, and has one son, Virgil, born on November 30, 1914.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin are members of the Christian church, and take an active interest in the affairs of the local congregation. Fraternally, Mr. Goodwin is a member of the Knights of Pythias, and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin and their son, Artemus, are members of the local grange, in which organization they are deeply interested. Mr. Goodwin takes a good citizen's interest in local political affairs and has served his township as assessor.

JOSEPH WILLIAM ROBINSON.

Joseph W. Robinson, formerly a well-known teacher of Clinton county, and for many years connected actively with the political life of this county and especially of Green township, where he lives, was born on November 5, 1868, son of Dr. Robert K. and Isabel (Van Dervort) Robinson, both natives of this county, the former of whom was born in Richland township, and the latter, in Green township.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Robinson were Joseph and Margaret (Killen) Robinson, natives of Virginia, and Clinton county, respectively, Mrs. Joseph Robinson's parents having been pioneers of this county. The maternal grandparents were Nicholas Van Dervort and wife, also pioneers of this county. Dr. Robert K. Robinson was a soldier in the Union army during the Civil War and after the close of the war practiced his profession at Converse, Indiana, where his wife died in 1876. He later married Frances Darby, and moved to Prescott, Arizona, where he spent the remainder of his active life, his death, however, occurring at Kokomo, Indiana, while on a visit to that place in September, 1891. By his first marriage, Dr. Robert K. Robinson had two children, Joseph William and Gertrude. To his second marriage were also born two children, Beryl and Fern.

After leaving the common schools Joseph W. Robinson was a student in the schools of Wilmington, completing his education in Wilmington College and at the Tri-State Normal School at Angola, Indiana. He then took up the vocation of teaching and taught five years in the schools of Clinton county. Since leaving the school room he has engaged in farming. From the time he was seven and one-half years old, he was reared in the family of Jonah Scott Van Dervort, a maternal uncle, whose wife was Angela J. Walker before her marriage to Mr. Van Dervort. Jonah S. Van Dervort died on August 25, 1911, and his widow passed away on April 6, 1915. He was the owner of the farm upon which Mr. Robinson now lives, a tract of forty-one acres, which is owned jointly by Mr. Robinson and his sister.

Mr. Robinson is a Republican in politics, and has served his party as assessor of Green township, and was a member of the school board for several years. He is unmarried, and a faithful and regular attendant of the Christian church at New Antioch. His sister, Gertrude (Robinson) Oglesbee, lives in Dayton, Ohio, where she has resided almost continuously for the past twelve years. Her husband, E. E. Oglesbee, is the proprietor of a feed store. She has two daughters, Isabel and Eloise, born in 1902 and 1909, respectively.

HON. OLIVER JOSEPH THATCHER.

Even before Clinton county was organized as a civil unit, the Thatcher family had established itself in this section of Ohio, Thomas Thatcher, a Pennsylvania Quaker, having located in this region in the year 1806 or 1807 and here he spent the remainder of his life. Thomas Thatcher was one of the foremost factors in the early development of Clinton county and was a man of large influence in bringing about proper social and civil conditions in the formative period of this now well-established community. The Thatchers are of English ancestry and the family has been established in America since the year 1640, when two brothers of that name left their home near Bristol, England, and came to this country. From this parent stock the family has extended to many parts of the country, the name being represented in widely separated points throughout the United States. Thomas Thatcher, the first of the name to locate in this county, was a member of a substantial Quaker family in Pennsylvania and pushed on into the wilds of this section of Ohio, actuated by the true pioneer instinct. He was a man of much force of character and early became recognized as one of the leading citizens of his time in this section. For years he operated a tannery at Wilmington and laid out what still is known as Thatchers addition to the county seat town. He died in 1824.

Thomas Thatcher, the pioneer, married Susannah Stratton, a member of one of the pioneer families of this county, and to this union were born six children, four sons and two daughters, all of whom are now deceased, namely: Joseph, Jesse, Theodocia, Ruth, David and Thomas.

Joseph Thatcher, second son of Thomas and Susannah (Stratton) Thatcher, was born in the old Thatcher home in Wilmington, this county, and there grew to manhood. Upon reaching manhood he applied himself to the trade of blacksmith and became known as one of the best artificers in that line in this part of the state. Joseph Thatcher married Deborah Hadley, who also was born in this county, a member of one of the old and influential families, and to this union eight children were born, as follow: Mary, who died at the age of twenty-one years; William, who died at the age of twenty; Mrs. Susan Brown, of Hillsboro, Ohio; Mrs. Sarah McDonald, of Wilmington; Lydia, wife of S. L. Statler, of Wilmington; Annie, who married Peter Osborn and is now deceased; Emma, deceased wife of David Jenke, and Oliver Joseph, the immediate subject of this biographical sketch. Joseph Thatcher, father of the above children, died in 1857 and his widow survived him but five years, her death occurring in 1826. They both were devoted and influential members of the Friends church at Beech Grove and their children were reared in that faith, the family being active in all good works in the community.

Oliver Joseph Thatcher, last born of the eight children of Joseph and Deborah (Hadley) Thatcher, was born in the Beech Grove neighborhood, three miles from Wilmington, this county, on November 10, 1857, and with the exception of ten years spent in foreign travel and in study in the capitals of Europe and fourteen years as a professor in the University of Chicago, has passed his life here. He received his elementary education in the common schools of this county, supplementing the same by a course in Wilmington College, from which institution he was graduated with the class of 1878. Thus equipped, he entered the active ranks of the Clinton county teaching force and for two years was engaged as a teacher in the eighth grade of the Wilmington city schools. Following this term of public service he was for a year engaged as the superintendent of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home at Xenia, this state, after which for one year he devoted himself to private study and reading and in 1882 entered Union Seminary (affiliated with Columbia University), New York, devoting himself to the study of Semitic languages and Greek. He was graduated from Union Seminary in 1885 as honor student, having stood at the head of his class for the entire course, there being conferred upon him in recognition of this distinction, a traveling fellowship and twelve hundred dollars with which to prosecute his studies abroad. Thus honorably armed Mr. Thatcher sailed for Europe and for three years diligently applied himself to further study in universities at Berlin, Marburg, Geneva and in the American School for Classical Studies at Athens.

Upon returning to America, Doctor Thatcher was given the chair of Church History at Allegheny Seminary and for four years occupied that position, filling in his summer vacations with further research work in the University of Berlin, Germany. In 1892 Doctor Thatcher was given the chair of Medieval History in the University of Chicago, which he occupied until 1906, devoting much of his time meanwhile to the history of the papacy and religious orders. Resigning his position at the University of Chicago in 1906, Doctor Thatcher retired from teaching and returned to Wilmington. Ever interested in public affairs in Clinton county, Doctor Thatcher, in 1908, acquired a controlling interest in the Clinton Republican and gave that excellent paper his editorial direction for three years, at the end of which time he sold his interest and since then has occupied his spare time in literary and historical work. He has served also as an instructor in Wilmington College. In 1912 Doctor Thatcher was elected to the Ohio state Legislature from this district and was re-elected in 1914. Upon the creation of the Ohio state school survey commission in 1913, Doctor Thatcher was made chairman of that important body. This commission made a survey of the rural schools of Ohio and the report based upon this survey actuated the governor to call a special session of the General Assembly, at which the recommendations made by the commission were enacted into law, this new law being generally regarded as having given to Ohio the best code for the conduct of rural schools possessed by any state in the Union.

Since 1912 Doctor Thatcher has occupied himself chiefly in his extensive literary labors, the preparation of the manuscript of his numerous books having been an arduous labor, yet, withal, a labor of love, for in these books he has given to students the full fruit of his years of diligent research. During these years of research, Doctor Thatcher spent one year in close study in the wonderful library of the Vatican at Rome and the titles of several of his books suggest the particular character of his studies. Among these books, which are well known to students the world over, may properly be mentioned, "A Sketch of the History of the Apostolic Church," "Europe in the Middle Ages," "A Short History of Medieval Europe," "Studies Concerning Adrian IV," and a general history of Europe, as a high-school text-book, the latter work having been prepared in conjunction with another professor. He also has collaborated with Professor McNeal, of the Ohio State University, in the compilation and preparation of "A Source Book for Medieval History," and was editor-in-chief of that monumental work in eight volumes, "A Library of Original Sources," known to all students.

Doctor Thatcher occupies a very high place in literary and scholastic circles and is held in the highest esteem by both the faculty and student body of Wilmington College, as well as throughout this entire section. Distinguished as a scholar and a statesman, no man in the state of Ohio commands a higher degree of respect and confidence on the part of the public than he and it is but fitting that there should be included in this volume of history relating to Clinton county, this modest biographical mention of the man whose unselfish services have contributed so much to the advancement of the cultural life of the community in which the most of his life has been spent.

LAWRENCE W. BRANDENBURG.

The Brandenburg family came to Ohio from Frederick county, Virginia, William Brandenburg having settled in the great Buckeye state some time before America's second War of Independence in 1812. It was he who built the first steam grist-mill ever constructed in Clinton county, a mill which was erected and operated at Blanchester. William Brandenburg was a soldier in the Mexican War.

Lawrence W. Brandenburg, formerly a well-known school teacher of this county and now a prosperous farmer of Washington township, a grandson of William Brandenburg, was born in Clinton county on February 11, 1857, son of Moses D. and Rebecca A. (Gallaher) Brandenburg, the former of whom was born, February 1, 1834, near Blanchester, and the latter, in Washington township, the daughter of Harvey and Anna (Williams) Gallaher. Harvey Gallaher was a native of Warren county, Ohio, born in 1800, who, in 1840, moved to Clinton county and located in Washington township, where he lived the remainder of his life.

The paternal grandparents of Lawrence W. Brandenburg were William and Mary (Pearson) Brandenburg, who were residents of this county for many years. William Brandenburg had come to Ohio when a small boy, some time before the War of 1812. His parents settled near Aurora, Indiana, but later located in Warren county, this state. William Brandenburg operated a steam grist-mill near Blanchester in connection with his farm, but in the later years of his life abandoned the milling business and devoted all of his time to the farm, being the owner of about one hundred and fifty acres of land in Washington township. William and Mary Brandenburg were the parents of six children, of whom Moses D., the father of Lawrence W., was the fourth, the other children being Delilah, Susannah, Aaron, Caroline and Nancy.

The late Moses D. Brandenburg received the rudiments of an education at Second Creek school in Marion township, and, when a young man, began farming in the township in partnership with his father. Later he moved to Washington township, and, after a couple of years, moved to McLean county, Illinois, where he farmed for four years, at the end of which time he returned to Washington township, and there spent the remainder of his life. Upon his return, he bought fifty acres of land in Washington township, and later added forty acres to his farm. Moses D. and Rebecca A. Brandenburg were the parents of seven children, of whom Lawrence W., the subject of this sketch, was the eldest, the other children being Laura, Templin, Rodney, Catherine, Mary and Frank. Moses D. Brandenburg and family were members of the Friends church at Beech Grove and he was identified with the Republican party.

Lawrence W. Brandenburg was educated in the common schools of Washington township and later attended school at Martinsville. Upon leaving school, he taught for thirteen years in Clermont and Clinton counties. Subsequently he took up farming as a vocation and has since devoted all of his time to it. Mr. Brandenburg owns one hundred and twelve and one-half acres in Washington township near Cuba, where he lives. In 1913 he purchased a farm of one hundred and twenty-eight acres in Marion township and he oversees the farming of both tracts of land, being interested considerably in stock raising.

On April 3, 1884, Lawrence W. Brandenburg was married to Mary E. Moore, daughter of John W. and Martha H. (Haines) Moore, and to this union have been born four children, Maude, John, Ralph and Earl. Maude, the eldest, married Earl Harris and has one daughter, Lois.

As a Republican, Mr. Brandenburg served a period of six years as trustee of Washington township and has to his credit an efficient and honorable record of public service. He is treasurer of the burial fund of the Mt. Pleasant Methodist church. The Brandenburg family are members of the Friends church. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

WILLIAM N. REYNOLDS.

William N. Reynolds, the proprietor of one hundred and fifty acres of land in Green township and a successful farmer of Clinton county, was born in Highland county, Ohio, January 16, 1864, the son of Charles P. and Callie (Grice) Reynolds, natives, respectively, of Illinois and Brown county, Ohio, the former of whom was born in 1835. Callie Grice was the daughter of Charles and Catherine (Cooper) Grice, early settlers in Brown county, Ohio, who later came to Clinton county, where Charles Grice passed away, his widow spending her last days at Middletown, Ohio.

Charles P. Reynolds, the father of William N. Reynolds, emigrated from Illinois to Brown county, Ohio, about 1865. He later removed to Green township, this county, where he died in 1911. His widow died many years previously, in 1871. They were the parents of two children, William N., the subject of this sketch, and Joseph M. Charles P. Reynolds was a Democrat in politics.

William N. Reynolds, who was reared on the home farm and was educated in the public schools of Martinsville and Wilmington, has been engaged in farming all his life. Until 1907 he rented land, sharing the profits. In 1907 he bought a farm of one hundred and fifty acres in Green township. On September 7, 1884, William N. Reynolds was married to Cynthia Jane Brown, who was born in Union township, this county, December 18, 1865, daughter of John S. and Charlotte (Routh) Brown, the former of whom was born in Kentucky in 1817 and the latter in Clinton county, in 1825. The paternal grandparents were Elisha and Polly (Alexander) Brown, who settled in Green township, this county, in 1829, but who, after reaching advanced years, removed to Indiana, their last days being spent in Huntington county, in that state. Mrs. Reynolds' maternal grandparents were John and Jennie (Moon) Routh, both natives of Tennessee, who were married in that state. After their marriage, they came to Ohio, settling in Clinton county, some time before 1825, locating on a farm in Clark township. They died near Martinsville. Mrs. Reynolds' father owned one hundred and sixty acres of land in Union township. He died in 1900, and his widow died in 1910. They were the parents of five children, Francis Marion (deceased), Daniel R., Polly, Jessie and Cynthia Jane.

To Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds eight children have been born, as follow: Anna Bell, who married Charles A. Ward and has two children, Marjorie and Donald R.; Cora Bessie, who married Ray Murphy and has three children, Fred, Maxine and Glen R.; Oscar B., deceased; Orville N., who married Rose Slacker of Union township, and has one child, Herbert; Charlotte, John P., Georgia Opal and David H. are at home. Mr.

and Mrs. Reynolds are members of the Christian church at New Antioch and their children have been reared in that faith. Mr. Reynolds votes the Republican ticket and takes a warm personal interest in good government. He is a substantial farmer and a good citizen who is held in high regard by all who know him.

JAMES H. TERRELL.

The late James H. Terrell was one of the most widely known farmers in the whole history of Clinton county. Born on March 29, 1846, he was the son of Israel A. and Sidney (Huff) Terrell, the former of whom, born in Highland county, Ohio, in 1818, died in 1906, and the latter, born in 1827, died in 1902. The late James H. Terrell died in this county, April 9, 1900. His father moved to Clinton county in 1848 and settled in Wayne township, on a farm. The country was a wilderness at the time and roads were not even laid out. He fenced his garden and his yard with cordwood and, during his life, cleared and drained a great deal of land, at one time being the owner of about eleven hundred acres, nearly half of which he had cleared himself. That times have changed and the standard of living and wages have also changed is very clearly proved by the fact that the carpenter who built Israel Terrell's house worked for thirty-seven and one-half cents a day, and the hewer worked for twenty-five cents. At the time of his death, Israel A. Terrell was the vice-president of the New Vienna Bank and a stockholder in the bank at Leesburg. He was one of the most energetic men of the community and it was an admitted fact that he could cradle more wheat than any other man in his neighborhood. He was the very soul of honor and believed strongly in education. In fact, he was one of a hundred men who helped to endow Wilmington College. Israel A. and Sidney Terrell were the parents of six children, James H., the subject of this sketch, Allen I., Sarah, William, Charles and Annie.

Of the remote Terrell ancestry, it may be said that William Terrell, who was born in 1650, came to America in 1670 at the age of twenty years with two brothers, who were sent to this country by the English King as explorers and hunters and who, for their services, received large tracts of land in Virginia. William Terrell had a son, David, who was born in 1675, and who died in 1757. He and his wife reared a family of twelve children, one of whom was David, who was born in 1698. David, Jr., married three times, the first time, Sarah Johnson, the second, Sarah Clark and the third, Martha Johnson and was the father of nine children. The great-grandfather of James H. Terrell was another David Terrell, who was born in Lynchburg, Virginia, in 1763, and who died in 1858. He married Mary Anthony, who also died in 1858. They had come to Ohio in 1806 and located near Highland, in Highland county, where they reared eight children: Pleasant, Christopher, David, Joseph, Mary, Judith, Sarah and Elizabeth. The father of these children was a justice of the peace in Fairfield township for about a quarter of a century. He was a great hunter and loved to spend his time in the wilderness.

Pleasant Terrell was born in Bedford county, Virginia, in 1791, and died in 1837. He married Esther Haines, who died in 1846. They were the parents of six children, David, John, Israel, Mary, Narcissa and Ruth. They came to Highland county, Ohio, from Virginia, stopping awhile in Cincinnati, where Pleasant Terrell learned the brickmason's trade.

The late James H. Terrell was educated in the common schools of Wayne township and later attended Earlham College at Richmond, Indiana. Before he became of age, he served as deputy treasurer of Clinton county for three years and then moved to a farm in Green township, where he farmed until 1885. He then moved to a farm in Wayne township, where he lived the remainder of his life. He became an extensive breeder of Shorthorn cattle and was a leader in the development of pure-bred live stock in the county.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES H. TERRELL.

On December 13, 1871, James H. Terrell was married to Edith H. Nordyke, who was born on January 8, 1846, in Green township, daughter of Henry and Phoebe (Rich) Nordyke, and one of four children born to her parents, the others being Thomas, Aaron and Caroline. Henry Nordyke was a well-known farmer in Green township, this county. To this union were born six children: Tasso, who married Millie Terrell and has two children, Lois A. and Paul J.; Edith Eva, who married J. W. Woody and has two children, Mary and H. Clayton; Bertha B., who is at home; Mary Anna, who is the wife of A. J. Hollowell and has two children, Edith E. and Esther; J. Gurney and C. Clayton, both young farmers of Wayne township, who are also at home. All of the Terrell children have attended Wilmington College and four are graduates of that institution. Tasso and C. Clayton Terrell are also graduates of Haverford, both having won a scholarship while attending Wilmington College. C. Clayton Terrell also attended the Ohio State Agricultural College for one year. Edith Eva Terrell, after her graduation from Wilmington College, completed a course as a trained nurse at Cincinnati and from 1902 until 1909 was a missionary to Cuba.

The late James H. Terrell was a man greatly honored by his fellow citizens, having been elected to the state Legislature in 1883, and re-elected in 1885 without opposition. This is unusual, from the fact that he was the first representative from this district, for many years, to serve two consecutive terms. He secured the passage of numerous bills pertaining to agriculture, among these being one directed to eradicate diseases among live stock and which led to the adoption of the present law on that subject. He was also a member of the state fair board and secured the passage of a bill by which the fair grounds were purchased for fifty thousand dollars. During his legislative career, he served as chairman of the finance committee of the House. He was especially interested in the state experiment station and obtained large appropriations from the government for that work.

Mr. Terrell was a member of the Society of Friends. His energy was continually expended in developing the social and religious conditions of his community. He was broad-minded and public-spirited and was endowed with superior abilities that made him a leader among the citizens of the county. He was a frequent contributor to the press along both religious and secular lines. His popularity was due to his unselfish devotion to the causes that have made Clinton county famous.

AARON E. DOUGHFMAN.

Aaron E. Doughfman, the well-known superintendent of the Blanchester Light Company since January 19, 1906, was born on September 6, 1876, in Clermont county, Ohio, the son of William and Margaret Doughfman, the former of whom was a farmer in Clermont county, who, in 1884, came to Clinton county and located at Cuba, later removing to Blanchester, where his death occurred. Six children were born to William and Margaret Doughfman, of whom Aaron E. was the youngest, the others being Charles, Ada, Henry, John and William.

Aaron E. Doughfman received his elementary education in the public schools of Blanchester, and later took a correspondence course in electrical engineering, being a student of the course given by the International Correspondence School at Scranton, Pennsylvania. Mr. Doughfman's first position was as a fireman on the Baltimore & Ohio railway, a position which he held for eighteen months. After that he was stationary engineer for the Blanchester home factory for about three years, and then night engineer at the Jamestown, Ohio, lighting plant, after which he held the position as head engineer at the Xenia, Ohio, light plant. He then started a plant at New Vienna, Ohio, where he worked eight months, after which he became head engineer at the Wilmington light plant, and during his service of three and one-half years at Wilmington, assisted in the construction of a new plant. In January, 1906, Mr. Doughfman took charge of the light plant at Blanchester, where he has since been located.

In 1901, Aaron E. Doughfman was married to Ida Lever, of Blanchester, and to this union one daughter has been born, Hannah.

Fraternally, Aaron E. Doughfman is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, the Knights of Pythias, and the National Association of Stationary Engineers. Mrs. Doughfman is a member of the Baptist church.

ELIJAH Q. BERNARD.

Elijah Q. Bernard, a prosperous farmer of Green township, this county, was born in the township where he lives on December 30, 1874, son of Charles B. and Josie (Credon) Bernard, the latter of whom, a native of Wayne township, this county, is now deceased. Charles B. Bernard, after the death of his first wife, married Lummie Cox of Highland county, Ohio, by whom he has had five children: Bessie, who married Edward Larick; Jessie, deceased; James; Frank and Sallie. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Larick had one child, Bessie, now deceased. Elijah Q. Bernard is the only child born to his father's first marriage.

Mr. Bernard was reared on the farm and was educated in the public schools of Green township. He is a farmer by occupation, and owns one hundred and thirty acres of land, where general farming and stockraising are carried on. This land is a part of the old homestead, where his grandfather, George Washington Bernard, settled upon coming to Clinton county and where his father was born. Elijah Q. Bernard is an up-to-date farmer in every respect, and is keenly interested in raising Percheron horses, at the present time owning one of the finest stallions in Clinton county.

The complete history of the Bernard family may be found in the biographical sketch of James K. Bernard presented elsewhere in this volume. Charles B. Bernard, father of Elijah Q., was born on January 17, 1846, in Clinton county, son of George Washington Bernard, one of the county's most active pioneers.

On November 6, 1895, Elijah O. Bernard was married to Jessie Hunter, of Wayne township, this county, and to this union four children have been born, all of whom are living, as follow: Claude, Evelyn, Herbert, and Helen.

Politically, Elijah Q. Bernard, is a Democrat. He is an active, enterprising citizen and he and his family are held in high regard in the neighborhood in which they live.

JOHN C. BORING.

John C. Boring, the proprietor of seventy-three and one-half acres of land in Green township, this county, where he has lived continuously for the past twenty-two years, was born in that township on May 16, 1842, the son of Lafayette and Elsie (Collet) Boring. Lafayette Boring was born in Harrison county, Virginia, October 2, 1811, and his wife was born near Louisville, Kentucky. The paternal grandparents of Mr. Boring were Thomas and Ruth Boring, pioneers of Clinton county, the former of whom died in 1864. The maternal grandparents were John Collet and wife, both of whom died the state of Kentucky.

Lafayette Boring was a young man when he came to Clinton county, Ohio. He was a farmer in this county and owned one hundred and twenty-two acres of land. He died in Green township, February 11, 1883. His wife had passed away many years previously, when their son, John C., was a small child. They were the parents of five children, of whom two, Elizabeth, the first-born, and Mary, the fourth in order of birth, are deceased. The living children are Ruth, John C. and Absalom.

John C. Boring, who was reared on a farm in Green township, and educated in the public schools, is a well-known citizen of that township. He was married on October 2, 1864, to Almira E. McKenzie, who was born in Union township, this county, the daughter of William and Lucinda (Morton) McKenzie, both natives of Clinton county, Ohio. William McKenzie was a son of John McKenzie, a pioneer of this county and a prominent citizen in the early life of this section of the state. William and Lucinda (Morton) McKenzie are both deceased. To John C. Boring and wife five children were born, Nettie Jane, Mary Etta, Geneva Louisa, Minnie and Cordelia, all of whom are living. The mother of these children died on March 6, 1911.

The venerable John C. Boring was a soldier in the Civil War, having enlisted on May 2, 1864, in Company K, One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He served one hundred days, and took part in the battle of Frederick City. Politically, he is an adherent of the principles of the Republican party.

Mrs. Boring was an active member and worker in the Christian church at New Antioch, where her loss was most keenly felt. She was a loving mother and devoted wife.

WILLIAM D. JARRELL.

Nothing is sweeter in all the world than the love of a dutiful and worthy son for an aged mother. No one ever adequately may tell the story of a mother's sacrifices or the anxious hours and days through which she passes while her children are being reared to manhood and womanhood. Sons and daughters cannot fully repay the debt of gratitude they owe their mother. It is her unselfish spirit which comforts them in sorrow, inspires them when they are downcast, and ministers to them when they are sick and afflicted. It was altogether praiseworthy for the country, by common consent, to set apart one day in each year called "Mothers' Day," when the thoughts of the people may turn to the unselfish life of the mothers. William D. Jarrell, a modest and unassuming man and resident of Wayne township, this county, has had an opportunity to do more for his mother during her declining years than falls to the lot of most men, and it is a credit to him and a credit to the community in which he lives that his love for this dear old mother is the kind which finds an expression in the unselfish devotion with which he is making comfortable this evening time of her life.

Mr. Jarrell was born on October 29, 1866, in Richland township, this county, and his father, Benjamin Jarrell, who was born in 1816, in Orange county, Virginia, died in 1900. Since that time his mother, who, before her marriage to Benjamin Jarrell, was Sarah E. Massie has lived with her son, William D. She was born in Adams county, Ohio, September 27, 1838, and is now near the age of eighty years. She is a daughter of William and Cynthia Massie, the former of whom was a farmer of Highland county, Ohio, a member of the Methodist church, and an active church worker all his life. She was one of thirteen children born to her parents, the others being Philena, Nancy, Henry Benjamin, Simon, Spencer, Elvira, Mary M., Alfred, Ellis, Himan T., Amanda and Sanford. Of these children, Himan T. died while young. The great-grandparents on Mr. Jarrell's maternal side were Benjamin and Nancy (Lovejoy) Massie, the former of whom was a native of Richmond, Virginia, and who, when a young man, surveyed this section of Ohio. Later in life he taught school.

Mr. Jarrell's paternal grandparents were William and Mildred (Campbell) Jarrell, the former a farmer of Orange county, Virginia, who came to Ohio in 1854, locating in Wayne township, this county, where he followed farming the remainder of his life. William and Mildred (Campbell) Jarrell were the parents of five children, William, James, Benjamin, Permelia and Mary.

The late Benjamin Jarrell was educated in the common schools of Orange county, Virginia, and when a young man engaged in the milling business, which occupation he followed all his life. He first owned a mill in the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia, and then removed to Richmond, that state, where he operated a mill for fourteen years. In 1854 he came to Ohio and settled in Highland county, where he operated a mill for two years. Two years later he removed to Centerville, where he built a mill, but later he sold that mill and removed to Leesville, where he built and for many years operated a mill at Lees Creek, Richland township, this county, which his son, William D., now operates. Benjamin Jarrell and wife were the parents of five children, of whom James and Thomas died early in life. William D., the first born and the subject of this sketch, has never married. Fannie married George Snow, and Sophronia is the wife of Isaac Summers. Benjamin Jarrell was a Democrat and an earnest member of the Christian church.

William D. Jarrell was educated in the common schools of Wayne township. When a lad of fourteen he began his apprenticeship in the mill owned by his father, and has been in the milling business since that time, a period of thirty-five years. Upon the death of his father he took absolute charge of the mill, and has built a part of it. He has both a grist- and saw-mill, and does custom milling of all kinds. He also buys wheat, corn and oats, and sells flour and feed. He also does a custom-sawing business, and has a large patronage.

Mr. Jarrell is Democratic and fraternally is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is a splendid man, not only in the home relationships of life, but in his business relations as well.

JOSEPH W. WILLIAMS.

Joseph W. Williams is one of those successful farmers of Green township who has had much to do with the agricultural development of Clinton county. He was born in Highland county, this state, May 23, 1865, son of Daniel and Mary (Hatcher) Williams, both natives of Highland county, the former born in 1837, and the latter in 1843. Mary Hatcher was the daughter of Peter and Sophia (Miller) Hatcher, both natives of Virginia, who emigrated to Highland county early in its history. They were farmers by occupation and members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Peter Hatcher voted the Democratic ticket. He and his wife both died in Highland county, the former at the age of eighty-five years, and the latter at the age of seventy-four.

Daniel Williams is the son of Thomas Williams and wife, pioneers in Highland county, Ohio, who owned one thousand acres of land which they had entered from the government. Both died in Highland county. Daniel Williams is a farmer and still lives in Highland county, where he owns about six hundred acres of land. Though now living retired, he continues to look after his farm property and is known as rather an extensive cattle raiser, keeping ordinarily from seventy-five to one hundred head during the summer. He is a Democrat in politics and member of the Presbyterian church, as was his wife, who died on January 19, 1915, at the age of seventy-two years. They were the parents of seven children, Mary Almeta, Priscilla White, Joseph W., Joshua Sanford (deceased), Olive Bertie, Thomas Elmer and Jennie Florella.

Joseph W. Williams was reared on the farm and was educated in the public schools of Highland county. In 1904 he came to Clinton county, and purchased one hundred and sixty-nine acres of land in Green township, where he has since been engaged in general farming, also being known as an extensive cattle feeder.

On March 5, 1890, Joseph W. Williams was married to Mary Jane Brown, of Highland county, born at Rainsboro in 1866, granddaughter of John Davis, a native of Culpeper county, Virginia, and a pioneer in Highland county, who died at the age of seventy-nine years. His wife, Jane (Miller) Davis, died in Highland county at the age of eighty-seven years. To Joseph W. and Mary Jane (Brown) Williams have been born two children, Mary Josephine, born on October 24, 1895, and Harry Dana, April 30, 1900.

WILLIAMS FAMILY

Mr. and Mrs. Williams are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and, fraternally, he is a member of the grange. On another page in this volume will be found a portrait of the Williams family. This was taken from a photograph made in 1910, at the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Daniel and Mary (Hatcher) Williams, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of John H. and Priscilla White (Williams) Heistand, and the twentieth anniversary of the marriage of Joseph W. and Mary Jane (Brown) Williams.

CHRISTOPHER C. BERNARD.

Christopher C. Bernard is a well-known farmer of Sabina, this county, whose great-grandfather, Thomas Bernard, was a prominent Virginia planter and wholesale dealer of Richmond, Virginia, and a soldier in the Revolutionary War, who fought at Brandywine, Germantown, Monmouth, Stony Point and other places.

Christopher C. Bernard was born on July 2, 1872, in Green township, this county, son of James K. and Kesiah (McVey) Bernard, both natives of Clinton county, the former of whom, born on June 19, 1835, in Green township, died on September 5, 1907, and the latter, born on January 19, 1838, in Wayne township, was the daughter of Christopher and Catherine (West) McVey. Mrs. James K. Bernard was one of eight children born to her parents and was the third in order of birth, the others being James, Henrietta, Robert, Edman, Benson, Eliza Jane and Alkana.

The paternal grandparents of Christopher C. Bernard were George W. and Harriet (McConnell) Bernard, the former of whom was born on September 13, 1799, in Goochland county, Virginia, and the latter, October 12, 1810, in Brown county, Ohio. George W. Bernard emigrated from Virginia to Highland county, this state, in 1807, with his parents and in 1832, located on the farm in Green township, this county, where he spent the remainder of his life. He owned over four hundred acres of land and was engaged in general farming. George W. and Harriet (McConnell) Bernard were the parents of nine children, Thomas F., James K., Mary E., John W., Matilda J., George W., Charles B., Martha H. and Elijah M. Harriet (McConnell) Bernard was the daughter of James and Sallie (Downing) McConnell, natives of Pennsylvania, who emigrated to Brown county, Ohio, later, in 1821, coming to Clinton county. George W. Bernard was the son of Thomas and Mary (Hicks) Bernard.

The father of Thomas Bernard and the great-great-grandfather of Christopher C., the subject of this sketch, was William Bernard, a native of England, who married Mary Flemings. They were early settlers in Virginia and he owned three thousand acres of land. He was a wholesale dealer in Richmond, Virginia, and lost most of his property during the Revolutionary War. His son, Thomas, was a Revolutionary soldier, who fought in various important battles of that war.

The late James K. Bernard was educated in the common schools of Green township and when a young man began farming in that township and farmed there practically all his life, having been the owner of about two thousand acres of choice land in Green and Wayne townships. In 1903 he retired and removed to New Vienna, where he spent the remaining four years of his life, passing away in 1907. His widow, the mother of Christopher C., still lives in New Vienna. They were the parents of nine children, as follow: John R., who was born on July 23, 1862; George W., August 14, 1863, Harriett C., August 16, 1864; Charles O., October 30, 1865; Martha, February 23, 1867; James E., April 3, 1868; Christopher C., July 2, 1872; Coraetta, February 7, 1876, and Oscar, September 13, 1878. The late James K. Bernard was a Democrat.

Christopher C. Bernard, who was educated in the public schools of Green township, began farming when a young man in Wayne township, and was engaged in farming there until September, 1903, at which time he retired from the farm and moved to Sabina, where he has lived ever since. He owns two hundred and seventy-seven acres of land in Wayne township, and is considered one of the foremost farmers of that section of the county.

On December 19, 1894, Christopher C. Bernard was married to Edith Pierce, who was born on April 28, 1873, daughter of Hugh and Mary (McKay) Pierce, and to this union has been born one child, Trimble Pierce, born on December 12, 1902.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard are members of the Methodist Protestant church, and Mr. Bernard has served on the official board of the church. He has also served one term as trustee of Richland township and is a member of the Clinton county school board. He is also a member of the Sabina school board. Politically, he is a Democrat. Fraternally, he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. Christopher C. Bernard is a man of splendid appearance and a man of far more than average intelligence. He is popular among his fellow townsmen because of his genial personal manners.

HENRY WARNOCK.

Among the well-known and successful farmers of Clinton county is Henry Warnock, a native of Ross county, Ohio, who was born on January 3, 1858. Mr. Warnock is a son of William and Ellen (Free) Warnock, both natives of Ross county, the former of whom was born near South Salem, in 1817, and the latter, in 1819.

Mr. Warnock's paternal grandfather, Alexander Warnock, was a pioneer in Ross county and died in that county. His maternal grandfather, George Free, also was a pioneer of Ross county and died there. Both were farmers by occupation. Mr. Warnock's father, the late William Warnock, was a farmer, who, in the latter part of his life, moved to Fayette county, where he died in 1901. His wife died eleven years previously, in 1890. They were members of the Methodist church and William Warnock was a Republican. To William and Ellen (Free) Warnock were born seven children, of whom Henry was the fifth in order of birth, the others being Lewis, George (who died at the age of sixteen), Edward, Alfred, Ellsworth and Mary (deceased).

Henry Warnock was born and reared on a farm in Ross county and educated in the public schools of that county. When he was twenty-two years old, he moved to Fayette county, where he remained twenty-seven years, at the end of which time he purchased one hundred and forty acres of land near Edgefield, where he lived for six years. In 1912 he came to Clinton county, purchasing one hundred acres of land in Green township, to which he added, by purchase, fifty acres in 1913. He now owns altogether one hundred and fifty acres and is engaged in general farming and stock raising. Mr. Warnock is a self-made man and the substantial competence with which he is now possessed is the fruit of his own efforts. Most of his money has been made out of the cattle business, since he has always been an extensive cattle feeder.

In November, 1883, Henry Warnock was married to Mary Bennett, a native of Ross county, Ohio, daughter of Levi Bennett, who died in a hospital at Nashville, Tennessee, while serving as a Union soldier, during the Civil War. To this union have been born four children, namely: Lula, the wife of Henry Burr, of Greene county, Ohio, who has two children, Ivan and Marjorie; Verne, who is unmarried and lives on his father's farm; Walker, who also lives on his father's farm, married Iona Leach and has two children, Lavaun and June, and Hallie, who is the wife of Harry Vanorsdall, principal of the Port William high school.

Mr. and Mrs. Warnock are devoted members of the Methodist Protestant church and take an active interest in religious work. Politically, Mr. Warnock is identified with the Democratic party and takes a keen interest in the governmental affairs of the county. He is a substantial citizen of true worth and he and his family are held in high regard by all throughout the section of the county in which they live.

FRANK BASHORE CARTWRIGHT.

Frank Bashore Cartwright, a successful farmer of Green township, this county, was born in that township, on October 15, 1884, the son of Willis and Elizabeth (Bashore) Cartwright, the former a native of Highland county, and the latter born in Clinton county. They are the parents of three children, Bertha, Eva and Frank Bashore, and are now living retired in Wilmington, to which place they moved in 1907. Mr. Cartwright is a Republican in politics.

Frank Bashore Cartwright was reared on a farm near Antioch in Green township and was educated in the public schools. He has always been engaged in farming and owns a farm of one hundred and thirty-five acres in Green township. He also rents one hundred acres of land near Antioch, besides the Amos Fisher farm of one hundred and thirty-five acres. Mr. Cartwright is a general farmer and stockman.

On October 18, 1906, Frank Bashore Cartwright was married to Elizabeth Fisher, who was born on the farm where Mr. and Mrs. Cartwright now live, October 9, 1884, the daughter of Amos and Ruth (Terrell) Fisher, the former of whom was the son of John Fisher and the latter the daughter of John Terrell. Amos Fisher died on January 28, 1906, at his death having been the owner of about three hundred acres of land. John and Hannah Fisher are both deceased, the latter dying in 1904. Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Cartwright are the parents of three children, Virginia Ruth, born on October 7, 1907; Vera Ione, July 3, 1910, and Homer Russell, July 2, 1913.

A Republican in politics, Mr. Cartwright has served as a member of the school board. Fraternally, he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America at New Vienna, Ohio.

JAMES LIEURANCE.

James Lieurance, who has a magnificent country home in Green township, this county, and who is descended from among the very earliest settlers in this section of Ohio, was born in Green township, September 2, 1868, a son of John and Elizabeth (Speaight) Lieurance, the former of whom, a native of Indiana, was born on April 11, 1826, and the latter, November 26, 1826.

The maternal grandparents of Mr. Lieurance were George and Polly Speaight, the former of whom came to Clinton county when a young man and here married and reared a family of eleven children, of whom four, Rachel, Henry, Sallie and Linda, are deceased. The living children are, Mary, John, Jane, Elizabeth, Thomas Wesley, Anna and James.

The late John Lieurance, the father of the subject of this review, was a farmer by occupation, and was the owner of two hundred and eighty-four acres of land, which he accummulated by dint of his own personal efforts. He was a Democrat, and he and his wife were members of the Baptist church. His death occurred April 2, 1901. His widow is still living in Green township.

James Lieurance was reared on his father's farm, receiving his education in the neighboring schools of Washington township. He is a farmer by occupation and owns one hundred and four acres of excellent land. In 1914 he built a beautiful country residence. Three years previously he had erected a large and commodious barn.

On February 9, 1888, James Lieurance was married to Imogene Hendee, a native of Green township, this county, born on December 28, 1866, a daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Boring) Hendee, natives of New York and Green township, this county, respectively, the former born on October 10, 1835, and the latter on August 10, 1835. Charles Hendee died on December 20, 1887, in Clinton county, and his widow is still living in Green township. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Lieurance were William and Anna (Post) Hendee, who came to Clinton county in a wagon from New York state in 1849, and here they spent the remainder of their lives. Of their six children, all except Louisa, the eldest, who is still living at the age of eighty-seven years, are deceased, the deceased children having been William, LeRoy, Charles, Andrus and Alonzo. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Lieurance were William and Sarah (Rix) Boring, early settlers in Clinton county, who spent their last days here. Her father, Charles Hendee, was a Democrat and both he and his wife were earnest and consistent members of the Christian church. They were the parents of six children, Leora, Anna Arminta, Glendora, Imogene, Sarah Cecelia and William, all of whom are living, with the exception of Anna Arminta and Sarah Cecelia.

To Mr. and Mrs. Lieurance one child has been born, Elza, born October 10, 1889, who was educated in the public schools of his home county and is a farmer by occupation. He was married to Osa J. Naylor, of Green township, and to this union was born one child, Bernita, born on October 14, 1914. Mrs. Elza Lieurance died on December 11, 1914, and her husband now lives at the old home place with his parents.

James Lieurance votes the Democratic ticket, but has never been particularly active in political affairs. Mr. and Mrs. Lieurance are attendants of the Friends church, of which their son is a member, and the family is held in high regard throughout the entire community.

PAUL ALVA DANIEL.

Paul Alva Daniel, now a well-known and successful farmer of Green township, this county, the owner of eighty-five acres of land, was born in Highland county, Ohio, February 29, 1868, the son of Joseph and Rachael (Tomlinson) Daniel, the former of whom was born in Virginia, December 29, 1834, and the latter, in Highland county, April 25, 1837.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Daniel were William and Mary Daniel, pioneers in Highland county, the former having come to Ohio from the Old Dominion state, both of whom died in Ohio. The maternal grandparents were Moses and Ruth (Smith) Tomlinson, both natives of Virginia and pioneers in Highland county, Ohio, the former of whom was born on April 13, 1786, and the latter on October 10, 1798, who were married on January 2, 1833.

The late Joseph Daniel, father of Paul Alva, who was a Republican in politics and a member of the Friends church, died on December 4, 1894. By his marriage to Rachael Tomlinson he had four children, William, Edgar, Robert (deceased), and Paul Alva. The mother of these children died on September 17, 1877, and, after her death, her husband, Joseph, married Vanora Reveal, who bore him three children, Charles, Grace and Jay.

Reared on the farm and educated in the public schools of Greene county, Ohio, Paul Alva lived with his aunt, Lydia Tomlinson, and attended the Cedarville high school in Greene county. Mr. Daniel took up farming early in life, and in 1901, came to Clinton county, where he purchased eighty-five acres of land. He has made all of the improvements upon his farm, and has had more than a flattering measure of success in stock raising.

On February 20, 1895, Paul A. Daniel was married to Olive Fenner, who was born in Meigs county, Ohio, October 28, 1874, the daughter of Milton and Cyanda (McLaughlin) Fenner, the former of whom was born in Clinton county, Ohio, August 25, 1845, and the latter, in Meigs county, Ohio, December 26, 1846. The paternal grandfather was James Fenner, a Virginian, who married Mary Fenner, a native of Highland county, Ohio, who settled in Clinton county, where their last days were spent. Mrs. Daniel's maternal grandparents were Elihu and Louisa (Wine) McLaughlin, natives of Ohio and Kentucky respectively, early settlers in Meigs county, Ohio, where both died. Mrs. Daniel's father has lived with Mr. and Mrs. Daniel since his wife died, on January 12, 1910. He and his wife were the parents of five children, namely: Cynthia Ellen, wife of Daniel Frump; Olive, who is now Mrs. Daniel; Howard, deceased; Ray and Ethel, the latter of whom married William Gorham, of Greene county.

To Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Daniel have been born three children, Joseph Milton, who was born on May 1, 1897, and was educated in the public schools and Wilmington high school; Ivan Ray, October 15, 1899, also educated in the public schools and the Wilmington high school, and Clifton Arthur, December 12, 1907, who died on February 11, 1908.

Paul Alva Daniel votes the Republican ticket and is more or less active in the political affairs of Green township.

SENECA MURPHY.

Seneca Murphy, a farmer of Green township, this county, who for the past sixteen years has rented the Bosworth farm in that township, was born in that township on April 6, 1863, the son of David and Hannah (Dennis) Murphy, the former of whom was born in Berkeley county, Virginia, July 31, 1816, and the latter, in Clinton county, Ohio, September 1, 1831.

Mr. Murphy's paternal grandparents, Jacob and Mary (Lowman) Murphy, were both born in Virginia; the former on March 4, 1791, and the latter on November 9, 1793. They came to Clinton county in 1826 and settled west of Wilmington, later settling in Green township, on the farm where Isaiah Murphy now lives, and where both died, Jacob Murphy on December 29, 1871, and his wife, January 26, 1873. Jacob Murphy and wife, who were married on April 20, 1813, in Virginia, were the parents of twelve children, namely: Rebecca J., born on August 1, 1814, who died on September 27, 1885; David, July 31, 1816, died on April 9, 1898; William, May 21, 1818, died on March 2, 1866; Susannah, May 21, 1820, died on October 9, 1906; John, March 20, 1822, died in infancy; Catherine, September 12, 1823, died on June 8, 1885; Ephraim, March 5, 1825, died in infancy; Nancy, May 12, 1827, died on October 28, 1863; Isaiah M., March 2, 1830, and Mary Ann, December 9, 1832. The parents of these children were members of the Christian church. Jacob Murphy voted the Democratic ticket. The maternal grandfather of Mr. Murphy was Richmond Dennis, mentioned elsewhere in this work.

David Murphy, father of Seneca, was educated in the public schools of Clinton county, and became a farmer, owning one hundred and thirty-five acres of land in Green township. David and Hannah (Dennis) Murphy were the parents of four children, David A., Andrew (deceased), Seneca and Stephen D. By a previous marriage to Isabel Smith, David Murphy had eight children, of whom four, Hester Ann, Rebecca, John A. and Benjamin F. are deceased, the living children being Hannah, Isaiah W., Henry M. and Charles W. David Murphy died on April 9, 1898, and his second wife on October 4, 1904. Politically, he was identified with the Democratic party. His wife was a member of the Christian church at New Antioch.

Born and reared on the farm and educated in the public schools, Seneca Murphy has been engaged in farming all his life. He is also interested in stock raising, and is considered one of the most successful stockmen of Green township.

On October 16, 1887, Seneca Murphy was married to Lizzie Vance, who was born in Washington township, this county, on December 25, 1866, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Pyle) Vance, natives of Virginia and Pennsylvania, respectively. Elizabeth Pyle was the daughter of William and Polly (Ewey) Pyle, who were pioneers of Clinton county, the former of whom died in the state of Illinois, and the latter in Clinton county. David Vance came to Clinton county from Virginia when a young man. After his marriage he farmed in Washington township. He died in Nebraska in 1890. His wife had died many years previously, in January, 1867. They were the parents of eleven children, William, Alpheus, John P., Emery, Frank, David Clinton, Mary, Nettie, Ella, Addie and Lizzie.

To Seneca and Lizzie (Vance) Murphy two children have been born, David Clinton, born on April 2, 1892, who was educated in the public schools and is a farmer by occupation, married Maud Fife of Union township, and has one child, Seneca Maxwell, and Charles Howard, July 29, 1902. Politically, Mr. Murphy is a Democrat. Mrs. Murphy is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

ELI FISHER.

Those who faced the dangers and the hardships incident to life on the battlefields of the Civil War those who bore the suffering and made the sacrifice for their country's sake, especially deserve mention in these annals. The younger generation should never forget that to the veterans of the war between the states is due a debt of gratitude which can never be repaid; since the prosperity, liberty and happiness which this nation now enjoys is the direct outcome of their labors and loyalty. Among the honored veterans of the great Civil War, who have answered the last roll call, the late Eli Fisher of Green township, this county, was one who gave three years of his life to the service of his country and then returned home and lived a life of usefulness and honor until his death on November 3, 1902.

The late Eli Fisher was born in Clinton county, Ohio, June 27, 1842, the son of Cephas and Jane (Leech) Fisher, natives of Pennsylvania. His grandparents were James and Jane Fisher, also natives of Pennsylvania, who immigrated to Tennessee soon after 1800 and about 1804 moved to Highland county, Ohio, settling near Monroe, where they spent the rest of their lives. Cephas Fisher had arrived at early manhood when his father's family moved to Tennessee. He was twice married, the first time probably in Tennessee to Rachel Stanbury, who died on May 5, 1844. They moved to Clinton county in 1837, after having lived temporarily in Highland county. To this first union were born eight children, among whom may be mentioned Rebecca, who married Isaac Atkinson, of Story county, Iowa; Cephas, Jr., who later moved to Henry county, Iowa; and John, long a resident of Clinton county. Cephas Fisher married, secondly, Mrs. Jane Atkinson, whose maiden name was Leech, and to this union there was born one child, Eli, the subject of this sketch. Mrs. Jane (Leech) Atkinson, by her first husband, had five children, among whom were Hannah and Rebecca Ann, the latter of whom married David Brewer. Cephas Fisher died on December 30, 1864, at the age of eighty-four years. His widow lived to an advanced age.

Eli Fisher grew to manhood on the old home place with his mother. When twenty years of age, or on August 15, 1862, he enlisted in the defense of his country in Company G, Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served throughout the war, receiving his discharge on June 17, 1865. He served in the Army of the Cumberland under various commanders and was with General Sherman on his march from Atlanta to the sea. During the war he was slightly wounded on two occasions, but in all of his service he was never in an ambulance nor a hospital, and never lost a single day from duty, which is a most unusual record.

On February 1, 1866, Eli Fisher was married to Rebecca Jane McFadden, who was born in this county, on November 28, 1841, the daughter of John and Elizabeth (Newcomb) McFadden, the former of whom was born in Mason county, Kentucky, in 1808, the son of John and Sophia (Kelly) McFadden, natives of Ireland, who came to America about 1800 and settled at Marietta, Ohio, from which place they moved to Mason county, Kentucky. While residing at the latter place, John McFadden, Sr., started on a trip down the river to New Orleans with two boat loads of meat, lard, hemp and tobacco for the market. He was taken sick with the yellow fever and died at Natchez, Mississippi. About 1811 the widow and her family moved to Brown county, Ohio, from which place in 1821, they moved to Clinton county, locating near Centerville, where she resided until her death in 1830. They had three sons and three daughters, among whom were Hugh and John, Jr., the father of Mrs. Fisher. John McFadden, Jr., was thirteen years of age when the family located near Centerville, where he grew to manhood. He was married on May 1, 1834, to Elizabeth Newcomb, who was born in Pennsylvania on October 26, 1810, the daughter of William and Anna Newcomb, natives of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, respectively. They were the parents of ten children, Jehu, born on March 20, 1835; Mary Ann, August 10, 1836; Harrison W., November 13, 1839; Rebecca J., who married Mr. Fisher; William N., June 9, 1844; John C., August 18, 1846; Sophia, August 3, 1848; Thomas N., October 6, 1851; Hannah E., March 22, 1855, and Charles (deceased), December 3, 1837. Charles McFadden was also a soldier in the Civil War, having enlisted in September, 1861, in Company B, Fortieth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He was wounded just after the victory of Lookout Mountain and died from the effect of his wounds on December 27, 1863. John McFadden, Jr., owned a good farm of one hundred and ninety acres in Green township. His wife died on June 9, 1880. He served as school director for thirty-one years and was township trustee thirteen years. At the time of his death, he was a worthy member of the Christian church, to which he belonged for over forty years.

To Mr. and Mrs. Eli Fisher two children were born, Charles, born on December 29, 1866; and Mary, December 25, 1871. Charles was educated in the public schools and was a farmer by occupation. He is a Republican, a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at New Vienna and the Modern Woodmen of America. Mary married Daniel O. Kester, of Clark township, and they have three children, Warren, Donald and Edith.

Eli Fisher purchased the place, where he lived until his death, of John W. Sammely. He erected buildings on the farm and made many improvements. At the time of his death, in 1902, he was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at New Vienna. He was identified with the Republican party and he and his wife were members of the Christian church at Centerville. Mr. Fisher had a birthright in the Friends church.

WILLIAM H. CURTIS.

William H. Curtis now a prosperous farmer of Green township, this county, who is also engaged in the stock business and who is now residing in New Vienna, was born in Green township, this county, on January 24, 1858, son of David and Martha (Truitt) Curtis, natives of Virginia, who were born in 1827 and 1837, respectively, the former of whom died in 1898, and the latter of whom is still living.

The paternal grandparents of William H. Curtis were Christopher and Sarah Curtis, pioneers in Clinton county and early settlers in Green township, who settled on what is now known as the Higgins' farm. The maternal grandfather, George Truitt, who was the son of William Truitt, a pioneer of Clinton county, who died at the age of about ninety years, married Abigail Applegate, and both died in this county, the wife in the house now occupied by her grandson, Allen Albert Curtis, in 1906, at the age of eighty-four years. David and Martha (Truitt) Curtis were the parents of nine children, namely: Allen Albert, who is referred to in a biographical sketch presented elsewhere in this volume; William H., the subject of this sketch; Sarah, deceased; James E.; Jennie, deceased; Frank; Lula, who married Frank Steele; George, and Lucy, wife of Oscar Matthews, referred to elsewhere in this volume.

William H. Curtis was reared on the farm and was educated in the public schools of Clinton county. He owns two hundred and fifty-three acres of land in Green township and, until October 8, 1904, lived on the farm. At that time he moved to New Vienna and engaged in buying and shipping stock. Mr. Curtis owns property in New Vienna.

On April 4, 1879, William H. Curtis was married to Martha Elmira Jane McVey, who was born in 1860 in the state of Illinois, daughter of Robert McVey, later a resident of this county, now deceased, and to this union four children have been born, namely: Clyde, who lives on the home farm in Green township, married Beatrice Cline, daughter of Edward Cline, of New Vienna, and has five children, Helen, Robert, Evelyn, Audrey and Marcile; Martha, who married Charles Rulin, a rural-route mail carrier, living at New Vienna, and has three children, Harry Harriet and Charles Edmond; Harry, who is engaged in the furniture business in New Vienna, and Abbie, who married Robert Rulin, who is engaged in the bakery business in New Vienna, and has two children, William Matthew and Curtis Robert.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis are members of the Friends church. Mr. Curtis is a Democrat and is a member of the New Vienna town council. He has served as a member of the school board and as township trustee in Green township. Fraternally, he is a member of Dalton Lodge No. 578, Free and Accepted Masons.

JOHN B. MOORE.

The late John B. Moore, one of the most successful farmers in the history of Green township, was a man who started in life with seventy-five acres of the old homestead and added to the tract until he owned five hundred and ninety-six acres in Green township, and three hundred and twenty acres in the state of Kansas. He was an extensive farmer and stock raiser all his life, and a man, who, at the time of his death, was one of the most highly respected citizens of Clinton county.

John B. Moore was born in Green township, Clinton county, Ohio, October 20, 1825. He was the son of William and Susan (Childs) Moore, the former of whom was born in Rockcastle county, Virginia, in 1781, and the latter born in the Old Dominion state in 1801. William Moore was the son of John Moore, a native of Virginia, who bought one thousand acres of land and gave it to his son, William. William was brought to Lexington, Kentucky, by his parents when he was but three years old, being the only child of his parents born in Virginia. After coming to Kentucky, they lived in a fort for several weeks until they bought a farm near Millersburg. John Moore and wife were the parents of seven children, namely: William, who died in 1874; James, who died in 1822; John, who died in 1851; Abraham, who died in 1874; Peggy, who married Alec Rutter; Mary, who married Isaac Layson; and Sallie, who married Alec Ardery. William Moore came to Green township, Clinton county, when a young man and was married here. He and his wife had a family of eleven children, of whom nine, Margaret, Susan Jane, John B., Mary McClelland, James, William, Jr., Marjorie, Abraham and Samuel, are deceased. The living children are Sarah and Thomas.

John B. Moore was married, in 1845, to Nancy Johnson, who was born in 1818, in Frederick county, Virginia. She was the daughter of George and Susan (Johnson) Johnson, natives of the Old Dominion state, who later emigrated to Fayette county, Ohio, and lived five miles north of Leesburg. Mrs. Susan Johnson died in Fayette county on the old homestead. George Johnson died in Green township.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Moore were the parents of ten children, as follow: Susan Jane, who was the wife of James Vance, died on May 23, 1890, leaving six children, Cecil, Anna, Jane, John, Lindley and Lucy; George, who lives in Washington C. H., Fayette county, married Ellen Wright and had one child, Leslie, who died in 1913; Mary Ellen married William Johnson, but has no children; John Wesley died in Kansas at the age of forty-five years; America Callie is unmarried and has lived on the old homestead since a child; Grafton Benjamin died unmarried in Kansas City in 1905; Flavious Josepheus married Jennie Doak and has two children, Roscoe and Mabel; Douglas is a prominent farmer of Green township; Anna is the widow of James Meadows and has two children, Marian and James; Samuel married Emma Ayers and to them have been born nine children, of whom seven are living.

The late John B. Moore died on November 20, 1909. His wife had died previously on May 22, 1904. They had been members of the Methodist church, but late in life joined the Friends church. In politics the late John B. Moore was identified with the Democratic party.

CHARLES JOHNSON.

Charles Johnson, a well-known farmer of Green township, this county, where he and his wife own two hundred and fifteen acres of land and where for several years he has been engaged in general farming and stockraising, was born in that township on June 28, 1873, son of Joel and Cornelia J. (Miller) Johnson, the former of whom was born in New Jersey, October 22, 1844, and the latter, in Clinton county, in 1854, the daughter of Isaac and Margaret (Hildebrant) Miller.

Joel Johnson was the son of Michael and Nancy (Chamberlain) Johnson, both natives of New Jersey, born in 1817, and on February 29, 1820, respectively, who were married in New Jersey, in 1840, and came to Ohio four years later, settling in Penn township, Highland county, on the Woodmansee land. Soon afterwards, they came to Clinton county where they spent the remainder of their days. Michael Johnson spent most of his life in Green township. He was a charter member of Dalton Lodge No. 578, Free and Accepted Masons, and voted the Whig and then the Republican ticket until the close of the war, after which he was a Democrat. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal church. They had ten children, Celia, Joel, Mary Hannah, William, Edward, Callie, Fred, Mattie (deceased), Alice and Libbie. Michael Johnson died on July 12, 1912. His wife had died several years previously, in 1897.

Joel Johnson was reared on the farm and was educated in the public schools of Green township, this county. In 1862 he enlisted in the Union army and served until June 9, 1865, having participated in the battles of Resaca, Peach Tree Creek, Kenesaw Mountain, Bentonville, Burnt Hickory, and in many skirmishes. Upon the close of the war, he returned to Clinton county and worked by the month on the farm. Subsequently, he removed to Illinois and worked in Knox county on a farm. Later, however, he returned to Clinton county and worked two years by the month for Zephaniah Spear. In 1871 he was married and a little later purchased a farm of thirty-five acres in Green township. Later he sold that farm and bought one hundred and six acres, to which he added by purchase until he owned one hundred and eighty acres near New Antioch, in Green township. He owns a farm of about fifty acres just outside the corporation line on the Martinsville pike. In 1912, Mr. Johnson moved to New Vienna where he has since lived retired. His father was always a renter, and he has made his own way in the world. He first voted for Lincoln, but has been a Democrat since the war. He served three years as township trustee, and is a member of Carey Johnson Post, Grand Army of the Republic, at New Vienna. By his marriage to Cornelia J. Miller, he has had eleven children, Harry, Charles, Addie, Nannie, William, Norma, Ethel, Mary, Ralph, Bernice and James, all living.

Mrs. Joel Johnson is a daughter of Isaac and Margaret (Hildebrant) Miller, the latter of whom was the daughter of Christopher Hidlebrant, a pioneer of Clinton county who came here from New Jersey. Isaac Miller, who was born on July 30, 1812, was reared on the farm and was educated in the public schools. He and his wife had ten children: Columbus, Ralph, of Wilmington; Isaac Newton, of Harveysburg; William, of Wilmington; Charles, of New Vienna; Mrs. Mary Van Devort, of New Antioch; Mrs. Lydia Hunter, of Jamestown; Mrs. Joel Johnson, of New Vienna; Mrs. Fred Johnson, of New Vienna, and Mrs. Allie Doak, of Martinsville. Isaac Miller was the son of Isaac C. and Polly (Stewart) Miller, both natives of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, the former born on February 5, 1777, and the latter in 1787. Isaac C. Miller was the son of Peter and Catharine (Roads) Miller, the farmer a native of Wales, born in 1740, and the latter a native of the United States. They had five children, John, Jacob, Abraham, Isaac C. and Elizabeth. Peter Miller, who served as a soldier in the patriot army during the Revolutionary War, died in the service and his burial place is not known.

Charles Johnson was reared on the farm and was educated in the common schools of this county. Mr. Johnson and his wife own two hundred and fifteen acres of land in Green township, where he is a general farmer and stock raiser. He has long given his most thoughtful attention to the civic affairs of his community and is now serving his eighth year as trustee of Green township.

On February 27, 1896, Charles Johnson was married to Cora Bernard, daughter of James K. Bernard, who is mentioned in a biographical sketch presented elsewhere in this volume, and to this union four children have been born, Oscar (deceased), Bernard, George and Geneva.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are members of the Friends church and their children thus have a birthright in that society. The family is well known and popular in Green township and enjoys the respect and esteem of the whole community.

EVERETT JAMES.

Everett James, who is a veteran of the Spanish-American War, and whose father was a valiant soldier in the Civil War, enjoys the distinction of being descended on the maternal side from the captain of a company of Boston "minute men," his great-great-grandfather, having been killed at the battle of Bunker Hill by a solid shot from the British fleet.

Everett James was born on January 1, 1878, in Clinton county, Ohio, the son of John W. and Emily (Kilgore) James, the former of whom was a native of Highland county, Ohio, born in 1843, and the latter a native of Clinton county. His paternal grandparents were George and Mary (James) James, who came from Pennsylvania to Ohio and settled in Highland county, where they spent the remainder of their lives. His maternal grandparents were Abraham and Martha (Bloom) Kilgore, early settlers of Clinton county, where both died.

John W. James, who died on May 7, 1914, worked most of his life in the Van Dervort nursery in Green township. He was a Republican and his wife was a member of the Christian church. From July 4, 1863, until the close of the Civil War, the late John W. James served in the Union army in Company I, Eighty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He helped to capture John Morgan and also helped to guard him.

John W. and Emily (Kilgore) James were the parents of four children, of whom U. Chase and Ethel are deceased, the living children being Ida and Everett. U. Chase James served in the same company with Everett in the Spanish-American War. He was a graduate of Hiram College and had received the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

Everett James was reared in Green township and received his education in the public schools at New Antioch. On April 25, 1898, he enlisted for service in the Spanish-American War and served until the close of that war. Upon returning to Clinton county he took up farming, and is now engaged in farming one hundred and seventy acres of land in Green township. He also owns land in the township.

On October 1, 1899, Everett James was married to Bertha Cartwright, who was born in 1880, in Green township, daughter of Willis Cartwright, who is referred to elsewhere in this volume. To this union eight children have been born, Lucille, Frank, Stanley, Lee, Eva, Lowell, John W. and Juanita.

As a Republican, Mr. James was elected a member of the school board of Green township, but at the present time is an ardent advocate of the principles of the Progressive party.

GEORGE W. BERNARD.

George W. Bernard, the second child in the family of the late James K. and Kesiah (McVey) Bernard, is a well-known and well-to-do farmer of Green township, this county. The complete history of the Bernard family is given in the biographical sketch of Mr. Bernard's father, presented elsewhere in this volume. The present generation of this family, in Clinton county, have much to be grateful for in the careers of their distinguished ancestors, for they are descendants of a patriot of Revolutionary days, Thomas Bernard, who was a valiant soldier in the great struggle for independence. Moreover, the successive generations of the family have been conspicuous as business men of large ability in the various communities in which they have settled and lived. To a large degree, George W. Bernard, who is a representative of the fifth generation of the Bernard family in America, possesses the commendable traits of his ancestors. He is named for his grandfather, George Washington Bernard, who was an enterprising farmer in this county until his death, in 1894, at the age of ninety-five years.

George W. Bernard was born in Green township, this county, August 14, 1863, and was reared on the farm and educated in the public schools of that township. Mr. Bernard now owns three hundred and ten acres of land and is a general farmer and stockman.

On December 24, 1894, George W. Bernard was married to Cora Staubus, who was born in Virginia, daughter of Lewis J. and Mary (Clark) Staubus, later of this county, and to this union three children have been born, Aleda, Georgia and Lewis James.

Mr. Bernard is a Democrat in politics, but has never aspired to office, having been too busy with his farm and his own personal affairs to give much time to politics. The Bernard family are members of the Friends church and active in the church work at Fairview.

THOMAS H. ROADS.

Thomas H. Roads, a resident of Green township, this county, who owns one hundred and fifty acres of land in Highland and Clinton counties, was born on August 9, 1869, in Highland county, this state, a son of James and Ellen (Medsker) Roads, both natives of that county.

The paternal grandfather of Thomas H. Roads was Daniel Roads, a pioneer of Highland county, where he lived for many years, his death, however, occurring in Clinton county, he having come here after the death of his wife in Highland county. Mr. Roads' maternal grandparents were Thomas and Nancy (Miller) Medsker, also early settlers in Highland county, both of whom died at Hillsboro.

James Roads was reared on the farm and attended the public schools of his home county. At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted as a soldier in the Union army, in which he served three years. He now lives retired on his farm in Highland county. He has always been a Republican in politics, while religiously, he belongs to the Methodist Episcopal church. To James and Ellen (Medsker) Roads were born four children, Thomas H., Rose, Susie and Nellie, all of whom are living.

Thomas H. Roads was reared on his father's farm, receiving his early education in the district schools of Highland county, afterwards supplementing this with a course in the Hillsboro high school. Mr. Roads is a well-known resident of Green township, where he is engaged in general farming and stock raising, in which he has met with a very gratifying degree of success.

On August 30, 1894, Thomas H. Roads was married to May Rayburn, a daughter of Thomas Rayburn and wife, of Wilmington, this county. Mrs. Roads died on February 17, 1901, at the age of twenty-seven years, and about two years later, June 24, 1903, Mr. Roads married secondly, Nellie Creed, who was born in Highland county, Ohio, on October 27, 1877, daughter of Sanford and Harriet (Hern) Creed, the former a native of Highland county, born in 1842, who is still living there, and the latter a native of England, who died in Highland county in March, 1882, whose parents, natives of England, came to this country in an early day. Mrs. Roads' paternal grandfather, Bennett Creed, and wife were early settlers in Highland county.

To Thomas H. and Nellie (Creed) Roads four children have been born: Lucille, born on November 14, 1904; May, February 17, 1906; James W., July 9, 1907, and George E., June 10, 1909.

Fraternally, Mr. Roads is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Modern Woodmen of America. Politically, he is an ardent adherent of the principles of the Republican party.

ELMER E. PAGE.

Elmer E. Page, now a well-known and progressive farmer and stock raiser of Green township, this county, was born in Brown county, Ohio, November 15, 1862, the son of Benjamin B. and Mary H. (Crispin) Page, the former of whom was born in Virginia, July 7, 1812, and the latter in Washington county, Pennsylvania, February 9, 1823.

Benjamin B. Page was the son of Thomas and Mary (Bellamy) Page, who spent their entire lives in the Old Dominion state. They had eight children, Samuel, Thomas, Edmund, James, John, Benjamin D., Dicy Ann and Wesley. Of these children, Benjamin B. Page and three brothers, Samuel, Wesley and James, came to Clinton county, Benjamin B. Page being a young man at that time. He was married on August 12, 1841, to Mary H. Crispin, whose mother, Matilda Crispin, came to Clinton county about 1835. To Benjamin B. and Mary H. (Crispin) Page were born twelve children, as follow: George W., born on October 1, 1843; John W., May 23, 1845; Anna, August 7, 1847, who died on February 23, 1876; Matilda F., June 7, 1849, who died on September 23, 1850; Nancy Jennie, June 7, 1849, who died on May 3, 1904; Mary E., December 24, 1852, who married Harrison McFadden; Emma, 1854, who died on April 24, 1894; Benjamin E., April 20, 1857; Benson W., April 21, 1859; Derinda, January 3, 1861; Elmer E., November 15, 1862, and Silas P., November 6, 1864, who died on October 27, 1871. Benjamin B. Page died on March 9, 1864, in Brown county, Ohio, and his widow died on October 17, 1908, in Clinton county. He was a farmer by occupation and a Republican in politics. He and his wife were members of the Christian church. He was a member of the Free and Accepted Masons at Lynchburg, in Highland county, and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at New Antioch, this county. In addition to being a farmer, he was also a well-known auctioneer in Clinton county, and had a business extending over several counties in this section. The widow of Benjamin B. Page married, secondly, in 1884, John McFadden, who died on October 17, 1900.

Elmer E. Page was reared in Clinton county and was educated in the public schools. A farmer by occupation, Mr. Page owns the old John McFadden farm of seventy acres in Green township; another of one hundred and thirty acres and still another of sixty acres in Wayne township. He is an extensive breeder of Poland China hogs, and, at the present time, has over two hundred head on the farm. Mr. Page's extensive property interests have been acquired almost altogether by his own efforts.

On April 17, 1886, Elmer E. Page was married to Lizzie Bernard, who was born in Wayne township, this county, November 15, 1865, the daughter of Thomas F. Bernard, an extensive farmer of Wayne township, the son of George W. Bernard, Sr., mentioned elsewhere in this work. To this union two children have been born, Elmer J. and Edna Troy. Elmer J. Page, who was born on July 27, 1886, was educated in the public schools and in the Centerville high school. He is a farmer by occupation and lives on one of his father's farms. He married Stella McPherson, daughter of Carey and Alice (Steele) McPherson, of Clinton county, the former of whom is deceased and the latter of whom is living, to which union two sons have been born, Howard Austin, born on October 7, 1908, and Raymond Arthur, December 6, 1910. Edna Troy Page was born in Troy, Colorado, April 13, 1888, and lived at home with her parents. She was educated in the public schools and in the Centerville high school.

Mr. Page votes the Republican ticket. He and his wife are prominent socially in Green township, where they are well known.

JOHN W. JOHNSON.

John W. Johnson, now a well-known farmer of Green township, this county, was born on June 8, 1872, in Highland county, Ohio, a son of Thomas W. and Minerva (John) Johnson, the former of whom was born in Clinton county, June 6, 1846, and the latter, near Woodville, over the line in Clermont county, September 26, 1844.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Johnson were John and Jane (Botts) Johnson, natives of Highland and Clinton counties, respectively, the latter born near Westboro. John Johnson was a son of William Johnson, who married a Miss Watkins, and emigrated from Virginia to Highland county, Ohio. Both he and his wife died in Clinton county. Jane Botts was a daughter of William and Sarah (Moon) Botts, who came from the Old Dominion state to Clinton county, and died in this county, near Martinsville. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Johnson were Andrew and Sarah (Dunlap) John, natives of Clinton county, Ohio, the former a son of Andrew John, Sr., who married a Miss Brown, a native of Wales. Andrew John was a minister of the Gospel in the early days, prominent among the early settlers of Clinton county, whose death occurred in Illinois.

Thomas W. Johnson, father of John W. Johnson, was reared in Jefferson township, this county, and was educated in the common schools of his home county. In 1862 he answered the call of President Lincoln for volunteers, becoming a member of Company F, Eighty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served two years, doing guard duty at Columbus, Ohio. He is now a member of Carey Johnson Post, Grand Army of the Republic, and lives near Farmers Station, but owns a farm of eighty-four acres in Green township, this county, upon which his son, John W., with whom this narrative deals, now resides. Politically, Thomas W. Johnson was a Republican, but is not active in political affairs, never having aspired to public office. Fraternally, he is a member of Dalton Lodge No. 578, Free and Accepted Masons. Thomas W. Johnson and wife were the parents of five children, Jennie, John W., Hampton, Alice S. and Geneva, all of whom are living.

John W. Johnson was reared in Clinton county and received a good, common-school education. He is a farmer and lives on the old homestead farm in Green township, where he is engaged in farming and stock raising.

In 1906 Mr. Johnson was married to Mattie Holmes, who was born in Green township, this county, daughter of Lemuel and Amanda (Fenner) Holmes, also natives of Green township. To this union has been born one child, Madge W., born on January, 1907.

ELISHA POWELL.

Elisha Powell, who for many years, was a resident and farmer in Green township, this county, was born on October 28, 1842, a son of John and Serena Powell, both natives of Hampshire county, Virginia, the father born in 1804 and the mother in 1806.

Mr. Powell's parents came to Ohio about 1820, locating in Highland county, and during the thirties settled in Green township, this county, where they purchased seventy acres of land, and having erected their rude log cabin proceeded to clear and cultivate the land. During the fifties they sold the farm and bought one hundred and eleven acres, gradually adding to this latter tract until they had one hundred and seventy-five acres of fine farming land. Mr. Powell's father died in 1885, and his mother some years later, at the age of ninety years. John Powell was an old-line Democrat in politics, and was prominent in the life of his community in the early days. He and his wife were the parents of the following children, Elias, Cyrus, William, Thomas M., James H., Joseph E., Elisha, Eli, Alpheus and a son, who died in infancy. Of these children Alpheus was a member of the Masonic fraternity and a Knight Templar. John Powell was also a Knight Templar.

Elisha Powell, who was reared on the farm and educated in the public schools, owns fifty acres of land in Green township, where he has lived all his life, except a period between the years 1865 to 1871, when he lived in Missouri.

On March 9, 1865, Elisha Powell was married to Mary Emily Hoskins, who was born in Clinton county in 1844, daughter of George and Lydia (Bankston) Hoskins, early settlers in Clinton county, both of whom are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Powell are the parents of four children: Serena, widow of Harry Edwards, who lives in New Vienna; Lizzie E. and Lydia Bell, unmarried and living at home, and Oscar H., an attorney of Indianapolis, Indiana.

On March 9, 1915, Mr. and Mrs. Powell celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at the home of their daughter in New Vienna. Mr. Powell's "best man" at the wedding fifty years ago, and the bridesmaid, who was Lucinda Hoskins, now Mrs. Silas Woodmansee, of Greenfield, Highland county, Ohio, a cousin of Mrs. Powell, were present at the celebration of the golden wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Powell is an earnest and devoted member of the Baptist church, in which she is actively interested. Politically, Mr. Powell is a Democrat.

CHARLES L. SMITHSON.

Charles L. Smithson, now the proprietor of two hundred and seventy-five acres of land in Green township, this county, and an enterprising farmer and stockman, was born on December 28, 1856, in Clinton county, Ohio, the son of Drummond and Hannah (Trenary) Smithson, the former of whom was born in Highland county, Ohio, in 1823, and the latter, in Green township, this county, in 1829, on the farm now owned by her son, Charles L.

Mr. Smithson's paternal grandparents were Campbell and Sallie (Terrell) Smithson, both natives of Virginia and pioneers of Highland county, Ohio, who later came to Clinton county, where both died. The maternal grandparents were Thomas and Susie (Achor) Trenary, both natives of Pennsylvania, who were married in the Keystone state, and afterward settled in Green township, this county, on the farm now owned by their grandson, Charles L. Smithson.

Drummond Smithson was reared in Highland county, Ohio, and was a shoemaker by trade, having maintained a shop in the country near where his son Charles L. now lives. He later owned one hundred and thirty acres of land where his son lives, and there he died on January 8, 1898. His widow died on August 2, 1910. He was a Democrat and his wife was a member of the Christian church. They had four children, Joseph R., Julia E., Charles L. and Sarah B. Julia E. Smithson married Flavius J. Johnson, of Green township, and Sarah B. Smithson married Frank Custis, of the same township.

Charles L. Smithson was reared on the old homestead farm and was educated in the public schools. Mr. Smithson owns two hundred and seventy-five acres of land in Green township. He was married on November 26, 1882, to Jennie Hildebrant, who was born on March 4, 1864, daughter of Jesse and Martha (Pyle) Hildebrant, early settlers of Clinton county, both of whom are deceased. To this union four children have been born, namely: Fay, who died in infancy; Beryl, who lives at home; Katie, who married Lark McKibbon, and has three children, Charlie Frank, Martha and John Drummond, and Inez, who lives at home with her parents.

Mrs. Smithson is a member of the Christian church. Mr. Smithson's ancestors were members of the Friends church. He is a Democrat in politics, and has served as school director for many years.

CHARLES HODSON.

Highland county enjoys the distinction of numbering among her citizens a well-known farmer now in the prime of life, who won second prize at the national corn show held a few years ago in North Carolina. Charles Hodson, a resident of Fairfield township, not only won second prize at the national corn show, but he has won first prize at the Ohio state corn show on Reed's Yellow Dent, and Johnson county, Indiana, white corn. Mr. Hodson is also an extensive cattle and hog breeder and specializes in Jersey cattle and in Duroc-Jersey hogs.

Charles Hodson was born on February 17, 1877, the son of Joseph W. and Lillie (Jones) Hodson, the former of whom was born in Highland county, Ohio, on October 15, 1854, and the latter, in Lexington, Kentucky, in 1856. Joseph W. Hodson was the son of Joseph and Sarah (Lamb) Hodson, natives, respectively, of Highland county, Ohio, and Guilford county, North Carolina. Joseph Hodson was the son of Solomon and Cecelia Hodson, who emigrated from North Carolina to Highland county, Ohio, in pioneer times. Sarah Lamb's parents were also pioneers in Highland county, where both died. Joseph Hodson was a farmer by occupation, a Republican in politics, early in life, but later a Prohibitionist. He and his wife were members of the Friends church. To them were born eleven children, of whom Joseph W. was the ninth, the others being Eli, Mary, Martha, Jonathan, Rachel Ann, Joel, Josiah, Lewis, Milton and Ella.

Joseph W. Hodson was reared on a farm and was educated in the public schools. He has four acres in Wayne township, where he now lives. He votes the Prohibition ticket. On February 17, 1876, he was married to Lillie Jones, a native of Lexington, Kentucky, and the daughter of John and Celia (Thompson) Jones, both of whom were natives of England. After settling in Lexington, Kentucky, John Jones engaged in the mercantile business. He was burned to death in that city some years ago and his widow died soon afterward. To Joseph W. and Lillie (Jones) Hodson six children have been born, of whom Charles, the subject of this sketch, is the eldest, the others being Bertsel, Harry, John (who died in infancy), Cammie (who died in infancy), and Clemma, who died in 1911, at the age of twenty-four years.

Charles Hodson was reared on a farm and was educated in the district schools and in the Highland high school. He owns one hundred and forty-one acres of land and lives in Fairfield township, Highland county, where he raises Duroc-Jersey hogs and Jersey cattle.

On October 6, 1900, Charles Hodson was married to Lena May Fisher, who was born in Green township, Clinton county, on January 11, 1878, the daughter of Amos and Ruth Ann (Terrell) Fisher, the former of whom is deceased and the latter of whom is still living on the old homestead in Green township. Amos Fisher was born on the farm owned by his parents, John and Hannah Fisher, in Green township, on April 1, 1846. John Fisher was born in Highland county on October 29, 1820, the son of Cephas and Rachel Fisher, natives of Pennsylvania. His grandparents were James and Jane Fisher, also natives of Pennsylvania, who emigrated to Tennessee soon after 1800 and about 1804 moved to Highland county, Ohio. Cephas Fisher was twice married, the first time to Rachel Stanbury, who died on May 5, 1844, leaving three children, Mrs. Rebecca Atkinson, of Story county, Iowa; Cephas, of Henry county, Iowa, and John, the father of Amos. Cephas Fisher married, secondly, Mrs. Jane Atkinson. He died on December 30, 1862, at the age of eighty-four years. On September 25, 1845, John Fisher was married to Hannah Atkinson, who was born in Clinton county on June 2, 1827, a daughter of John and Jane Atkinson, natives of Ohio and Pennsylvania, respectively. John Atkinson died in April, 1839. Ten children were born to John and Hannah (Atkinson) Fisher, Amos being the first born. Among the others were Amy, who married William McFadden; Harriet Ellen; Joseph; Phoebe Jane, who married William F. Waddle; Thomas; Rachel Alice; William Henry and Azariah.

On January 15, 1874, Amos Fisher married Ruth Ann Terrell, who was born on November 8, 1844, the daughter of John and Elizabeth (Williams) Terrell, natives of Highland county. Her maternal grandparents were William and Phoebe Williams, of North Carolina, who settled in Highland county. John and Elizabeth Terrell were the parents of seven children, Hampton W., Ruth Ann, Phoebe Jane, David E., Mary Edna, Flora A., and Pleasant M. Amos and Ruth Ann (Terrell) Fisher were the parents of four children, Elver J., born on April 30, 1875; Lena May, January 11, 1878; Amos Clyde ,June 29, 1880, and Hannah Elizabeth, October 9, 1884.

To Charles and Lena May (Fisher) Hodson five children have been born, namely: Lloyd Delos, born on July 26, 1901; Wilbur Amos, January 29, 1904; Harold Charles, January 18, 1906; Dorothy Marie, July 11, 1911, and Wahneta May, February 23, 1914.

Politically, Mr. Hodson is a Republican, but he has never aspired to office. The Hodson family are all members of the Friends church.

JAMES A. ROLSTON.

James A. Rolston, a successful farmer of Green township, this county, and the son of Robert and Anna (Wallace) Rolston, who came to this county from Ireland, was born in the Emerald Isle on January 7, 1865, and was five years old when he was brought to America and to Clinton county by his parents.

After being educated in the public schools of Clinton county, Mr. Rolston engaged in farming. He now owns and occupies a farm of eighty-nine acres of land, one and one-half miles from New Vienna. He is a general farmer and stockman and has been very successful.

On November 14, 1894, James A. Rolston was married to Nancy Fenwick, who was born at Daleville, Delaware county, Indiana, in 1874, the daughter of Andrew and Caroline (Snow) Fenwick, the former of whom was born in Highland county, Ohio, in 1823, and the latter, in Clinton county, June 8, 1844. Andrew Fenwick immigrated to Indiana when a young man and lived there after his marriage. Mrs. Rolston was one of seven children born to her parents, the fourth in the family, the others being John, William, Robert, Bonson, Cary and Ida. Mrs. Rolston's parents eventually came to Clinton county and both died here, her father in 1897 and her mother in 1911.

To James A. and Nancy (Fenwick) Rolston have been born six children, Anna, born on July 26, 1895, who married, November 12, 1914, Gurney Adams, who was born on December 3, 1892; Robert, born in 1897, who died in infancy; William McKinley, November 5, 1900; one who died in infancy; Hattie Marie, August 13, 1903, and John Matthew, November 20, 1908.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Rolston are members of the Methodist Protestant church and their children have been reared in that faith. Mr. Rolston is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at New Antioch and is identified politically with the Republican party.

JAMES WILLIAM CASHMAN.

James William Cashman is a successful farmer of Green township, this county, and with his brother-in-law, T. J. Bloom, owns one hundred and thirty-four acres of land in that township. Mr. Cashman was born in Clinton county on September 20, 1855, the son of John and Nancy (Murphy) Cashman, the former a native of Berkley county, Virginia, and the latter a native of Green township, born on May 12, 1827. Mrs. John Cashman died near New Antioch on October 28, 1863. She had only two children, Mary Catherine and James William. John Cashman was a farmer by occupation, a Democrat in politics and a member of the Christian church.

James William Cashman was reared on a farm in Green township and was educated in the public schools of that township. For fifteen years he was engaged in the mercantile business in New Antioch, and since that time has been engaged in farming on a tract of one hundred and thirty-four acres, where he has now lived for sixteen years, being engaged as a general farmer and stock raiser.

On February 17, 1876, James William Cashman was married to Sarah Luella Truitt, who was born in Green township, the daughter of George W. Truitt (mentioned elsewhere in this work in the biographical sketch of Allen A. Curtis). Mr. and Mrs. Cashman have no children.

Politically, James William Cashman is identified with the Democratic party. He has served as school director for a number of years and is now serving his ninth consecutive year as trustee of Green township. Mr. and Mrs. Cashman are members of the Christian church at New Antioch, and take a prominent part in the religious work of Green township.

FRANK CUSTIS.

Frank Custis is a well-known farmer of Green township, this county, and owns one hundred and ten acres of land two miles from New Vienna, where he is engaged in general farming and stock raising. He was born on March 29, 1860, in Washington township, this county, son of the late John W. and Sarah (Bond) Custis, both natives of Clinton county, the former born in 1834, and the latter, near Martinsville, in 1837.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Custis were John and Mary Custis, early settlers and pioneers of Clinton county, Ohio, who came here from Pennsylvania after their marriage. The maternal grandparents were George and Mary Bond, also natives of the Keystone state, who settled in Clinton county, in an early day, and both died in this county.

The late John W. Custis was a farmer and stock dealer and owned three hundred and thirty-three acres of land in Washington township. He was identified with the Democratic party politically, and was more or less active in politics during his life, having been the candidate of his party at one time for sheriff. His wife was a member of the Christian church, and he also was an adherent of that faith. His death occurred on May 27, 1906. His wife had passed away many years previously in 1864. They were the parents of nine children, four of whom are deceased, Elisha, Kate, Robert and Sarah, the living children being George, Frank, Martha, John and James.

Frank Custis, like the ordinary boy born and reared in the country, received his education in the district schools of his home neighborhood, and after leaving school took up farming on his own account. In 1883 he moved to Green township and purchased the farm of one hundred and ten acres, where he is now living, on which he engages in general farming and stock raising.

In November, 1881, Frank Custis was married to Sarah Belle Smithson, who was born in Green township, this county, on February 10, 1860, a daughter of Drummond Smithson and wife, mentioned elsewhere in this volume, and to this union two children have been born, Kenneth Drummond, born on October 21, 1887, who was educated in the public school of Green township and lives at home with his parents, and Burch Quinn, June 22, 1897, who received his early education in the district schools, afterward becoming a student in the New Vienna high school. He also lives at home with his parents.

Mr Custis is a Democrat, but has never taken an especial interest in political matters. He devotes his time rather to his own personal business and to his family.

HARRY D. STEELE.

Harry D. Steele, now a prosperous young farmer of Green township, this county, was born near New Vienna, this county, on October 7, 1883, the son of William B. and Rachel A. (Matthews) Steele, both born in Clinton county, the former a well-to-do farmer of Wayne township, where he lives, on July 9, 1860, and the latter a daughter of Elijah Matthews, who is mentioned in a biographical sketch presented elsewhere in this work.

Harry D. Steele was reared on a farm in Wayne township and lived there until about eleven years of age, when he moved with his parents to Washington township. Later he attended Wilmington College and the Normal School at Lebanon, Ohio, after which he taught school for ten years, from 1900 to 1910. In 1907 Mr. Steele moved to Green township and rented the farm, which he now owns, for two years. In 1910 he bought the farm, consisting of seventy-one acres, and since that time has made many substantial improvements. He is a general farmer and stockman.

On March 6, 1908, Harry D. Steele was married to Lillie M. Roush, a native of Highland county, Ohio, daughter of William Edward and Hattie Elma (Dewald) Roush, both of whom were born in Highland county, Ohio, the former on March 2, 1855, the son of Frederick and Mary (Sanderson) Roush, also natives of Highland county, the former born in Union township, November 28, 1830, and the latter in Hamer township, March 16, 1835. The paternal grandparents of William E. Roush were George and Rachel (Tedrick) Roush, both natives of Pennsylvania, the former of whom was the son of Philip Roush, a native of Pennsylvania, who settled in Highland county about 1818. The maternal grandparents of William E. Roush were Alexander and Jane (Sanderson) Sanderson, the former of whom came, an orphan boy, from Ireland to this country and settled in Highland county and the latter of whom was born near Newmarket, in Highland county. On both sides of the family, Mr. Roush's ancestors have been farmers. His father was a Republican and was a member of the Christian church, the father of six children, of whom William E. was the eldest, the others being Robert Sanderson (deceased), George E., Ervin E., Lillie (deceased), and Joseph C. Mr. Roush has been an extensive breeder of registered Shorthorn cattle. He is a Republican but has never aspired to office. Fraternally, he is a member of Dalton Lodge No. 578, Free and Accepted Masons. He is now living in Green township, this county. Twenty years ago he was a school teacher by profession and taught school for ten years. He came to Clinton county in 1890, buying one hundred and two acres of land one and one-half miles from New Vienna.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry D. Steele have one son, Donald R., born on December 9, 1909. Mr. Steele votes the Democratic ticket. He is a member of the Baptist church.

FLAVIUS J. JOHNSON.

Flavius J. Johnson is a well-known farmer of Green township, this county, who owns one hundred and fifty acres of land two miles from New Vienna, where he is engaged in general farming and stock raising. He was born in Clark township, this county, November 5, 1852, son of Abner D. and Rebecca (Connell) Johnson, the former born in Clinton county, in 1815, and the latter in 1811.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Johnson were Ashley Johnson and wife, the latter of whom, before her marriage, was a Miss Detheridge, who came from Virginia to Clinton county and established a home in the wilderness, where they reared their family. The maternal grandparents were Hiram Connell and wife, the former a native of Pennsylvania. It was his father who founded what is now Connellsville, Pennsylvania, in which town he erected the first house. Hiram Connell emigrated to Highland county, Ohio, from his native state and died near Lynchburg, of which place he was a well-known citizen at the time of his death.

Abner D. Johnson, the father of Flavius J. Johnson, was a farmer, a Republican in politics, and a member of the Presbyterian church. His death occurred near Farmers Station in Clark township, this county, in 1890, and his widow survived him ten years, passing away in 1900.

Flavius J. Johnson was reared on the farm and received a good common-school education in the district schools of his home township. Mr. Johnson owns one hundred and fifty acres of land in Green township, comprising a fertile, highly-productive and well-kept farm.

Mr. Johnson married Julia Elma Smithson, daughter of Drummond Smithson, mentioned elsewhere in this volume, and to this union has been born one child, a son, Fred G., who was graduated from the high school at New Vienna, and is now an electrician, employed at St. Paul, Minnesota. Fred G. Johnson was married to Ella Doorley, who was born at Hillsboro, Highland county, this state.

Ever since its organization the Johnson family have been identified with the Republican party, and Flavius J. Johnson is no exception to this rule.

SENECA DENNIS.

Seneca Dennis, who was a soldier in the Union army during the Civil War and is now a well-known farmer of Green township, this county, was born in the township where he lives, December 13, 1844, the son of Richmond and Hannah (Tumlin) Dennis, the former of whom was born in Tennessee and the latter in this county, the daughter of Peter Tumlin, a Clinton county pioneer.

Richmond Dennis came to Clinton county, when a young man, and lived here until his death in 1876, at the age of eighty years. His wife had died previously in 1861. He was a farmer by occupation, a member of the Democratic party and prominent in the Newlight church, at Centerville, of which he had been a member for fifty years before his death. Richmond and Hannah (Tumlin) Dennis had ten children, of whom Elizabeth, Hester, Peter, John, Alice and Hannah are deceased, the living children being Sarah, Lucinda, Louisa and Seneca.

Born and reared on the farm and educated in the common schools, Seneca Dennis enlisted, in 1864, in Company K, One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served eleven months and four days. He was taken prisoner on July 9, 1864, and was held in the Danville prison until February 22, 1865, on which date he was taken to Libby prison, from which he was paroled after about two weeks. At the close of the war, Mr. Dennis returned to Clinton county and engaged in farming. He owns fifty acres of land in Green township, and there he has lived since 1880, during which period he has made many improvements upon the farm.

In 1874 Seneca Dennis was married to Sarah Margaret Deck, who was born in Clinton county, in 1849, the daughter of Jonathan and Sarah Deck, both of whom are deceased. To this union three children have been born, Charles William, who marraied Josephine Hosler and lives in New Vienna, this county, where he is a carpenter by trade; Oscar Richmond, who married Maud Hildebrant, daughter of Luther Hildebrant, and who lives on Mr. Hildebrant's farm, and has three children, Paul Burdette, Robert and Hilda, and Grover, who lives on the home farm, married Lucile Babbit and has one son, Earl.

Seneca Dennis is a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Grand Army of the Republic. He is a highly-respected citizen in Green township and enjoys the esteem of all who know him.

JOHN P. GEORGES.

The present European war has disclosed certain qualities of head and heart in the Belgian people, which the world at large heretofore knew very little about. John P. Georges, a farmer of Wayne township, this county, is spoken of as one of the most cultured, entertaining and interesting men ever found on a farm. He is a native of Belgium, and speaks, reads and writes six different languages, French, German, English, Belgian, Spanish and Italian. Few farmers living anywhere in this country have enjoyed educational advantages equal to those enjoyed by Mr. Georges and few men possess a greater native endowment for the absorption and assimilation of culture than he.

John P. Georges was born on March 21, 1848, at Hachy, Belgium, the son of Peter and Margaret (Devillez) Georges, the former of whom, born in 1804, at Hachy, Belgium, died in 1882, and the latter, born on June 2, 1804, at Nobresart, Belgium, died in 1886. Both are buried side by side at Leopold, Indiana. Mrs. Peter Georges was the daughter of Henry Devillez, who married a Miss Shannen.

The paternal grandparents of John P. Georges were Henry and Mary (Adam) Georges, born at Hachy, Belgium, farming people, who reared a family of five children, Peter, Frank, John, Margaret and Catherine. Henry and Mary Georges spent all of their lives in their native land.

Peter Georges was educated in the common schools of his native land and, when a young man, learned the mason's trade, at which he worked all his life. He was engaged in contract building until September 27, 1863, when he started with his family for America. The family landed in New York city, March 21, 1864. During the voyage over the vessel was wrecked and the passengers and crew were compelled to spend two months on the Island of Walcheren. After landing in New York city, the family proceeded to Indiana and located in Perry county on a farm. The sons cultivated the land and the father engaged in contract building, living on the farm, however, the remainder of his life. Peter and Margaret Georges had ten children, only three of whom, Susannah, John P., the subject of this sketch, and Frank J., are now living. Susannah lives in Perry county, Indiana, aged eighty-five years. Frank J. is recorder of Perry county, Indiana, and is now serving his second term. The deceased children are: Frank, Margaret, Nicholas, who was a soldier in the Civil War, Anna, Jane, John N., and Catherine. Nicholas Georges, who had come to America before the arrival of his father and family, was a soldier in the Civil War, having enlisted in 1861 in the Fourth Iowa Cavalry, in which he served four years under Major-General Green. Peter Georges voted the Democratic ticket. He and his family were members of the Catholic church.

The education of John P. Georges was begun in the schools of his native land and, after arriving in Indiana, at the age of sixteen, he began to learn the English language. After three months' study in the schools of Indiana, he was promoted to the fifth reader. Later he entered St. Meinrad's College, in Spencer county, Indiana, and attended the school for three years. Upon leaving St. Meinrad's he taught school for ten years, including three years in Perry county, Indiana, at St. Mark's, and seven years in Seneca and Wyandot counties, Ohio. After that he returned to his father's farm in Perry county, Indiana, and took care of his parents until their death. He lived on the farm until 1890, when he came to Clinton county, settling in Wayne township, where he has lived ever since and where he expects to live until his death because, as he says, there is no better place. He owns one hundred and one and one-half acres, but calls himself a "loafing" farmer, having retired from farming twenty-five years ago. Mr. Georges lives on his farm, but rents the land out to others. He personally has made all of the improvements on his farm, including the clearing of thirty acres since moving to Clinton county.

In 1886 John P. Georges was married to Mary C. Clement, who was born on October 16, 1844, the daughter of Hubert and Victoria (Bigonville) Clement, to which union two children have been born, Rose, who died in infancy, and John P., Jr., who is a graduate of St. Mary's College, Dayton, Ohio, having finished the course in 1909 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He now lives at home with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Georges have a very pleasant farm home in Wayne township. John P. Georges votes the Democratic ticket. Naturally, he is a very highly respected citizen, popular in the community where he lives, and he and his family enjoy the esteem of all who know them.

JAMES E. CUSTIS.

James E. Custis is a successful farmer of Green township, this county, where he owns one hundred and eighty-five acres of land. He was born in that township on September 6, 1867, a son of John W. and Sarah Jane (Bond) Custis, both of whom were born in Clinton county, the former in 1834, and the latter, near Morrisville, in 1837. The paternal grandparents of Mr. Custis were Thomas and Mary Custis, who were early settlers in Clinton county, coming here from Pennsylvania after their marriage. Both are now deceased. The maternal grandparents were George and Mary Bond, who also came from Pennsylvania to Clinton county in an early day, and both died here.

The late John W. Custis was a farmer and stock dealer and was the owner of three hundred and thirty-three acres of land in Washington township. He was a Democrat in politics and at one time was a candidate for sheriff of Clinton county. His wife was a member of the Christian church, and he himself was reared in that faith. His death occurred on May 27, 1906. His wife had passed away many years previously. They reared a family of nine children, four of whom, Elisha, Kate, Robert and Sarah, are deceased, the living children being George, Frank, Martha, John and James.

James E. Custis was reared on the farm, receiving his education in the district schools of his home neighborhood. Upon reaching maturity, he took up farming for himself in Green township. He has made many improvements on his farm in Green township, where he has lived for nine years.

On July 4, 1889, James E. Custis was married to Carrie Hildebrant, who was born in Green township, this county, the daughter of Jesse and Martha (Pyle) Hildebrant, the former of whom was born near Snow Hill, in Green township, March 3, 1823, and the latter, in Centerville, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, March 29, 1827. Jesse Hildebrant was a son of Christopher and Elizabeth (Crifestein) Hildebrant, both of whom were born in New Jersey about 1822. After coming to Clinton county they settled on the farm now occupied by Samuel Steele. Both died in Greent ownship. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Custis were William and Mary (Ewey)

Pyle, pioneers of Green township, who came to this county from Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Jesse Hildebrant was the owner of three hundred and thirty-one acres of land. He was a Republican in politics, while religiously, he and his wife were earnest and devoted members of the Christian church. He died on August 15, 1905. His widow survived him less than three years, her death occurring on March 9, 1908. They had reared a family of nine children, of whom two, Louisa and Judson, are deceased; Avery lives at Webster, Illinois, and the others are Lou, Lizzie, Frank, Luther, Jennie and Carrie. Luther Hildebrant owns a good farm of two hundred and two acres near where Mr. Custis lives. He married Martha Custis, a sister of James Custis. Mrs. Luther Hildebrant was born on March 9, 1862, in Green township, and she and her husband are the parents of three children, Maud, Clarence and Ada.

To Mr. and Mrs. James E. Custis thirteen children have been born, of whom two, Claude and Willard, are deceased. Claude was born in May, 1890, and died on April 1, 1915. The other children are Durward, Laverne, Irene, Gladys, Fred, Jesse, Harold, Carl, Marion, Wynona and Pauline.

Mr. and Mrs. Custis and family are attendants of the Christian church, in which they are actively interested. Mr. Custis is a Democrat in politics.

EPHRAIM H. URTON.

Ephraim H. Urton, a former commissioner of Clinton county, who is now the proprietor of "Clover Nook Stock Farm" in this county, is one of the best-known citizens of this section of the state. He was born on July 19, 1856, in Warren county, Ohio, the son of Daniel and Nancy A. (Brown) Urton, the former of whom was born, October 20, 1819, in Virginia, and the latter, November 3, 1823, in Ohio. Mr. Urton's paternal grandparents were John and Lucy (Weaver) Urton, both of whom were born in Virginia and who, in 1820, came to Ohio and took up land in Washington township, Warren county, where both died. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Urton were Alexander and Lydia (Hanks) Brown, pioneers of Warren county, where both lived and died.

The late Daniel Urton was reared on a farm and was educated in the public schools. Starting in life a poor boy, he accumulated land from time to time until he owned, at the time of his death, December 16, 1895, five hundred acres of land. He had located in Vernon township, Clinton county, in 1860, and there he lived until his death. He was a Republican in politics, but never aspired to office. His wife was a member of the Baptist church. They were the parents of eight children, Lucy, Lydia, Amanda, John (deceased), Mary Elizabeth, Ephraim H., the subject of this sketch, Barbara Ellen (deceased), and Emma Louisa.

Ephraim H. Urton was reared on the old homestead farm and was educated in the public schools and in Wilmington College. The old district school was located on his father's farm. After farming for about four years, early in life, he moved to Clarksville, where he engaged in the mercantile business for about twenty-five years. Mr. Urton still owns property in Clarksville. In 1909 he was elected county commissioner of Clinton county and at that time, retired to the farm and built his present residence. He owns one hundred and five acres, a part of the old homestead, and is an extensive breeder of thoroughbred registered Percheron horses and Jersey cattle.

In 1879 Ephraim H. Urton was married to Viola Lewis, who was born in 1860 in Cincinnati, the daughter of Robert and Sarah Jane (Thompson) Lewis, of Cincinnati. They owned the Alice and Phoebe Carey homestead, now the home of the blind and known as "Clover Nook." Mr. Urton's farm is known as the "Clover Nook Stock Farm." To Mr. and Mrs. Urton have been born three children, Sherman Garfield, a farmer in partnership with his father, who married Louise Hadley, of Clinton county; Virgil, who died at the age of four months, and Edith May, the wife of William Greathouse, of Warren county, Ohio, who lives on the Charley Hadley farm, and has four children, Virginia Meredith, Viola Josephine, Ruby Thelma and Ruth Evelyn.

Mr. Urton votes the Republican ticket. He has held, besides the office of county commissioner, several other positions of trust and responsibility. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Clarksville, and also of the Knights of Pythias at the same place.

RODNEY T. THORPE.

In a brief sketch it is difficult to do a living citizen exact and impartial justice, not so much from lack of space or words to set forth the passing events of his personal history as for want of the perfect and rounded conception of his whole life which grows and develops and ripens, to disclose its truest and best flavor when it is mellowed by time. There is nothing in the life of Rodney T. Thorpe of Sabina, Ohio, that is startling. Nevertheless, his career has been marked by patient and unremitting endeavor and he has earned and won a substantial reward for his long and patient application to business.

Rodney T. Thorpe was born on January 3, 1870, at Bloomington, this county, the son of Edman B. and Emily (Culberson) Thorpe, the former of whom was born on March 23, 1840, near Bloomington, in Clinton county, and the latter, in Fayette county, the daughter of George and Priscilla (Stewart) Culberson. Edman B. Thorpe was the son of Joshua and Nancy B. (Fiers) Thorpe, both natives of Virginia, the former of whom was born in 1798, and the latter, in 1806. Joshua Thorpe was a farmer in Southampton county, who came to Clinton county in 1832, locating in what is now Wilson township, on a farm of about seventy-five acres, where he farmed the remainder of his life. It may be said, in passing, that Mr. Thorpe left Virginia as a result of a negro uprising in 1831, when the slaves grew rebellious and slaughtered many of the whites. The spring following the insurrection the Thorpe family came to Ohio, settling in Clinton county.

Joshua Thorpe's father was born in England and came to America as a British soldier during the American Revolution. When peace was declared he decided to remain in America and married and a few years later settled in Virginia. The late Edman B. Thorpe was educated in the common schools of Clinton county and taught school when a young man. Later he engaged in the mercantile business at Bloomington, and still later practiced law there, although he was never admitted to the bar. Edman B. and Emily (Culberson) Thorpe were the parents of five children, as follow: Edna, who died early in life; George, who married Bessie Easts; Norman B., who married Emma Channell; Rodney T., the subject of this sketch, and Ollie G., who married Seigel Wicol. Mr. Thorpe's parents were members of the Universalist church and the Methodist Episcopal church, the father having been identified with the former and the mother with the latter. Edman B. Thorpe was a Democrat and for many years was a justice of the peace in Wilson township.

Rodney T. Thorpe was educated in the public schools of Bloomington, this county, and when a young man worked as a farm hand. In 1891 he went to Sabina, this county, and there was engaged in the livery business for two years, at the end of which time he sold out and engaged in the retail grocery business. During the past thirteen years he has prospered largely and owns eighty-four and one-half acres in Wilson township. He is also an extensive property owner in Sabina. Mr. Thorpe married Kattie B. Barnhart, the daughter of John and Jane Barnhart, of Greene county, Ohio, and to this union four children have been born, Alfred E., Lawrence R., Maynard B. and Florence C.

The Thorpe family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and are held in high esteem in Sabina and throughout that part of the county. Mr. Thorpe is a Democrat, and for years has given a good citizen's attention to the political affairs of the county.

JOHN R. ROLSTON.

One and one-half miles from New Antioch is a splendid farm of one hundred and sixty-four acres, belonging to John R. Rolston, one of the most successful farmers in Green township, this county.

Mr. Rolston is a native of Ireland, where he was born on May 12, 1863. He immigrated to America with his parents, Robert and Anna (Wallace) Rolston, when seven years old and was reared on a farm near New Antioch, receiving his education in the public schools. He has been engaged in farming all of his life, his course being marked by energy and enterprise, and it is not a matter of very great surprise that he has made a magnificent success of his chosen vocation.

On December 24, 1890, John R. Rolston was married to Dellie Green, who was born in Green township, this county, in 1870, daughter of George W. and Nancy (Curtis) Green, both of whom are deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Rolston two children have been born, William (deceased) and Clifford, who is a student in the Wilmington high school. Mr. and Mrs. Rolston also have a foster-daughter, Ethel Collins, who married Edward Welton, of Springfield, Ohio, and lives on the farm belonging to Mr. Rolston. To Mr. and Mrs. Welton one child has been born, Anna Louise.

Mr. Rolston is identified with the Republican party and takes a good citizen's part in the political affairs of the county. Both he and his wife are members of the Christian church. Mr. Rolston is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at New Antioch and of the Modern Woodmen of America at Sabina. He also belongs to the encampment and to the Daughters of Rebekah at Wilmington, Ohio. The Rolston family are well known in Green township and are among its most highly respected and valued citizens.

FRANCIS DANIEL MULFORD.

Among the enterprising farmers of Vernon township, this county, is Francis Daniel Mulford, who was born in that township on April 16, 1875, the son of Joseph Martin and Amanda (Urton) Mulford, the former, a native of Warren county, Ohio, born on March 6, 1844, and the latter, March 6, 1849. The paternal grandparents were Harvey and Eliza Ellen (Doctor) Mulford, both natives of Virginia, the former of whom died on January 20, 1861, at the age of forty-seven years, and the latter, born on January 20, 1819, died in 1906.

The maternal grandparents were Daniel and Nancy (Brown) Urton, the former born in Virginia in 1819, and the latter, in Ohio, in 1823, were early settlers in Warren county, Ohio, who, in 1861, came to Clinton county, where he died in 1896, and she, in 1899. They had eight children, of whom, Amanda, the third born, was the mother of Mr. Mulford. The other children were, Lucy, Lydia, John William (deceased), Mary Elizabeth, Ephraim H., Barbara Ellen (deceased) and Emma Louise.

The late Joseph Martin Mulford was a farmer by occupation, who removed from Warren county Ohio, to Vernon township, Clinton county, where he bought a farm and where he spent the rest of his life. His widow is now living in Clinton county. Joseph Martin and Amanda (Urton) Mulford had three children, of whom Francis Daniel, the subject of this sketch, was the eldest. Minnie is the wife of James Villars and they have one child, Homer. Pearl is the wife of Edwin Van Dervort and they have two children, Nellie Elouise and John Paul.

Francis Daniel Mulford was reared on a farm and was educated in the public schools. He owns a good farm in Vernon township, and is engaged in farming and stockraising.

In 1897 Mr. Mulford was married to Mary Crosley, daughter of William and Carolin (Wood) Crosley, the former of whom was born in Warren county, Ohio, November 24, 1841, and the latter, in Cincinnati, in 1850. William Crosley was the son of Isaac and Rachael (Cook) Crosley, natives of Michigan and Warren county, Ohio, respectively, both pioneers in Warren county and both of whom died there. Carolin (Wood) Crosley was the daughter of Charles and Sarah (Wallin) Wood, of Hamilton county, Ohio, but who had come originally from England and who were early residents of Cincinnati. Both are now deceased. Mrs. Mulford is one of nine children born to her parents, the others being Perry, Lenna, Charles, Dolly (deceased), Martha, Ella (deceased), Edgar and Roy.

To Mr. and Mrs. Mulford two children have been born: Dorothy Pearl, born on September 11, 1898, and Joseph W., who died in infancy.

Mr. Mulford is a Republican, but has never aspired to office. He is an up-to-date progressive farmer and has made many improvements in recent years on the farm where he now lives. He is a member of the Masons and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Knight of the Maccabees of the World.

ZEPHANIAH UNDERWOOD.

Among the names of large landowners and men of prominence in their generation in Clinton county, that of the late Zephaniah Underwood is held in pleasant remembrance throughout this whole section. Mr. Underwood was a man of large influence for good in his community; diligent in business and ever mindful of the public good, so that at his death there was felt a real loss in the hearts of all who had known him during his unusually long and active life. Living to the great age of eighty years, Mr. Underwood had been a witness to the amazing transformation which took place in the general conditions underlying the social and economic life of the people of this section during the last century and had done well his part in helping to bring about better conditions in all the varied relations of his fellow men.

Born in the year 1820, on the eastern edge of Ohio, Zephaniah Underwood came to Clinton county with his parents when he was but five years of age and became one of the best-known men in this section of the state. He was particularly active in behalf of the cause of temperance and for years was one of the most influential workers in the ranks of the Prohibition party hereabout, the liquor traffic having no more uncompromising foe than he in this county, and in all other ways he stood unflinchingly and determinedly as a righteous advocate of things of good report. A birthright member of the Friends church, he and his family were devoted to all works in this community and occupied a very firm place in the regard of all with whom they came in contact. The death of Mr. Underwood in 1900 was widely mourned, for he was a man who had done well his part in life.

Zephaniah Underwood was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, on November 10, 1820, son of Amos and Mary (Shirk) Underwood, the former of whom was a native of York county, Pennsylvania, born on August 3, 1786, son of Zephaniah and Rebecca Underwood, prominent residents of that section.

Amos Underwood was reared on a pioneer farm and received the rudiments of an education in such neighborhood schools as were provided in the days of his youth. In the year 1812 he was united in marriage to Mary Shirk, who was born on September 16, 1791, daughter of John and Barbara (Hoover) Shirk, and to this union eleven children were born, namely: Reuben, born on October 17, 1814; Isaac, September 30, 1816; John, October 26, 1818; Zephaniah, the immediate subject of this memorial sketch; Amos, March 5, 1823; Lewis, March 16, 1825; Senath, April 25, 1827; Thomas E., August 22, 1829; Priscilla Jane, December 15, 1831; William June 20, 1834, and Elihu, February 17, 1839, all of whom are now deceased save the latter, who is a well-known and highly respected resident of this county. Amos Underwood and his wife were earnest and devoted members of the Friends church and their children were reared in accordance with the strict tenets of that simple faith, becoming useful men and women in the several spheres of life to which they were called. The mother of the above children died when well past middle age and Amos Underwood married, secondly, Priscilla Lewis, of Highland county, this state, to which latter union there was no issue.

Amos Underwood was a man of much strength of character and became a fine force for good in Chester township, where his later years were spent. He came to this county from Columbiana county in the fall of 1825, settling in Liberty township, about three miles south of where Port William is now situated, where he remained for three years, at the end of which time he bought a farm in that locality, where he made his home until 1854, in which year he bought the farm in the southwestern portion of Chester township where he spent his last days and where his son, Zephaniah, the subject of this memoir, also made his home during the remainder of his life.

Zephaniah Underwood was reared on the farm and in his boyhood received a limited education in the pioneer schools of that day, but in after years acquired considerable self-culture and education. Upon reaching manhood's estate he entered seriously upon the duties of the farm and from the very start of his agricultural operations prospered, gradually adding to his land holdings until he became the owner of four hundred and twenty acres in Chester township and seventy-eight acres in Warren county, this state, all of which he brought to a high state of cultivation. He was one of the most extensive growers of fruit in this section of the state and at the time of his death had an excellent orchard of one hundred acres. His activities were not confined to the locality of his home and he also owned considerable land in the South and West, being accounted one of the wealthy men of this county. In 1880 Mr. Underwood was elected president of a Southern railroad company, and in other ways displayed much activity in various business enterprises. As an instance of the varied character of his operations, it is recalled that at one time he bought one thousand buffalo robes, for which he found a ready market among his friends and neighbors in this county. Reared as a Whig, Mr. Underwood became a Republican upon the formation of the latter party and was active in the local councils of that party until the organization of the Prohibition party in the eighties, after which he cast the full force of his political and personal influence on the side of that new party, ever having been an earnest advocate of temperance and an uncompromising foe of the liquor traffic, believing that national prohibition was the livest issue before the people of the United States.

On December 27, 1871, Zephaniah Underwood was united in marriage to Matilda J. Downing, who was born in Centre county, Pennsylvania, April 10, 1851, the daughter of Jacob and Jane (Underwood) Downing, to which union five children were born, as follow: Ruth Anna, born January 2, 1873, married Alva C. Tomlinson on June 16, 1898, and had, Paul (deceased), Ruth, Matilda, Custis Paul and Faith Marion; Zephaniah, July 5, 1875, married on February 19, 1910, Dale Williams, daughter of Dr. A. J. and Eliza (Menies) Williams, who died on January 29, 1911; Joseph Miles, May 24, 1878, married on September 28, 1910, Myrtle Kibler, daughter of Samuel and Eliza (Snow) Kibler, and has one child, Vivian; Olive, March 23, 1881, who died on October 27, 1882, and Jane Eva, February 6, 1888, married on February 12, 1910, Corwin Haines, son of Thadeus A. and Eliza (Hiatt) Haines, and has one child, a son, Elvin.

Zephaniah Underwood died on April 17, 1900, in the eightieth year of his age, having been for many years one of Clinton county's most influential citizens, and his memory is cherished throughout this whole region. His widow has been an active minister in the Society of Friends since 1885, and Mr. Underwood took great pleasure in traveling with her in the work. She, who survives him, together with his children, are held in the highest esteem throughout the county.

DAVID A. MURPHY.

David A. Murphy is a well-known farmer of Green township, this county. He was born in this county in 1860, the son of David and Hannah (Dennis) Murphy, the former of whom was born in Berkley county, Virginia, July 31, 1816, and the latter, in Clinton county, Ohio, September 1, 1831.

The paternal grandparents of David A. Murphy were Jacob and Mary (Lohman) Murphy, both natives of Virginia. The paternal grandfather was born on March 4, 1791, and the paternal grandmother, March 9, 1793. They came to this county in 1826 and settled west of Wilmington. In 1834 they removed to Green township, settling where Isaiah Murphy now lives, and there the grandfather died on December 29, 1871, and the grandmother, January 26, 1873. Jacob Murphy and wife, who were married on April 20, 1813, reared the following children: Rebecca J., David, William, Susannah, John, Catherine, Abraham, Nancy, Isaiah and Mary Ann. Jacob Murphy and his wife were members of the Christian church and Mr. Murphy was a Democrat. The maternal grandfather of David A. Murphy was Richmond Dennis, a biographical sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work.

David A. Murphy was reared on the farm and received his education in the public schools. He took up farming as a vocation after leaving school and now rents sixty-eight acres of land in Clinton county, belonging to his aunt, Sarah Fenner, and is there engaged in general farming and stock raising.

In 1881 David A. Murphy was married to Ella Clark, of Butler county, Ohio, a daughter of Sylvester and Sarah Ann (Gerard) Clark. Sylvester Clark, who served for three years in the Union army during the Civil War, died at New Antioch, this county, in 1888, and his widow still survives him, at the advanced age of eighty years. To Mr. and Mrs. Murphy six children have been born, Hamilton C., Leona, Walter, Preston, Norval Clifton and Sarah Frances, all of whom are living.

CLAYTON A. TRIBBET, M. D.

Among the prominent physicians of this county and the well-known citizens of Westboro, is Dr. Clayton A. Tribbet, the president of the Clinton County Medical Society and a member of the Ohio State and National Medical Associations. He has been a practicing physician in Westboro for nearly thirty years.

Dr. Clayton A. Tribbet, who was born near Goodhope, in Fayette county, Ohio, October 8, 1854, is the son of James and Elizabeth Ann (Dick) Tribbet, the former a native of Ross county, Ohio, and the latter of West Virginia. The paternal grandfather of Doctor Tribbet was Joseph Tribbet, who immigrated to Ohio in pioneer times and from Ohio immigrated to Iowa, where he died. His removal to Iowa followed the death of his wife, when he went to the Hawkeye state to bring back with him his sister, who was to return as his housekeeper. The maternal grandfather of Doctor Tribbet was John Dick, a native of West Virginia, who immigrated from that state to Wabash county, Indiana, where he engaged in farming and where he died.

Left an orphan at a tender age, James Tribbet, the father of Dr. Clayton A. Tribbet, was reared by friends of the family in Ross county and later in Fayette county and finally in Highland county, Ohio. Subsequently, he moved to Clinton county, in 1880, and located one and one-half miles east of Westboro, where he followed farming. To James and Elizabeth Ann Tribbet were born eight children, of whom Clayton A. was the fifth in order of birth, the others being as follow: Mary Jane; Dr. John C., who for thirty years, was a practicing physician at Montezuma, Iowa, but who is now deceased; Lemuel, Glendora, James M., Elsworth and Elmer, the latter of whom is general manager of the American Laundry Company, of New York City.

Clayton A. Tribbet received the rudiments of an education in the country schools and in the Greenfield high school, where he pursued his education for a period of five years. He also took in addition to this work, a course in Greek. Later he was a student at the South Salem Academy for two years, and then taught school for seven years, six years of which were spent in Fayette county, Ohio. During his last year in the school room, Doctor Tribbet was principal of the Westboro high school. After finishing seven years in the school room, he entered the Miami Medical College of Cincinnati, and was graduated, with high honors; with the class of 1886. In April, 1887, he took up the active practice of his profession at Westboro, and since then, a period of almost thirty years, has established an enviable reputation as a physician and surgeon, and is highly respected as a man and a citizen in the community where he has lived so long.

In 1888, Dr. Clayton A. Tribbet was married to Letta Jackson, a daughter of Thomas and Isabel Jackson, of Westboro. To this union was born one daughter, Mabel Elizabeth, who died on May 2, 1914. Mabel E. Tribbet was graduated from the Westboro schools and later from the Blanchester high school. Subsequently she was a student at Ohio Wesleyan University, at Delaware, Ohio, for a period of two years, and then attended Wells College, at Aurora, New York, from which institution she was graduated with high honors. While working for her Master degree in the year following her graduation, she was assistant instructor in chemistry in Wells College, and this position was open to her at the time of her last sickness and untimely death.

Fraternally, Doctor Tribbet is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. Both Doctor and Mrs. Tribbet are faithful and earnest members of the Methodist Episcopal church and are held in high regard throughout the whole Westboro neighborhood.

WARREN W. MILLS.

Agriculture is an inviting vocation to men and women who are thoroughly in love with life in the open; who are not afraid of a reasonable amount of hard work, and who are content to forego the advantages and disadvantages of being huddled together closely in great cities. Warren W. Mills, of Chester township, this county, who was born and reared on the farm where he now lives, found agriculture altogether to his liking and as a consequence has become one of the well-to-do farmers and stockmen in Warren and Clinton counties. Warren W. Mills was born, August 15, 1861, in Warren county, Ohio, a son of William H. and Izellah (Gordon) Mills, the former of whom was born, September 12, 1840, in Warren county, and the latter, near the Middle Run church, north of Waynesville, daughter of Samuel and Martha (Montgomery) Gordon. William H. Mills was the son of Isaac and Annabel (Burnett) Mills, farmers in Warren county, the latter of whom was a native of Pennsylvania.

William H. Mills was educated in the common schools of Warren county and began farming in his native county, where he lived for a few years, after which, about 1864, he came, with his family, to Clinton county and settled in Chester township, where he spent the remainder of his life, and where he owned a tract of two hundred and eighteen acres. William H. and Izellah (Gordon) Mills were the parents of three children, of whom Everett D., the second born, died unmarried. Warren, the eldest is the subject of this sketch, and Martha, the youngest, married William Shanibaugh.

Mr. Mill's parents were members of the Friends church and his father was connected with the Republican party.

Warren W. Mills was educated in the common schools of Chester township and on arriving at manhood began farming on the land where he now lives, where he is engaged in general farming and stockraising. He owns one hundred and eighteen acres in one tract and a half interest in another farm of one hundred acres.

In 1879 Warren W. Mills was married to Margaret Hurley, who was born in 1863, daughter of Henry and Lauretta (Colvin) Hurley, and to this happy union there have been born three children, of whom one, Nellie May, who was the wife of Daniel Miller, is deceased. Earl, the second born, married Etha Kenney and has two children, Manard and Anna Mae. Coral Mills married Clyde Lewis and has one child, Russell.

Mr. and Mrs. Mills are members of the Methodist church, he being one of the stewards of the church. Mr. Mills votes the Republican ticket and is a man of considerable influence in local politics. Mr. Mills's family are all highly respected in Chester township.

HARVEY W. CLEMENS.

Harvey W. Clemens, a prosperous farmer of Richland township and a conservative business man of this county, owns sixty-five acres of land, one-half mile west of Sabina, the farm formerly owned by his father. Mr. Clemens has had this farm for eight years and, during this time has erected a house, barn and out-buildings and made many improvements on the place.

Harvey W. Clemens was born on October 13, 1857, in Richland township, this county, the son of Robert and Mary (Bishop) Clemens. Robert Clemens was born on July 4, 1816, in Fluvanna county, Virginia, and died on June 23, 1882. On April 30, 1835, he married Mary Bishop, who was born on June 14, 1815, in Albermarle county, Virginia. Robert Clemens, who was a farmer by occupation, came to Ohio about 1846, and brought his family with him. They were members of the Presbyterian church. Mrs. Robert Clemens died on August 3, 1891. Robert Clemens's father was Robert Clemens, Sr., a farmer, who moved from Virginia to Missouri in an early day and there spent the remainder of his life.

Harvey W. Clemens received a common-school education in the public schools of this county. He was married on August 15, 1883, to Ella Spurgeon, the eldest daughter of James W. and Harriet E. (Lyons) Spurgeon, life-long residents of Sabina, Richland township, and devout christians, members of the Methodist Protestant church, both of whom have passed on to their reward.

Mr. and Mrs. Clemens have no children. They are members of the Friends church and have hosts of friends, among whom they are held in high esteem. Mr. Clemens is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and prominent in the work of that society.

FRANK J. MARTIN.

Frank J. Martin, formerly a well-known school teacher of this county, and now proprietor of a general mercantile store in Midland, was born on November 10, 1881, at Withamsville, Ohio, a son of Joseph and Jennie (Moore) Martin, both natives of Clermont county, Ohio. The paternal grandparents of Frank J. Martin resided in Clermont county during the early part of their lives, but when Joseph Martin was a mere lad, the family removed to Springs, Illinois. The grandfather was a farmer by occupation. The maternal grandfather of Mr. Martin, James Moore, also was a native of Clermont county, where he spent all his life. He was a farmer by occupation also.

Joseph Martin was reared in Illinois, but returned to Ohio, before his marriage. He was a farmer in Clermont county until 1891, in which year he came to Clinton county, locating in Jefferson township, where he farmed for seventeen years, or until his death. He died, however, in the state of Idaho, while on a trip west. Joseph Martin was first married to Hannah Nash, and to his first marriage were born three children, Charles, Ella and Ruth. By his second marriage there was but one child, Frank J., the immediate subject of this review.

Frank J. Martin, who was educated in the common schools of Jefferson township, and also at Westboro, Ohio, taught school for five years in Clinton county, three years at Midland City, and two years in the district schools of the county. He then purchased the J. F. Harper general store in 1906, and has since been engaged in the management of this store, in which he has been very successful, having built up a large and lucrative trade in Midland City and the surrounding country.

In 1906 Frank J. Martin was married to Zola M. Doughman, the daughter of Elijah Doughman, of Edenton, Ohio.

Mr. Martin is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Free and Accepted Masons. His parents were members of the Baptist church.

SAMUEL WILSON.

Samuel Wilson, who owns a splendid farm in Wilson township, this county, and who is known among a large circle of friends as one who is accustomed to smile whether he gains or loses five hundred dollars in a transaction, was born in Fayette county, near Martinsburg, on February 21, 1853. For the past thirty years he has been extensively engaged in buying and shipping live stock to all parts of Ohio and to the Eastern markets.

Mr. Wilson's parents were James and Margaret (Plymire) Wilson, the former of whom was born and reared in Fayette county, Ohio, and the latter in Washington county, Pennsylvania, the daughter of Martin Plymire, a farmer, who immigrated to this county, and here spent the remainder of his life. He was the father of six children, of whom Mrs. James Wilson was the youngest, the others having been Barnett, Andrew, Samuel, John and Martin.

James Wilson's father was Joshua Wilson, a native of Ohio and an early settler in Clinton county. He was a soldier in the War of 1812 and owned a farm in Fayette county, near Martinsburg.

Educated in the common schools of Fayette county, James Wilson, who always suffered a physical infirmity, was a shoemaker and farmer and owned one hundred and sixty acres of land in Richland township, this county. He was a member of the Methodist church and active in religious work during his entire life. Nine children were born to James and Margaret (Plymire) Wilson, of whom four, Susannah, Martin, Ellen and Lavina, are deceased, the living children being Catherine, James, Samuel, Lewis and Julia. Margaret Plymire was Mr. Wilson's second wife.

Samuel Wilson was educated in the common schools and grew up on the farm. He was married on November 30, 1876, to Mary E. Gray, who was born in this county on December 19, 1857, the daughter of George and Elizabeth (Price) Gray, farmers of Wilson township and prominent members of the Methodist church.

To Mr. and Mrs. Wilson two children have been born, George and Ora, the former of whom married Margaret Merriweather, of Wilson township. Ora Wilson married Grover Weical, of Richland township, and has one child, a son, Samuel Exley Eugene.

Mrs. Samuel Wilson is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Wilson is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and is a member of the Wilson township school board. He owns one hundred and sixty-eight acres of land in Wilson and Richland townships, which he purchased in 1883. Not many years ago he rebuilt his barn and is now comfortably situated as a farmer and stockman.

HENRY B. MIARS.

There is no positive rule for achieving success and yet in the life of the successful man there are always lessons which may well be followed. The man who succeeds is the man who can see and make use of the opportunities which fall in his way. Henry B. Miars, a prominent citizen of Wilmington, this county, and a representative in this section for the International Harvester Company, is a man who has risen steadily, by careful and honest application, to the business responsibilities imposed upon him. His qualities of discrimination, his sound judgment and his executive ability have contributed largely to his material success. He is the scion of an old family and was born in the old stone house erected by his grandfather, David Miars, who settled in the county one year after it was organized.

Henry B. Miars was born in Union township, this county, November 9, 1868, son of Isaiah F. and Matilda (Babb) Miars, the former of whom was born in the same house as his son, Henry B., August 6, 1833, and who died on January 6, 1911. The mother was born in Union township, this county, on February 23, 1837, and is still living with her children.

Isaiah F. Miars was the son of David and Sarah (Stout) Miars, the former of whom was born in Virginia in 1795, the son of Martin Miars, who settled in Clinton county, Ohio, in 1811, and who purchased a large tract of land at a dollar and a quarter an acre. David and Sarah Miars were the parents of ten children, all of whom grew to manhood and womanhood. He and his wife lived on a farm of one hundred and thirty acres, which was a part of his father's homestead and included the dwelling. Subsequently, Isaiah F. Miars came into possession of this farm and now Henry B. Miars, the subject of this sketch, owns it. In fact, it has never been out of the family since it was covered with virgin forest and to this day stands the old stone house which the grandfather, David Miars, built over one hundred years ago. It is still in a good state of preservation and still used. The stone walls are two feet thick and the window casements are equally as deep. It is a two-story house and was regarded as a local wonder when first built, at that time having been considered the acme of luxury. In the days when this old house was built the builders thereabout did not use derricks and it was necessary to build a track and begin scaffolding one hundred feet from the building in order to get the stone up to the second story, the stones being hauled on a wooden track in a wheelbarrow.

David Miars became a well-to-do farmer and held four different farms. He was a Republican in politics and had a blacksmith shop on his farm in which he made most of his money. He died at the age of eighty-three years. His wife, who before her marriage was Sarah Stout, was burned to death. While sitting in front of an open fireplace, her clothes caught fire and she lived only a few hours, dying in great agony. She was a splendid Christian woman and highly respected in this community.. For several generations the Miars family have been members of the Friends church.

Matilda Babb, the mother of Henry B. Miars, is the daughter of Henry and Ann (Woodruff) Babb, who were early settlers in Union township and who lived in the same neighborhood as the Miars family. They also were stanch Quakers. Henry Babb was twice married, the first time to Matilda Woodruff, upon whose death he married her sister, Ann, who bore him ten children. There were three children by the first wife. Henry Babb died during the Civil War.

Isaiah F. Miars grew up on the farm which his grandfather, Martin Miars, had entered and was one of the younger children of a large family. He was married on October 25, 1855, to Matilda Babb. Although he was a cripple and owned a farm, he spent most of his time in managing his stone quarry on Todd's Fork, which he worked extensively. Isaiah F. and Matilda Miars were the parents of six children, of whom Henry B. is the youngest, the others being, Luella, who married Frank Hazard, a hardware salesman of Wilmington; Elva, who married Orlando Walker, who lives on a farm near Wilmington; Anna B., who married O. C. Babb, a carpenter, of Xenia, Ohio; Mary, who married Arthur Harold, of Indianapolis, and who is quite a noted preacher in the Friends church, and Corwin, who died at the age of twenty-six.

Henry B. Miars grew up on the farm and attended the country schools of Clinton county and subsequently Wilmington College. After leaving college, he worked four years as a clerk in David Peeble's hardware store at Wilmington and for a time was a traveling salesman for the Bailey Auger Bit Company, of Lancaster, Ohio. In 1892 Mr. Miars became a salesman for the International Harvester Company and is still thus engaged in the service of that firm. At first he was merely a local salesman, but he quickly became an expert and now has full charge of five counties in Ohio, with headquarters at Wilmington, and is the manager, not only of sales, but of deliveries and collections. Since 1906 he and his family have resided on Lincoln street in Wilmington.

On March 26, 1891, Henry B. Miars was married to Eva Jay, who was born at New Burlington, this county, the daughter of James and Elida Jay, well-known farmers, now living at Martinsville in this county. To Mr. and Mrs. Miars one son has been born, Ralph J., born on May 15, 1892, who is a draughtsman employed in the office of the Champion Bridge Works Company at Wilmington. He is a graduate of the Wilmington high school and of Wilmington College.

Mr. and Mrs. Miars and son are members of the Friends church, all three holding birthright membership in that church. It is needless to say that Mr. Miars is a highly-respected citizen, well known, not only in Clinton county, but in surrounding counties, where he is frequently called on account of his business connections.

JESSE N. OREN.

Jesse Newcomb Oren was born in Clinton county, Ohio, December 25, 1835. Mr. Oren was the third child of Elihu and Jane (Newcomb) Oren. When he was six weeks old, in February, 1836, his father moved with his family on to the farm now owned by Jesse N. Oren and managed by his son, Arthur E. Oren, and which has been his home for nearly eighty years. He grew to manhood on his father's farm, doing farm work in summer and attending school in winter. He also attended Antioch College for a time in 1864-5, then under the presidency of Horace Mann. In 1859-60 he engaged in teaching. In 1861 he answered the call made by Abraham Lincoln for three-years men to put down the rebellion, and enlisted on September 17, 1861, in Company B, Fortieth Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He served in that company until the fall of Atlanta, when he was mustered out as orderly sergeant, in October, 1864. He was for a time a prisoner of war and an inmate of Libby and other rebel prisons.

Mr. Oren returned home from the army and resumed farming. At the election of 1865 he was elected a member of the Ohio Legislature, to represent Clinton county, and served for two years, 1866-7.

Mr. Oren was again elected to the House of Representatives in 1871 for two years and in 1874, for the same length of time, serving in all six years as representative of his county. He was elected to the Ohio Senate in 1883 to represent the fifth senatorial district, composed of the counties of Greene, Fayette and Clinton. George Hoadly was then governor of the state. Mr. Oren was again elected by the same district in 1891, when James E. Campbell was governor, serving, in all, four years in the Senate and six years in the House. In 1903 Governor Nash appointed him a member of the Ohio board of state charities, for the term of three years. At the expiration of that time, 1906, Governor Harris reappointed him for another term of three years. At the end of this term, 1909, on account of failing health, he resigned his position and retired from active public business. He has been able during the past six years to read the papers and keep posted on all the important public questions of the day.

Mr. Oren is a member of the Society of Friends and a firm believer in the principles and doctrines taught by that organization. Although he served for more than three years as a soldier, he believes all wars are contrary to the teachings of Christ and that all questions in dispute between nations should be settled by peaceful means, without resorting to force.

On July 8, 1866, Mr. Oren was married to Mary A. Bennett, of West Elkton, Ohio. Five children were born to them: Charles H., Arthur E., Cora B., Clara J. and Alice L. Two of these, Charles H. and Cora B. are dead.

EDWARD PEELLE.

Edward Peelle, a prosperous farmer of Wilson township, is descended from pioneer stock, his great-great-grandparents, Reuben and Rhoda Peelle, having come to Clinton county from Wayne county, North Carolina. Mr. Peelle was born in Clinton county on November 26, 1865. He is a good-natured man and public-spirited citizen and owns a highly-productive farm of two hundred and seventy acres in Wilson township, equipped with practically every modern convenience known to twentieth century agriculture. He has large and commodious cribs, a gasoline engine, feed grinders and other improved devices and lives in a comfortable home on Route No. 1, out of Sabina.

Edward Peelle is the son of Isaiah and Susan (Miller) Peelle, the former the son of William and Clarissa (Starbuck) Peelle. William Peelle was the son of John and Lydia (Bundy) Peelle and John Peelle was the son of Reuben and Rhoda Peelle. John Peelle was born in Wayne county, North Carolina, near Contentna meeting house, June 2, 1781, and remained with his parents until his twenty-fourth year, when he engaged in farming. He later emigrated to Grayson county, Virginia, where he remained for one year and then undertook the journey to the "far West," traveling through Ohio and into the territory of Indiana as far as Richmond. Subsequently, he returned to North Carolina, well pleased with the appearance of the Western country. He bade a final adieu to his old home after remaining in North Carolina for a short time and emigrated to Belmont county, Ohio, where, on December 2, 1807, he married Lydia Bundy, the daughter of William and Mary Bundy, of that county, being married according to the rites of the Friends church. Very soon after their marriage John Peelle and his wife moved to Fall Creek, where they lived until 1811, in which year they settled near Bowerville, Green county, Ohio, and after remaining there two years on March 1, 1813, moved to a farm later owned by Mrs. Rosa T. Denver in Clinton county. In 1820 John Peelle built a hewed-log house, which stood for many years. He was an ardent and devoted member of the Society of Friends. His devoted wife died on December 2, 1856, after forty-nine years of marital happiness, she being nearly seventy-three years of age at the time of her death. Fifteen years later, lacking one day, John Peelle died, at the age of eighty-eight years and six months. They were the parents of three sons and four daughters, all of whom, except one daughter, lived, married and reared families.

At the time John and Lydia (Bundy) Peelle settled in Clinton county, William Peelle, their son, was only five years old, he having been born in Highland county in 1808. In 1832, when twenty-four years old, he was married to Clarissa Starbuck, and to that union were born thirteen children. His wife died in October, 1864, and he lived many years later. He was an ardent member of the Friends church and was a man of considerable wealth at the time of his death.

Of the children born to William and Clarissa Peelle, Isaiah Peelle, a native of Clinton county, married Susan Miller, of Warren county, Ohio, daughter of Thomas

Miller, who moved from Pennsylvania to Ohio before his marriage. Isaiah Peelle was educated in the common schools and owned a farm of one hundred and thirty acres in Clinton county. During the later years of his life he lived retired in Wilmington. He died in 1905, and his widow is still living in Wilmington. They were the parents of five children, Anna, deceased; Edward, the subject of this sketch; Luther, who died in infancy; Morris and Waldo.

Edward Peelle was educated in the public schools of Clinton county and at Wilmington College. In 1889 he was united in marriage to Josephine Spurgeon, the daughter of Thomas Spurgeon, a well-known farmer of Clinton county, and to this union three children have been born, Edna, Walter and Robert. The latter two are unmarried and live at home with their parents; Edna was married on May 27, 1915, to Eber K. Haines, of Simberton, Greene county, Ohio.

Mr. Peelle's farm, comprising two hundred and seventy acres, is a part of the land owned by his great-grandparents, John and Lydia (Bundy) Peelle, after their removal to Clinton county.

DAVID A. HUMPHREYS.

David A. Humphreys, a prosperous farmer and banker of Vernon township, is one of the best-known citizens of Clinton county. The ninth child in a family of twelve children, he is one of those men who, by indefatigable labor, careful business management and cordial relations with his neighbors and fellow citizens, has made for himself an enviable place in the life of this great county.

Mr. Humphreys is a native of Vernon township, where he was born on November 3, 1852, the son of John L. and Julia Ann (Sidels) Humphreys, the former born in Warren county, Ohio, October 1, 1815, and the latter, in Clinton county, September 19, 1819.

The paternal grandparents of David A. Humphreys were James and Elizabeth (Long) Humphreys, the former of whom was a pioneer in Warren county, Ohio, and a farmer in Washington township, where both he and his wife spent their last days. Mr. Humphreys' maternal grandparents were Israel and Nancy (Morrison) Sidels, pioneers of Clinton county, where both spent practically all of their lives and where both passed away.

Mr. Humphreys' father located in Vernon township, this county, in March, 1854. He was an extensive farmer and landowner and had about six hundred acres of land in this county. A Republican in politics, he was always active in the councils of his party and came to be known as one of the foremost citizens in the community where he lived. He died on January 4, 1893. His wife had preceded him to the grave on August 4, 1890. They were the parents of twelve children, of whom James, Mattie, Filmore, Nancy, John, David A., Joseph and Julia are living, and Hannah, Mary, Israel and Sarah are deceased.

David A. Humphreys was reared on his father's farm and educated in the public schools at Pansy, in Vernon township. He has always been engaged in farming and at the present time owns approximately three hundred acres of land, but also formerly owned one hundred and thirty-five acres which now belongs to his son, Raymond J. Besides his extensive interest in farm land, Mr. Humphreys is a director of the First National Bank, of Blanchester, and of the Farmers National Bank, of Clarksville.

In December, 1877, David A. Humphreys was married to Caroline Goodwin, who was born in Indiana, daughter of James Goodwin, a brother of Levi Goodwin, mentioned elsewhere in this volume in the biographical sketch of E. M. Goodwin, of Marion township. James Goodwin was a farmer by occupation, who lived in Warren county, Ohio, and who is now deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Humphreys two children have been born, Raymond J., who is mentioned elsewhere in this volume, and Vance, born in 1886, who was educated in the Blanchester high school and is a farmer by occupation. He married Ona Haines and has one child, Uhlan.

Although identified with the Republican party in political matters, Mr. Humphreys has never aspired to office and has never been especially active in politics. He has always stood foremost in the ranks of those who favor public improvements and has done much for the material development, not only of Clinton county, but especially of the community in which he lives.

JOHN QUINCY SMITH.

John Quincy Smith was born in Wayne township, Warren county, Ohio, November 5, 1824. son of Thomas and Mary (Whitehill) Smith, Thomas Smith was born in Powhatan county, Virginia, in 1783, the son of Rev. James and Elizabeth (Porter) Smith. James Smith's father was Thomas Smith, and his mother Magdalen (Trabue) Smith, she being a daughter of Sir Antoine Trabue, who fled from France about 1685. during the persecution of the Huguenots, and came to America about 1700.

Thomas Smith, born 1719, died 1786, the father of James, was of English descent, being a son of George Smith, and Ann (Bailey) Smith. They lived in what is now Powhatan county, Virginia, early in the 18th century. Mary (Whitehill) Smith, born 1788, deceased 1849, was a daughter of Joseph and Mary (Kennedy) Whitehill, who lived in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. The Whitehills were a Scotch-Irish family who settled in that part of Pennsylvania about 1720. This branch emigrated to Ohio in 1815, settling near Lebanon, Warren county. Thomas Smith and Mary Whitehill were married on February 6, 1817.

The Rev. James Smith, grandfather of John Quincy Smith, was a farmer and slaveholder in Virginia, but being very much opposed to the institution of slavery, freed his slaves and removed to the territory northwest of the Ohio river, in the fall of 1798, where he died of a fever soon after their arrival. His widow, Elizabeth (Porter) Smith and her family of nine children removed to their farm near the mouth of Caesar's creek, Warren county, where she died in January, 1825, and where Thomas and Mary (Whitehill) Smith lived and reared their family.

John Q. Smith, the subject of this sketch, attended the neighborhood schools, and for a short time, Miami University, from which he was recalled by the death of his father, in 1841. He lived at the family home until his marriage, in 1852. His wife, Lydia Emma (Evans) Smith, born near Lebanon, September 4, 1834, was a daughter of Charles and Susannah (Throckmorton) Evans. The Evanses were of an old New Jersey family, belonging to the Society of Friends, who emigrated to Warren county, Ohio, about 1809.

The Smith family were Whigs, but John Quincy Smith identified himself with the Freesoilers at an early date and later with the Republican party at its formation about 1856. He served as state senator and representative in the Ohio Legislature, 1860-3; was a member of Congress, 1873-4; United States Commissioner of Indian affairs, 1875-7, and consul general of the United States in Canada, 1878-82. Shortly after his return from Canada he identified himself with the Democratic party on the tariff issue, being an earnest believer in free trade. For more than fifty years he was active in the political affairs of his state and country, as a writer and speaker. In 1854 he moved to a farm near Oakland, Chester township, Clinton county, where he died on December 30, 1901, his widow surviving him until June 16, 1906.

Of the three children of John Q. and Lydia E. (Evans) Smith now living, Mrs. William C. McCune, lives at Kokomo, Indiana, and Miss Ellen H. Smith, at Wilmington, Ohio. The eldest son, Horace Whitehill Smith, born October 2, 1853, is one of the leading citizens and business men of Clinton county. He was married in 1877, to Mary

Eva Campbell, of Chester township, daughter of James W. and Mary Elizabeth (Brown) Campbell, to which union three sons have been born, Irving, Quincy and Edwin.

One son of John Q. Smith and wife, Kennedy, died in infancy. Another, Charles T., a young man, died in Georgia. Another son, Prescott, died in 1912, a judge of the superior court at Cincinnati.

HORACE M. HALL.

Horace M. Hall is a successful contractor and builder of Blanchester, this county. He was born on December 10, 1865, in Preble county, Ohio, the son of Andrew J. and Martha A. (Elliott) Hall, the former a native of Clinton county, and the latter a native of Preble county. The paternal grandparents of Horace M. Hall came from the French frontier in Europe, and, after coming to America, located in Clinton county, where they were early settlers. The maternal grandparents of Horace M. Hall were William and Mary (Hall) Elliott, natives of Virginia. William Elliott died in that state and after his death, his widow came to Ohio, passing away in Preble county, Ohio, in 1872. William Elliott was a soldier in the War of 1812.

Andrew J. Hall, the father of Horace M., a native of Clinton county, was educated in the common schools of this county but left Clinton county some time before the Civil War and settled in Preble county, where he enlisted in the Thirty-fifth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, in which he served three years and four months. In the battle of Chickamauga he was twice wounded, a bullet passing through his shoulder and another through his hip. Four children were born to Andrew J. and Martha A. Hall, Charles, Horace M., Prudence and Alice.

Horace M. Hall, who was educated in the common schools of Preble county, learned paper-making in Middleton, and followed this occupation for about five years. Later he learned the carpenter's trade at Cincinnati and has been engaged in this trade ever since, having moved to Blanchester in 1895, just after the town was destroyed by fire. It is an interesting fact that the first house he built after arriving in Blanchester is the one in which he now lives. For many years he has been a contractor and builder and has erected many buildings in that part of the county.

On September 22, 1896, Horace M. Hall was married to Cora Willoughby, of Blanchester, who has borne him three children, Corliss, Mary and Marjorie.

The Hall family, with the exception of Mr. Hall, are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Hall is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He has served as councilman of Blanchester and is now a member of the board of public affairs. Formerly, he served as deputy assessor of that township. He is a man who performs his duties conscientiously, whether those duties be public or private, and has many friends in that section of Clinton county.

GIDEON MOODY FULLER.

Gideon Moody Fuller and his wife, Amy Solomon Fuller, came to Clinton county from North Carolina, in 1811, and settled on Wilson's run, about three and one-half miles from Wilmington. These were pioneer days and their nearest neighbor was two miles away and they had to go to Waynesville for their groceries. As soon as the sun went down, the wolves would begin to howl and would come right up to the house, whereupon the pioneers would have to bar the doors. There were no such things as locks then in Clinton county, merely a wooden latch, with a string, "which always was out." The only way these pioneers had to get to Cincinnati was by wagon, through the woods most of the way. Most of the roads were marked through the country by "blazing" trees. This procedure consisted of scalping off the bark until the white wood shone. By following this trail repeatedly, in time, the pioneer wayfarers created a road.

Mr. Fuller afterward bought the farm known as the Fuller farm, one mile from the court house, on the old Cincinnati road and in 1831 built a brick house, considered a mansion in that day. It still stands in excellent condition.

Benjamin Fuller, a Revolutionary soldier, came to Clinton county in 1826 and lived with his son, Gideon. He died in 1848 and was buried in the old Methodist graveyard.

Gideon Fuller's children were, William, John, Warren, David, Benajah, Mary Ann, Louisa Jane and Milton Riley.

Judge D. B. Van Pelt, of Dayton; Cyrus M. Van Pelt, a Methodist minister, of Madisonville, and Mary L. Geffs, of Denver, are children of Mary Ann Fuller Van Pelt and Cyrus Van Pelt. Amy F. Hale and Lulu F. Huffman, Wilmington, and Mary L. Wright, of New York, are daughters of Milton Riley Fuller and Margaret Rose Gaither Fuller.

JOB CLARK.

Seven years of faithful service as township trustee of Green township, this county, during which the affairs of that office were administered with the highest regard for the best interests of the public, proved most excellent training for the proper performance of the broader duties of the more important office of county commissioner, which office Job Clark is now filling with equal regard for the wider interests of the whole county. Mr. Clark not only is a member of one of Clinton county's old families, but he ever has taken a most hearty interest in the general advancement of his home county along all lines of human endeavor. Diligent in business, he has prospered in his own affairs; enterprising and public spirited, he brought to the duties of the office of township trustee of Green township the same degree of diligence and attention to business details which had insured success in his personal career, and now, in the administration of the affairs of the county commissioner's office is serving the public in the same diligent and public-spirited manner, his services having proved very satisfactory to all acquainted therewith.

Job Clark was born on the farm in Green township, Clinton county, Ohio, on which he still lives, on March 8, 1872, son of Cary and Rebecca J. (Hildebrand) Clark, both natives of the same township, the former of whom was the son of Benjamin Clark, a Virginian, one of the early settlers of that part of the county, and the latter a daughter of Christopher Hildebrand, also a Green township pioneer.

Cary Clark, who was born on a pioneer farm in Green township, this county, was reared to the life of the farm and received his education in the early schools of that time. About the year 1849 he bought a small tract of fifty acres at the point where his son, Job Clark, now lives and by industry gradually acquired a farm of three hundred and thirty acres. Cary Clark was an energetic, enterprising citizen and early became one of the most influential men in the county. For years he served his township as trustee, his efforts in connection with the administration of the affairs of that office undoubtedly having been productive of large results in the way of the rapid advancement in educational and other standards thereabout. Then for twelve years he served the county as county commissioner from his district, his influence in that office, covering the period from 1873 to 1885, ever having been directed toward the advancement of the county's best interests, so that he left a name that is indelibly written fair on the records of Clinton county. Cary Clark was a Republican and for many years was regarded as one of the leaders of that party in this county, his sound judgment and thorough acquaintance with local conditions giving unusual weight to his counsels in the deliberations of the party managers. He and his wife were members of the Christian church and their children were reared in that faith, the family being one of the most active supporters of the church in that neighborhood. Cary Clark was a member of the Masonic lodge at

New Vienna, to the affairs of which he for years directed his most intelligent attention and was looked upon by the Masons throughout the county as one of the most active members of that ancient fraternity in this county. He and his wife were the parents of the following children: Alfred, Salina, Ida, Frank, Jefferson, Etta and Job.

Job Clark was reared on the paternal farm and received his education in the district school in his home neighborhood and in the high school at New Vienna. Upon completing his studies he entered seriously upon the life of a farmer and has given his most intelligent and indefatigable efforts to his life work, prospering accordingly. He owns one hundred and thirty-seven acres of the old home place and has a delightful home, where he and his pleasant family live in much comfort. In addition to general farming, Mr. Clark has given much attention to the raising of hogs and has found considerable profit in that line. A valuable feature of his farm is a fine sugar-maple grove, from which, in season, Mr. Clark secures a superior quality of maple syrup.

The deep interest Mr. Clark ever has taken in public affairs and his ardent desire to see the largest advancement of the public interest, early was recognized by his neighbors and years ago he was elected to the office of township trustee, a position which he filled with the most gratifying results for a period of seven years. About one year later he was elected to the office of county commissioner from his district, on the Republican ticket, and entered upon the duties of that important office on September 15, 1913, and is still serving in this capacity, performing faithfully his highest duty to the public.

On April 4, 1896, Job Clark was united in marriage to Mary McMahon, of Hillsboro, Ohio, daughter of Michael McMahon, and to this happy union two children have been born, Geneva and Clay Richard. Mr. and Mrs. Clark are members of the Christian church at New Vienna, and are deeply interested in all good works in the community, being regarded as leaders therein, and are held in the very highest regard throughout that section of the county.

Mr. Clark has proved himself a faithful public official, devoted to the welfare of the county, and in all circles is considered a valuable factor in the development of the best interests of the community as a whole, in consequence of which he possesses the full confidence of all.

MARGARET E. McCOY.

The subject of this brief and modest biographical sketch, Mrs. Margaret E. McCoy, was born in this county on September 10, 1855, daughter of John A. and Johanna (Bailey) Oren. Mrs. McCoy is a very earnest member of the Friends church in this county and for the past ten years has been an elder in the same. She was one of the first students to enter Wilmington College, which she attended in the years 1874-75, and she also was a student in Earlham College. Her father, John Adkinson Oren, was born near Springfield, in Clark county, this state, on October 2, 1818, son of James and Margaret (Adkinson) Oren and a grandson of John Oren, who was a son of Jesse and Abigail (Kirk) Oren. The senior John Oren was born in Yorktown, York county, Pennsylvania, in 1756 and grew to manhood in that vicinity. He married Ruth Lousier, of the same place, and was the father of sixteen children and lived to greet the coming of one hundred and five grandchildren. He was a consistent member of the Friends church and took a prominent part in the work of establishing the church at Dover, near his home. His death occurred in 1845. John A. Oren, father of Mrs. McCoy, was a birthright member of the Society of Friends and was honest and upright in all his dealings with his fellow men, without which he believed no man could be a true follower of Christ. In his younger manhood he was a carpenter, but after his marriage turned his attention to farming and was quite successful. His death occurred at his farm home near Highland, in Highland county, this state, on February 12, 1888.

Mrs. McCoy's mother, Johanna (Bailey) Oren, was born on a farm four miles north of Wilmington, this county, which farm now is owned by W. A. Starbuck, on May 12, 1820, daughter of Daniel and Mary (Haworth) Bailey, who came to this section of Ohio from Virginia in 1804 and also took a prominent part in the work of establishing the Dover church. Daniel Bailey was the son of Abidan Bailey and was born in Virginia. He was active in all his relations to his church and was a consistent member of the same all his life. His death occurred in 1844. He and his wife were the parents of eleven children, those besides Mrs. McCoy's mother having been, Mrs. Martha Oren, George Bailey, Mrs. Susanna Hunnicutt, Mrs. Sarah Hunt, David Bailey, Josiah Bailey, Rebecca Bailey, Elizabeth Bailey, Daniel Bailey, Jr., and Mrs. Mary Hornida, all of whom married and settled near their father's home, except Elizabeth, who spent all her life at the home place, and Rebecca, who died at the age of eighteen years.

THOMAS E. CRAIG, M. D.

Dr. Thomas E. Craig is one of the leading physicians of Sabina, this county, and, in a county which takes just pride in the personnel of its professional men, especially its physicians, he has won for himself an honorable position in the hearts of his fellow townsmen. Good intellectual training, thorough professional knowledge and the possession and utilization of these qualities and attributes have made Doctor Craig locally eminent in his life calling.

Thomas E. Craig was born on October 26, 1865, at Stanton, in Fayette county, Ohio, the son of Thomas J. and Susannah J. (Rosebrough) Craig, the former of whom was born at Greenfield, in Highland county, Ohio, and the latter a native of Fayette county, the daughter of John Rosebrough, who married a Miss McDaniels. The grandfather of Doctor Craig was James Craig, who emigrated from New Jersey to Highland county, this state, and who married Sarah Ann Cooley. They had six children: John, Williams, Thompson, David, Mary and Thomas J.

Thomas J. Craig was educated in the common schools of Highland county, Ohio, and when a young man worked on a farm. Later he operated a wholesale notion wagon between towns, also owning a general store at Stanton. During the later years of his life he lived on his farm of fifty acres. Thomas J. and Susannah J. Craig had nine children, as follow: John, who enlisted in the Civil War from Iowa, where he was living, died on a forced march and was buried at Little Rock, Arkansas; Nancy, who married George Rowe; Josephine, who married I. N. Rowe; Williams, who died young; Mary Alice, who married S. S. Cockerelle; Parthenia, who became the wife of J. L. Lines; Eliza, who is the wife of Eldridge Cockerelle; David S., who married Grace Wilcox; and Dr. Thomas E., the subject of this sketch. The father was an ardent Republican in politics and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Thomas E. Craig began his pursuit of an education in the common schools of Stanton, Ohio, and when a young man taught school, later attending the normal school at Ada. Upon reaching his decision to become a physician, he entered Starling Medical School at Columbus, Ohio, and later was a student at the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, Maryland, from which latter institution he was graduated with the class of 1892. He began practicing in Sabina in July, 1892, and has practiced there ever since.

In 1893 Doctor Craig was married to Mary A. Adams, daughter of Elias and Sarah B. (Bentley) Adams, and to this happy union have been born three children, Sarah Helen, Thomas Eugene and Carl.

Politically, Doctor Craig is a Republican. He and his wife and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. He is a member of the Ohio State Medical Association and of the Clinton County Medical Society.

DAVID KING POLK.

A prosperous farmer of Wilson township, this county, David King Polk, owns one hundred and twelve acres of land in that township, comprising a fertile and productive farm. He is interested in Shorthorn cattle and for many years has been engaged in raising them for the market.

David King Polk was born on November 11, 1872, in the township where he lives, the son of William H. and Mary M. (Prunk) Polk, the former of whom was born south of Wilmington, in Clinton county, and the latter in Bureau county, Illinois, daughter of Daniel and Catherine (Hammond) Prunk, of that state. Daniel Prunk was born on July 21, 1796, in Virginia, and was married to Catherine Hammond, who was born on November 22, 1797. This worthy couple reared a family of twelve children, whose names in the order of their birth are as follow: Martha, born on November 11, 1818; James, June 2, 1820; John, February 19, 1822; Hammond, April 8, 1824; Madison, April 23, 1826; Maggie, January 26, 1828; Daniel, November 3, 1829; Leander, August 15, 1830; George, February 3, 1834; Washington, March 21, 1836; Catherine, May 15, 1841, and Mary M., the mother of Mr. Polk, June 31, 1843.

Mr. Polk's paternal grandparents were William and Hannah (Hobson) Polk, natives of Tennessee, who were the parents of seven children, of whom Martha, the youngest, is living at Muncie, Indiana, at the advanced age of ninety-six years. The others were Sallie, John, James, William H., Robert and Nathaniel. After his marriage, in 1775, William Polk moved to Ohio from Tennessee, and located in Clinton county, near where the city of Wilmington now stands. He entered one hundred and fifty-six acres of land from the government in that vicinity, but later moved to Wilson township. He died about 1825, and his remains are buried on the farm now owned by his son, Edward Polk, brother of David K. Polk. He was a Baptist minister and prominent in the pioneer life of this county.

William H. Polk, the father of David King Polk, received only a very limited education, attending school altogether about six months. Nevertheless, he was a well-read man and a man of strictly moral habits. During the Civil War he furnished, free of charge, food and supplies for many widows and orphans. He owned three hundred and seventy-three acres of land in Clinton county, and was an extensive stock raiser. He imported a thirty-thousand-dollar Shorthorn bull from England, the first animal of the kind in this part of the country. He also kept mules and Cotswold sheep. William H. Polk was very active in the affairs of the county, and at the time the Baltimore & Ohio railroad was constructed through Clinton county he gave five hundred dollars towards its construction.

To William H. and Mary M. (Prunk) Polk were born eight children, namely: George, who married Deborah Freeman, died at his home in Springfield, Ohio; William P., who married Alice Thompson, lives in Oregon; Daniel, who died in infancy; Lillie, who married Joseph Reynolds, died in Clinton county; Mary, who is the wife of S. T. Groves, lives in Sabina; Edward, who married Bertha Ray; John J., who married Eva Wilson, owns one hundred and five acres in Wilson township, and David K., the subject of this sketch.

Born and reared on the farm and educated in the country schools of Clinton county, David King Polk lived at home with his parents until his marriage on February 25, 1903, to Ada Ray, daughter of Collins Ray, who for twenty-five years was the section foreman for the Baltimore & Ohio railroad at Sabina. Mr. Ray was a very devout member of the Christian church.

To Mr. and Mrs. Polk three children have been born, Mary Magdalene, Elizabeth and Sampson. Mrs. Polk is a member of the Christian church at Sabina, and one of the active workers in the church. Fraternally, Mr. Polk is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Modern Woodmen of America, as well as of the Daughters of Rebekah. He is a Republican and has served as judge of the elections in Wilson township for three years.

In 1911 Mr. Polk built a modern and full-equipped country home on his Wilson township farm. Mr. and Mrs. Polk are popular in Wilson township. They believe in enjoying life and in getting out of it all that may be had in the way of enjoyment.

JOHN DENEHY.

The venerable John Denehy, of Wilson township, is one of those thrifty sons of the Emerald Isle who have found comfortable homes and snug fortunes in America. Mr. Denehy is a highly respected citizen of his community and a man who believes in helping worthy public movements. He was born in Ireland, December 8, 1844, the son of Jeremiah and Johanna (Dineen) Denehy, both natives of Ireland. Mr. Denehy's paternal grandfather was John Denehy, also a native of Ireland, a farmer by occupation and a devout Catholic.

Jeremiah Denehy, the father of John, was also a farmer and a member of the Catholic church. He died in 1893 in his native land. He and his wife were the parents of three children, John, Jerry and Honora, all of whom came to America and of whom the two last named now are deceased.

John Denehy had but little opportunity for an education. He came to the United States in May, 1873, and after landing in this country, proceeded directly to Wilmington, this county, where his sister, Mrs. Honora Haley, and her husband were already living. Mr. Denehy brought over his sister's son, whom she had left behind in Ireland on coming to this country. Afterwards Mr. Denehy moved to Liberty township, this county, where he rented one hundred and seventy acres of land for eight hundred and fifty dollars a year, and this arrangement continued for nineteen years. In 1894 he purchased the farm where he is now living, which consists of one hundred and eighteen acres, and since purchasing this tract, has added, by purchase, sixty-four acres, giving him a total of one hundred and eighty acres of excellent farming land.

On March 1, 1870 John Denehy was married to Honora O'Leary, the daughter of Patrick O'Leary, and to this union have been born nine children, Jerry, Johanna, Honora, Patrick, John, Daniel, William, Dennis and Julia. The family are all earnest and devoted members of the Catholic church, at Wilmington, to the support of which they are liberal contributors, and in whose welfare they are deeply interested.

SAMUEL J. IRVIN.

Samuel J. Irvin, who is a prosperous farmer and stockman of Vernon township, this county, was born in Marion township, Clinton county, March 7, 1876, the son of James and Alice S. (Losh) Irvin, the former of whom was born in Warren county, Ohio, May 18, 1849, and the latter, July 9, 1851, in Hamilton county, Ohio.

James Irvin, the father of Samuel J., is the son of Samuel and Martha (Crosley) Irvin, the former of whom was born in Ross county, Ohio, March 9, 1821, and the latter in 1826, in Warren county. The parents of Samuel Irvin were Andrew and Sarah Irvin, the former of whom came to the United States with his parents and settled in Pennsylvania. Andrew Irvin and wife moved from Ross county, Ohio, to Warren county and there spent the rest of their lives, residing near Hopkinsville, where they kept a hotel for many years. Andrew Irvin died shortly after the Civil War and his widow died about thirty years ago. They had a large family, their children being John, Samuel, James B., Sarah, Millie, Martha, Eliza, Nancy, Hannah, Isabel, Hester and Malinda. Andrew Irvin was identified with the Whig party and later with the Republican party.

Samuel Irvin was reared on a farm and was educated in the public schools. In 1857 he came to Clinton county and here bought and sold land, having owned at different times several different farms. At his death he owned about three hundred and sixty acres. Martha (Crosley) Irvin was the daughter of Isaac and Rachel (Cook) Crosley, the former of whom was born in Michigan, and the latter near Lebanon, Warren county, Ohio. Both died in Warren county. Samuel Irvin was identified with the Republican party. His wife was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He died in 1899 and his widow in 1907. They had a family of seven children, namely: Nathan, born in 1847, who died in 1900; James, who is hereafter referred to; Caroline, who married Clark Smith, deceased; George, who is mentioned elsewhere in this work; Abram, a resident of Blanchester, this county; Emma, the wife of J. E. Reeder, and Dora, who is the wife of Charles Shank, a son of Martin Shank, of Marion township, who is ninety-four years old.

Born and reared on the farm and educated in the public schools, James Irvin has been a farmer by occupation. He is now living retired in Blanchester, to which place he moved in 1903, the Irvin home being situated on Center street. James Irvin owns three hundred and sixty acres of land in Marion and Vernon townships and other property in Blanchester. He is a Republican in politics and has served as a member of the school board and as trustee of Marion township. He has also served as a member of the Blanchester council for six years. Mr. Irvin attends the Methodist Episcopal church.

On January 1, 1871, James Irvin was married to Alice S. Losh, daughter of James and Eliza (Hawthorn) Losh, and to this union eight children have been born, namely: Irene F., who is the wife of Charles Sears, and has three children, Dan, Charles Raymond and Emma, (deceased); Estella J., who is the wife of Harley Carnahan, and has four children, James Estel, Lucille, Harry and George; Samuel J., the subject of this sketch; Stanley A., who married Elsie Leonard; Georgiana, who died at the age of three years; an infant daughter, deceased; Ethel Eva, who married Carl H. Smith, of Miamisburg, and Charles Raymond, who married Viola Conner, and had two children, Edna Ray, who died at the age of three years, and Carl Harold.

Mrs. James Irvin, who is the daughter of James and Eliza (Hawthorn) Losh, is descended from pioneer stock in this section of Ohio. Her father, James Losh, was born near Terrace Park, Hamilton county, Ohio, in 1817, the son of John Losh, who emigrated from Pennsylvania to Hamilton county, Ohio, when a young man. John Losh married a Miss Highland. Some time afterward he started to New Orleans in a boat and was never afterwards heard from. He lived at Milford, Ohio, where he had a tannery. His widow died at Terrace Park, Ohio. James Losh was a farmer by occupation, a Republican in politics and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. His first wife was Martha Canada, the daughter of Frank and Johanna Canada, pioneers in Hamilton county. He died at the age of about seventy-four years and his wife at about sixty. James Losh and wife were the parents of only one child, Frank K., who now lives at Blanchester. The second wife of James Losh was Eliza Hawthorn, who was born in Hamilton county, Ohio, and who, for a number of years, was a teacher in that county. To this second marriage there were born seven children, Mary (deceased), Martha, Alice S., James (deceased), Charles, Samuel and Arthur Willis (deceased). James Losh died at Clarksville, Ohio, in 1890. His first wife died in 1843, and his second wife in 1863, after which he married a third time.

Samuel J. Irvin, the subject of this sketch, was reared on a farm and was educated in the public schools. Mr. Irvin has always been engaged in farming and now owns two hundred and fifteen acres of land in Vernon and Marion townships and has devoted practically his entire attention to the cultivation of this land. He is a progressive farmer, judged from any point of view and one who has made many improvements on his farm. In late years Mr. Irvin has given most of his attention to stock.

On February 22, 1899, Samuel J. Irvin was married to Clara M. Florea, who was born in Clinton county, daughter of Parker N. and Maria (Athey) Florea, and who formerly was a teacher in the schools of this county. Parker N. Florea is deceased, and his widow now lives at Midland City.

Parker N. Florea was born near Cuba, in Clinton county, the son of Harrison and Nancy (Seaman) Florea, both natives of this county. Harrison Florea was the son of Isaac and Elizabeth Florea, pioneer settlers of the region round about Macedonia. Nancy Seaman was the daughter of Ebenezer and Lillis (Mitchell) Seaman, of Virginia, who settled near Cuba about 1808. Harrison Florea was a farmer by occupation and he and his wife had two children, Parker N. and Caroline. Parker N. Florea was educated in Clinton county and became a farmer. For fifteen years before his death, he operated a tile factory at Midland City. He was married in 1867 to Maria Athey, who was the daughter of George W. and Charlotte (Biggs) Athey, natives probably of Virginia and Clinton county, respectively. George W. Athey was the son of Robert and Rhoda (Follis) Athey, natives of Virginia, who came to Clinton county about 1808, and spent the rest of their lives in this county. Charlotte Biggs was the daughter of William Biggs, who settled, about 1808, near Cuba. He owned a tract of land stretching almost to Clarksville. He served in the War of 1812 and remained in this community until his death. Parker N. Florea was a soldier in the Civil War, serving in an Ohio volunteer regiment.

To Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Irvin one daughter has been born, Velma, who was born on January 3, 1900.

Mr. Irvin is a Republican in politics, but has never aspired to office, devoting all of his time to his private interests.

J. M. RICHARDS.

J. M. Richards, who is a hustling business man of Sabina; this county, a man with very cordial manners and tactful in all of his relations with the public, was born on January 19, 1865, at Hillsboro, Ohio, the son of Milverne and Amy (Miller) Richards, the latter of whom was born near Hillsboro, the daughter of John Miller, a farmer of that community and a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The paternal grandparents of J. M. Richards were William and Lucinda (Gibson) Richards, both natives of Pennsylvania, but who were married in Ohio after coming to this state. They settled on what was known as Little Rocky fork near Hillsboro and there owned three hundred and fifty acres of land. They spent their last days in Hillsboro, living retired. Both the grandparents were members of the Methodist Episcopal church and were very active in church work. They had five children, Milverne, Newton, John, Samuel and Margaret, of whom Margaret is the only one now living. Newton was a physician in Atlantic, Iowa; Samuel was a physician at Hillsboro, Ohio, and John and Milverne were farmers.

Milverne Richards, the father of J. M., was educated in the common schools and was always engaged in farming. He first married Amelia Barrow, and to them were born two children, Newton and Minerva, both of whom are now deceased. Newton Richards married Emma Fisher, and after her death, Emma Reno. Minerva Richards married Minor Smith, a resident of Denver, Colorado. Upon the death of Amelia (Barron) Richards, Milverne Richards married, secondly, Amy Miller, to which union were born three children, J. M., the subject of this sketch; Mary, the twin sister of J. M., and Anna. Both Mary and Anna grew to maturity, but Mary died unmarried. Anna married Elmer Hunter, of Hillsboro, Ohio. Milverne Richards died on April 2, 1900, at the age of eighty years, his death having occurred on the anniversary of his birthday. His second wife died on September 17, 1884.

J. M. Richards was educated in the common schools of Hillsboro, Ohio, and was married on December 29, 1889, to Mahala Woods, who was born near Hillsboro, the daughter of John and and Ellen (Bernett) Woods. To Mr. and Mrs. Richards have been born two children, Martha, who married Burch Riber, a wholesale dealer in cigars, tobacco and candy, at Hillsboro, Ohio, and has one child, Margaret Ellen, and Margaret, who married Frank Pavey, of Sabina, this county.

Mr. and Mrs. Richards have been living in Sabina for about four years. Prior to moving to Sabina they were residents of Hillsboro, and Mr. Richards was in the dairy business at that place for nine years. Since locating at Sabina, he has been engaged in the livery business. He owns property in that city and is now one of its prominent citizens.

Mr. and Mrs. Richards are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Fraternally, Mr. Richards is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is active in the work of the Methodist Sunday school at Sabina and is much interested in work of that kind.

ZENE G. HADLEY.

The earliest Hadleys of whom there is any authentic record in this country came to America from England about 1680, when Simon Hadley settled in Bucks county, Pennsylvania. Zene G. Hadley, one of the present county commissioners of Clinton county, and a prosperous farmer of Adams township, is a representative of the third generation of the family in Clinton county. He is a well-known breeder of mule-foot hogs, which he has exhibited at the Ohio state fair, the Indiana state fair and the Forest City fairs, as well as at many minor fairs in the state of Ohio.

Zene G. Hadley was born on May 31, 1875, near Clarksville, in Vernon township, a son of Evan H. and Susannah (Nickerson) Hadley, the former of whom was born, September 20, 1842, in Adams township, this county and the latter, July 21, 1846, daughter of Clark and Martha Nickerson. Evan Hadley and Susannah Nickerson were married on January 16, 1863. Evan H. Hadley received his education in the common school of Adams township, and spent practically all his life as a farmer in that township. For about eight years, however, he operated stores at Springboro and Harveysburg, in Warren county, Ohio. He also owned about one hundred and fifty acres of land in Adams township. Mr. and Mrs. Evan H. Hadley were members of the Friends church, and Mr. Hadley voted the Republican ticket. They were the parents of three children: James C., born on June 19, 1864, who died on May 10, 1889; Cora L., January 17, 1869, who married John L. Kittrell, minister in the Friends church at West Milton, Ohio, and Zene, the immediate subject of this sketch.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Hadley were Jonathan and Susannah W. (Clawson) Hadley, the former of whom was born, August 10, 1810, in Adams township, and the latter, May 14, 1812. They were married on December 29, 1831. Jonathan Hadley was educated in the common schools of Adams township, and spent practically all his life as a farmer in that township. He owned one hundred and twenty acres of land, and was one of the pioneer farmers of the county. He and his wife were members of the Friends church, and politically, he was a Republican. Jonathan Hadley and wife were the parents of four children: Louisa, born on November 8, 1832; Mahlon, February 13 1835; John W., December 22, 1839, and Evan H., September 20, 1842.

Jonathan Hadley was a son of John and Lydia (Harvey) Hadley, the former of whom was born on December 25, 1770, and the latter, January 19, 1774. Mr. Hadley's great-grandparents were the parents of twelve children, namely: William, born on July 18, 1795; Simon, November 1, 1796; Elizabeth, June 14, 1798; Joshua, September 5, 1799; Jacob, May 3, 1801; Isaac, December 9, 1802; Eli, September 27, 1804; John, October 3, 1806; Thomas, August 21, 1808; Jonathan, November 10, 1810; Ruth, November 5, 1812, and James, July 20, 1815.

Zene G. Hadley received his elementary education in the common schools of Adams township, at the "Bunker Hill" school, and later attended the high school and college at Wilmington for two years. After finishing his schooling he began farming in Adams township, and in 1904 purchased one hundred acres of land in that township.

In November, 1907, Zene G. Hadley was married to Minnie Johns, who was born at Wilmington, this county, August 15, 1875, the only daughter of Rodney and Anna (Burke) Johns, the former of whom, born on January 26, 1843, in Wilmington, died on June 18, 1900, and the latter, born on October 29, 1858, died on June 16, 1892. Rodney Johns was a well-known road contractor of Wilmington.

Rodney Johns was one of ten children born to his parents, Samuel and Elizabeth (Denver) Johns, the former of whom was born on September 12, 1812, died on May 17, 1881, and the latter, born on June 6, 1819, died on October 29, 1901. Samuel and Elizabeth (Denver) Johns were the parents of ten children, namely: William F., born on January 5, 1840; Mary C., June 1, 1841; Rodney, January 26, 1843; Cary Carothers, December 5, 1844; Arthur Denver, April 22, 1847, who died on March 2, 1848; Arthur Denver, II, September 23, 1849, who died on February 14, 1851; Jane Campbell, January 19, 1852; Harry D., October 23, 1856; Elizabeth, June 23, 1860, who died on December 19, 1913, and Samuel, September 23, 1862.

Mrs. Zene H. Hadley is a member of the Presbyterian church, in which she takes an active interest. Mr. Hadley, who is a Republican in politics, has been serving as commissioner of Clinton county since September, 1913, and is accredited with having in this period given a most capable and efficient administration of the duties of his important office. Several years ago he served as township assessor of Adams township. Fraternally, he is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

ROLLA E. MOON.

Even before the organization of Clinton county, in 1810, the Moon family was established and prominently known in this section of the state, the founder of the family in this county having been Thomas Moon, a native of Sevier county, Tennessee, who came here in 1809 with the famous "Moon Colony." Thomas and Elizabeth (Hocket) Moon, the latter of whom also was a native of Tennessee, were the parents of several children, including Joel and Jason Moon, who became two of Clinton county's best-known residents. The latter for many years was one of the county's most successful teachers. Among his self-acquirements was a fine technical knowledge of surveying, a form of knowledge which he often was called on to put into practical use in the laying of lines in the original divisions of property hereabout, and for one term he served as deputy in the county surveyor's office, under Hiram E. Moon. He also served for six years as clerk of Jefferson twonship. Jason Moon's wife was Lydia E. Cravens, daughter of John and Elizabeth Cravens.

Joel Moon was born on the old Moon homestead in Jefferson township, this county, on May 5, 1827, and was married on March 8, 1851, to Rebecca Jane Moore, born in Washington township, this county, on October 8, 1835, daughter of Micajah and Rebecca (McGee) Moore, pioneer residents of this county, to which union were born six children, namely: Ella J., born in October, 1852, who married Wilson Peele; Emerson E., August 13, 1855, who married Florence E. Hale; Americus E., December 26, 1859; George F., April 27, 1866; Rolla E., the immediate subject of this biographical sketch, and Harley A., March 21, 1869. Joel Moon owned a well-kept farm of sixty acres in the Westboro neighborhood and was regarded as one of the leaders in the community life thereabout. He and his wife were earnest members of the Christian church and were active in all good works in their community. Mr. Moon was a Republican and gave thoughtful attention to the political affairs of the county, for many years having served as a member of the board of trustees of Jefferson township. He was one of the most active workers in the Odd Fellows lodge at Westboro and was highly regarded throughout that whole region. Upon the death of his wife, Joel Moon retired to the home of his son, Rolla, where his last days were spent.

Rolla E. Moon, son of Joel and Rebecca Jane (Moore) Moon, was born on the old home farm near Westboro, in Jefferson township, this county, on January 26, 1868, and was educated in the district schools of that neighborhood. Just before reaching his majority he bought the farm of one hundred acres in Washington township, where he now is living, and ever since has made his home there. This was practically an unbroken farm when he bought it and all improvements on the same have been made by Mr. Moon, whose enterprise and industry have combined to give him a most comfortable home, his well-tilled acres also giving him an ample competence.

In 1889 Rolla E. Moon was united in marriage to Sarah Bond, who was born in Union township, this county, daughter of John Edward Bond and wife, well-known residents of that part of the county, and to this union seven children have been born, Libbie, Ella, Golda, Emmet, Ruby, Marjorie and Jason, the latter of whom now is the only one of these children remaining at home, the others having gone out in the world to do for themselves, and all are doing well.

Mr. and Mrs. Moon are interested in the church work of their nieghborhood, the former being a member of the Baptist church and the latter a member of the Christian church, and both are held in high esteem by all who know them.

HARLEY D. PENNINGTON.

Among the well-known and pleasant young business men of Wilmington and Clinton county is Harley D. Pennington, the scion of an old family of this county, who owns and manages a general store at Cuba and a garage in Wilmington. He is a very capable young business man, who has the confidence of all of his patrons and whose friends expect to see win an even larger measure of success as the years come and go.

Harley D. Pennington was born on July 30, 1877, the son of Daniel M. and Laura A. (Thatcher) Pennington, the former of whom was born on December 23, 1852, in Washington township, this county, and the latter on December 23, 1856, the daughter of Thomas and Nancy (Crouse) Thatcher.

Mr. Pennington's paternal grandparents were Isaac and Sarah (Burke) Pennington, the former of whom was born near Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, March 10, 1800, and the latter, near Lebanon, in Warren county, Ohio. In 1818 Isaac Pennington, who was the son of Thomas Pennington, a native of England, came from Pennsylvania to Clinton county and located in Washington township, where he bought one hundred and eighty acres of land and engaged in general farming and stock raising. He cleared the land, draining the swamps and brought the soil to a very high state of cultivation. Isaac and Sarah Pennington had eight children, Elizabeth, Thomas, Isaac, Mary, John Henry and James (twins), and Daniel M., the father of Harley D.

Daniel M. Pennington received the rudiments of an education in the schools of Washington township and began his career as a farmer in that township. In 1881 he purchased a farm of ninety-six acres, upon which he lived until 1904, when he retired and moved to Cuba, this county, where he lived until 1914, at which time he moved to Wilmington, where he now lives. Daniel M. and Laura A. Pennington had four children: Ida May, who died early in life; Harley D., the subject of this sketch; Alta M., who also died early in life; and Jesse R., who married Martha Applegate and has two children, Frances and Edwin.

Harley D. Pennington, who was educated in the common schools of Washington township, taught four years in the district schools of his home neighborhood, and later spent one year as principal of the graded school at Morrisville. In 1902 Mr. Pennington embarked in the mercantile business at Cuba, where he has operated a general store ever since. In September, 1913, he moved to Wilmington and established a garage on Lincoln street. In August of the succeeding year, the garage was moved to its present location on Main street, where he conducts a local agency for two high-class cars.

To Mr. and Mrs. Harley D. Pennington four children have been born, Mildred B., Thelma P., Kathleen and Paul E. The mother of these children, before her marriage, was Maude M. Brown, daughter of William R. and Martha Brown.

Harley D., Daniel M. and Isaac Pennington, three generations of the family in this county, have all been identified with the Democratic party. Mr. and Mrs. Harley D. Pennington are members of the Christian church and take an active interest in church work and are regular attendants at the services. Fraternally, Mr. Pennington is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, of the Fraternal Order of Eagles and of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

GRANT MARTIN.

Among the successful farmers of Richland township, this county, is Grant Martin, who owns one hundred and three acres of land which he purchased in 1899, upon which he has been living since 1900. Mr. Martin is a native of Fayette county, Ohio, born on January 25, 1869, the son of Jehu and Martha Jane (Thompson) Martin, the former of whom was born on January 3, 1834, in Wayne township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of Stephen and Martha (Curtis) Martin, the former of whom, a native of Pennsylvania, came from that state to Ohio when he was still a young man and settled in Clinton county. He was one of the pioneer farmers of this county and lived to rear a family of nine children.

Jehu Martin was educated in the common schools of Wayne township, this county, and when a young man began farming, eventually becoming the owner of about three hundred acres of land in Fayette county, to which county he moved about 1865. He died on September 13, 1900. His wife had died on January 21, 1894, some six years previously. They were the parents of nine children, as follow: Sinatha, who married P. B. Black; Elmer E., who married Ella Rogers; Margaret E., who is unmarried; Eli E., who married Effie Pummell; Grant, the subject of this sketch; May, who married O. A. Pollard; Lawson, who married Anna Lawson; Quincy C., who married Stella Goodson, and Edna, who died at the age of twenty-seven years. Jehu and Martha Jane (Thompson) Martin were members of the Friends church, and their children were reared in that faith. Mr. Martin was a trustee of Concord township, Fayette county, having been elected to this office as a Republican. For many years he served as superintendent of the Sunday school at the Friends church and was very well known in his county.

Educated in the common schools of Concord township, Fayette county, Grant Martin began farming when a young man, starting in Concord township, where he farmed for six years. In 1899 he purchased his present farm of one hundred and three acres and there he has been living since 1900. Before removing to the Richland township farm he operated a grocery store at Sabina for two years, and during one of these two years bought grain at Sabina. Since removing to his farm, Mr. Martin has been engaged in general farming and stock raising. He has dealt to a considerable extent in farm land and is a director of the First National Bank at Sabina.

On September 6, 1891, Grant Martin was married to Zepha Winters, daughter of Zephaniah and Margaret (Edginton) Winters, who were the parents of eight children, as follow: William W.; Delila, who married H. E. Kincaid; Sarah, who married James Sollars; Zepha, who married Mr. Martin; Charles, who is unmarried; Ida, who married James Watson; Leota, who is unmarried, and Edward, who married Mamie Fey, and who is a farmer in Brown county, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin have no children. He is a Republican, and Mrs. Martin is a member of the Friends church at Sabina. They live on their farm about one mile east of Sabina, on the Washington pike.

CLAYTON A. THOMPSON.

Clayton A. Thompson is a well-known farmer living at Sabina, this county, who owns a tract of two hundred and fifty-two acres of land in Jefferson township, Fayette county, and a fine home in Sabina. He has achieved a marked success in the business world, and has arisen to an honorable position among the enterprising residents of Sabina. His record, however, is rendered remarkable by no strange or mysterious adventure, no wonderful or lucky accident and no tragic situations. He is, nevertheless, a good man and a popular citizen in the community in which he lives.

Clayton A. Thompson was born on March 22, 1866, in Fayette county, Ohio, a son of John and Presocia Ann (Sheley) Thompson, the former of whom, born on March 21, 1832, in Fayette county, died on January 9, 1903, and the latter, born in 1832, in Greene county, Ohio, was the daughter of William and Elizabeth (Gatch) Sheley, the former a native of Pennsylvania, and the latter of Maryland. John Thompson was the son of James and Mary (Boyd) Thompson, both natives of Virgina, and the parents of nine children, Roland, Joseph, Daniel, John, Truston, Castle, Wade, Harriet and Catherine. James Thompsbn emigrated from the Blue Ridge region of Virginia and located near Buena Vista, in Fayette county, Ohio, where he became a prosperous farmer. He was a member of the Methodist church, and voted the Democratic ticket.

Educated in the common schools of Fayette county, Ohio, the late John Thompson, the father of Clayton A., began farming in Fayette county, when a young man and followed that occupation all his life in that county, becoming the owner of four hundred and fifty acres of land in Jasper township, and was there engaged in general farming and stock raising. John Thompson and wife were the parents of eight children, namely: Ethel, who married Charles Harper; Harlan T., who married Etta Hydie; Clayton, the immediate subject of this review; Addie, who married William Hatfield; Charles M., who married Odie Coe; John F., who married Dora Thornton; James William, married, and Daniel, who died at the age of twenty years. The father of these children was a Democrat and a member of the Methodist Protestant church.

Clayton A. Thompson received his education in the public schools of Fayette county, and in 1887 was a student in the Commercial College at Ada, Ohio. Upon finishing his schooling he began farming in Fayette county, and farmed there until 1892, when he removed to Van Wert county, Ohio, where he lived until 1895, in which year he removed to Mercer county, Ohio, remaining there for nearly ten years, or until 1904. In the latter year he removed to Sabina, this county, where he has lived since. He erected the house in which he now lives, a fine structure, located in Sabina, in 1912. Mr. Thompson owns two hundred and fifty-two acres of land in Jefferson township, Fayette county, and personally manages the operation of this large farm, although the actual work is done by hired men. On this place he carries on a system of general farming and stock raising, and has been very successful.

On May 12, 1889, Clayton A. Thompson was married to Kittie Mathew, daughter of James and Abby (Drake) Mathew, and to this union has been born one child, Golda Ethel, who was born on October 18, 1891, and who is a graduate of the Sabina high school and of Wilmington College. Miss Thompson finished the course at Wilmington College in 1912, and since that time has been engaged in teaching in the high school at Port William, this county.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are members of the United Brethren church, while their daughter is a member of the Friends church. Mr. Thompson is a Democrat and has served as a member of the Sabina school board for a period of three years, and has given general satisfaction in this office. He has a host of friends in and about Sabina, and is generally popular with all classes of people thereabout.

W. H. LAMB.

One may take his place in public life through some timely stroke which affects the public policy, and carve out for himself a fame that will endure. But to acquire a position of prominence and respect in a community by reason of an upright life and without craving for exaltation or popularity, is worthy of the highest praise and commendation. The late George Lamb, in his day a prominent farmer of Clinton county, and one of the public spirited citizens of this section of the state, was a man widely respected and honored during his life. Strong and forceful in his relations with his fellow men, he not only made his presence felt, but also won and held the good will and commendation of those people with whom he came into contact. At his death in 1908, he left four children, among whom was W. H. Lamb, now a prominent resident of Moose Jaw, Canada.

W. H. Lamb was born on February 29, 1868, in Clinton county, the son of George and Harriet (Levergall) Lamb, the former of whom was born, December 28, 1837, in Clinton county, and the latter, April 28, 1840, in Ross county, Ohio, the daughter of William Levergall, a farmer of that county, who later moved to Clinton county and still later to a farm near Kokomo, Indiana. George Lamb and Harriet Levergall were married on February 23, 1860.

George Lamb was the son of Eri Lamb, by the latter's second wife. Eri Lamb was a native of North Carolina, who came to Ohio very early in the last century. By his first marriage, he had two children, Ison and Harriet. By his second marriage, he had four children, Lafayette, John, Finis and George. Of these children, Lafayette Lamb served as a soldier in the Union army during the entire period of the Civil War and survived the war. John and Finis Lamb also served as Union soldiers during the war and both died in the service.

The late George Lamb was educated in the common schools of Clinton county and was a farmer by occupation all of his life. He owned nine hundred and sixty acres of land, most all of which was located in Wilson township, and as a farmer, was well known among the leading agriculturists of this section. He was a devout member of the Society of Friends and remained loyal and faithful to this creed throughout his life. He passed away in May, 1908, and his widow some years later, March 15, 1915. They were the parents of four children, namely: Anna, born on December 11, 1860, who married Theodore Gray and is a resident of Fayette county, Ohio; Rebecca, December 22, 1862, who married James Thompson and lives in Lafayette, Indiana; Blanche, September 18, 1874, who married Charles McCoy, and lives in Arkansas, and W. H., the subject of this sketch.

W. H. Lamb was educated in the common schools of Clinton county and married

Belle Alexander, daughter of Robert Alexander, a farmer of Ross county and a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal church in that county. Mrs. W. H. Lamb died in 1903. She was the mother of three children, George, Elmer and Hattie, the first named and the latter of whom are deceased. Elmer Lamb married Ella Thompson and they have one child, Hiawatha. They are residents of Wood Mountain, Canada.

In 1905, after the death of his wife, W. H. Lamb went to Canada, where he now holds a lease on ten sections of land at Swift Current, Alberta. He also has a homestead of three hundred and twenty-one acres at Moose Jaw and owns the Hotel Empress at that place. Upon the death of his mother, in 1915, Mr. Lamb was appointed administrator of the estate and spent several months in Clinton county, making a legal distribution of the property owned by his father and mother.

G. H. PLUMMER.

G. H. Plummer, a prominent citizen of Clinton county, and the present assessor of Wilson township, was born in September, 1856, in Adams county, Ohio, one of the seven sons of William Plummer, a farmer and minister of the Gospel, who lived and died in Adams county.

Mr. Plummer received his education in the common schools of Adams county, Ohio, and was reared to the life of a farmer. After leaving school he engaged in that vocation on his own account. He married Clara Matthews, who was born in this county, daughter of Silas and Mary (Gallimore) Matthews, farmers, both of whom are now deceased. Silas Matthews was a large landowner in this county, especially in Wilson township. To Mr. and Mrs. Plummer three children have been born, namely: Grace, who married M. W. Anson, of Greene county, and has one son, Charles; Wyema, who married Isaac Kersey, a farmer of this county, and has two children, Harold (deceased) and Albert, and Raymond, who was married on August 16, 1906, to Stella Early, and has one son, Adrian, who was born on January 28, 1908. Raymond Plummer and his wife live on the home farm, renting it of his father. This farm consists of about seventy-five acres of land. Raymond Plummer also owns seventeen acres of land in Wilson township. Fraternally, he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. His wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, while fraternally, she belongs to the Royal Neighbors of America. Mrs. Stella (Early) Plummer is a daughter of Elias and Sarah E. (Thompson) Early, who were farmers of this county, and the owners of about three hundred acres of land.

In 1890 G. H. Plummer erected a new and comfortable house on his farm, and in 1912 he also built a large and commodious barn. On December 23, 1892, Mrs. Clara (Matthews) Plummer died, sincerely mourned by all who knew her, and her loss was keenly felt by her friends and neighbors, as well as by her family.

WILLIAM D. NIBLE.

William D. Nible is a progressive young farmer of Washington township, this county, who was born on February 15, 1869, near Edenton, in Clermont county, Ohio, the son of David and Sarah E. (Smith) Nible, the former of whom was born near Morristown, in Warren county, in January, 1844, and the latter of whom was the daughter of George and Margaret Smith. David Nible was the son of William Nible, a native of Germany, who came to America when a young man, about 1840. He and his wife settled in Warren county on a farm, where both died of cholera about 1850.

David Nible, who was educated in the public schools of Clermont county, began farming near Edenton when a young man, but in 1892 moved to Vernon township, this county, where he has lived and farmed ever since, and is a well-known and highly-respected citizen of that township. To David and Sarah E. Nible eight children were born, namely: Ada, who married W. D. Jones; William, the subject of this sketch; Frank C., who is a farmer; Mary L., Enis H., and George C., all of whom are deceased; Cecil, who married Gladys Heistand, and Sarah S., who is the wife of William Reynolds. The mother of these children died in 1889. The father is a Democrat in politics, and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He is a man of deep religious convictions and an ardent church worker.

Educated in the common schools of Wayne township, Clermont county, Ohio, William D. Nible drove a huckster wagon for about ten years during the early part of his life. In 1900 he took up farming in Washington township, this county, and has been engaged in this occupation since that time.

Mr. Nible has been twice married. His first wife was Ida M. Stouder, the daughter of Benjamin Stouder. To this union there were born two children, Frank R. and Russell L. In 1901 Mr. Nible was married to Mrs. Jennie (Moon) Brown, widow of H. C. Brown, who is a member of the Universalist church and owns a splendid farm near Cuba.

The Nibles are well-known citizens of Washington township and highly respected by all of the people who live in that community.

CHARLES WADE.

Charles Wade, who is a prosperous farmer owning one hundred and sixty-seven acres of land one mile from Melvin, in Wilson township, this county, was born in Union township, Clinton county, August 26, 1866, son of James R. and Martha C. (Sherman) Wade, the former of whom was born in Union township, this county, April 15, 1843, and the latter, also a native of Clinton county, was the daughter of William and Sarah Bell (Hester) Sherman, early settlers in Clinton county and the owners of about five hundred acres of land. James R. Wade was the son of George Wade, a native of Virginia, who, after his marriage, emigrated to Ohio, and became the owner of a section or more of land in Clinton county, being one of the pioneers of this section. He and his wife were the parents of six children, Robert, Washington, Clark, James, Frances and Liza, all of whom are now deceased.

The late James R. Wade was educated in the common schools of Clinton county and was engaged in farming during his entire life. He owned about four hundred acres of land and was active in local public affairs. He died on June 28, 1901, and his widow survived him several years, her death occurring on March 17, 1912. They were the parents of seven children, namely: Seymour, who married Ollie Hawes, and lives at Jamestown, Ohio; Charles, the subject of this sketch; Joseph, who married Odie Snodgrass and lives in Greene county; William, who married Susie Humphries and lives in Wilson township; Laura E., who married Ephraim Thompson, of Richland township; Carrie E., wife of John Hoover, of Wilmington, and Cora E., who has been twice married, her first husband being Henus Hall, after whose death she became the wife of David Rogers.

Charles Wade received his education in the common schools of his home neighborhood, and has been engaged in farming during his entire life. Mr. Wade located on his present farm many years ago, and in 1908, built a large and commodious barn on the farm. On August 2, 1890, he married Mattie Mannahan, a native of Adams county, Ohio, daughter of Sampson Mannahan, who was a carpenter by trade, and to this union have been born three children, Lawrence A., Mary Ruth and Harold Millard, all of whom are unmarried and living at home with their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade and family are earnest and devoted members of the Methodist Protestant church. Charles Wade has always been a hardworking man and his success in life is due, perhaps, as much as anything else, to his persistent industry and determination.

HENRY DRAKE.

Henry Drake is a well-known farmer of Liberty township, this county, where he owns one hundred and eleven acres of land. He was born in Richland township, this county, the son of John S. and Rebecca (Ford) Drake, the latter of whom is the daughter of Robert and Eliza Ford. His maternal grandfather was a farmer of Clinton county and a member of the Methodist Protestant church, and his paternal grandfather, Daniel Drake, was a native of New York state, born on Staten Island, who moved to Clinton county and engaged in farming.

John F. Drake was educated in the common schools and was a contracting carpenter and builder. He was also a farmer and owned considerable land in this county. He was active in the affairs of the Methodist Protestant church, of which he was a member, and was a successful business man. He died in 1883. His widow is living at Melvin, this county.

Henry Drake, who was reared on the farm and educated in the common schools of Clinton county, was married on November 8, 1894, to Bertha Beckett, who was born in this county, daughter of Isaac and Emma (States) Beckett, of Starbucktown. Isaac Beckett was a soldier in the Union army during the Civil War and served for three years in that great struggle between the states, and he and his wife lived in Starbucktown practically all of their lives and were members of the Methodist Protestant church. Isaac Beckett was a son of Joseph Beckett, a native of Indiana who served in the War of 1812 and who, subsequently, engaged in farming near Elwood, Indiana.

After his marriage, Henry Drake located near Melvin, this county, and later took up farming. He purchased the farm where he now lives, in February, 1914, and expects to make many improvements on the farm in the next few years. The place consists of one hundred and eleven acres and in time should be made one of the best farms in the county.

To Mr. and Mrs. Drake have been born two children, Lawrence and Inez. Mrs. Drake is a member of the Christian church at Bloomington.

JACOB STOLTZ.

Jacob Stoltz is a well-known retired farmer of Sabina, who owns a farm of two hundred acres one and one-half miles from Sabina, where he has built a comfortable home, and where he has lived for some time. He was born on February 20, 1848, in Germany, son of John and Francena Stoltz, both natives of Wurtemburg, Germany, the former of whom, born on December 25, 1812, died in February, 1895, while the latter died in August, 1872, at the age of fifty-six years. John and Francena Stoltz were married in their native land, where they were engaged in farming. When they came to America they had five children, Rachel, Dora, Frederick, John and Jacob, of whom the two eldest, Rachel and Dora, are now deceased. After landing in New York City, they came directly to Ohio, and settled in Adams county, where John Stoltz became the owner of two hundred and fifty acres of land. He sold this farm, however, and came to Clinton county about 1881, in which year he purchased one hundred and fifty acres of land, and spent the rest of his life there. Six more children were born to John Stoltz and wife after coming to America, as follow: William, Christopher, Fannie, Callie, Elizabeth and Mary, the last two of whom are deceased. Of the children born to Mr. and Mrs. John Stoltz, Frederick married Mollie O'Neal, and lives at Wilmington. John married Dean Bigley and lives in Greenfield, Ohio. William, who lives in Verona, Ohio, married Ellie Oldaker. Christopher, of Antioch, Ohio, married Elizabeth Finner. Fannie, who is unmarried, lives in Wilmington with Elizabeth, who is the wife of R. M. McCoy.

Jacob Stoltz received his education in the schools of Adams township, and was reared to the life of a farmer. He was married in 1884 to Anna Pavey, who was born in Clinton county, daughter of William and Mary A. (Kirby) Pavey, the former of whom was born in Fayette county, Ohio, September 4, 1833, the son of William and Anna (Johnson) Pavey, and the latter of whom was the daughter of William and Jordena Kirby. Mrs. Mary A. (Kirby) Pavey was the second wife of William Pavey, a biographical sketch of whom is presented elsewhere in this volume.

Mr. and Mrs. Stoltz are the parents of two children, Fay and Alma, both of whom are unmarried and living at home. The family are all earnest and consistent members of the Methodist Protestant church. Mr. Stoltz was formerly a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and remained a member until the lodge at Sabina disbanded. In 1910 he built a new house in Sabina, to which place he had moved about fifteen years ago.

JOHN J. POLK.

Improvement and progress may be said to form the keynote in the character of John J. Polk, a prosperous and influential farmer of Wilson township. Not only has Mr. Polk been interested in advancing his own personal affairs, but his influence has been felt in the community where he lives. It was his early ambition to study law, but he was unable to carry out his youthful design and, instead, buckled down to farming, in which vocation he has made a rather large success, a fitting result of his energy, foresight and good management, and each year has found him farther advanced, more prosperous and with a larger circle of friends.

John J. Polk was born on May 3, 1869, in Wilson township, this county, the son of William H. and Mary M. (Prunk) Polk, the former of whom was born on a farm south of Wilmington, in Clinton county, and the latter, in Bureau county, Illinois, daughter of Daniel and Catherine (Hammond) Prunk, of that state. Daniel Prunk was born on July 21, 1796, in Virginia, and was married to Catherine Hammond, who was born on November 22, 1797, and to this worthy couple twelve children were born as follow: Martha, born on November 11, 1818; James, June 2, 1820; John, February 19, 1822; Hammond, April 8, 1824; Madison, April 23, 1826; Maggie, January 26, 1828; Daniel, November 3, 1829; Leander, August 15, 1830; George, February 3, 1834; Washington, March 21, 1836; Catherine, May 15, 1841, and Mary M., the mother of Mr. Polk, July 31, 1843.

Mr. Polk's paternal grandparents were William and Hannah (Hobson) Polk, both natives of Tennessee, who were the parents of seven children, of whom Martha, the youngest, is living at Muncie, Indiana, at the advanced age of ninety-six years, the others having been, Sallie, John, James, William H., Robert and Nathaniel. After his marriage in 1775, William Polk moved to Ohio from Tennessee, and located in Clinton county, near where the city of Wilmington now stands. He entered one hundred and fifty-six acres of land from the government, but later moved to Wilson township. His remains are buried on the farm owned by his grandson, Edward Polk, brother of John J. He was a Baptist preacher and prominent in the pioneer life of this county. He died about 1825.

William H. Polk, the father of John J., received only a very limited education, attending school altogether only about six months, but nevertheless he became a very well-read man and was a man of strictly moral habits. During the Civil War he furnished free of charge food and supplies for many widows and orphans. He owned three hundred and seventy-three acres of land in Clinton county, and was an extensive stock raiser. He imported a thirty-thousand-dollar Shorthorn bull from England and this animal was the first of the kind in this part of the country. He also kept mules and Cotswold sheep. William H. Polk was very active in the affairs of the county.

and at the time the Baltimore & Ohio railroad was constructed through Clinton county, gave five hundred dollars towards its construction.

To William H. and Mary M. (Prunk) Polk were born eight children, namely: George, who married Deborah Freeman and died at his home in Springfield, Illinois; William P., who married Alice Thompson and lives in Oregon; Daniel, who died in infancy; Lillie, who married Joseph Reynolds, and died in Clinton county; Mary, who married S. T. Groves and lives in Sabina; Edward and David K., who married sisters, Bertha and Ada Ray, and live in Clinton county, and John J., the subject of this sketch.

John J. Polk received his early education in the common schools of Sabina, this county, and completed his educational training in the high school at Muncie, Indiana. Upon the death of his father he was compelled to return to the farm. While attending school, it was his earnest desire to study law, and he still wishes that he had been able to do so. While he was a student in the high school at Muncie, he became acquainted with Eva Wilson, the daughter of Levi and Julia (Priest) Wilson, farmers near Muncie, and subsequently married her. Mr. and Mrs. Polk are the parents of four children, Levi Roy, Margaret, Claudia and Pauline.

Mr. Polk owns one hundred and five acres of good land in Wilson township. In 1912 he built a commodious barn on his place, and has but recently erected a new home, equipped with all modern conveniences. He is engaged in general farming, making a specialty of the breeding of Shorthorn cattle, and expects gradually to take up the breeding of only thoroughbred stock. His whole farm is well equipped for stock raising.

Mr. and Mrs. Polk are members of the Baptist church of Sabina, and take an active interest in the affairs of that denomination. Fraternally, Mr. Polk is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, including the subordinate lodge and the encampment. He is also a member of the Daughters of Rebekah, the Royal Neighbors and the Modern Woodmen of America. Mrs. Polk is also a member of the Daughters of Rebekah and of the Royal Neighbors.

ISAAC ALEXANDER.

Isaac Alexander is a farmer of Clark township, this county, who was born in 1845 in Brown county, Ohio, the son of Hugh and Clarinda (Covolt) Alexander, natives of Virginia and Brown county, Ohio, respectively. The paternal grandparents of Isaac Alexander died in the Old Dominion state and his maternal grandparents died in Brown county.

Hugh Alexander was educated in the schools of Virginia, and emigrated to Brown county, Ohio, some time before his marriage, and in that county he and his wife spent the rest of their lives. They were the owners of fifty acres of land and reared a family of fourteen children, of whom four sons, Robert, Abraham, Johnson and Jeiel, were soldiers in the Union army during the Civil War. Robert and Abraham died of camp diarrhea shortly after their return home and the other two sons survived the effects of the war.

Isaac Alexander was educated in Brown county, Ohio, and shortly after his marriage, moved to Fayette county, where, for three years, he rented land. At the end of this period, he moved to Clark township, Clinton county, and there purchased fifty acres of land, where he now lives. He and his wife have a comfortable home and are highly respected in the community in which they live. They are the parents of four children, Stella, Walter, Frank and Mary. Mrs. Alexander, before her marriage, was Sophia Rhonemous and was married to Isaac Alexander in 1877. She was reared in Jefferson township, Clinton county.

Mrs. Alexander has always been a member of the Protestant Methodist church and is prominently identified with all of the activities of that congregation.

SAMUEL H. SKIMMING.

One of the best-known and most prominent families in Clinton county is the Skimming family. This family was among the earliest settlers in the county and has always been prominent and active in the public affairs of the county. At the present time the usefulness and progressiveness of the family is still being maintained by the subject of this sketch, Samuel H. Skimming, of 328 North South street, Wilmington, Ohio.

Samuel H. Skimming was born at Burtonville, Union township, Clinton county, on February 25, 1858, the son of Robert and Mary (Babb) Skimming. Robert Skimming was born in Allegheny county, Maryland, on June 3, 1830, and died on March 10, 1914. He was the son of Anthony and Mary (McDow) Skimming, who were born near Edinburgh, Scotland, and emigrated to the United States in 1818, settling in Allegheny county, Maryland, where they lived until the autumn of 1836, when they came to Clinton county, locating at Wilmington, where they lived until 1839, in which year they removed to Washington township, where they lived until the time of their death in 1855, the former dying on April 22, and the latter on the 16th of the same month.

Robert Skimming passed his early manhood on his father's farm and was educated in the district schools and in Wilmington Academy. At the age of eighteen years he embarked in the teaching profession which he followed successfully for six years. Through the pursuit of this profession he laid the foundation of his present possessions. In 1860 he engaged in a merchandising business in Burtonville and continued in this business there until in October, 1875, when he retired to farming and stock raising which he followed with marked success. His farm consisted of a tract of two hundred and seventy acres of very valuable land, on which was a commodious frame residence, along with other modern improvements. Robert Skimming was one of the most enterprising and influential men of his day and was elected again and again to some office within the gift of the people, in which public service he did credit, not only to himself, but to his office and his community. In 1873 he was elected infirmary director; he was at one time a member of the board of trustees of Union township and at various other times held minor offices. On December 6, 1853, he was married to Mary E. Babb, a daughter of Henry and Matilda (Woodruff) Babb and a native of Union township. To this marriage there were born the following children: Emma, who was born on November 26, 1854; Samuel H., the subject of this sketch; Charles W., August 14, 1866, and Wilbert, January 10, 1872.

Mrs. Robert Skimming's father was born in Virginia and was brought, by his parents, Henry and Elizabeth Babb, to Clinton county when an infant. Henry Babb was cruelly assassinated in Wilmington, on the evening of February 25, 1863, on account of his pure Union sentiment, by John McCourter, a radical Secessionist. Elizabeth Babb was the daughter of Joel and Elizabeth Woodruff, who were among the earliest pioneers of Clinton county. Mr. Woodruff was a man of considerable prominence in the early history of Wilmington and at one time was sheriff of Clinton county. Elizabeth Babb died on January 25, 1830.

Samuel H. Skimming, the subject of this sketch, attended the district school at Burtonville and assisted his father there in his store until he was seventeen years old, at which time his father moved to the farm and the son went with him, and worked there until his marriage on January 31, 1886, when he rented a farm which he farmed for five years. He then returned to the home farm and took the management of the place and cared for his parents until their death. He then bought out the other heirs to one hundred and seventy-two acres of the home place, to which he added, by purchase, a tract of sixty-two acres adjoining, all of which he cultivated in person until in August, 1912, when he left the farm and purchased the beautiful brick residence in Wilmington where he now resides.

On January 31, 1886, Samuel H. Skimming was united in marriage to Geneva McKenzie, who was born in Nebraska City, Nebraska, on May 1, 1864, the daughter of William and Elizabeth (Morton) McKenzie, both of whom were born near New Antioch, in Green township, this county, the former on September 18, 1830, and the latter, July 15, 1830, daughter of Isaiah M. Morton, who was a son of Joab and Jane Morton, natives of Kentucky, who moved to Ohio about 1820, where they located on a small tract of heavily wooded timber land which they cleared and cultivated and on which they spent the remainder of their lives, Joab Morton dying on August 18, 1846, and his widow on August 8, 1869. They were the parents of six children, two of whom died in early infancy, the others being Richard, Elizabeth, wife of William McKenzie; Isaiah M., and Betsey, the wife of Eli Carson. Joab Morton was a soldier in the War of 1812. He was a member of the New Light church at Antioch, and maintained his faith until his death. William McKenzie died in Nebraska City on January 12, 1867. He had gone there soon after his marriage and had engaged in the hotel business which employment he maintained until his death. He and his wife were the parents of the following children: Perry, a carpenter who lives in Martinsville, this county; Stanley, who lives on a farm in Green township; Alwilda, who married John Stephens and lives on a farm in Union township; Geneva, the wife of the subject of this sketch, and a son who died in infancy. The mother of these children is still living.

To Samuel H. and Geneva (McKenzie) Skimming two children have been born, Mary Jane, born on May 19, 1889, who is teaching school at Middletown, Ohio, and Reba Louise, February 24, 1891, who married A. O. Campbell, an architect, and lives in Dayton, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Skimming are both active members of the Walnut Street Christian church of Wilmington and Mr. Skimming is a Republican.

JOHN S. DRAKE.

John S. Drake is a well-known and enterprising farmer of Jefferson township, this county. He was born in this county, October 3, 1880, son of Samuel and Hannah N. (Holliday) Drake, the former of whom was born at Georgetown, Ohio, and the latter in Clinton county. The paternal grandfather of John S. Drake was Jonathan Drake, a well-known tobacco raiser of the Georgetown district. The maternal grandparents, William and Anna (Carter) Holliday, settled on the farm now belonging to Doctor Dennison. They cleared the land and lived there all the rest of their lives.

Samuel Drake received the rudiments of an education in the public schools near Georgetown, and there he was first married to a Miss Davis, and for some years was engaged in farming near Georgetown. After the death of his first wife he removed to Clinton county, and was here married to Hannah N. Holliday, the mother of John S. Drake. Aside from five years spent in the state of Missouri, Samuel Drake lived in Jefferson township most of his life. At the time of his death he was the owner of three hundred and seventy-one acres of land where his son, John S., now lives. Two sons were born to Samuel Drake by his first marriage, and one son, John S., to his second marriage.

John S. Drake was educated in the schools of Clinton county, and with the exception of five years spent in the state of Missouri, between the ages of thirteen and eighteen years, he has spent his entire life in this county on the old home place in Jefferson township.

In 1901 John S. Drake was married to Laura Wickersham, the daughter of J. C. Wickersham, and to this union two children have been born, Walter and Eugene. Mrs. Drake is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, while Mr. Drake is affiliated with the Christian church.

ARTHUR CALVIN LEONARD.

What a wonderful heritage the pioneer settlers of Clinton county have left to their descendants in leaving behind them the memories of an active life well spent and evidences of good accomplished for their respective generations and communities. To be considered among the foremost families of a county with a lineage dating back to the earliest times does not fall to the lot of every man. It is the representatives of these old families who are capable of winning the trust and confidence of the people and it is this trust and confidence which has placed them in positions of leadership. Arthur Calvin Leonard, an honored young citizen of Union township and a prominent farmer of Clinton county, has the privilege of knowing that his ancestors, pioneers of this county, were worthy people, who possessed strong hearts and able hands.

Arthur Calvin Leonard was born on his father's farm, near Center, in Union township, this county, January 5, 1879, the son of Calvin Brazilla and Mary (Hazard) Leonard, the former of whom was born at Center, in Clinton county, June 18, 1848, and the latter of whom was a daughter of Zebalon and Hazard, who was born in 1826 and died in 1861, the son of John and Rebecca (Conger) Hazard, who were natives of Virginia and of English descent. They belonged to the Friends church. John Hazard came to Clinton county about 1820 and settled on what is now known as the Petticord farm, one mile east of Wilmington. He died at the age of sixty-five. He and his wife, the latter of whom was a Dwiggins, had ten children. His wife lived to be ninety-two years of age. Zebalon Hazard was twice married, the second time to Phoebe Wolary, by which marriage there was one son, Frank T. Mrs. Mary (Hazard) Leonard died on February 26, 1890.

Calvin Brazilla Leonard is the son of Ezekiel and Permilia W. (Moorman) Leonard, the former of whom, born on September 3, 1813, died on March 30, 1882, and the latter, born on March 4, 1826, died on December 11, 1910. Ezekiel Leonard was born on his father's farm near Center, and his wife, Permelia W. Moorman, who was the daughter of Samuel and Lucy (Johnson) Moorman, was born near Xenia, Ohio. Mrs. Ezekiel Leonard's parents lived in Xenia, Ohio, until she was several years old and then moved to Peru, Indiana, from which point they moved to Port William, this county, where they spent the rest of their lives. He was a brick and stone mason and a prominent and influential member of the Methodist church. Ezekiel Leonard learned the blacksmith's trade under Jonathan Doan in Wilmington and worked with David Miars on the Xenia pike. After his marriage, he operated a shop at Center in Union township for eighteen years but subsequently purchased sixty acres of land near the shop and later added to this tract, by purchase, one hundred and two acres. He and his wife had six children, of whom two, Louisa, the first born, and Allen, the third born, are deceased. Louisa was born in 1843 and was married to Robert R. Mitchell. She died in October, 1909, in Wewoka, Oklahoma. Allen was born in 1847 and died in 1850. The living children are: Calvin Brazilla, the father of Arthur C.; Samuel M., who was born in 1850 and who married Mary E. Miars and lives on the old home farm in Union township; Lydia Emily, born in 1854, who is unmarried and lives in Wilmington, and Lucinda, born in 1854, who married T. T. West, a farmer, of near Thayer, Kansas.

Ezekiel Leonard was one of fourteen children born to John and Lydia (Starbuck) Leonard. John Leonard was born in Guilford county, North Carolina, and was married to Lydia Starbuck. During the early part of 1806, with one child and a small outfit, they left their native state for Ohio and after a long and weary journey through Tennessee and Kentucky, crossed the Ohio river, at Cincinnati and finally located on Todd's fork in Union township, this county, where some of their friends had previously settled. John Leonard was a man of herculean frame, great physical strength and well fitted for pioneer life. In 1806 he selected land, built his rude log cabin and united his destiny with that of the other colonists. John Leonard died on December 7, 1870, at the age of eighty-eight years, one month and eleven days. His widow survived him nearly four years, dying on March 30, 1874, at the age of ninety-one years, seven months and twenty-one days. Her remains lie by his side in the cemetery at Center. Of their fourteen children, thirteen grew to manhood and womanhood, rearing families of their own. George W., born in 1805, in North Carolina, who married Hannah Dwiggins; Rachel, in 1806, who married Jacob Miars; James, in 1808, who died in 1809; Abner, in 1809, who married Ruth Irwin, died in 1854; John, in 1811, who died in 1827; Abigail, in 1812, who married John Frazier, died in 1854; Eunice, in 1814, became the wife of Azariah Wall; Lydia, in 1816, who married John Ballard; Ezekiel was the grandfather of Arthur Calvin Leonard; Joseph, in 1819, who married Abigail Smith; Thomas, in 1830, who married Eliza Price and died in 1857; Brazilla, in 1823, who married Susan Hiatt; Priscilla, in 1823, and Melinda, in 1825, who married Beverly Burgess.

Calvin B. Leonard, the father of Arthur Calvin Leonard, grew up on the home farm at Center, and when a young man, operated his father's farm on the shares. After his marriage, he purchased the I. Dwiggins farm of ninety-seven acres in Union township and soon paid for it. Afterwards he purchased fifty acres adjoining and built a house on his farm in 1888. It is a splendid farm with large and commodious buildings kept in a high state of repair. The father retired in 1907 and moved to Wilmington, where he now lives. He was first married on October 15, 1867, to Mary Hazard, whose parents died when she was young. She was a school teacher and made her home with her uncle, Robert Dwiggins, near Dover. After her death, Calvin B. Leonard married, secondly, February 22, 1894, Nancy Ann Compton, who was born near New Burlington, Chester township, this county, and who is a minister in the Friends church, she having been the pastor of Center meetings for the past fifteen years. No children have been born to this second marriage. By Mr. Leonard's first marriage there were seven children, two of whom are deceased: Alta Dell, born November 13, 1868, who was first married to W. H. Williams and later to W. R. Lewis; Cora P., April 8, 1870, who married Dr. James A. Ross, of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; Robert Samuel, September 26, 1872, who died on June 24, 1874; DeElla Martha, September 2, 1875, who married Roy Newlin, of San Diego, California; Arthur Calvin, who is the subject of this sketch; Walter E., August 1, 1881, who died on October 18, 1881, and Mary Emma, November 18, 1883, who married Harry Green, who lives near Martinsville, this county.

Arthur Calvin Leonard attended the common schools at Center and for three years was a student at Wilmington College. In the meantime and subsequently, he worked on his father's farm until his marriage in 1907, when his father moved to Wilmington, after which he took charge of the farm of three hundred acres near the Center meeting house in Union township. Mr. Leonard raises mule-foot hogs and Shorthorn cattle and sells young stock for breeding purposes. He carries on farming extensively and has been very successful.

On October 22, 1907, Arthur C. Leonard was married to Jane Amanda Smith, who was born in Greene county, Ohio, near Jamestown, the daughter of John W. and Sarah E. Smith, the former of whom died on April 16, 1915, and the latter of whom is still living at Xenia, Ohio. John W. Smith was a retired pork packer and for seven years was a commissioner of Greene county: He also served as infirmary director of Greene county for several years and, although he lived in Xenia, he spent his winters in California. Mr. and Mrs. Leonard have one child, a son, John Calvin, born on February 15, 1910.

Arthur Calvin Leonard is serving his second term as township trustee of Union township, having been elected to this office twice on the Republican ticket. His second election is perhaps the best proof that can be given for the efficiency and vision with which he has filled this office. He served as road superintendent for two years and has been prominent in other ways as a farmer and citizen. Mr. Leonard is well respected by the people of Clinton county.

CLAUD B. MILLER.

Claud B. Miller is a well-known resident of New Vienna, this county. He was born in Green township, this county, September 24, 1869, the only son of James M. and Elizabeth (West) Miller, the former of whom was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, in 1838, and the latter, in Clinton county, in 1850, the daughter of William and Rebecca (Crawford) West.

The late James M. Miller owned about six hundred and forty-three acres of land in Clinton county, in Green and Union townships. He was a farmer by occupation, a Republican in politics and a member of the Friends church. He died in 1906, and his widow, who later married Henry Hildebrant, is living in Wilmington. James M. Miller was a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Royal Arcanum at Wilmington.

Claud B. Miller was reared on the farm and was educated in the public schools and at Wilmington College. He owns two hundred and sixty-six acres of land in Madison township, Highland county. In 1910, he removed to New Vienna, this county, where he has since resided. Claud B. Miller was married in 1894 to Lucy Stivens, who was born in Green township, this county, in 1871, daughter of Daniel Stivens, and to this union one child has been born, a daughter, Mildred Marie, born on November 11, 1895, who was graduated from the New Vienna high school with the class of 1915.

Mr. Miller is a Republican and is now serving his fourth year as trustee of Green township. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at New Vienna, and of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, lodge No. 797, at Wilmington.

HENRY L. SWINGLEY.

Henry L. Swingley is a successful young farmer of Green township, this county, where he owns one hundred acres of land, a part of the original Swingley homestead. Mr. Swingley is an extensive farmer and stockraiser and an extensive breeder of Belgian horses. He was born in Green township, on the Swingley homestead, June 29, 1885, the son of Michael Duroc and Sarah (Bernard) Swingley, both natives of Green township, the former born in 1843 and the latter, April 10, 1862. They were the parents of six children, as follow: Henry L., Thomas, Clara, Chloe, Daniel and Edith, the latter of whom is deceased. Michael Duroc Swingley is deceased, and his widow is now living on her farm in Green township near New Vienna.

Michael Duroc Swingley was the son of Henry and Elizabeth (Gillespie) Swingley, the former of whom was born in Berkeley county, Virginia, in 1816, and the son of Michael and Nancy Swingley; the latter died early in life in the Old Dominion state. The former came to Clinton county, Ohio, in 1825, and died in Clinton county in 1854. Henry Swingley was the only member of the family who ever came to Ohio. He was reared on a farm in Green township and owned eleven hundred acres of land in this township. He was a Democrat in politics, and he and his wife were members of the Christian church. Henry Swingley died in 1884, and his wife, who before her marriage was Elizabeth Gillespie, died on May 1, 1890. They had six children: Michael Duroc, deceased; Thomas, deceased; Susannah; John, of New Vienna; Hanna, deceased, who married Charles Custis, and Catherine, who married Thomas Custis Bond, of Green township

Michael Duroc Swingley and Sarah Bernard were married on May 4, 1884. Sarah Bernard was the daughter of Thomas and Almeda (Young) Bernard, both born in Clinton county, Ohio, the former in 1835, and the latter in 1838. Thomas Bernard was a son of Thomas and Mary (McConnell) Bernard, who spent their last days in Clinton county, Ohio. The parents of Almeda Young were pioneers of Clinton county, where both died. Thomas Bernard, maternal grandfather of Henry L. Swingley, died on July 25, 1914 His widow is now living at Sabina, Ohio. He and his wife had a large family of children, as follow: May (deceased), Clara, Laura, Sarah, Jenette, William (deceased), Ida Bell (deceased), Elmer (deceased), Milton, Eva and Everett, twins.

Reared on the old Swingley homestead in Green township, and educated in the public schools, Henry L. Swingley has been a farmer all his life. He owns one hundred acres of the original Swingley homestead and has made an exceptional success of farming. Mr. Swingley was married on October 20, 1906, to Gertrude DeLong, of Ross county, Ohio, born on October 15, 1886, daughter of William Penn and Eva Fisher (Richardson) DeLong, the former of whom was a native of Ross county, and the latter of whom was a native of Meigs county, Ohio. William Penn DeLong was the son of Peter DeLong, a pioneer of Ross county. Mrs. Swingley's parents now live near Denver, in Ross county, Ohio. They had a large family of children, as follow: Laura Holmes, Emma W., Gusta Beecher, Catharine, Martha Washington (deceased), Estella Myrtle (deceased), Edith Gray, Eva H., Edna B., Laura Gertrude, Milburn Elihu, William Penn and Lowell Mason, twins.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Swingley are the parents of four children, as follow: Grace, born on May 20, 1908; Emma, December 11, 1909; Maxine, January 7, 1912, and Michael Duroc, October 1, 1914.

Mr. Swingley votes the Democratic ticket. He was reared in the Christian church, and is an adherent of this denomination. He is one of the highly-respected citizens of Green township.

J. WILLARD MOCK.

J. Willard Mock is a successful photographer and artist, who has enjoyed a wonderful and diversified experience in photographic and art work, has worked in many parts of the country and today has a first-class studio in Wilmington and a large and flourishing patronage in that city and throughout the county, which demands the help of an assistant.

Mr. Mock was born on October 15, 1854, near Jamestown, Ohio, where he was reared, and is the son of John and Mary (Pearson) Mock, the former of whom was a native of Fayette county, and both of whom were natives of the old Buckeye state. John Mock was a successful farmer and large landowner, possessing two hundred and fifty acres of land. He died on the farm, in 1899, at the age of seventy years. During his life, he had been a devout member of the Baptist church and a deacon in the church for twenty years or more in Fayette county. In early life, he had voted the Democratic ticket, but later became a Prohibitionist. John Mock was one of a family of seven children, consisting of four daughters and three sons. He was married to Mary Pearson in Fayette county, and they owned the first cookstove in their section of the country. They had personally made all of the furniture used in their house, and had a comfortable home during their entire life. Mrs. John Mock died in 1906, at the age of seventy-eight years, at the home of a daughter in Jamestown, Ohio. She and her husband had seven children.

Of the seven children born to John and Mary (Pearson) Mock, O. Martin Luther lives in Enid, Oklahoma. After serving four years in the Civil War, he re-enlisted and served until finally mustered out. For many years he was a pension attorney and real estate dealer in Guthrie, Oklahoma. He is married and has three children. Alfred Pearson, the second born, died in middle life, while attending the World's Fair at Chicago. Lavenia Katherine is a widow of Arthur Boteler, and lives at Jamestown. J. Willard was the fourth born. Frank died in middle life. Charles Edgar died in young manhood, shortly after his marriage. Lona married Willis McDorman, and lives at Jamestown. They have two children.

J. Willard Mock received a common school education, and supplemented this by a course in the Art School at Cincinnati, finishing the course under James Jessup, a noted English artist and photographic educator. Mr. Mock also worked under Joseph Appleton in Dayton, Ohio, and, at the age of twenty years, took up art work for himself. After graduating, he worked for various photographers in Ohio, and, in 1883, opened a gallery at Washington C. H., where he remained one year. After selling out there, he moved to Lima, Ohio, where he was in business for seven years. He then sold out at Lima and traveled as an expert demonstrator for a photographic plate company for three years, and then settled in Marion, Indiana, where his establishment burned. He then became head operator for James F. Ryder, of Cleveland, and held that position for three years. He then returned to Jamestown, Ohio, and engaged in business there, so that he might be near his parents in their declining years. After being at Jamestown for fourteen years, Mr. Mock moved to Wilmington and opened his present establishment after his parents had died. He has been very successful and employs one assistant at the present time.

On December 28, 1876, J. Willard Mock was married to Ida Frances Horney in Fayette county, Ohio. She is the daughter of William J. and Sallie Ann (McMillan) Horney, and was born in Fayette county, March 3, 1860. To Mr. and Mrs. Mock three children have been born, Lorena, who died at birth; Wenona Ruth, who is the wife of E. I. Bennett, of Dayton; and Russell Eugene, who is living at home with his parents.

The entire history of the Mock family does not disclose that any member has ever been addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors, nor can anything be said detrimental to the character of any one who bears the Mock name.

Mr. Mock is independent in his political views. Political parties have no charm or fascination for him, and he chooses the men for whom he votes, without regard to their party affiliations. He is a devout member of the Baptist church, and is leader of the choir. Mr. Mock is also a student of music. While living in Jamestown, he served as treasurer and clerk for the school board for some time.

CHARLES STEELE RUNYAN.

Charles Steele Runyan is one of the best-known farmers of Vernon township, this county. He was born on September 22, 1846, in Warren county, Ohio, son of William Riley and Emily (Goodwin) Runyan, the former of whom was a native of Warren county, having been born there on July 15, 1808, and the latter, of Virginia, where she was born on December 8, 1813. William R. Runyan followed his trade of shoemaking all of his life. He died on February 19, 1852, his widow surviving him many years, her death occurring in 1888. They were the parents of five children, Benjamin H., Mary Jane, Lydia L., John William, and Charles Steele, all of whom have passed away, save the subject of this sketch.

Reared and educated at Black Hawk and Butlerville, Charles S. Runyan came to this county in 1889. He lived at Clarkesville for a time, and in 1900 purchased the farm of one hundred and twenty-five acres on which he is now living and has become well known as a general farmer and stock raiser.

On March 21, 1895, Charles S. Runyan was united in marriage to Nannie Runnells, who was born in this county on January 26, 1868, daughter of Samuel and Isabel (Floyd) Runnels, the former of whom was born on February 10, 1837 in Tennessee, the latter, in this county, in 1835. Mrs. Runyan's paternal grandparents were Elias and Sarah (Black) Runnels, pioneers of this county, who died in Wayne township. Her maternal grandfather married Mary Roberts, the pioneer couple becoming early settlers of this county, where they spent the rest of their lives. Samuel Runnels came with his parents to this county when he was a young child and here he was reared, becoming a well-known farmer in the county. He was a Democrat and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He died in Warren county on December 4, 1914. His wife long had predeceased him, her death having occurred in 1888. They were the parents of five children, Sarah, Nannie, Henry, Elias and Samuel, the latter of whom is deceased.

To Mr. and Mrs. Runyan three children have been born, Helen, born on April 7, 1896; Emily, October 6, 1898, and Charlestine, born in 1905, who died in 1912.

CHARLES PEMBERTON DUNLAP.

There are individuals in almost every community who, by reason of pronounced ability and force of character, rise above the heads of the masses and command the esteem and attention of their fellowmen. Characterized by perseverance and a directing spirit, two virtues that never fail, such men always make their presence felt. The vigor of their strong personality serves as a stimulus and an incentive to the young and rising generation. To this energetic and enterprising class, C. P. Dunlap, of Liberty township, very properly belongs. Mr. Dunlap has devoted his life and energies to the industries of his home neighborhood and has succeeded remarkably well.

Charles P. Dunlap was born on May 10, 1851, in Highland county, Ohio, the son of James Dunlap, Jr., and Mary Cravens. The former was born in 1819, in Connecticut, and the latter was born in 1821, in Pennsylvania, the daughter of Benjamin F. and Mary Cravens. Benjamin F. Cravens moved to Ohio some time in 1836 and located in Highland county, where he owned about six hundred acres of land. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and an enterprising, progressive citizen. He possessed a remarkable financial ability and the subject of this sketch inherited that characteristic.

C. P. Dunlap's grandfather, James Dunlap, Sr., was a native of New York state, born in 1794, and died in 1872. He was first married to Henrietta Pemberton, by whom he had seven children, Mariah, Horace, Arabella, Albert, Sarah, Sinai and Frank L., all except Frank L. being deceased. The second wife of James Dunlap, Sr., was a Mrs. Cox, who moved to Ohio about 1830. James Dunlap, Sr., was a merchant at Salem, Ross county, Ohio, but later moved to Highland county, where he lived retired. He was a member of the Methodist Protestant church.

James Dunlap, Jr., father of Charles P., was a well-informed man both in religion and politics. He was a member of the Christian Union church. He was quite a prominent citizen in the township and served as township trustee at one time. From about 1830 he lived in Highland county. He was first married to a Miss Foraker, a cousin of Senator Foraker. By this union, however, there were born no children. By his second marriage there were only two children, John N. and Charles P., the subject of this sketch. John N. was twice married, first to Mollie Kester, by whom he had three children, Earl, Chloe and Minnie. His second wife was Anna Williams, sister to his brother, Charles P.'s, wife. James Dunlap, Jr., the father of these children, died on June 13, 1886. The mother is still living and, on August 4, 1915, was ninety-four years old. She is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. The father owned one hundred and twenty-seven acres of land in Highland county. The father was of New England Puritan (English) stock. The mother was of Scotch-Irish descent.

Charles P. Dunlap was educated in the common schools. His character was moulded and formed by the determined will of his devoted father, assisted by the patient care of his loving mother. Mr. Dunlap has taught school for thirty-four years, sixteen years in Highland county, Ohio, and the remainder in Greene and Clinton counties. In 1886, he removed to Greene county and the same year, on August 7, he applied for a teacher's certificate at Xenia, Ohio, and was granted one for four years, averaging ninety-one per cent. in the examination. Mr. Dunlap was considered a most successful teacher, but abandoned the profession in 1904 and went to farming. In 1902 he was elected a justice of the peace, and will hold the office until 1918. A Democrat in politics, Mr. Dunlap was, four years ago, a candidate for county auditor. Although defeated, he made a most flattering race. He is the present chairman of the Democratic central committee of Clinton county. He believes in the doctrine both in church and state, "equal justice to all but special privilege to none."

Charles P. Dunlap was married, on August 27, 1874, to Martha J. Williams, who was born in Highland county, Ohio, January 2, 1853. She is the daughter of John and Mary (Duncan) Williams. Mary (Duncan) Williams was the daughter of Alexander Duncan, a native of Ireland and a soldier in the War of 1812. He located near Hillsboro, Ohio, and there became a large farmer. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church Mrs. Dunlap's father, John Williams, was a native of Ohio and farmed one hundred acres of land. He was a member of the Dunkard church, and lived in Highland county during his entire life. Born in 1806, he died in 1891. His wife, who was born in 1812, died in 1903. They had ten children, but Elizabeth, Ellen, Martha and Anna are the only ones living. Mandy, Eliza, Susan, Allenmah, Agnes and Thomas died a few years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap have had seven children, Lola E., John C., Charles R., James L., Olive, Clifford and Frank. The latter three died in early childhood. Of these children, Lola E. married Thomas Middleton, of Xenia, Greene county, Ohio, and they have three children, Wilton E., Roy S. and Harold D. John C., of Liberty township, married Frances Pearl Mason, and they have three children, Mary Audra, Rollo, and Charles Mason. Charles Russell married Belva Bales and they have two children, Charles R. and Frances Willard. They live in Clinton county, Ohio. James L., a resident of near Xenia, married Berdie Craig.

Charles P. Dunlap is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. For more than forty years he has been a Sunday school teacher, and superintendent of the Sunday school at Port William for four years. Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap have a farm of one hundred acres in Liberty township, which they purchased August 25, 1899. C. P. Dunlap and wife are members of the Methodist Protestant church. Mr. Dunlap has become well known in this county as a breeder of good stock, especially flocks of coarse wool sheep. However, money-getting and money-making are all right in their place, but he thinks both in teaching and in life, our highest ideal should be "building and molding character for eternity."
